COMMENTARIES,

THE

W. Plowden the famous reporter was of a good family in Shropshire: & Mr. Plowden of Plowden Hall in that county descended from him, as I understand, is the proprietor of large landed estates which belonged to the reporter.

Ob. Pasch. 11. Jan. 1800.

Mr. Plowden was a reader of the Middle Temple in Dugd. Orig. 5 Edw. 6. & Mary, & was double reader in 3 Eliz. &c. It appears by the date of his preface to the first part of his Commentaries, that he was living 20. Oct. 15 78. His Arms are in Dugd. Orig. Jurid. 227. & he is the gigneur-picture to them, he is stiled Treasurer of the Middle Temple.

THE PREFACE OF Mr. PLOWDEN,

p. 324. a. pl. 1. Hal. Hist. P. C. there is a reference to a learned tract of W. Plowden touching the right of succession of Mary Queen of Scotland.

Newly rendered into ENGLISH.

EDMUND PLOWDEN, to the Students of the Common Law of England, and especially to his Companions of the Middle-Temple, wisheth Encrease of Learning.

WHEN I first entered upon the Study of the Law, (which was in the twentieth Year of my Age, and in the thirtieth Year of the Reign of the late King Henry the eighth of famous Memory) I resolved upon two Things, which I then purposed earnestly to pursue. The first was, to be present at, and to give diligent Attention to, the Debates of Questions in Law, and particularly to the Arguments of those who were Men of the greatest Note and Reputation for Learning. The second was, to commit to Writing what I heard, and the Judgment thereupon, which seemed to me to be much better than to rely upon treacherous Memory which often deceives it's Master. These two Resolutions I pursued effectually by a constant Attendance at Moots and Lectures, and at all Places in Court and Chancery, to which I might have Access, where Matters of Law were argued and debated. And finding that I reaped much Profit and Instruction by this Practice, I became at last disposed to report the Arguments and Judgments made and given in the King's Courts upon Demurrers in Law, as abounding more copiously with Matter of Improvement, and being more capable of perfecting the Judgment, than Arguments on other Occasions. Upon this I undertook first one Case and then another, by which Means I at last collected a good Volume. And this Work I originally enter'd upon with a View to my own private Instruction only, without the least Thought or Intention of letting it appear in Print. But when upon the Sollicitation of some of the Judges and other grave and learned Men, I had suffered them to see and peruse it, I was earnestly requested to make it public, which I was very unwilling to do, and that chiefly for these two Reasons among others. First, because (as I have been credibly informed) there were anciently four Reporters of our Cases in Law, who were chosen and appointed for that Purpose, and had a yearly Stipend from the King for their Trouble therein; which Persons used to confer all together at the making and collecting of a Report, and their Report being made and settled by so many, and by Men of such approved Learning, carried great Credit with it, as indeed it ought. But these Reports were made and collected by no other than by myself alone, a Man of simple Understanding, and of weak Memory to retain Things uttered, and therefore I thought it more proper to keep them up in my own private Study (with which Design I at first collected them) th to make them public in the World. The second Reason was, because in this Work, and especially in the latter Part thereof (beginning at the Case of Throckmerton against Tracy and Nicholson) I have for the most Part reported Cases in a summary Way, collecting together the Substance (as it ap-appeared to me) of all that was ſaid on the one Side, and on the other, and oftentimes of all that was ſaid by the Judges themſelves, without reciting their Arguments verbatim. In which Caſe I have purpoſely omitted much that was ſaid both at the Bar and at the Bench, for I thought that there were few Arguments ſo pure as not to have ſome refuſe in them, and therefore I thought it beſt to extract the pure only, and to leave the refuſe, then and yet holding that to be the beſt Method of reporting. But this is a Taſk not eaſily accompliſhed, for he who would reject a great Part of what was ſpoken as vain and ſuperfluous, and relate only that which was pure and material, ought to have not only great Underſtanding and Memory, but eſpecially an excellent and diſtinguiſhing Judgment, for otherwiſe he may reject as ineffectual that which is very material, and approve as effectual that which is of no Weight, whereby he would do an Injury to thoſe at the Bar and at the Bench who argued, and would give them juſt Cauſe of Offence, and alſo by ſuch Means the Subject-matter itſelf would be much injured. And this Excellency of Judgment is to be met with in the greateſt Perfection in thoſe who are endued with the greateſt Degree of Reaſon, for it is ſaid that ratio eſt radius divini luminis, the greater Degree of which a Man has, the more bright is his Genius, and the more bright his Genius is, the more he pierces and diſpells the Miſt of Ignorance, and the more he diſpells the Miſt of Ignorance, the more perfectly and clearly he ſees the Truth, and the more rightly he judges of it. Which Things when I conſidered with myſelf, and at the ſame Time being conſcious of the Simpleneſs of my own Underſtanding, and of the ſmall Spark of Reaſon with which I am endued, and conſequently of my Want of Excellency in Judgment, I thought it my Duty to decline making public my own Dijudication of the Arguments of Men more learned than myſelf, and to keep the Work for my own private Advantage, and thereby to avoid the Cenſure of affecting a more acute and diſcerning Judgment than I really had. But by and by an Accident happened, which inclined me, and (as I may ſay) forcibly compelled me to make this Work public. For having lent my ſaid Book to a very few of my intimate Friends, at their ſpecial Inſtance and Requeſt, and but for a ſhort Time, their Clerks and others knowing thereof got the Book into their Hands, and made ſuch Expedition, by writing Day and Night, that in a ſhort Time they had tranſcribed a great Number of the Caſes, and eſpecially of the firſt, contrary to my own Knowledge and Intent, or of thoſe to whom I had lent the Book; which Copies at laſt came to the Hands of ſome of the Printers, who intended (as I was informed) to make a Profit of them by publiſhing them. But the Caſes being tranſcribed by Clerks and other ignorant Perſons who did not perfectly underſtand the Matter, the Copies were very corrupt, for in ſome Places a whole Line was omitted, and in others one Word was put for another, which entirely changed the Senſe, and again in other Places Spaces were left where the Writers did not underſtand the Words, and divers other Errors and Defects there were, which, if the Copies ſo taken had been printed, would have greatly defaced the Work, and have been a Diſcredit to me. And beſides this, they had omitted to tranſcribe the Pleadings according to the Records, and had only tranſcribed the Caſes and the Arguments upon them, ſo that the Benefit, which the Reader would have reaped from the Records of the Pleadings in this Book, (which is alſo a Book of Entries of all others moſt ſifted and tried) would have been totally loſt. Wherefore in order to prevent and avoid theſe Defects, I conſidered with myſelf whether it was not better for me to put this Work in Print. During which Conſideration Letters were ſent to me by all the Juſtices of both Benches, and by the Barons of the Exchequer, requeſting and encouraging me to make it public. And at laſt, upon theſe and other Motives, and hoping that it might be of ſome Benefit to the Students of the Law, I reſolved (as you ſee I have done) to put it in Print.

And this Book conſiſts of two ſeveral Kinds of Work, the one is, a Book of Entries, more ſure and ſafe to be relied upon and followed than any other Book of Entries. For other Books of Entries are but Copies of Pleadings written out of the Records, upon which perhaps ſome Iſſue was joined by the Parties, without the Intelligence of the Court, or without Demurrer or other Occaſion given to diſcuſs the Validity of the Pleading. But in this Book there is no Record entered but ſuch upon which there there was either a Demurrer in Law, or a ſpecial Verdict given containing a Point of Law, in both which Caſes the Matter was thoroughly ſifted and debated at the Bar and at the Bench alſo, and in the End either approved or diſapproved, for the Cauſes ſhewn in this Book, by the Judgment of the Court. So that the Records here entered are moſt ſafe to be truſted to. And ſo alſo are the Matters in Law which are contained in this Book, for there are ſcarce any but what have the Sanction of Judgment one Way or other, ſo that they may be moſt firmly relied upon. And (in my humble Apprehenſion) theſe Reports excell any former Book of Reports in Point of Credit and Authority, for other Reports generally conſiſt of the ſudden Sayings of the Judges upon Motions by the Serjeants and Counſellors at the Bar, whereas all the Caſes here reported are upon Points of Law tried and debated upon Demurrers or ſpecial Verdicts, Copies whereof were delivered to the Judges, who ſtudied and conſidered them, and for the moſt Part argued in them, and after great and mature Deliberation gave Judgment thereupon, ſo that (in my Opinion) theſe Reports carry with them the greateſt Credit and Aſſurance.

And in order that I might execute this Work with the utmoſt Sincerity and Truth, and to the Intent that I might be more able to underſtand the Arguments, and to comprehend the true Cauſes of the Judgments herein contained, let me inform the Reader that in almoſt all the Caſes which I have undertaken to report, before they came to be argued I had Copies of the Records, and took Pains to ſtudy the Points of Law ariſing thereupon, ſo that oftentimes I was ſo much Maſter of them, that if I had been put to it, I was ready to have argued when the firſt Man began; and by this Method I was more prepared to underſtand and retain the Arguments and the Cauſes of the Judgments. And beſides this, after I had drawn out my Report at large, and before I had entered it into my Book, I ſhewed ſuch Caſes and Arguments, as ſeemed to me to be the moſt difficult, and to require the greateſt Memory, to ſome of the Judges or Serjeants who argued in them, in order to have their Opinion of the Sincerity and Truth of the Report, which being peruſed and approved by them, I then entered it into my Book. And further, the Records of the Pleadings, and the Judgments which follow after the Arguments, add great Credit to the Report, and help to aſſure the Reader that he may rely upon any Point of Law.

And as to ſuch Caſes as were argued by others, whereupon no Judgment was given in any Point, (of which Caſes there are many) I have ſtaid and ſuſpended my Notes and Reports of the Arguments made in them, in hearing and writing which I have ſpent many Days, and been at great Pains and Labour, without reaping as great Profit as I expected. Some of theſe Caſes I have delivered to others, but have not entered them in my Book, nor kept any Copies of them. And therefore, leſt theſe ſhould come to the Reader's Hands, or others under my Name, which he may take to be mine, when in Truth they are not ſo, I think it proper to admoniſh him not to accept as mine, or as thought worthy by me to be publiſhed as mine, any other Arguments or Reports of other Men, made before the End of the printing of this Book, but only thoſe which are here contained.

And as to theſe ſummary Reports, alth ugh I have omitted many Things which were ſaid, as being deemed by me leſs material than that which is here reported, yet I have not thereby (as far as I am capable of judging) given juſt Cauſe of Offence to any. For neither in them nor in the others have I ſuppreſſed any Sentence which I remembered and thought to be very material, but I have expreſſed the Matter intended truly, and for the moſt Part in the Words of the Party who ſpoke it, ſometimes indeed in other Words added by myſelf ſhewing the Matter more fully, but never (to the beſt of my Knowledge) departing from the Senſe or Intent of the Party touching the Matter; which Liberty (I think) I and all other Reporters of our Law may take, and eſpecially in all ſummary Reports. And I proteſt before God that I have not of Purpoſe or Malice diſgraced any Man in theſe Reports. And becauſe ſome of the Caſes here reported hung in Argument eight, ten, or twelve Terms, whereby I could not reduce them to any certain Year or Term (as the Reports anciently ciently were), and becauſe I have ſometimes reported little or nothing in a Year or a Term, ſo that I could not preſerve an uninterrupted Connexion and Dependancy in Time (as is done in former Reports), and thinking it not proper to leave the Book without a Name (for then the Student, hearing a Caſe cited out of this Book, would be at a Loſs where to find it, for Want of a Name to the Book out of which the Caſe was cited), therefore, in order to give the Reader a Knowledge of the Certainty of the Time, I have placed a general Title at the Head of every Caſe, ſhewing the Time, the Nature of the Action, the Names of the Parties, and other particular Circumſtances; and alſo in order to avoid the Inconvenience before mentioned, which would ariſe for Want of a Name, I have given a Name to the whole Work, and have called it my COMMENTARIES or REPORTS, which Word (Commentary) in one Senſe ſignifies a Regiſter or Memorial of Acts or Sayings. And ſo, ſeeing this Book contains the Acts and Sayings of others touching the Matters therein treated of, I think the Word (Commentary) is a proper Name for it.

Wherefore wiſhing the Reader to reap as much Profit by reading this Work as I did by compoſing it (which, I confeſs, was great), I commit him to God's Direction, deſiring no other Reward for this my Trouble than his candid Reception hereof, and his good Report. Farewell,

Middle-Temple,
20 October, 1578.

BE it remembred, That Robert Reniger Eſquire, Comptroller of the Cuſtom and Subſidy of the Lord the King in the Port of the Town of Southampton, and in every the Places and Creeks belonging to the ſame Port, came before the Barons of this Exchequer, the 20th Day of November in this Term, in his proper Perſon, and took his corporal [a] Oath, that one Roger Porter his Servant, and by his Command, the 7th Day of this preſent Month of November, at the Town of Southampton, in the County of the Town of Southampton, ſeized and to the Uſe of the Lord the King, and of the ſaid Robert Reniger, arreſted 1693 Kintals of green Woad, of the Goods and Chattles of one Anthony Fogoſſa Merchant alien, for that the aforeſaid 1693 Kintals of green Woad, were brought from foreign Parts beyond the Seas into this Kingdom of England, to wit, unto the aforeſaid Town of Southampton, and there were laid upon the Land and diſcharged by Way of Merchandizing, the Subſidy to the Lord the King therefore due not being paid, nor the Collector of the Cuſtom and Subſidy of the Lord the King in the Port aforeſaid, or in any other Port of this Kingdom of England, being in any wiſe agreed with for the Subſidy ariſing from the Merchandize aforeſaid, contrary to the Form of the Statute in ſuch Caſe lately made and provided. Wherefore the aforeſaid Robert Reniger prays the Advice of the Court in the Premiſſes, and that he the Moiety thereof may have according to the Form of the Statute aforeſaid.

Anſwer.

And hereupon comes the aforeſaid Anthony Fogoſſa in his proper Perſon, and prays Oyer of the Information aforeſaid, and it is read to him; which being heard and underſtood, he complains that he, by Colour of the Premiſſes in the ſaid Information ſpecified, ſhall be grievouſly vexed and moleſted, and that the ſaid 1693 Kintals will be taken and detained out of his Hands and Poſſeſſion by the aforeſaid Robert Reniger, and that by no means juſtly: Becauſe, (by proteſting that the Information aforeſaid is inſufficient in Law, to which he has no Neceſſity, nor is by the Law of the Land bound to anſwer) for Plea nevertheleſs the ſame Anthony Fogoſſa ſaith, that long before the aforeſaid 7th Day of November, in the Information aforeſaid ſpecified, viz. the 5th Day of Auguſt laſt paſt, in the Iſles of Surrey in the Parts of Portugal, being under the Obedience of John King of Portugal, he was poſſeſſed of 4500 Kintals of green Woad (whereof the aforeſaid 1693 Kintals of green Woad in the Information aforeſaid ſpecified then were Parcel) as of his proper Goods. And being ſo thereof then there poſſeſſed, he the ſaid 5th Day of Auguſt ſhipped on board a certain ſhip called the St. Maria de Togma, (whereof one Manuel Lopus was then Maſter, under God) lying in the Water at the Iſles aforeſaid, the ſame 4500 Kintals of green Woad, to be brought and carried by Sea in the ſame Ship from thence unto this Kingdom of England, that is to ſay, unto the ſaid Town of Southampton. And the ſame Ship, with the ſaid 4500 Kintals of green Woad therein freighted, afterwards, viz. the 5th Day of September laſt paſt, being oppoſite to the Iſle of Wight, in the ſaid County of Southampton, in its Paſſage upon the High Sea towards the ſaid Town of Southampton, a certain great Tempeſt and Violence of Wind then and there happened upon the Sea, by the Severity and Tempeſtuouſneſs whereof the Ship aforeſaid was in great Danger of ſinking, together with the ſaid 4500 Kintals of green Woad which were therein, inſomuch that the ſaid Maſter and the Mariners of the ſame Ship being in the ſame deſpaired of their Lives; by reaſon whereof, the ſame Maſter and Mariners, for the Safety as well of their own Lives as of the Ship aforeſaid, and of the greater Part of the Goods aforeſaid, which were in the ſame Ship, then and there, in order to lighten the ſaid ſhip, caſt out of it into the Sea a great Part of the ſaid 4500 Kintals of green Woad, then being in the Ship aforeſaid. And afterwards, viz. the 14th Day of the ſaid Month of September, the Ship aforeſaid, with the Reſidue of the 4500 Kintals of green Woad which were left in the ſame Ship, (of which ſaid Reſidue the aforeſaid 1693 Kintals of green Woad in the ſaid Information ſpecified then were and yet are Parcel) came unto the Port of the ſaid Town of Southampton, by which means he the ſame Anthony, at the ſaid Port of the Town of Southampton aforeſaid, the ſaid 14th Day of September, was poſſeſſed of the ſame Reſidue as of his proper Goods. And becauſe the Certainty of the Weight of the ſaid Reſidue of green Woad left in the Ship aforeſaid was then unknown to the aforeſaid Anthony, he the ſame Anthony, before that he laid upon Land or diſcharged the ſame Reſidue of green Woad aforeſaid, or any Part thereof, at the Town of Southampton aforeſaid, viz. in a certain Houſe called the Cuſtom Houſe there, the ſaid 14th Day of September, made known to one Thomas Wells, then and there a Collector of the Cuſtom and Subſidy of the ſaid Lord the King that now is in the Port of the ſaid Town of Southampton, and in every the Creeks and Places belonging to the ſame Port, how that the Ship aforeſaid was come into the Port aforeſaid having in it green Woad; and that the Ship aforeſaid, by reaſon of the Tempeſt aforeſaid, had been in the Danger aforeſaid, whereby a great Quantity of the green Woad, that was at firſt in the Ship aforeſaid (as is aforeſaid) was caſt out of the ſame Ship into the Sea, ſo that he was then ignorant what certain Quantity of green Woad was then left in the ſaid Ship, and deſired

the ſame Collector, that he might make an Entry with the ſame Collector in his Books of Cuſtom and Subſidy of the ſaid Lord the King in the Port aforeſaid, for 2000 Kintals of green Woad, which he then thought would be near the true Certainty or Quantity of the ſaid Reſidue of green Woad that was then left in the ſaid Ship. And he aſked Leave of the ſaid Collector to diſcharge and lay upon Land at the ſaid Town of Southampton, as well the ſaid 2000 Kintals, as all the reſt of the ſaid green Woad in the ſaid Ship (if any ſuch ſhould remain) ſaying, and alſo then and there affirming to the Collector aforeſaid, that he the ſame Anthony would pay to the ſame Collector, for the Uſe of the ſaid Lord the King, all Manner of Subſidies due to the ſaid Lord the King, as well for the ſaid 2000 Kintals by him then entred (as aforeſaid) as for all that ſhould be over and above the ſaid Number of 2000 Kintals, (whereof the aforeſaid 1693 Kintals in the ſaid Information ſpecified then were and yet are Parcel,) when all the ſaid green Woad ſhould be tried or otherwiſe known by the Beam of the ſaid Lord the King remaining in the ſaid Town of Southampton for the weighing of ſuch Merchandizes, which ſaid Collector then and there granted and gave leave to the ſame Anthony to do this, and agreed thereunto. And thereupon he the ſame Anthony, at the Town of Southampton aforeſaid, the ſaid 14th Day of September, contracted and agreed with the aforeſaid Collector for all Manner of Subſidies due to the ſaid Lord the King for the ſaid 2000 Kintals of green Woad, and for all the reſt of the green Woad that ſhould then be in the Ship aforeſaid (whereof the aforeſaid 1693 Kintals of green Woad in the Information aforeſaid ſpecified then were and yet are Parcel) after the Rate of 12 d. for every 20 s. of Value in the ſame, according to the Form of the Act of Grant of the ſame Subſidy: And to the ſaid Collector then at the Town of Southampton aforeſaid found ſufficient Surety, viz. John Ellen, to ſatisfy and pay to the ſame Collector for the Uſe of the ſaid Lord the King all and ſingular Sums of Money, which are or ſhould be due to the ſaid Lord the King for the Subſidy aforeſaid. By reaſon of which ſaid Grant, Licence and Agreement, he the ſame Anthony afterwards, viz. the ſaid 14th Day of September, as well the ſaid 2000 Kintals of green Woad, as all the reſt of the green Woad that was in the Ship aforeſaid (whereof the aforeſaid 1693 Kintals of green Woad in the Information aforeſaid ſpecified then were and yet are Parcel) at the ſaid Town of Southampton laid upon Land and diſcharged, as it was well lawful for him to do. And this the ſame Anthony is ready to verify, as the Court, &c. And prays Judgment, and that the aforeſaid 1693 Kintals of green Woad in the ſaid Information ſpecified may be delivered back to him; and that he (as to the Premiſſes) may be diſmiſſed from this Court.

Replication. Vide 4. M. 1. Bro. Attaint. 127. B. N. C. § 479.

And Henry Bradſhaw, Attorney General of the Lord the King (who proſecutes for the ſame Lord the King in this behalf) for the Lord the King by proteſting ſays, that the Plea aforeſaid of Anthony Fogoſſa, in Manner and Form above pleaded, is inſufficient in Law, to which he has no Neceſſity by the Law of the Land to anſwer: For Replication nevertheleſs ſaith, that the aforeſaid 1693 Kintals of green Woad in the ſame Information ſpecified were laid upon Land and diſcharged, the Subſidy to the Lord the King therefore due not being paid, in Manner and Form as by the Information aforeſaid is above ſuppoſed: Without that that the aforeſaid Anthony Fogoſſa contracted and agreed with the aforeſaid Collector for the Subſidy due to the ſaid Lord the King for the aforeſaid 1693 Kintals of green Woad, according to the Form and Effect of the Act aforeſaid, in Manner and Form as the ſame Anthony above in Pleading hath alledged. All and ſingular which the ſame Attorney of the Lord the King, for the ſame Lord the King, is ready to verify, as the Court, &c.

And the aforeſaid Anthony Fogoſſa ſaith, that he did contract and agree with the aforeſaid Collector for all Manner of Subſidies due to the ſaid Lord the King for the aforeſaid 1693 Kintals of green Woad, according to the Form and Effect of the Act aforeſaid, in Manner and Form as he the ſame Anthony above in Pleading hath alledged. And of this the ſame Anthony puts himſelf upon the Country. And the aforeſaid Attorney of the Lord the King, for the ſaid Lord the King, prays likewiſe that it may be enquired by the Country. Therefore let an Inqueſt be made thereon. And for that the ſame Anthony is an Alien born, that is to ſay, at the City of Oporto in Portugal, under the Obedience of the aforeſaid King of Portugal, he prays * a Moiety of his own Language, according to the Form of the Statute in ſuch Caſe lately made and provided, &c. A. R. E. M. B. S. &c. who to ſpeak the truth touching the Premiſſes being choſen, tried, and ſworn, the ſaid Anthony Fogoſſa, in Maintenance of the Iſſue aforeſaid above joined to the Country, and to prove the ſaid Iſſue on the Behalf of him the ſame Anthony to be true, produced the aforeſaid Thomas Wells, a Collector of the Cuſtom and Subſidy of the Lord the King in the Port and Town of Southampton, and John Smith then and there a Clerk or Servant of the ſaid Thomas Wells in the ſaid Office of Collector aforeſaid, and alſo one John Davy, Yeoman, to teſtify that the Premiſſes in the Plea of him the ſaid Anthony ſpecified are true.

Which ſaid Thomas Wells being examined upon his Oath taken before the Barons here touching the Premiſſes ſaith, that he heretofore, viz. on the 21ſt Day of November, in the ſecond Year of the Reign of the ſaid Lord the King that now is, here in Court before the Barons of this Exchequer was examined upon his Oath to ſpeak the Truth in the Premiſſes, wherefore the ſame Thomas delivered to the Court here upon his Oath aforeſaid, a certain Bill ſigned with the Hand of him the ſaid Thomas, touching the whole Truth in the Premiſſes by him known, and prayed that that Bill might be read. And the Barons commanded the ſaid Bill to be read, and at the Requeſt of the aforeſaid Attorney of the Lord the King to be enrolled: The Tenor of which ſaid Bill follows in theſe Words.

For becauſe the Ship being in great Danger on the Sea, he was fain to throw over much of the ſaid Woad, and ſo made Entry with the ſaid Collector for the King's Subſidy due to his Majeſty of* 2000 Kintals of Woad then being in the ſaid Ship as he eſteemed. And becauſe he knew not how much more there was in the ſaid Ship, he deſired of the ſaid Cuſtomer, that he might have Licence to lay all on Land and to have it weighed at the King's Mayeſty's Beam there. And then he to pay for the Subſidy of the Reſidue of the ſaid Woad after the Rate, if it came above the Number of 2000 Kintals, and brought in ſufficient Surety for to perform the ſame. Whereunto the ſaid Collector did agree, and gave him Licence ſo to do. And further the ſaid Thomas Wells ſaith, that afterwards one John Thomas, Deputy to him, and William Thorpe, one other of the Collectors of the ſaid Cuſtom and Subſidy in the Port aforeſaid at Portſmouth, which is a Creek to the ſame Port belonging, notified to the ſaid Collectors, that the ſaid Anthony Fogoſſa came likewiſe to the ſaid Deputy Cuſtomer the 16th Day of the ſaid Month of September at Portſmouth aforeſaid, and ſhewed to him, how that he had certain Woad in a Ship called the Peter Dies, then lying there upon the Sea, but to what Number he could not tell, and ſo made Entry with him there for 1000 Kintals of Woad, with like Proteſtation and Condition as he did before at Southampton, whereupon the ſaid Deputy Collector gave him Licence to lay it on Land. And further, the ſaid Thomas Wells ſaith, there is not yet weighed out of the ſaid Woad at Southampton above the Number of 190 Kintals, as appeareth by the Weigher's Books there, which is an Officer ſworn, ſo that the King's Majeſty cannot be defrauded of his Subſidy thereof due, for it lieth ſtill upon ſeveral great Heaps in Cellars near the ſaid Cuſtom Houſe, ſafely kept till it be weighed. And the aforeſaid Thomas Wells affirmed all and ſingular the Things contained in the ſame Bill to be true. And the aforeſaid John Smith, upon his Oath before the Barons here likewiſe taken, ſaith that he, at the ſaid town of Southampton, was preſent at all and ſingular the Sayings, Deeds, Licences and Agreements, and other Things in the Bill aforeſaid ſpecified, read here in Court: All which things are true. And that he then, as Clerk of the aforeſaid Collector, and by his Command, entered in the Books of the ſaid Collector of Cuſtom and Subſidy aforeſaid, the aforeſaid green Woad. And he produced here in Court the Book of the ſaid Collector, teſtifying the Entry of the aforeſaid green Woad in theſe Words, ſs. D' Nave Manuel Lopus intrante 14 *Die Septembris ſs. fired to have ſaid any Thing by the Merchant in this Matter; but ſaith, that the Cuſtomer required him that he would depoſe that he was preſent at the Time of the Agreement with the Cuſtomer for the cuſtoming of the ſaid Woad; which anſwered, that at all Times he would depoſe the Truth; and this Deponent cannot further ſay in the Premiſſes. Which being read, the aforeſaid John Davy affirmed all and every the Things ſpecified in the ſaid Bill to be true, except the Words aforeſaid, Sſ. But ſaith, That the Cuſtomer required him that he would depoſe, that he was preſent at the Time of the Agreement with the Cuſtomer for the cuſtoming of the ſaid Woad; which anſwered, that at all Times he would depoſe the Truth. Which ſaid John Davy ſaith upon his Oath, that he never affirmed the ſame Words, nor are they true. And thereupon, by John Pollard Serjeant at Law, and others learned in the Laws of Counſel with the aforeſaid Anthony Fogoſſa, it is given further in Evidence on Behalf of the ſaid Anthony to maintain the Iſſue aforeſaid, that in the aforeſaid great Tempeſt upon the Sea in the Plea aforeſaid ſpecified, for the Safety of the Ship aforeſaid, a great Part of the Woad then being in the Ship was caſt into the Sea before the ſaid Ship came to the Port of Southampton: which ſaid Matter, and the Matter teſtified by the aforeſaid Thomas Wells Collector aforeſaid, ſome of the Jurors aforeſaid know to be true. * And the aforeſaid Attorney of the Lord the King for the ſame Lord the King ſaith, that the Evidences aforeſaid above given are inſufficient in Law to maintain or prove the Iſſue aforeſaid on Behalf of the ſaid Anthony Fogoſſa above joined to the Country; wherefore, by reaſon of the Inſufficiency of the ſame Evidences, and for that by the ſame Evidences the Forfeiture of the Goods aforeſaid in the Information aforeſaid ſpecified is not denied, the ſame Attorney of the Lord the King for the ſaid Lord the King prays Judgment, and that the ſame Goods may remain forfeited to the Lord the King, according to the Form of the Statute aforeſaid. And the aforeſaid Anthony Fogoſſa ſaith, that the Evidences aforeſaid above given on Behalf of him the ſaid Anthony are ſufficient in Law, as well to maintain and prove the Iſſue aforeſaid, on Behalf of him the ſaid Anthony above joined to the Country, as to exclude the Lord the King from having any Forfeiture of the Goods aforeſaid: To which the aforeſaid Attorney of the Lord the King for the ſaid Lord the King, hath not ſufficiently anſwered, nor any Thing for the ſaid King alledged. Wherefore he the ſame Anthony prays Judgment, and that the aforeſaid Goods in the ſaid Information ſpecified may be delivered back to him, and that he as to the Premiſſes may be diſmiſſed from this Court; therefore to Judgment. ☞ The Judgment appears after the Arguments.

* Note, (as it ſeems) the King's Attorney here demurs upon the Evidence, whether the Defendant will agree or no. But Heath's Max. 95, 96. ſays, that in no Caſe may one demur upon Evidence, without the Conſent of the other Party, who may put himſelf upon the Jury to find a Verdict. And P. 34. H. 6. 36. pl. 7. The King demurs upon the Evidence.

The CASE. Hill. Term, 4. Ed. 6. What ſhall be good Evidence to prove the Iſſue, if one agree with a Collector for the Subſidy of Merchandize.

Griffith the King's Sollicitor rehearſed the Caſe in this Manner. You, my Lords, have well underſtood that Robert Reniger has exhibited an Information before the Barons of the Exchequer, containing, that he had ſeized and arreſted 1693 Kintals of green Woad, of the Goods of Anthony Fogoſſa, a Merchant Stranger, for that they were carried and put upon Land as Merchandize, the Subſidy not being paid, nor the Collector agreed with for the ſame, againſt the Form of the Statute. And Fogoſſa, by way of Bar, has ſaid, that he had ſhipped on Board 4500 Kintals, and that a great Tempeſt aroſe upon the Sea, ſo that the Ship was in great Danger of being ſunk; and for the Safety of the Lives of them in the Ship, and of the reſt of the Goods therein, the Maſter of the Ship and the Mariners caſt into the Sea a great Part of the ſaid green Woad, and afterwards the Ship came to Land with the reſt of the Woad, whereof the Woad mentioned in the Information is Parcel; and becauſe the Certainty of the Woad left in the Ship was unknown to the Defendant, he came to one Thomas Wells, a Collector of the Cuſtom and Subſidy, and told him of the Misfortune, and all the Matter aforeſaid; and ſaid, that he ſuppoſed there were 2000 Kintals left and ſaved in the Ship: and he deſired the Collector to let him make an Entry in his Book for the ſame; and if he had more than 2000 Kintals, he would pay him for the Uſe of the King all that ſhould be due for the ſame, when it was tried by the King's Beam, or otherwiſe known. And he aſked him to give him Leave to put it on Land, and the ſaid Collector gave him Leave, and agreed that he ſhould do it. And thereupon the aforeſaid Anthony Fogoſſa contracted and agreed with the ſaid Collector for all Subſidies, according to the Rate of 12 d. for every 20 s. in Value, and found Surety to the Collector, viz. ſuch an one; and afterwards the Defendant put upon Land all the Woad left and ſaved in the ſaid Ship, which was 2000 Kintals, and the ſaid 1693 Kintals beſides; which 1693 Kintals is that contained in the Information whereof the Seizure was made, upon which he demanded Judgment. And the King's Attorney, by way of Replication, ſaid, that the ſaid 1693 Kintals were put upon Land, the King not being paid, without that that the aforeſaid Defendant contracted and agreed with the aforeſaid Collector for the aforeſaid 1693 Kintals, according to the Form and Effect of the Act aforeſaid, in Manner and Form as the Defendant has alledged. And the Defendant averred, that he did contract and agree, &c. and upon this they were at Iſſue, and the Jurors were ſworn; and the Defendant, in Proof of his Iſſue, produced three Witneſſes, viz. the ſaid Wells the Collector, and one called Smith, his Clerk, and another called Davy. Wells ſaid, that the Defendant came to him, and ſhewed him the Misfortune ut ſupra, and made a certain Entry for the 2000 Kintals ut ſupra. And becauſe he did not know whether there were any more, he deſired him to let him put it upon Land, if there ſhould be any more, and to have it weighed at the King's Beam, and then he would pay the Subſidy for it, according to the Rate, and did not ſhew any Rate in certain; and he brought in ſufficient Surety to perform this, and did not ſhew the Surety certainly. To which he being Collector agreed, and gave him Licence ſo to do: And further, Wells ſaid, ſaid, that the King could not be defrauded of his Subſidy due, becauſe the Woad lies in Cellars near to the Cuſtom-houſe, ſafely kept until it be weighed. And the ſaid Smith teſtified, that all that was ſaid by Wells was true, and that he was then preſent when the Grant and Agreement was made. And further, he ſhewed the Book of Entry, and the Entry accordingly. And Davy ſaid, that after the Agreement had with the Collector, he came to Smith the Clerk, and demanded of him a Copy of the Entry, and he delivered him a Copy of the Entry of only 2000 Kintals, and told the Deponent, that the Defendant would enter more if it was found by the Beam. And the ſaid Davy further ſaid, that about two Months after, he demanded of the ſaid Smith, whether there was any new Entry made of the ſaid Woad, who ſaid that there was no other Entry made than what was made at firſt, whereof he had delivered a Copy; and this was the Effect of all the Evidence given by the three. And further, the Defendant maintain'd by Averment the caſting Part into the Sea in the Storm, and all that Wells depoſed; and ſaid, that ſome of the Jurors knew this to be true: and upon this Evidence the King hath demurred in Judgment. And it ſeems to me that Judgment is to be given for the King; for the Iſſue is, whether there was an Agreement according to the Form of the Statute or no, and the Evidence does not prove that there was ſuch an Agreement. [a] For every Agreement ought to be perfect, full, and compleat; and the Evidence here does not prove the Agreement to be perfect, nor full, nor compleat, but rather a Communication or Converſation, than an Agreement: for an Agreement concerning perſonal Things is a mutual Aſſent of the Parties, and ought to be executed with a Recompence, or elſe ought to be ſo certain and ſufficient, as to give an Action or other Remedy for a Recompence: and if it is not ſo, then it ſhall not be called an Agreement, but rather a nude Communication without Effect. [b] And therefore in Treſpaſs, if the Defendant will plead a Concord between the Plaintiff and him, that he ſhould pay the Plaintiff 20 l. at a Day to come, in Recompence of the Treſpaſs, this is not a good Bar, for it is not executed with any Recompence or Satisfaction, nor is there any Action or Remedy whereby to come at a Recompence or Satisfaction, for he ſhall not have an Action of Debt for it after the Day, as it is held in 30. H. [c] 6. For inaſmuch as the Concord is made after the Treſpaſs, it ſhall be called nudum pactum, unde non oritur actio; and therefore it ſhall not be any Bar, as it is there alſo holden. [d] And in 44. Edw. 3. in Debt for a Houſe ſold, the Defendant ſaid, that it was agreed between the Plaintiff and him, that the Plaintiff ſhould pull down the ſaid Houſe at his own Coſts, and ſhould remove it to ſuch a Place, and that then he ſhould pay the Plaintiff the ſaid Sum, and ſaid that he was always ready to have paid the ſaid Sum, if the Plaintiff had removed it, and this was adjudged a good Plea, inaſmuch as the Contract was entire, and was not executed on the Part of the Plaintiff: and alſo the Defendant could not compell the Plaintiff to pull it down and remove it, and therefore it was a good Bar. So here the Collector of the Cuſtom could not compell the Defendant to weigh the Woad at the King's Beam, and the King ought not to weigh it, ſo that perhaps it would never be weighed, and then the King would never be ſatisfied; and ſo it does not found in any Satisfaction, nor is there any Means to make it a Satisfaction. [e] And in 9. Ed. 4. in Treſpaſs upon the Statute of 5. R. 2. the Defendant ſaid that after the Entry there was an Accord between them, that the Plaintiff ſhould reenter into the ſame Land, and ſhould enjoy it without Interruption by the Defendant, and that the Defendant ſhould deliver to the Plaintiff all the Evidences concerning the ſaid Land, and ſaid that the Plaintiff had re entered, and that he had delivered to the Plaintiff all the Evidences concerning the ſaid Land, and the Opinion there is, that this was not a good Plea, for it ſhall be intended that the Evidences were the Evidences of the Plaintiff, and then to deliver him his own [f] Evidences was not any Satisfaction of the Wrong done before; but the Defendant ſhould there convey to himſelf [g] Title to the Evidences, and then plead this; and then it was held to be a good Bar. And ſo in 15. H. [h] 6. in Treſpaſs, the Defendant ſaid that there was an Accord between the Plaintiff and him, that whereas there was a Debate between the Plaintiff and the Lord Grey, if the Defendant did his endeavour to make them agree about a Treſpaſs done by the Plaintiff to the ſaid Lord, that then, &c. and ſaid, that he did his Endeavour, ſo that they were agreed; and this was there holden no Plea, becauſe it is not any Satisfaction; but if he had ſaid [i] that he, at his own Coſts, did his Endeavour to make them agree, per quod they did agree, this was held to be a good Bar. From whence it appears, that ſuch Accord [k] executory is no Bar, inasmuch as it does not enure as any Satisfaction, nor give any Recompence, and yet it is a mutual Aſſent of the Parties, and an Agreement; but it operates as a void Communication or Converſation, ſeeing it is not executed, and there is no Remedy to give Satisfaction. But the Agreement, which is effectual, is ſuch an Agreement as is executed and ſatisfied with a Recompence in Fact, or with an Action or other Remedy to execute it, and to recover a Recompence. And here in our principal Caſe, inasmuch as the Statute of 1. Ed 6. Cap. 13. ſays, that if any Merchandize be put upon Land, and the Subſidy not paid, or the Collector not agreed with for it, it ſhall be forfeited, &c. this Agreement intended by the Statute ſhall be taken in the beſt and moſt beneficial Senſe for the King, and that is, an effectual Agreement, viz. ſuch an Agreement as is executed with a Recompence, or by which the King may have an Action then given him for the recovery of a Recompence. And here it is not executed, nor is any Action then given to the King, inasmuch as the Reckoning is not certain, nor the Sum, which the Defendant ſhall pay, known at the Time when the Merchandize was put upon Land, and no Remedy is given to reduce it to a Certainty, inasmuch as Fogoſſa could not be compelled to weigh it, and the King, by the Law, ſhall not be compelled to weigh it, and ſo the Agreement is imperfect to give an Action for the Subſidy; for which Reaſon the Agreement intended by the Statute is not here fulfilled. And therefore it ſeems to me that he has not performed

Yet there is a late Book to the contrary, viz. That an Accord may be pleaded without Execution, as well as an Arbitrement; and the Reaſon given is, becauſe an Action now lies upon mutual Promiſes, which formerly did not; and conſequently, there being equal Remedy on both Sides, an Accord ſtands upon the ſame Reaſon with an Arbitrement, Caſe v. Barber, T. Raym. 450. But that Opinion has been over-ruled in a later Judgment, Allen v. Harris, Ld. Raym. 122. Lutw. 1538.

the Effect of the Statute, and conſequently the Goods are forfeited, and ſo Judgment is to be given for the King.

E contra for the Defendant.

Gawdy Senior: the contrary appears to me. And firſt of all it is to be obſerved, that the ſaid Statute is in the Disjunctive, and divided into two Points, viz. the Subſidy not paid, or, the Collector not agreed with for it, &c. * So it is proved that the Intent of the Makers of the Statute was not always to have the Subſidy paid; but if an Agreement be made with the Collector for it, it is ſufficient, and the Statute is obſerved. And it ſeems to me, that an Agreement is here made with the Collector, and ſuch an Agreement as the Statute intends; as I ſhall prove hereafter. But firſt, it is neceſſary to give an Anſwer to the Caſes before put. And, Sir, the Caſes put of a Concord (which I confeſs to be good Law) are not like the Caſe here, nor are they grounded on the like Reaſon, for two Cauſes; [a] for when a Treſpaſs is done, and an Action brought for it, ſuch Concord executory may not be a Bar by any Reaſon, for there being a Wrong done, and not denied, it muſt be anſwered with Recompence; and then the Concord executory is no Recompence de facto: neither is there any Action given thereupon to compell the Party to make Recompence, and ſo he is without Recompence, and deſtitute of Means to recover any. And then inasmuch as by the pleading of the Concord he confeſſes the Treſpaſs, Law and Reaſon will ſay that it ſhall not be a Bar, for then the Plaintiff ſhould be barred without Satisfaction, where the Wrong is confeſſed. [b] But upon an Arbitrement, where a Sum is awarded in Recompence to be paid at a Day to come, there this ſhall be a good Bar, becauſe he may have an Action of Debt [c] for it at the Day limited, and the Treſpaſs is converted [d] into another Thing by the Arbitrators, who are Judges thereof: ſo that there it is anſwered with an Action, which countervails a Satisfaction in Deed. But ſo it is not in the Caſes of a Concord, for there the Treſpaſs firſt done may not be extinguiſhed by the Agreement, viz. the Concord afterwards made, which does not enure as any Satisfaction; and ſo is the Diverſity. But in our principal Caſe the King ſhall be recompenced and ſatisfied, as I ſhall prove hereafter; and for this Cauſe it is not like the Caſe of a Concord. The other Cauſe is, for that in our principal Caſe there is not any Wrong done before the Agreement which ought to be recompenced, as it is in the Caſes of a Concord, but the Agreement was firſt made before that the King was intitled to the Subſidy, and ſo the Agreement precedes the Wrong ſuppoſed to be done to the King, and does not come after the Wrong, as in the Caſe of a Concord. And for this Cauſe it may not be reſembled to the Caſe of a Concord, inasmuch as no Wrong precedes the Agreement, but the Agreement precedes the Wrong ſuppoſed; and ſo there is an apparent Diverſity between the Caſes. But the great Doubt here (if any there be) is in this Point, inasmuch as the Certainty of the Sum, which ſhall be paid for the Subſidy, is not known at the Time of the Agreement, or landing of the Merchandize, and ſo the King is not preſently intitled to an Action of Debt for it. And, Sir, notwithſtanding this, it ſeems to me, that the Statute is performed; for the Statute, (as I have ſaid) is divided into two Points, that is to ſay, the King not being paid, or, the Collector not agreed with, &c. and ſo the Statute grants an Agreement; and here, although * the groſs Sum is not certainly known, yet none can ſay but that there is a mutual Aſſent of the Collector and the Defendant, which is an Agreement, and this Agreement ſhall countervail a certain Agreement, for by this the Certainty ſhall be known by Circumſtance, viz. by the weighing, whenever it ſhall be weighed, which weighing the Law refers to the Collector; and ſo this Agreement is good enough to make a Certainty, which being known, the King may have an Action for the Subſidy. [f] As if one leaſes all his Acres in D. to J. S. for Years, rendering for every Acre 12 d. although the Number of the Acres was not known by the Leſſor nor by the Leſſee, and therefore the Rent is at the Beginning incertain; yet, upon the Admeaſurement or other Trial had, the Rent reſerved may be known certainly, for which the Leſſor may have an Action of Debt; and therefore for this poſſibility of Trial the Reſervation is good, which at the Beginning was incertain. [g] So if one gives two Acres to a Man, habendum the one for Life, and the other in Fee, it is incertain in which of them he ſhall have the Fee, and in which an Eſtate for Life; but if afterwards the Donee makes a Feoffment of one Acre, now he ſhall be ſaid to have a Fee in that ab initio. [h] So if one leaſes Black-Acre and White-Acre for Life, the Remainder of the one Acre in Fee, now it is incertain which Acre he in the Remainder ſhall have; but if he licenſe the Tenant for Life to cut down Trees in White-Acre, now he ſhall be adjudged to have the Remainder of that Acre ab initio: and ſo the Thing, which at the Beginning was incertain, is afterwards made certain. So in Wheeler's Caſe [i] in 14. H. 8. the Grant of a Term upon Condition that the Grantee ſhould obtain the Favour of the Leſſor, and pay as much as J. S. ſhould award, was good when the Condition was fulfilled, and the ſecond Grant was adjudged void. And there it is held, fo. 21. that if one [k] makes a Leaſe for ſo many Years as J. S. ſhall name, now this is incertain at the Beginning; but after J. S. ſhall have named 20 Years, it ſhall be a good Leaſe for 20 Years ab initio. [l] And in 17. Ed. 4. in Treſpaſs for Corn taken away, there the Defendant and the Plaintiff had bargained together, that the Defendant ſhould go to the Place where it grew, and ſee the Corn, and if he liked it upon View, he ſhould take it, paying the Plaintiff 40 d. for every Acre; this was there holden a good Contract, notwithſtanding the Incertainty of the Quantity of the Corn, and of the groſs Sum which ſhould be paid for it, becauſe upon Circumſtance the Certainty might appear; and therefore, although this was a conditional Agreement, yet it was held a good Juſtification, [m] if he had preſently paid for it at the Time of his carrying it away. And in all theſe Caſes the Agreement between the Parties is incertain, and yet it ſhall be adjudged good, becauſe it may be reduced to Certainty by divers Ways and Means, and ſo ſhall countervail a Certainty at the Beginning. So ſhall it be in the principal Caſe; although the Agreement doth not contain in expreſs Words the preciſe Certainty of the Sum at the Beginning, yet it contains in itſelf a Circumſtance to make the Certainty known, and that is, the weighing by the Collector, which has the ſame Effect as a Certainty at the Beginning; and

ſo the Intent and Effect of the Agreement intended by the Statute is performed. And we may ſee divers Caſes where Acts ought to be performed ſtrictly, and yet if the Intent is performed it is ſufficient, although the Words are not performed. [a] As if a Man makes a Feoffment to one upon Condition to make a Gift in eſpecial Tail to Huſband and Wife before ſuch a Day, and they die before the Day, and before the Gift is made, leaving Iſſue, there if the Feoffee make a Gift to the Iſſue and to the Heirs of his Father and Mother begotten, he has performed the Condition, and yet he has not performed the Words of the Condition; but inaſmuch as the Intent and Effect of the Condition is performed, it is ſufficient; and yet the Words of a Condition ought to be as ſtrictly performed as the Words of any penal Statute. [a] So if a Man is bound in an Obligation upon Condition to infeoff J. S. and he makes a Leaſe for Years and Releaſe to him in Fee, he has performed the Condition, although he has not performed the Words; and yet the Words of a Condition of an Obligation ought to be fulfilled as ſtrictly as the Words of any Statute; but inaſmuch as the Intent and Effect is fulfilled, which ſhall countervail the Words, it is ſufficient. So here, this Agreement upon Condition, which is ſpecially alledged, ſhall countervail the general Agreement, that is to ſay, an Agreement certain, and is of the ſame Effect, and is within the Words of the Statute. For which Reaſon, as it ſeems to me, the Statute is performed in Words and Effect, and ſo the King ſhall be barred. Alſo the Demurrer is upon the whole Evidence, and then although the firſt Part of the Evidence given by Wells had not made for the Defendant, (as in rei veritate it does) yet the ſecond Part of it ſhall make for him; for he ſaith that the King cannot be defrauded of his Subſidy, inaſmuch as the Woad lies in the Cuſtom Houſe, ſafely kept until it be weighed, &c. So that this proves wholly for the Defendant; and therefore for theſe Reaſons it ſeems to me that the King ſhall be barred.

Bradſhaw the King's Attorney. It ſeems to me that Judgment is to be given for the King; for here the Agreement is not ſuch as the Statute intends. For when there is a mutual Aſſent of the Parties upon a Thing incertain, this may not be adjudged in Law any thing more than a vain Communication and Diſcourſe when the Thing is not afterwards performed. For if I ſell you all my Corn for 12 d. per Buſhel, you may not take it before it is meaſured, whereby the Number of the Buſhels may be known, and alſo the Certainty of the Sum which is to be paid for it preſently, ſo that before the Certainty is known it cannot be adjudged any good Contract or Agreement. [b] So in 37. H. 6. if one grants or promiſes to give, in Marriage with his Daughter, ſo much money as J. S. ſhall award, there it is held, that before J. S. hath awarded and appointed it, the Party who has married the Daughter ſhall not have Remedy for any Money, for before it is reduced to a Certainty it is only a vain Communication. And about 20. H. 6. it is held, that if one leaſes his Land to A. for ſo many Years as J. S. ſhall name, A. may not enter into the Land before J. S. hath named the Number of Years, for perhaps J. S. will never name any Years, and then he ſhall never have any Intereſt in the Land, ſo that it can only be taken as a Communication before J. S. hath named the Number of Years. So here, the Statute ſhall not be intended of a void Agreement, but of an effectual and certain Agreement, whereupon the King may have an Action at the Time of the Agreement; and here the Evidence does not prove any ſuch effectual Agreement, but, as appears by the Evidence, it may be that the Woad ſhall never be weighed, and then the King ſhall never have his Remedy, for there is not any Time limited upon the Agreement when it ſhall be weighed, nor by whom, nor is it averred that the King has any Beam there. And therefore this Agreement is referred to an Incertainty, which by Intendment ſhall never be performed, and is contrary to the Effect and Intent of the Statute, which was made for the Advantage and Benefit of the King; for which Reaſon Judgment ought here to be given for the King. And alſo Wells has ſaid that he found Surety, and has not ſhewn what Surety in certain, as he ought, for their Ability ought to be ſhewn, that the Court may judge whether they be ſufficient. [c] As in 22 Ed. 4. a Man was bound to ſhew one a ſufficient Diſcharge of an Annuity, &c. and he ſaid, that he offered to ſhew a ſufficient Diſcharge, and the Party who was to ſee it refuſed to ſee it, and this was held to be no Plea, inaſmuch as he did not ſhew in certain what manner of a Diſcharge it was, in Order that the Court might judge whether it was ſufficient: ſo here, he ought to ſhew the Names of the Sureties, and their Ability, that the Court may be Judges thereof: for which Reaſon, &c. And alſo Wells has ſaid that he would pay according to the Rate, and has not ſhewn what Rate, and therefore it is not well depoſed. And there is another Cauſe why Judgment ſhould be given for the King, for admitting that the Matter might be pleaded, and ſhould be good, yet here it might not be given in Evidence, for the Iſſue is, whether the Defendant agreed or no according to the Form of the Statute, which ſhall be intended a general Agreement, viz. an Agreement certain, and here the Evidence proves a ſpecial Agreement, viz. an Agreement incertain, which does not prove the Iſſue, but it ought at firſt to have been pleaded and miniſtred in Bar, and relied upon, and inaſmuch as it was not done ſo, the Evidence does not purſue the Iſſue. [d] As in 31. H. 6. in Debt upon non eſt factum pleaded they were at Iſſue, and the Witneſſes which gave Evidence that he made the Deed were examined were the Delivery was, and they ſaid that it was delivered at York, which was in another County than where it bore Date, upon which the Defendant demurred, and by Award the Plaintiff was barred, becauſe the Delivery ſhall be intended where the Date was, and now the Witneſſes ſay the contrary, ſo that the Evidence does not warrant the Iſſue. [e] And in 18. H. 6. Iſſue was joined whether the Defendant held for Term of Life or not, and a Deed of a Leaſe for Life was given in Evidence, where no Livery of Seizin was made, and there it is held, that this Evidence does not warrant the Iſſue, which was, that he was Tenant for Life the Day of the Writ purchaſed, and is at this Day. [f] And in 14. Ed. 3. upon Traverſe of a Gift in Tail, the Witneſſes proved that another made the Gift, and there it was awarded that the Plaintiff ſhould be barred, becauſe the Evidence did not prove the Iſſue. So here, the Iſſue ſhall be intended a general Agreement, and the Evidence proves a ſpecial Agreement, which is not purſuant to the Iſſue. And if a general Agreement had been pleaded pleaded in Bar, and in the Rejoinder he had alledged a ſpecial Agreement, this ſhould be adjudged a Departure in Pleading. [g] As in Treſpaſs if the Defendant will plead a Deſcent to him, and the Plaintiff ſays that after the Deſcent the Defendant infeoffed him, and the Defendant ſays, that this Feoffment was upon Condition, for the Breach whereof he entered, this is a Departure from the Bar, for it contains new Matter. So here, if the general Agreement had been pleaded in Bar, and in his Rejoinder he had maintained the Bar with a ſpecial Agreement, this had been a Departure; and by the ſame Reaſon, this being given in Evidence ſhall not maintain the general Agreement put in Iſſue: Wherefore, &c. Beſides, there is another Matter which ſhall make the King to have Judgment, and that is, inaſmuch as Davy, one of the Witneſſes, ſays, that about two Months after the firſt Agreement, Smith told him that there was not then any other Entry made but that which was firſt made, and that was for 2000 Kintals only, and his Saying ſhall be intended true, ſo that by his Depoſition there was not any ſuch Entry of the ſpecial Agreement made as Wells has teſtified. And therefore inaſmuch as the Witneſſes vary, and it is demurred in Judgment upon the Depoſition of all the Witneſſes, and the one makes againſt the Defendant, it ſeems to me that for this Cauſe Judgment is to be given for the King. And alſo, inaſmuch as the Depoſition of Davy is againſt the Defendant, and therefore he has diſproved the Depoſition of Smith, then there is only one Witneſs which proves for him, that is to ſay Wells, which is not ſufficient in any Law. For the Chriſtian Kings of this Realm in former Times have made their Laws as near to the Laws of God as they could, but of their own Authority have oftentimes added greater Puniſhments to Things prohibited than the Laws of God declare; and amongſt divers Points of the Law of God which they have purſued this is one, viz. [a] that in every Trial there ſhall be two Witneſſes at leaſt, which is agreeable to the Book of Deuteronomy. [b] And ſo of ancient Time the Law of this Realm has been accordingly, as it is expreſſed in the Book called the Mirror of Juſtices, which was made before the Conqueſt. [c] And agreeable hereunto it has been ruled in the Time of King Edward 3. that where one Juror in Aſſize appears, and no more, and the Plaintiff ſurmiſes that the Sheriff has warned many more who were in the Town, and prays that he who appears may be examined thereupon, it was awarded that he ſhould not, inaſmuch as he alone is not a ſufficient Witneſs. So here the Defendant has but one Witneſs which proves for him, which is not ſufficient. And therefore for all theſe cauſes Judgment is to be given for the King.

Atkins an Apprentice. It ſeems to me to the contrary; and firſt as to that which has been laſt moved, viz. that Davy has depoſed againſt us, and inaſmuch as the Demurrer is upon the whole Evidence, that Judgment ſhall be given againſt us; Sir, this is not ſo, for admitting that Davy has depoſed againſt us (as in rei veritate he has not) yet what he has ſaid ſhall be to no Purpoſe, for he was brought in to prove the Agreement, and if he knew nothing of the Agreement, it is the ſame as if he had depoſed nothing at all, and as if he had never been brought in: and therefore his Depoſition is meerly void. And alſo the King's Attorney has taken his Depoſition to this Effect, that more was not entered than 2000 Kintals, ſo that this Depoſition in this Point was meerly in the negative, for theſe words, no, and not, are Negatives. And ſuch a Depoſition is to no Effect, for it might be that more was entered although Smith did not tell him ſo, and ſuch a Depoſition in the Negative is meerly void. And as to that which has been moved by Mr. Attorney, that one Witneſs is not ſufficient to give Evidence to the Jurors, this is not ſo, for if the Law ſhould be ſo, a great Miſchief would follow. For if I have four Witneſſes, and the Sheriff will empannel three of them upon my Inqueſt, if I might not have the like Advantage of their Knowledge when they are empanneled, as I ſhould have had if they had been out of the Inqueſt, it would be a great Miſchief to me; but I may put the Matter to the Inqueſt without any Witneſs, and their Knowledge ſhall aid me, and not the Knowledge of the Witneſſes, for they may give a Verdict contrary to the Witneſſes, and ſo the Witneſſes and their Teſtimony is not very material when [d] there is an Inqueſt, for which Reaſon this Exception is not material. And as to that which has been moved, that he ought to aver that the King has a Beam to weigh ſuch Things, Sir, that is to be ſo intended, and there is an Officer appointed for it; wherefore it is not neceſſary to aver that which of neceſſity ought to be intended. And as to the other Matter which has been moved by Mr. Attorney, that the Agreement put in Iſſue ſhall be intended general, and the Evidence proves a ſpecial Agreement, and therefore does not maintain the Iſſue; Sir, it maintains [e] the Iſſue well enough, for a ſpecial Agreement is an Agreement, and this Word (Agreement) includes every Agreement; as a Feoffment upon Condition is a Feoffment; and ſo here, the ſpecial Agreement is included in this Word (Agreement); and therefore the Evidence does well maintain the Iſſue. Note, He did not anſwer to the other Exception, viz. that Wells had not ſhewn what Sureties, &c. [f] for that is not material, for if he agree without any Surety, the Agreement is good, and the King may have an Action of Debt againſt him, and the Statute does not ſpeak of any Surety, and therefore it ſhall be in vain to ſpeak of it, and perhaps he ſo underſtood it, and therefore made no Anſwer to him as to this Point. And further he ſaid, as to the principal Matter, it ſeems to me, that the Agreement is ſuch as is intended by the Statute. And there are holden in our Law three Sorts of Agreements, and no more. [g] The firſt Sort of an Agreement is that which is executed at the Beginning, and ſuch an Agreement is mentioned in the Statute of Cloths, 25. Ed. 3. cap. 3. Stat. 4. which ſays, that the Goods and Things bought by Foreſtallers, being thereof attainted, ſhall be forfeited to the King, if the Buyer thereof have made Gree with the Seller; in which Caſe this Word (Gree) which is otherwiſe called an Agreement, ſhall be intended an Agreement executed, that is to ſay, Payment for the Things. The ſecond Manner of Agreement is, where one doth an Act, and another agrees and aſſents to it afterwards. [h] As if one commits a Diſſeizin to my Uſe, and afterwards I agree to it, now I ſhall be ſaid a Diſſeiſor ab initio, and ſuch an Agreement is an Agreement after an Act done. So if one raviſhes a Woman, and afterwards ſhe aſſents to the Raviſher, this Aſſent is called an Agreement; ſo that this Agreement is an Agreement after an Act or thing done, which Agreement is alſo executed; for when the Party agrees to that which is done before, then this Agreement ought to be called executed, inaſmuch as nothing is to be done afterwards; and ſo both theſe Agreements are executed. The third ſort of Agreement is, when both Parties at one Time are agreed that ſuch a Thing ſhall be done at a Time to come, this Agreement is executory, inaſmuch as the Thing ſhall be done hereafter; and yet there their Minds agree at one Time, but inaſmuch as the Performance ſhall be afterwards, and ſo the Thing upon which the Agreement was made remains to be done, this Agreement ſhall be called executory, as is ſaid before. And the Statute 26. H. 8. cap. 3. proves that there is ſuch an Agreement, for the Statute ſays, That every Vicar, Parſon, and ſuch others, &c. before their actual poſſeſſion, or meddling with the Profits of their Benefice, ſhall ſatisfy, content, and pay, or compound, or agree to pay, to the uſe of the King, the firſt-Fruits, &c. and if any ſuch Parſon, Vicar, &c. enter into actual Poſſeſſion, &c. before he ſhall have ſatisfied or paid to the Uſe of the King the Firſt-Fruits, or before he has compounded or agreed for the Payment thereof, &c. that then he ſhall be taken as an Intruder, &c. [a] Which Statute is in the Disjunctive, and ſpeaks of Payment or Agreement, &c. and this Agreement is to be intended executory, as the common Uſage proves, for it is uſual to make an Obligation for the Payment thereof at certain Days after. So there are three Sorts of Agreements mentioned and underſtood in our Law, as is before ſhewn. And the firſt of theſe Agreements, viz. the Agreement executed with Payment, is not intended in our Caſe, for the Statute (as hath been ſaid) is in the Disjunctive, viz. the Subſidy not being paid, or, the Collector not agreed with for it. And ſo if the Agreement, of which the Statute ſpeaks, ſhould be intended executed with Payment, then the Statute ſhould not be in the Disjunctive, for then the firſt Clauſe and the ſecond would be all one, which is not ſo, for this Word (or) is a Disjunctive, which makes the Clauſes ſeveral. Wherefore the Agreement, of which the Statute ſpeaks, muſt of Neceſſity be taken other than the firſt of the Agreements mentioned in my Diviſion, viz. the Agreement executed with Payment. And it may not be taken the ſecond Agreement whereof I have ſpoken before, for that is of Things firſt done, to which the Agreement is afterwards given, and it is not ſo in our Caſe; wherefore inaſmuch as the Statute doth warrant an Agreement, and it is not the firſt nor the ſecond Agreement mentioned in my Diviſion, and there are not, nor can be more than three Agreements; Ergo ex conſequente ſequitur, that the Agreement intended by the Statute is the third Agreement mentioned before, that is to ſay, the Agreement executory. And, Sir, the Agreement executory is divided into two Points, and no more. The one is ſuch an Agreement executory as is certain at the Beginning, (as hath been ſaid touching the Firſt-Fruits,) as if the Party ſhould ſay, I have ſo much Merchandize, or ſo many Kintals of Woad, the Subſidy of which will amount to ſo much, and for this he makes an Entry in the Book of the Cuſtomer, or an Obligation for the Payment of it; here this is one of the Agreements executory. The other is in our Caſe, or in ſuch like, where the Certainty does not appear, and the Parties are agreed that the Thing ſhall be performed or paid upon the Certainty being known. And then inaſmuch as there are two Agreements executory, and our Agreement here is not the firſt of them, I am to prove that the Statute will warrant and approve our Agreement here, which is the ſecond Agreement executory, as well as it will the firſt Agreement executory; and this I ſhall prove well enough. For in our Law, and in all other Laws (as I apprehend) there are ſome Things that happen, which may not be prevented by foreſight, nor by any Diligence or poſſible Means be eſchewed and avoided; and when any ſuch thing happens to a Man, the Law will not puniſh him for it, for the Law will not puniſh any Man but for his own Default, and if the Law ſees that there is no Default in him, it will not puniſh him; for if the Law ſhould puniſh a Man for an Accident, which by no Foreſight, Diligence, or Poſſibility could be avoided, it would be utterly againſt Reaſon, and therefore ſeeing that ſuch Accidents can by no Means be avoided, the Perſons upon whom they happen ſhall not be hurt thereby. [b] And therefore there are three Kinds of Laws in this Realm of England, by which the King's People are governed, viz. the Law general, Cuſtoms, and Statute Law, and in theſe three Laws ſuch unavoidable Accidents ſhall not hurt any one; for which reaſon though Effuſion of Blood, and the killing of Men are prohibited by the common Law, yet every man, in his own [c] Defence, or as [d] a Champion in Trial in a Writ of Right, or ſuch like, may kill others; and the one is for the Safety of his Life in his Defence, and the other is for the Neceſſity of Trial. [e] So by the common Cuſtom of the Realm Hoſts ſhall be charged for the Goods of their Gueſts loſt or ſtolen out of their Houſes, yet if their Houſes be [f] broken by the King's Enemies, and the Goods taken from thence, they ſhall not be chargeable for them, for in Reaſon ſuch Violence cannot be reſiſted, and therefore it ſhall infringe the Violence of the Cuſtom. Like Reaſon will diſpenſe with ſtatute Law; and therefore the Statute of Marlbridge, cap. 4. prohibits Diſtreſſes from being driven out of one County into another; yet it is held in 30. Ed. 3. [g] That where the Abbeſs of Wilton had a Manor in one County, ſhe might carry a Diſtreſs taken in another County in Land holden of the ſaid Manor, into the ſame County where the Manor was, notwithſtanding the Statute is in the negative; and this is in reſpect of the Inconvenience and Abſurdity that ſhould otherwiſe follow. And ſo we ſee that ſome Caſes ſhall be conſtrued contrary to Statutes, contrary to Cuſtoms, and contrary to the ordinary Courſe of the Common Law, and this is for the Neceſſity of the Matter, and therefore Reaſon maintains that ſuch Perſons as do ſo ſhall not be wrong-Doers. So in the principal Caſe here, if the Ship had been on fire, and he had caſt the Woad upon the Land before Payment of the Subſidy, or Agreement for it, he ſhould have been excuſed by reaſon of the Neceſſity of the Occaſion.

And ſo as the Caſe ſtands, the Tempeſt which aroſe upon the Sea could not be reſiſted, and therefore when they caſt the Woad out of the Ship into the Sea for the Safety of their Lives, whereby the certain Quantity of the reſt that was left in the Ship could not be known, they ought not to be blameable for this Incertainty that is made; and beſides, they could not weigh it in the Ship, nor by any other poſſible Means know the Certainty of it before it was put upon the Land; and inaſmuch as Fogoſſa (the Defendant) was not in any Fault for not knowing the Certainty, and upon the Incertainty no other more certain Agreement could be made for the King's Subſidy than has been made, it ſeems to me that the Defendant has done well, and that the Rigour of the Tempeſt ſhall excuſe the Rigour of the Statute. And ſo the Agreement here made ſhall by Neceſſity of Reaſon be ſaid the Agreement intended by the Statute, inaſmuch as a more perfect Agreement could not be made, the Accident having happened as it did; and ſo the Defendant has fulfilled the Effect and Intent of the Statute, for which reaſon Judgment ſhall be given for him.

Saunders one of the King's Serjeants. It ſeems to me to the contrary. And firſt it is to be ſeen (as I apprehend) how the Statute ſhall be taken, whether for the Benefit of the King, or for the Benefit of the Party. And it ſeems to me that although the Statute is penal, yet it ſhall be taken according to common Reaſon, and common Intendment, and according to the Minds of the Makers. And here although the Statute ſpeaks of the Collector not agreed with, and that generally, and alſo although the ſpecial Agreement, which is here upon Condition, is an Agreement, and included in the general Words, the Collector not agreed with, yet the Statute ſhall be conſtrued according to the Minds of the Makers, and ſhall extend only to ſuch an Agreement as they intended, ſo that their Intent ſhall be obſerved in this Statute, [a] as it ſhall be in other penal Statutes. [b] As in the Statute of Waſt, which ſays, if any one doth waſt in Land which he holds ex dimiſſione, &c. yet if his Eſtate be ex [c] legatione, he ſhall be puniſhed by the Equity of the Statute, and yet the Statute is penal; but the Minds of the Makers of the Statute were ſuch, and therefore the Uſe has been ſo ever ſince. And the Statute of quia Emptores terrarum [d], which reſtrains Men from making Tenures of themſelves, is penal, and yet where the Words are, that every one ſhall hold of the Lord Paramount, ſecundum quantitatem terræ, &c. this is taken and ought to be intended, [e] ſecundum valorem terræ: So that it has always been the Mind of the Legiſlature, that their Intent ſhould be obſerved in the Conſtruction of Statutes. [f] And in 4. Ed. 4. there was an Information brought in the Exchequer, that one had unfreighted certain Sacks of Wool, and had not found Surety according to the Statute of 14. Ed. 3. [g] cap. ult. Stat. 1. viz. to bring Bullion, that is, Plate of Silver of two Marks for every Sack of Wool, and to take two Marks of Coin back again for the Bullion: And there were two Statutes alledged to bar the ſaid finding of Surety, viz. the one was the 36. Ed. 3. cap. 11. which Statute recites, that the Commons of the Realm have granted to the King a Subſidy on every Sack of Wool for three Years, in conſideration whereof, the King grants by the ſame Statute, that after the three Years nothing ſhall be taken in Demand of the Commons, but only the ancient Cuſtom of half a Mark for every Sack, &c. And the other Statute which was alledged to bar the ſaid finding of Surety was the 45. Ed. 3. cap. 4. by which it was eſtabliſhed, that no Impoſition or Charge ſhould be put upon Wools, other than the Cuſtom and Subſidy granted to the King, &c. without the Aſſent of Parliament, and if any be, it ſhall be repealed and holden for none: And it is there ſaid and argued againſt the King, that by the general Words of theſe two Statutes the finding of Surety given by the ſaid Statute of 14. Ed. 3. ſhall be repealed and annulled; but there it is adjudged by great Advice, that the finding of Surety, ut ſupra, is not annulled, and that the Information was well made, for it is there holden that every Statute ought to be taken according to the Intent of thoſe that made it, where the Words are doubtful and not certain according to the Rehearſal of the Statute, and it was not the Intent of the Makers of the two laſt Statutes to diſcharge the Bullion, but only great Subſidies and great Charges upon Wool after the three Years; for which Reaſon the Judgment was, ut ſupra. Which proves that where the Words of a Statute are general, as they are in our Caſe, all Things which are within the general Words are not taken as the Purview of the Statute, but ſuch Things as the Makers of the Statute meant; ſo that the Intent of the Legiſlature is the Judge of the Words, and ſhall abridge the Generality of them. So in our principal Caſe, the Minds of the Legiſlature ought to be obſerved in this Statute. And then although the Statute is general, viz. the Collector not agreed with, and this Agreement may be conſtrued two Ways, viz. certain, or incertain, as in our Caſe, yet by the Intent of the Legiſlature it ought to be taken that Way which is moſt beneficial for the King, inaſmuch as it was made for his Benefit and Advancement; for the Commons pray, that the King will accept this Subſidy as the Firſt-Fruits of their good Will; by which Words it appears that the Makers of the Statute, that is, the King's Subjects, intended it to be made for the Advancement and Emolument of the King. And then it ought to be conſtrued moſt beneficially for the King, which Conſtruction ſhall be beſt ſatisfied by an Agreement certain, upon which the King may have an Action at the Beginning. [h] And alſo Statutes ought to be conſtrued according to the Reaſon of the common Law. And there is a Principle or Ground in the common Law for the Expoſition of Words, Clauſes, or Sentences, viz. [i] that in every Grant or Gift, if the Words are ambiguous and doubtful, they ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt the Grantors or Donors, and moſt beneficially for them to whom the Grant or Gift was made; and if it be ſo where a common Perſon is Grantee or Donee, a multo fortiore where the King is Grantee or Donee. And here here the Commons have given this Subſidy to the King by the ſaid Statute, and the Commons are the Donors and Grantors, and the King is the Donee or Grantee, in which Caſe, the Words of the ſaid Statute, which is the Grant, ought to be taken moſt beneficially for the King. And then if an Agreement certain is more beneficial for the King than the Agreement incertain here is, (as every one will confeſs it is) it follows conſequentially, that ſuch Agreement certain ſhall be intended for the King by the Statute in the Conſtruction of Law. And therefore the Statute de Prerogativa Regis [a] is a Grant of the Commons to the King, which ordains in cap. 1. that the King ſhall have the Wardſhip of the Lands of ſuch as hold of him in chief by Knight's Service, whereof the Tenants were ſeized in their Demeſn as of Fee at the Time of their Death, &c. which Words (in their Demeſn as of Fee,) have two Intendments, viz. of Fee-Simple or Fee-Tail, and the moſt common Intendment is Fee-Simple, [b] for when it is ſaid that ſuch an one is ſeized in Fee, this is commonly taken in Fee-Simple; and yet it has been adjudged, and is now uſed as clear Law, that the King ſhall have as well the Land which his Tenant had in Tail, as that which he had in Fee-Simple, which Caſe is as a Rule to us, that where the Words in the Gifts of Subjects made to the King by Parliament have two Intendments, they ſhall be conſtrued moſt ſtrongly for the Benefit of the King. And one may have Land by three Ways, to which he came not by Deſcent; one Way is, by Bargain or Gift for Money; another is, by Gift without any Recompence; and the third is, by Way of Remainder; and yet if a Man has Land by all theſe three Ways, and will give to the King all his Lands purchaſed, the King ſhall have all the ſaid Lands; for this Word (Purchaſe) ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt the Donor, and moſt beneficially for the King, the Donee. So this Word (agreed with) ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt the Subjects in the principal Caſe, and moſt beneficially for the King, and therefore inaſmuch as the Agreement certain is more for the Benefit of the King, the ſame ſhall be here intended by the Statute. And if the Tempeſt which is alledged was true, yet Fogoſſa might have helped himſelf ſeveral Ways, for he might have gueſſed upon Sight of it how much was left in the Ship, or he might have tried it by Lighters or Boats in carrying of it to Land, or he might have weighed it in the Ship by the Beam in diſburthening the Ship. So that it is not like ſome of the Caſes upon Neceſſity put by Atkins before, but his Ignorance of the Certainty is an affected Ignorance, and at leaſt he ought to have got it weighed before this Time. And inaſmuch as all theſe Defaults are in him, by which he appears to have been negligent and not to have done his Duty, and now the King has no Means to compel him to weigh it, ſo that perhaps it ſhall never be weighed, nor the Certainty ever appear, there is no Reaſon that this ſhould be taken for the Agreement intended by the Statute; for the Agreement intended by the Statute ſhall be ſuch as gives a certain Remedy, and ſuch Agreements, upon which [c] Remedy is not given, are void by the Common Law, and ſhall not be good in Bar. [d] And therefore in 19. H. 6. in Forger of falſe Deeds, the Defendant pleaded an Arbitrement made, viz. that the Plaintiff ſhould not ſue the Writ againſt the Defendant, and alſo that the Defendant ſhould be nonſuited in an Aſſize which he had againſt the Plaintiff, and he ſaid that the Day was not yet come, and it was adjudged no Plea in Bar; one Cauſe was becauſe the Nonſuit does not enure as a Satisfaction; and another Cauſe was becauſe he could not compel him to be nonſuited in an Aſſize; and if he had ſaid that the Award was that he ſhould give the Plaintiff [e] an Acre, this had been no Plea, if he had not ſaid that he had given it him, becauſe the Plaintiff could not compel him to give the Acre. So here he can not compel him nor any other to weigh it. And this is the Reaſon of the Concord in 6. [f] H. 7. where in Treſpaſs the Defendant pleaded a Concord that he ſhould pay Money to the Plaintiff, and ſhould alſo make him certain Windows, and he ſhewed that he paid the Money accordingly, but did not ſay that he had made the Windows, and there inaſmuch as the Concord was intire, and he did not alledge the Performance of [g] all, and the Plaintiff had no Remedy to compel him to make the Windows, the Plea was held ill. [h] But if the Act had been done there, it ſhould be otherwiſe both in the Caſe of an Arbitrement, and in the Caſe of a Concord, and perhaps alſo in the principal Caſe, for if a Day had been appointed, and at that Day it had been weighed and reduced to a Certainty before the Seizure, then perhaps the Seizure would have been wrongful, inaſmuch as the King knew the Certainty, and might then have an Action of Debt for the Duty, which Remedy by Action is taken to be of the ſame Effect as a Satisfaction in Deed, and ſhall countervail a Satisfaction. [i] And in 27. Aſs. in a Bill of Treſpaſs the Caſe is, that a Bailiff known pledged an Ox of his Maſter for twelve Buſhels of Wheat, ſo that if he did not pay, &c. that then he ſhould keep the Ox for ever, and the Wheat came to the Uſe of the Maſter, and afterwards the Maſter diſagreeing thereto took the Ox, and the other brought a Bill of Treſpaſs, and all this Matter was found by Verdict, and by Award the Plaintiff recovered, for there it is held that foraſmuch as the Wheat came to the Maſter's Uſe, and ſo founded in Satisfaction before the Maſter took the Ox, he ſhall be bound thereby, ſeeing it was done by his known Bailiff; but there it ſeems, if the Wheat had not come to the Maſter's Uſe, he ſhould not have been bound, for then it had not been any Recompence. And agreeable hereunto is the Book in 17. Ed. 4. [k] in Treſpaſs for taking Barley and Wheat, where the Defendant ſaid, that the Plaintiff bargained with him, that if after he had ſeen the ſaid Barley and Wheat he liked them, then he ſhould take them, paying ſo much for every Acre, and afterwards he ſaw them and liked them, and therefore he took them, and there it is held by the better Opinion that the Juſtification is not good, inaſmuch as he had not alledged Payment of the Sum, and alſo he ought to have certified him of his Mind. Wherefore Contracts or Agreements conditional ſhall be ſaid good after the Condition is performed, but before that they are no more than Communications; nications; and ſo is the Diverſity. And in the principal Caſe, if a Day had been appointed, and it had been weighed at the Day, &c. and the Certainty had been known before the Seizure, then perhaps the Seizure would have been wrongful, but now it ſhall be good; and therefore for both the Cauſes firſt above ſhewn, the Statute ſhall be conſtrued moſt ſtrongly for the Benefit of the King. And foraſmuch as there are ſo many Defaults in Fogoſſa, which prove his Ignorance to be affected, and ſeeing the King may not compel him to weigh the Woad, and to aſcertain his Duty to intitle him to an Action, (and ſo the Agreement doth not preſently import any Satisfaction) it ſeems to me, that the King ſhall not be bound by ſuch Agreement made with the Collector, being his Servant, no more than the Maſter ſhould have been bound in the ſaid Caſe of 27. Aſs. by the Agreement made with his Servant, if the Recompence had not come to the Maſter before; therefore it ſeems to me that Judgment is to be given for the King.

E contra for the Defendant. Robert Brook Recorder of London to the contrary. As to that which has been ſaid by the King's Attorney, that there ought to be two Witneſſes to prove the Fact; it is true that there ought to be two Witneſſes at leaſt where [a] the Matter is to be tried by Witneſſes only, as in the civil [b] Law, but here the Iſſue was to be tried by twelve Men, [c] in which Caſe Witneſſes are not neceſſary, for in many Caſes an Inqueſt ſhall give a preciſe Verdict, although there are no Witneſſes, or no [d] Evidence given to them. [e] As if it be found before the Coroner ſuper viſum corporis, that J. S. killed the dead Perſon, and he is arraigned and acquitted, the Inqueſt ſhall ſay who killed him, although they have not any Witneſſes; ſo that Witneſſes are not neceſſary but where the Matter is to be tried by Witneſſes only. For if Witneſſes were ſo neceſſary, then it would follow that the Jurors could not give a Verdict contrary to the Witneſſes, whereas the Law is quite otherwiſe, for when the Witneſſes for Trial of a Fact are [f] joined to the Inqueſt, if they cannot agree with the Jurors, the Verdict of the twelve ſhall be taken, and the Witneſſes ſhall be rejected: therefore this Point is clear enough. And as to what has been ſaid by the King's Attorney, that the Depoſition of Davy makes againſt us, inaſmuch as he ſays that Smith ſhewed him that an Entry was made for no more than 2000 Kintals, Sir, this is nothing to the Purpoſe, for if he could not ſay any Thing to prove the Iſſue in which he came to depoſe, then he is neither with us, nor againſt us, but his Depoſition is of the ſame Effect in Law as if he had ſaid nothing at all, or as if he had ſaid that he knew nothing of the Matter; ſo that this Point alſo is clear enough. And as to that which has been moved by the Attorney, that he ought to ſhew what Rate in certain; Sir, this is not at all neceſſary, inaſmuch as it is expreſſed by the Statute, viz. 12 d. for every 20 s. of which Statute, being general, all Perſons ought to take notice, as in all other Statutes; but if there were two Rates, (as there are not) then he ought to ſhew according to which Rate; but inaſmuch as there is only one Rate, he has ſaid well; wherefore this is clear enough. And as to the Conſtruction of the Statute, it ſeems to me that it ſhall be taken and conſtrued beneficially for Fogoſſa being a Stranger, for in the ſame Statute there is a Requeſt, that all Merchants, as well Denizens as Strangers, coming into this Realm, be well and honeſtly treated and demeaned, as they were in the Times of the King's Progenitors, without Oppreſſion, &c. which Words prove that it was the Intent of the Makers of the Statute, that it ſhould be conſtrued favourably for Strangers. And ſo the Statute itſelf is a more ſure Warrant to us to conſtrue the Statute for the Benefit of Fogoſſa, and in his Favour, than any of the ſaid Reaſons before given. [But note, the Statute is as he ſaid, and more, that is to ſay, without Oppreſſion to be done to them, paying the Subſidies aforeſaid, which Words he omitted.] And he argued further and ſaid, the Agreement here ſhall be good enough, and is within the Intent of the Statute; for in many Caſes Gifts and Grants ſhall not be certain at the Beginning, and yet ſhall be good, if there is a Mean to reduce them afterwards to a Certainty. Nevertheleſs it is the Nature of Gifts and Grants to be executed preſently, and every Gift is an Agreement between the Parties, and ſo is every Grant; and then if Gifts and Grants (which are Agreements, and the Nature of which is properly to be executed at the Time they are made) ſhall be good enough, notwithſtanding they are incertain at the Beginning, a multo fortiore Agreements executory of any Thing ſhall be good, though they are incertain at firſt. And to prove that ſuch Gifts and Grants ſhall be good notwithſtanding their Incertainty at firſt, there are many Caſes as well where the King as others are Parties. [g] And therefore if the King at this Day grants over certain Lands which have come to his Hands before, and further grants to the Grantee ſuch Liberties, Privileges, Juriſdictions, &c. as he had who was laſt ſeized of the Lands, where the King knows not the Certainty of the Liberties and Privileges, yet this Grant is good enough, and the Patentee may enquire what Liberties or Privileges the other had before, and the ſame he ſhall uſe and enjoy, and yet they were not certainly expreſſed, but were incertain at the Time of the Grant: But foraſmuch as this Incertainty may be reduced to a Certainty by Inquiry, or other Circumſtances, the Grant is good. [h] And ſo it is holden in 9. H. 6. where the King granted to the Ducheſs of York quandam Inſulam, &c. cum omnibus exitibus, amerciamentis, et proficuis omnium gentium reſidentium, &c. de et infra Inſulam prædict. in quibuſcunque curiis noſtris emergentibus; there it is held that the Grant is good, and yet at the Beginning the King knew not what Iſſues, or what Amercements would be afterwards forfeited; but becauſe when they were forfeited, they might be certainly known, (and ſo there is a Means to know the Certainty of them) the Grant was adjudged good. [i] And ſo in 5. Ed. 4. the King granted to one called Garter the Office of King of Heralds cum feodis et proficuis ab antiquo, &c. here in this Grant there was no Certainty of the Fees and Profits belonging to that Office, and yet the Grant was held good enough, cauſa qua ſupra. [a] And ſo in 30 H. 6. if the King grants all ſuch Lands as came to him by Attainder, &c. this Grant comprehends no Certainty; yet it was held good, becauſe by Circumſtances it may be reduced to a Certainty. And ſo if the King will pardon all Riots, &c. here the Pardon contains no Certainty, nor does the King know what he pardons, and yet this Pardon is good enough. Same Law is in the Caſes of common Perſons, [b] for it is held in 21 H. 6. that if a Parſon will grant all his Tithe Wool of the next Year, it is a good Grant; yet the Quantity of the Wool is incertain at the Time of the Grant, but inasmuch as it may be reduced to a Certainty afterwards, the Grant was held good enough. [c] So if a Man will grant to me the Perquiſites of his Court, this incertain Grant is good, cauſa qua ſupra. [d] And ſo a Feoffment of two Acres, viz. the one for Life, and the other in Fee, without determining in certain in which he ſhall have Fee, this incertain Feoffment may be reduced to a Certainty; as if the Tenant loſe both the Acres by Default, he may have a quod ei deforceat for the one, and a Writ of Right for the other Acre, and by that Means the Certainty of the Gift ſhall be determined and known. [e] So if one grants a Rent-charge to another, the Grantee may avow or have a Writ of Annuity, and which ever of theſe he will uſe is maintainable, and yet at the Beginning it was incertain, but notwithſtanding this Incertainty the Grant is good. [f] So in 9 Ed. 4. one grants to another 20 s. or a Robe annually, here the Grantee does not know the Certainty of the Grant, for perhaps he ſhall always have the 20 s. perhaps the Robe always; and yet the Grant is there held to be good, becauſe it is reducible to Certainty by the Will of the Grantor. [g] And ſo a Leaſe for ſo many Years as J. S. ſhall name is good, and yet it is incertain; but if he name a Number, then it is good ab initio. [h] So if I have two Horſes in my Stable, viz. the one black, the other white, and I give to J. S. one of theſe Horſes, this is a good Gift, notwithſtanding the Incertainty; becauſe by Circumſtances, viz. by his Election, the Certainty may be known. And then inaſmuch as the Law is ſo in the Caſes aforeſaid, this proves our Matter, as it ſeems to me, for every Gift, every Grant, every Feoffment, and every Confirmation is an Agreement, for it is the Will of the Donor that the Donee ſhould have the Thing; and the Donee is content to take it. And ſo there is a mutual Aſſent of their Minds, which mutual Aſſent of Minds is an Agreement, and an Agreement is nothing but a mutual Aſſent of Minds touching any Thing, for there ought to be ſomething upon which their Minds may concur and conclude. And as in all the Caſes which I have put before there is a Matter and Subſtance, upon which their Minds agree, ſo there is in our Caſe, that is to ſay, the Money which ſhall be paid; wherefore the Caſes that I have put before prove that the Incertainty is not material, and the King may be here anſwered, as to the Incertainty, by the Caſes of the King put before: ſo that he ſhall be rebutted with his own Caſes, inasmuch as in the one Caſe and in the other there is a Medium or Circumſtances to try the Incertainty. And as to what hath been ſaid, that upon the Agreement it was not concluded who ſhould weigh the Woad, or within what Time it ſhould be weighed; Sir, this is not material, for in every Port there is an Officer who has the Cuſtody of the Beam, and who ought to weigh it, and it may be weighed upon Requeſt; ſo that to conclude upon that which is certain before would be in vain. And therefore the Circumſtances to reduce this to Certainty are certain enough. And beſides, although the Statute had ſpoken of an Agreement certain, (as it does not) yet here the Neceſſity of the Matter will aid us; for the Tempeſt, which was the Cauſe of the Ignorance of the certain Quantity of the Woad, and all the Neceſſity alledged is confeſſed [i] by the Demurrer to be true in Manner and Form as we have alledged it: and when Laws or Statutes are made, yet there are certain Things which are exempted and excepted out of the Proviſion of the ſame by the Law of Reaſon, although they are not expreſly excepted. As the breaking of Priſon is Felony in the Priſoner himſelf by the Statute [k] de frangentibus priſonam. yet if the Priſon [l] be on Fire, and they who are in, break the Priſon to ſave their Lives, this ſhall be excuſed by the Law of Reaſon, and yet the Words of the Statute are againſt it. [m] So in 14. H. 7. the Jurors who were ſworn upon an Iſſue for Fear of a great Tempeſt departed thence and diſperſed themſelves, and it was there held that they ſhould not be amerced, and that their Verdict afterwards was good, and that they did not do ill; which was ſo held in regard of the Neceſſity of the Occaſion, but otherwiſe they ſhould have been grievouſly puniſhed. [n] And ſo for the Safeguard of my Life I may kill another that aſſaults me. And the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 3. which gives Receit to a Feme-Covert, ſays, "If the Wife do come before Judgment ready to anſwer the Demandant, and to defend her Right, ſhe ſhall be admitted," &c. ſo that the Statute does not give the Receit but where the Wife is ready to anſwer; and yet it has been adjudged, that ſhe, being received, ſhall [o] pray in Aid, or ſhall [p] vouch, ſo that ſhe has been received, where ſhe has not been ready to anſwer. But the ancient Fathers of the Law, conſidering the ſaid Statute, ſaw that if it ſhould be taken according to the Words, great Inconvenience would follow from thence, viz. the Loſs of the Recompence by the Warranty, &c. and therefore they conſtrued the ſaid Statute according to Equity and Reaſon, although the Words did not allow of it, but ſeemed againſt it; ſo that in all Statutes there are ſome private Caſes excepted out of the general Proviſion by Equity of Reaſon, in Avoidance of a greater Miſchief. And ſo the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 1. ordains, "That they to whom the Land was ſo given upon Condition, ſhall have no Power to alien, &c." which Statutedoes not ſpeak of the Heirs of the Donee in Tail, but of the Donees themſelves, that they ſhall not have Power to alien, and yet it has been adjudged, that the Alienation of the † Iſſue in Tail ſhall not be more prejudicial to his Iſſue than the Alienation of the firſt Donee ſhall be to his Iſſue: for the ancient Fathers of the Law, ſeeing that theſe Caſes were in equal Miſchief, took them to be in like Law, and in ſuch

Sense they construed the Minds of the Makers of the Statute, out of mere Necessity to avoid a Mischief. By which Cases before recited by me it appears, that some Things are for Necessity's Sake exempted and excepted (by Equity of Reason) out of the prohibitory Words of Statutes, and other Things which are not remedied by the Words of Statutes, are (by Equity of Reason) taken within the Purview of the same Statutes. And if any Thing shall be in any Case exempted out of the Penalty of any Statute, we shall here be aided by Equity of Reason, notwithstanding that the Words of the Statute had been against us, (as in rei veritate they are not) for we have shewn the Danger of the Lives of those who were in the Ship, and also the casting of the Woad into the Sea for the Safety of their Lives, so that the Ignorance of the Certainty of the Woad came by meer Necessity, and all this the King has confessed by the Demurrer. And then Fogossa being ignorant of it could not by any Possibility have compounded or agreed more certainly for the Subsidy, and therefore Reason will say that we have accomplished the Intent of the Statute; and so it seems to me that Judgment is to be given against the King.

Harris another of the King's Serjeants, to the contrary: And he argued to the same Effect with the King's Attorney, viz. that the Evidence which proves the Agreement upon Condition does not warrant the Issue, which shall be intended a general Agreement. [a] As if the Defendant in Trespass pleads, not guilty, and gives a Licence in Evidence, [b] or if in a Formedon in Descender upon a Gift in Frank-Marriage the Gift is traversed, and a Deed is shewn of a Gift in Frank-Marriage, the Remainder over in Fee, [c] or, upon Traverse upon a Lease for Years alledged without Deed, if a Deed is shewn in Evidence, this Evidence does not warrant the Issue; so here. And also he argued that the Collector of the Subsidy had no Authority to give any one License to put the Merchandize upon Land, the Subsidy not being paid nor agreed for, [d] as a Bailiff has nothing to do with the Debts of his Master, and if he pay them he shall not be allowed for it in his Accompt, without Specialty; but if he pay a Quit-Rent issuing out of the Land, he shall be allowed for it, because the Payment of this belongs to his Office; and so if the Collector accept any other Agreement than is intended by the Statute, this shall not aid the Party. And he said that an Agreement upon Condition ought to be fulfilled before it shall be pleaded. As, if I give all the Money in my Purse to J. S. he may not have an Action for it, except he alledge the Certainty of it; so that without Certainty the Action is not maintainable; so is it in the Case here; for which Reason Judgment is to be given for the King.

And afterwards at another Term, viz. on the 26th Day of April in Easter Term next following. Pollard Serjeant argued thus to the contrary. First of all it seems to me very necessary to give an Answer to the Ojections and Arguments made and alledged last Term against the Defendant. And one of the principal Arguments and Reasons upon which they chiefly relied, was, that the Agreement generally was put in Issue, which shall be intended the most common Agreement, and that is, a general Agreement, and the Evidence given by Wells proves a special Agreement, viz. an Agreement upon Condition, which is of another Nature than the Agreement tendered by the Issue; and therefore they said the Demurrer hereupon shall be adjudged for the King and the Informer. Sir, as to this I answer, that by the Arguments already made nothing has been put in Issue, but whether he agreed according to the Statute. And in this Word (agree) every Agreement is contained: and therefore inasmuch as the Agreement upon Condition is included in the Words of the Issue, viz. in this Word (Agreement) it is sufficient for us to prove the Agreement upon Condition; for an Agreement upon Condition is an Agreement, as a Feoffment upon Condition is a Feoffment. [e] And therefore in 36. H. 6. a Man brought an Action of Debt upon a Recognizance, and the Defendant pleaded, nul tiel Recognizance, upon which they were at Issue, and at the Day, &c. a Recognizance with Condition was certified, and there it is strongly debated whether or no he had failed of his Record, and at last with great Advice it was adjudged that the Plaintiff had not failed of his Record, but had proved his Issue sufficiently *; for the Justices there held, that a Recognizance upon Condition is a Recognizance. [g] So here the Agreement upon Condition is an Agreement, and therefore the Evidence well proves the Issue. But forasmuch as this Point is all one with the principal Matter, I shall argue it more at large when I come to the principal Matter. And what I have hitherto said has been upon a Supposition that the Issue is as it was before moved, viz. That the Agreement generally was put in Issue. But, Sir, I deny that the Agreement generally is put in Issue, but the special Agreement, which is upon Condition, is only put in Issue. For in the Answer the Defendant has shewn the Tempest, and the casting the Woad into the Sea, and all the Means by which he became ignorant of the certain Quantity of what was left in the Ship, and also he has shewn the Entry of 2000 Kintals, and the special Agreement with the Collector for the Remainder now in Dispute, and has concluded, Et super hoc cum præfato Collectore concordavit et agreavit, in which Case, (as it seems to me) although he has concluded with the Conclusion super hoc, ut supra, yet the Issue is not general, as it should be if the Matter before the Conclusion had been omitted, but the special Matter shall remain, and the super hoc shall have relation to it; so that the Issue shall be upon the special Matter, for that is the Substance and Foundation of the Conclusion, which the Conclusion shall not avoid, but inasmuch as it is in the Affirmative, as the Conclusion is, and is agreeable with the Conclusion, the special Matter and the Conclusion shall remain together, as one entire Matter and Substance of the Issue. [h] And therefore in Assize of Mortdancestor if the Tenant pleads special Bastardy in the Demandant, he ought to plead it certainly, as to say, that the Demandant was begotten between J. S. and Alice G. and born before Espousals, and afterwards Espousals were had between them, and he ought to conclude, and so a Bastard; now this Conclusion has not avoided the special Matter before, for if so, then the Issue shall be Bastard generally; and if so, it shall be [i] tried by the Bishop, and if so, the Bishop will certify him mulier, for such a Bastard is mulier in the spiritual Law; but such Matter shall be tried by the Assize, (as

(as in many Books it is adjudged) ergo the Concluſion has not avoided the ſpecial Matter, but the ſame remains, and the Iſſue is taken upon it. [a] So in a Formedon in Deſcender if the Tenant traverſes the Gift, and the Demandant by way of Replication maintains the Gift with a Recovery in Value by Reaſon of a Warranty, he ought to conclude, et iſſint dona; now if the Concluſion has avoided the ſpecial Matter before alledged, then the Tenant ought to traverſe the Concluſion only, that is, the Gift, which is a Matter in Fact, and ſhall be tried per Pais; but the Caſe is not ſo, for he ought to anſwer to the Recovery in Value, and that ſhall be tried by the Record; which proves that the ſpecial Matter before the Concluſion ſhall remain. [b] And ſo in Aſſize if the Plaintiff makes himſelf a Title and concludes, and ſo he was ſeized until by the Defendant diſſeized, now if the Concluſion has avoided the ſpecial Matter before, then it follows that the Defendant may not anſwer to the Title, but the Law is, that he ought to anſwer to the Title, and traverſe it; by which it is proved, that the Concluſion has not avoided the ſpecial Matter before; and in all theſe Caſes the Matter before the Concluſion and the Concluſion are in the affirmative. But in Debt, if the Defendant pleads Payment, and ſo he owes him nothing; or in Treſpaſs for Goods taken, if the Defendant pleads a Gift of them, and ſo not guilty, in theſe Caſes the Concluſion has avoided the ſpecial Matter, and the Concluſion only ought to be traverſed, and not the Matter before, for the Concluſion is a Traverſe of the Action, and the Matter before the Concluſion is in the affirmative, and the Concluſion in the negative, which has avoided the Matter before. But in our principal Caſe, and in the other Caſes before, the Matter precedent and the Concluſion are in the * affirmative, which may well ſtand together as one entire Subſtance of the Iſſue; and therefore the ſpecial Agreement is put in Iſſue, and then the Evidence proving it is purſuant enough. Another Objection was made the laſt Term, viz. that the Agreement was not good and perfect, becauſe it was not concluded and agreed what Perſon ſhould weigh the Woad, and therefore the Agreement was imperfect to reduce the Value of the Subſidy to a Certainty, and without the Certainty being known, the King cannot be ſatisfied, nor have any Action for it, &c. And as to that, it ſeems to me that the Perſon who ſhall weigh it is certain enough, and as certain as if he had been appointed by expreſs Words; and that is, the Collector of the Subſidy, and in Right of the King he may juſtify doing the ſame. And therefore I take this to be a Principle, that when it is agreed between any Perſons that a principal Thing ſhall be done or had, and before it may be done or had, there is another Thing firſt to be done, and it is not certainly agreed who ſhall do the ſaid other Thing, there the Law appoints [c] him that has the greateſt Knowledge and Skill to do the ſaid other Thing. [d] And therefore in 9. Ed. 4. in Debt upon an Obligation, the Defendant pleaded a Defeazance, which was that the great Bell of Mildenhall ſhould be carried to the Houſe of the Defendant in Norwich, and there ſhould be weighed and put in the Fire, and that if the Defendant made a Tenor of it to agree in Tune and Sound with the other Bells of Mildenhall, that then the Obligation ſhould be void; and the Defendant ſaid that the Bell was not weighed, Judgment ſi actio; and if this was a good Plea, was the Queſtion; For the principal Point was, that the Defendant ſhould make the Bell to agree with the other Bells, and before that could be done, the weighing of the Bell was neceſſary, in order that the Weight and Quantity of it might be known, for without that he could not make the Bell to agree with the others: and the putting the Bell into the Fire to melt it was alſo neceſſary, and who ſhould weigh and put it into the Fire was not expreſſed in the Defeaſance, ſo that there it falls to the Conſtruction of Law who ought to do it; and it is there clearly held that the Defendant ought to do it, and that the Plea, ut ſupra, was not good; for upon the Matter it appeared that the Defendant was a Brazier, and it belongs to his Office to weigh and put the Bells into the Fire, and therefore the Law appoints him to do it. [e] And in the ſame Caſe it is alſo held for Law, that if a Taylor is bound in an Obligation upon Condition indorſed, that the Obligee ſhall bring to his Shop three Yards of Cloth, which ſhall be there cut out, and then if the Obligor make the Obligee a Gown of it, that the Obligation ſhall loſe its Force, in ſuch Caſe the Obligor, viz. the Taylor, is bound to cut it out, for the principal Point is the making of the Gown, and before that can be done, it muſt of Neceſſity be cut out, and who ſhall do this is not expreſſed, and therefore the Law appoints the Taylor to do it, becauſe he has the greateſt Knowledge and Skill to do it, and it belongs to his Buſineſs. [f] So in our principal Caſe it is certainly concluded and agreed that the Collector on Behalf of the King ſhall have the Subſidy, and this is the principal Thing, and before this can be had there is another Thing to be done, viz. the weighing it to try the Certainty of it, for without the Certainty be known the King cannot be ſatisfied, and who ſhall weigh it was not concluded and expreſſed, and therefore the Law ſhall appoint the Collector to do it, becauſe it belongs to his Office; for as properly as it belongs to the Office of a Brazier in the other Caſe to weigh the Bell and put it in the Fire, or to the Office of a Taylor to cut out the Cloth, ſo properly does it belong to the Office of the Collector to weigh the Thing for which the Subſidy ſhall be paid, for without weighing it he cannot come to the Knowledge of the Value of the Subſidy in this Caſe, and in many other Sorts and Kinds of Merchandize: and for this Reaſon it belongs to the Office of Collector to have a Beam, and to weigh the Merchandizes, as the Means to come at the Knowledge of the Certainty of the Subſidy, and it is an Incident to his Office, and therefore the Law appoints the Collector here to weigh it, which is as certain in Law as if it had been concluded by expreſs Words; and ſo the Agreement is perfect notwithſtanding this Exception. And if Fogoſſa ſhould bring an Action of Treſpaſs againſt the Collector for meddling with the Woad when he weighs it, the Collector might well juſtify it. [g] For in 2. Rich. 2. in Treſpaſs, it is held as a Maxim, that if a Man has an Intereſt in any Thing by the Grant or Aſſent of another, and the Party that has ſuch Intereſt cannot have the principal Thing without doing another Thing, there he may do the ſaid other Thing, and juſtify the ſame, becauſe becauſe it is the Means to come to his Profit; for there it is held, [a] that if one grants to me all his Trees growing in his Wood, I may cut them down and carry them through his Land, and although his Graſs be trodden down with the Carriage of them, he ſhall not have a Writ of Treſpaſs for it; for Trees are ſuch Things that they muſt either be carried with Carts, or the Party cannot have them, nor make any Profit of them. But the principal Caſe there was, that one ſold all his Fiſhes in his Pond, and the Vendee dug a Trench, ſo that the Water might run out, and by that Means he might take the Fiſhes, and the Vendor brought a Writ of Treſpaſs againſt him for digging the ſame, and there it was awarded that he ſhould recover, [b] becauſe the Vendee might take the Fiſhes by Nets or other Engines; but if there had been no other Means to take them it had been otherwiſe, as it is there held. And for the coming to the Banks to Fiſh, he may well juſtify that, for without that he cannot take them by any Means. So that a Man may always juſtify the neceſſary Circumſtances, where he has a Title to the principal Thing: So here the Collector, in the Behalf of the King, hath a Title to the Subſidy, which he cannot have, nor any Action for it before the Certainty be known, and the weighing it is the Means to come to the Certainty of it, which he may do, and ſhall not be puniſhed for meddling with the Woad for ſuch Cauſe or Purpoſe, but may well juſtify the ſame. And ſo it ſeems to me that the Collector ought to do it, and may juſtify it, and therefore the Agreement is perfect, notwithſtanding this Exception. Another Exception was taken the other Term, that the Agreement ſhould be judged imperfect, becauſe the Certainty of the Time for the weighing of it was not limited and appointed upon the Agreement. [c] And as to this, it ſeems to me clear enough that the Collector of the Subſidy may weigh it when he pleaſes, for the Agreement was, that when it ſhould be weighed, that then he ſhould pay according to the Rate, which in Conſtruction of Law is as much as if it had been agreed, that when the Collector would weigh it, then he ſhould preſently pay for the ſame, in which Caſe the Time is referred to the Will of the Collector. And ſo in all like Caſes, where it is agreed that one ſhall have Benefit upon an Act firſt to be done by him, and no Time is limited when it ſhall be done, the Law ſaith it ſhall be done at his Will. [d] As if a Man makes a Feoffment in Mortgage, upon Condition that if he pay to the Mortgagee 20 l. that then he ſhall re-enter; inaſmuch as no Day of Payment is limited, the Mortgagor may pay it when he pleaſes; for he he is to have the Benefit, viz. his Land again. So if one grants to another that when he has married his Daughter he will give him 20 l. in this Caſe inaſmuch as no Time is limited when he ſhall marry her, he may marry her when he pleaſes; ſo that the Time is referred to his Will, who is the Agent, and who ſhall take Benefit by the Marriage. So in the principal Caſe, inaſmuch as the Payment ſhall be made to the Collector upon the weighing, and no Time is limited for the weighing, the Law refers the Time thereof to the Will and Pleaſure of the Collector; and ſo the Agreement is good and perfect notwithſtanding the ſaid Exception. And if the Law be ſo, viz. that the Collector in Right of the King ought to weigh it, and at what Time he pleaſes, and may juſtify the ſame, then that which is ſaid, that the King is not ſure of any Recompence nor Action, is not true, for the Collector may weigh it, and thereby know the Certainty of the Subſidy, upon which an Action ſhall accrue to the King; ſo that if the King ſhall be without Action, it is the Folly of his Collector, and ſo the Folly of the King to have ſuch a Collector. And as to what was ſaid the other Term, that when Contracts or Agreements conditional are made, they ſhall not be deemed of any Effect before they have their Perfection and be fully accompliſhed, and therefore here this Agreement which is conditional, (although it ſhall be ſaid good after the Performance of the Condition) yet now inaſmuch as the Seizure was before the Performance, viz. the Woad weighed, it ſhall be void ab initio, becauſe the Sum of the Subſidy is not certain, and for this Incertainty the Agreement is void ab initio: Sir, as to this I anſwer, that he who made this Objection affirmed by the very Objection that the Agreement was good at the Beginning: and he affirmed alſo by the Objection that the firſt putting of the Woad upon the Land, viz. the landing, was lawful and without Cauſe of Forfeiture, but the Non-performance of the Circumſtances afterwards defeated it, by that Relation. And if the Non-performance of the Circumſtance is the Cauſe of Forfeiture, then I ſay, that this ought to have been ſhewn by the King, which does not now appear. But nothing is alledged in the Information to be the Cauſe of Forfeiture but the landing without Payment or Agreement. And then by way of Anſwer we have alledged an Agreement before the landing, [e] whereupon the Plaintiff by way of Replication ought to have alledged ſome Default in us, which ſhould make the Agreement void ab initio, which is not now diſcloſed, and ſo it does not appear, and we have alledged enough for ourſelves: and that which makes againſt us we ſhall not be compelled by Law to ſhew, but it ought to come in on the contrary Part, ſo that if the Default of us in the Non-performance of the Condition ſhall make the Agreement void ab initio, it ought to be alledged on the other Side. [f] As if a Sheriff takes one by Force of a Capias, now he does well, but if he returns non eſt inventus, he ſhall be a Treſpaſſor ab initio. And in ſuch Caſe, in falſe Impriſonment brought againſt him, it is ſufficient for him to alledge that he was Sheriff, and that the Capias came to him and he took him and impriſoned him by Force thereof, Judgment ſi actio: and there the Plaintiff ought to alledge the falſe Return of the Writ, for this makes for the Plaintiff, inaſmuch as it makes the Defendant a Treſpaſſor ab initio. So here the Default in us, which ſhould make the Agreement void ab initio, ought to have been ſhewn and alledged by the Plaintiff, wherefore inaſmuch as it is not ſo alledged, no ſuch Default ſhall be intended. And all this I have ſaid upon a Suppoſition, viz. that the Law will have the Defendant to weigh it, and that its not being weighed ſhall be his Default. But as I ſaid before, the not-weighing of it is referred by the Law to the Collector in the King's Behalf, who

who was then ſole Party, [a] and therefore the not weighing of it in Default of the Collector ſhall not make the Agreement void ab initio to our Prejudice, which before was good. Then as to the principal Matter, it is to be ſeen whether the Agreement here be warranted by the Statute which ſaith, the Collector not agreed with, &c. And as it ſeems to me, it is warranted by the Statute; and this I ſhall prove by the Definition of the Word, by the Rules of the common Law in the Conſtruction of Statutes, and by the Intent of the Makers of the ſaid Statute. And firſt as to the Definition of the Word (Agreement) it ſeems to me that aggreamentum is a Word compounded of two Words, viz. [b] of aggregatio and mentium, ſo that aggreamentum eſt aggregatio mentium in re aliqua facta vel faciendâ. And ſo by the Contraction of the two Words, and by the ſhort Pronunciation of them they are made one Word, viz. aggreamentum, which is no other than an Union, Collection, Copulation, and Conjunction of two or more Minds in any Thing done or to be done. And then the Statute which ſaith, the Collector not agreed with, is as much as to ſay, that if the Minds of the Collector and the Party are not united, collected, coupled, and joined together about the Subſidy, that then the Goods ſhall be forfeited, and otherwiſe not; but here the Minds of the Collector and the Party are united, collected, coupled, and joined together about the Subſidy, viz. that the King ſhall have according to the Rate of 12 d. for every 20 s. after the Woad is weighed, which is as much as to ſay, after that the Collector will weigh it; and this was before the landing of it, whereupon I conclude, ergo the Goods are not forfeited. And although the Certainty of the Subſidy is not known at firſt, yet this is no Matter, for it is an Agreement, for in this Word (Agreement) every Agreement is included, and there are divers Agreements incertain at the Beginning which ſhall be adjudged good. [c] As in the Caſe where I ſell all my Corn for 12 d. per Buſhel, here notwithſtanding the Incertainty of the Quantity of the Corn, and the Incertainty of the Sum for it, yet the Agreement is good. [d] So where one leaſes his Cloſe rendering 12 d. Rent for every Acre, notwithſtanding the Incertainty of the Rent, yet it is a good Reſervation and Agreement. [e] So where a Man grants to one a Robe or 20 s. &c. the Grant is good notwithſtanding the Incertainty. And ſo in all the Caſes put by Maſter Brook, becauſe there is a Means to reduce the ſame to Certainty, which being done, there is Remedy enough to come at the principal Matter upon which the Agreement is made. [f] So in the principal Caſe, after it is weighed the Certainty will appear, which being known, the King may have his Remedy for it, ſo that none can deny the Agreement to be good. And thus it is proved by the Definition of the Word. And further I ſaid that the Rules of the common Law hitherto uſed in the Conſtruction of Statutes prove that we have ſatisfied the Statute; for whereas it has been ſaid, that although the Statute is general, viz. the Collector not agreed with, &c. and altho' the ſpecial Agreement is an Agreement, yet that it is to be conſtrued the beſt for the King, and that Conſtruction ſhall be of an Agreement certain; Sir, I ſay that the Rules of the Common Law forbid this, for there is a Principle in the Common Law, that penal Statutes ſhall be taken ſtrictly, and not extended by Equity to the Prejudice of them upon whom the Penalty is inflicted. [g] And by like Reaſon the Words of penal Statutes ſhall not be conſtrued to the Prejudice of them upon whom the Penalty is inflicted. And here none will ſay but that this Statute is penal, inaſmuch as it makes a Forfeiture of the Goods of every Subject, and ſo gives Prejudice to every Perſon, and Benefit to none but the King. And then inaſmuch as the Statute is penal, it cannot be ſaid that the Agreement intended by the Statute is an Agreement certain, for he that ſays ſo puts a Gloſs upon the Text, and wreſts the Words to a Kind of Intent and Equity, and to more than an Equity, for it is a Denial of the Text, which is meerly contrary to the Rules of the Common Law uſed in the Conſtruction of penal Statutes, which ſhall be taken favourably for them upon whom the Penalty is inflicted. Wherefore inaſmuch as it cannot be ſaid but that our ſpecial Agreement is an Agreement, and ſo within the Words of the Statute, it cannot be reaſonably ſaid but that we have ſatisfied the Statute; for the Rules of the Common Law will not ſuffer the general Words to be abridged and reſtrained to the Prejudice of him upon whom the Penalty is inflicted, but, on the contrary, we ſee many Caſes where the general Words of Statutes ſhall be reſtrained and abridged for the Benefit of him upon whom the Penalty is inflicted. And therefore the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. Cap. 40. [h] ſays, that where the Huſband aliens the Land of his Wife, It is agreed that the Suit of the Woman, after the Death of her Huſband, ſhall not be delayed for the Nonage of the Heir that ought to warrantiſe, &c. which Statute is general, viz. for the Nonage of the Heir, &c. and does not ſay the Heir of the Huſband, nor the Heir of a Stranger, but only for the Nonage of the Heir, &c. which Word (Heir) is general, and includes every Heir; [i] but yet in 18. Ed. 4. in a Cui in vita brought by the Wife in ſuch Caſe, the Tenant vouched one who vouched over an Heir within Age, who was not Heir of the Huſband, and there it is adjudged that for his Nonage the Parol ſhould demur, becauſe the ſaid Statute is penal to the Voucher, and the general Words, viz. for the Nonage of the Heir, are reſtrained and abridged, and ſtraitned from their Generality to the Heir of the Huſband only. So that there it is holden, in favour of him upon whom the Penalty is inflicted, that the general Words ſhall be reduced to a ſpecial Senſe, viz. to the Heir of the Huſband only. So the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. Cap. 11. is, that if the Accountants be found in Arrears before Auditors, their Bodies ſhall be arreſted, and by the Teſtimony of the Auditors of the ſame Account ſhall be ſent and delivered unto the next Goal of the King's in thoſe Parts, until, &c. Which Statute is general, that they ſhall be impriſoned by the Auditors, and does not ſay at what Time, ſo that by the Letter of the Statute the Auditors may impriſon the Accountants when they pleaſe after their Accompts. [k] But yet in 27. H. 6. in Debt upon Arrears of Account it is adjudged, that if the Auditors do not commit the Accountant to Priſon preſently after the Account, that they may not commit him at all to Priſon; for the Statute is penal to him that ſhall be impriſoned. And therefore the Generality of the Time ſhall be reſtrained ſpecially, for the Benefit of him upon whom the Penalty is inflicted, but not on the contrary

trary, for the Generality of the Words ſhall never be reſtrained and abridged to the Diſadvantage and Prejudice of him upon whom the Penalty is inflicted, for this is entirely contrary to the Order and Rule of the Common Law; from whence it follows, that the Agreement here is warranted by the Rule of the Common Law uſed in the Conſtruction of Statutes. And further I apprehend that the Intent of the Makers of the Statute approves the ſaid Agreement. [a] For the Scope and End of every Matter is principally to be conſidered; and if the Scope and End of the Matter be ſatisfied, then is the Matter itſelf and the Intent thereof alſo accompliſhed. And here the Subſtance and End of the ſaid Statute, and the Intent of the Makers thereof was, that the King ſhould have the Subſidy; and this only was the Scope and Sum of the ſaid Statute, and of the Intent of the Makers thereof; and if the Agreement here is ſufficient to give the Subſidy, and to make the King aſſured thereof, then it follows that the Statute, and the Intent of the Makers thereof is performed and ſatisfied. And that this is ſo, I have proved before, for the Agreement warrants and authoriſes the King to weigh the Woad, by his Collector, at what Time he pleaſes, and when that is done, the King has Title of Action, and ſo has an Aſſurance of the Subſidy. So that the Surety is referred to the Will of the King, for he may have it when he pleaſes; whence it follows, that the Sum, Effect, and End of the Statute, and of the Intent of the Makers of the Statute is obſerved and ſatisfied. And if at the Time of the making the Statute the Queſtion had been aſked of the Makers thereof, whether their Intents in the Caſe here were to enforce the Party to weigh the Woad in the Ship, or to forfeit it if he put it upon the Land to weigh it in order to try the certain Quantity, they would have laughed at the Queſtion, inaſmuch as ſuch weighing is the ſure Means to try the Truth of the Subſidy in all ſuch Merchandizes; and by this Way their Intent ſhall be moſt fully performed and accompliſhed, ſeeing the King cannot be deceived, but ſhall be fully apprized of the true Value of the Subſidy by ſuch Means. And ſo the Intent of the Makers of the Statute warrants the ſaid Agreement. Alſo there is another Reaſon which proves their Intent to be ſuch, and that is, the common Uſage in former Times, for all Statutes before then made, which grant any Subſidies, have had the very ſame Words which this Statute hath, viz. the Collector not agreed with, &c. And in ſuch Caſes where the Party did not know the Certainty of it, it was always uſual in former Times to weigh the Merchandizes upon ſuch Agreement as this is here, and upon knowing the Certainty to pay the Subſidy. And all Merchants will teſtify ſuch Uſage. And then inaſmuch as the Uſe hath been heretofore to make ſuch Agreements, where there have been ſuch Words in Statutes heretofore made as there are now, and ſuch an Agreement hath been allowed heretofore, it cannot be taken but that the Intent of the Makers was, that ſuch an Agreement made as before was uſed ſhould be good. And ſo the Intent of the Makers of the Statute approves the ſaid Agreement. Beſides, it ſeems that their Intent ſhall be ſo for another Cauſe. For, Sir, admitting that the Words of the ſaid Statute had ordained, that if an Agreement certain was not made with the Collector before the landing, the Goods ſhould be forfeited, yet here the Agreement incertain ſhall be adjudged good, and out of the Penalty; [b] for in every Law there are ſome Things which when they happen a Man may break the Words of the Law, and yet not break the Law itſelf; and ſuch Things are exempted out of the Penalty of the Law, and the Law priviledges them although they are done againſt the Letter of it, for breaking the Words of the Law is not breaking the Law, ſo as the Intent of the Law is not broken. And therefore the Words of the Law of Nature, of the Law of this Realm, and of other Realms, and of the Law of God alſo will yield and give Way to ſome Acts and Things done againſt the Words of the ſame Laws, and that is, where the Words of them are broken to avoid greater Inconveniences, or through Neceſſity, or by Compulſion, or involuntary Ignorance. To avoid greater Inconveniences, as beating the Perſon of a Man in ſome Caſes is allowed, and yet the beating and wounding of any Man is as well againſt the Law of Nature, as againſt the Law of the Land. [c] But in 22. Aſſ. where a Man was mad and of unſound Memory, and did great Miſchief, a Man, together with his Parents, took him, bound him, and beat him with Rods; and it is there holden that they might juſtify the ſame, for the Avoidance of the great Hurt that he might do, being of unſound Mind, and yet both the Law of Nature, and the Law of the Realm prohibits generally any one to beat another, but this ſpecial Caſe, for the Prevention of a greater Miſchief, hath an Exemption and a ſpecial Priviledge. [d] And the Statute of Marlbridge, cap. 4. ordains generally that none ſhall carry a Diſtreſs from one County into another, yet it is adjudged that if one holds Land of a Manor in another County, the Lord may diſtrain and drive the Diſtreſs from off the Land holden of the Manor into the County where the Manor is; and this is to avoid a Miſchief and Inconvenience, for it would be a great Damage to the Lord if he might not drive the Diſtreſs to his Manor; for Avoidance of which the Law is not broken, although the Words of the Law are broken. [e] And I have read in Books that amongſt the Romans there was a Law, that every one that ſcaled the Walls in the Night-time ſhould be condemned to Death, and a certain Perſon in the Night ſcaled the Walls in Time of War to diſcover the Approach of the Enemy, and he was not only diſcharged by the Senate from the Penalty of Death, but beſides was well rewarded for the Action, and yet he had thereby broken the Words of the Law, but the wiſe Senators expounded it to be no Breach of the Intent of the Law, becauſe that Law was made to prevent Hurt and Danger that might come to the Romans by the ſcaling of the Walls, and not to inhibit Benefit and Safety to the City; ſo that the ſaid Judgment was given in order to avoid a great Inconvenience which might come to the Romans by ſuch an Example. [f] And this Manner of expounding and conſtruing Laws is not a miſtaking them or a wrong Judgment of them, but it is a tempering the Rigour of the Law. And we may ſee alſo (as I ſaid) [g] that Neceſſity ſhall be a good Excuſe in all Laws, and that all Laws give Place to Neceſſity; for it is a common Proverb, Quod neceſſitas non habet legem; and therefore Neceſſity ſhall be a good Excuſe in our Law and in every other Law. [h] And therefore in a precipe quod reddat the Tenant ſhall excuſe his Default for Enereaſe of Water; and yet every Default is abhorred in Law, becauſe it is a

Contempt of the Court; but becauſe he cannot come without Danger of Death, the Neceſſity of the Accident in ſuch Caſe, ſeeing no Default is in him, ſhall excuſe him. And alſo the Law of God gives Place to Neceſſity: So that the Words of the Law of God may be broken for Neceſſity without Offence to God. And therefore in the old Law it was forbidden by the Law of God [a] to eat the ſacred Bread, viz. panem propoſitionis, yet it appears that David [b] through Neceſſity of Hunger eat the ſaid Bread, and did not break the Law, although he broke the Words of the Law, as Chriſt himſelf declares in the Goſpel, becauſe he did it for Neceſſity. [c] So the Apoſtles of Chriſt for Neceſſity of Hunger plucked the Ears of Corn of other Perſons, and eat them, and although they broke the Words of the holy Scripture, which forbid them to take other Men's Goods without the Will of the Owner, yet they did not offend thereby, as it appears by the Goſpel. From which Caſes we ſee that the Law of Man and the Law of God yield and give Place to Neceſſity. And Compulſion alſo is a good Excuſe in our Law. [d] As if a Man makes an Obligation by Dureſs, he ſhall avoid it. [e] So if a Man's Arm be drawn by Compulſion, and the Weapon in his Hand kills another, it ſhall not be Felony. And ſo in all other Caſes where a Man does a Thing to which he is forced and compelled, he ſhall not ſuffer thereby. And alſo if a Man breaks the Words of the Law through involuntary Ignorance, this is no Breach of the Law. [f] As if an Infant of tender Age kills a Man, it ſhall not be Felony, becauſe he has not Diſcretion nor Underſtanding; for which Reaſon the Law imputes it to his Ignorance, which is natural to every one at that Age, and ſo there is no Fault in him; and therefore it is called involuntary Ignorance, for he cannot be wiſe nor prudent if he would, but he is ignorant by Compulſion, and therefore ſhall be excuſed. And ſuch Act is properly ſaid to be done ex ignorantiâ, viz. where involuntary ignorance is eſteemed to be the Cauſe of the Act. [g] So if a Man non ſanæ memoriæ kills another, although he has broken the Words of the Law, yet he has not broken the Law, becauſe he had no Memory nor Underſtanding, but meer Ignorance, which came to him by the Hand of God; and therefore it is called involuntary Ignorance, to which the Law imputes the Act, inaſmuch as there is no Fault in him, and for that Reaſon he ſhall be excuſed, ſeeing he is ignorant by Compulſion. And ſuch Act is ſaid to be done ex ignorantia, becauſe involuntary Ignorance is the Cauſe of it. And in Deuteronomy Cap. 19. v. 4, 5, 6. God provides by a ſpecial Remedy, that he who does any Thing through ſuch Ignorance ſhall not be puniſhed for it; for there it is ordained, that if a Labourer is at Work with a Hatchet, and the Head of the Hatchet falls from the Helve and kills a Stander-by, ſuch Labourer ſhall not be put to Death, but a ſpecial [h] City was ordained as a Sanctuary for him, becauſe he did it through involuntary Ignorance. But where a Man breaks the Words of the Law by voluntary Ignorance, there he ſhall not be excuſed. [i] As if a Perſon that is drunk kills another, this ſhall be Felony, and he ſhall be hanged for it, and yet he did it through Ignorance, for when he was drunk he had no Underſtanding nor Memory; but inaſmuch as that Ignorance was occaſioned by his own Act and Folly, and he might have avoided it, he ſhall not be privileged thereby. And Ariſtotle ſays that ſuch a Man deſerves double [k] Puniſhment, becauſe he has doubly offended, viz. in being drunk to the evil Example of others, and in committing the Crime of Homicide. And this Act is ſaid to be done ignoranter, for that he is the Cauſe of his own Ignorance: and ſo the Diverſity appears between a Thing done ex ignorantia, and ignoranter. And therefore, as I ſaid, where the Words of a Law are broken to avoid a greater Inconvenience, or by Neceſſity, or Compulſion, or involuntary Ignorance, in all theſe Caſes the Law itſelf is not broken. And now let us conſider and examine our own Caſe. [l] And in our Caſe the Woad was caſt into the Sea, and the Incertainty occaſioned to avoid a greater Miſchief, for the Life of every Man is more precious than any Goods, and the Loſs of a Man's Life is a greater Misfortune than the Loſs of his Goods, and therefore the Woad was caſt into the Sea in order to avoid the greater Miſchief of the Loſs of Life, and thereby the Incertainty was occaſioned. Alſo it was done through Neceſſity, and that too the greateſt Neceſſity that could be, for it was to avoid the Danger of Death, which Neceſſity was equal to that of the Encreaſe of Waters, or of Hunger in the other Caſes aforeſaid, the Preſervation of Life being the acting Cauſe and Motive both in the one Caſe and in the other. And alſo it may be ſaid to be done by Compulſion, for when a Thing comes to ſuch a Point that a Man has only one Alternative, viz. either to do ſuch a Thing or to die preſently, and in Order to preſerve his Life he does it, ſuch Act may well be ſaid to be done by Compulſion, and by the greateſt Compulſion that can be, for there is no greater Compulſion than that which ſets inevitable Death before a Man's Eyes, if he does not make Uſe of ſuch a particular Remedy that offers itſelf for his Safety. So was it in our Caſe, for the caſting the Woad into the Sea, which occaſioned the Incertainty of the Remainder, came by Compulſion. And alſo it cannot be denied but that the Ignorance of the certain Quantity of the Remainder was involuntary, inaſmuch as the caſting the Woad into the Sea, which was the Cauſe of that Ignorance, was by Compulſion, which is involuntary. And foraſmuch as the Ignorance of the certain Quantity of the Remainder is to be aſcribed and imputed only to Neceſſity and Compulſion, and the Avoidance of a greater Miſchief, which are Things that could not be prevented by Foreſight or Circumſpection, nor reſiſted by Power, then I ſay, that there is no Default in Fogoſſa touching the ſame, and if his Ignorance of the certain Quantity of the Remainder is owing to no Default in himſelf, then there is no Default in him as touching the Agreement, for a more certain or perfect Agreement for the Subſidy (the Caſe being as it was) could not be made. And if the Cauſe of the Ignorance is to be imputed and aſcribed to Neceſſity, Compulſion, and the Avoidance of a greater Miſchief, and that Ignorance is the Cauſe of the incertain Agreement which is made, then, I ſay, that the incertain Agreement itſelf is to be imputed and aſcribed to Neceſſity and Compulſion, and the Avoidance of a greater Miſchief. And from hence I conclude, that if each of the ſaid four Cauſes, viz. the Avoidance of a greater Miſchief, Neceſſity, Compulſion, and involuntary Ignorance, can ſeverally by themſelves excuse a Man from the Charge of breaking the Law, notwithstanding he breaks the Words of it, a multo fortiore where all the four Causes meet together, a Man may break the Words of the Law, and yet not break the Law itself. And if the said four Causes put together are a sufficient Justification to a Man, so that though he has broken the Words of the Law, he shall not be said to have broken the Law, a multo fortiore all of them put together are sufficient to excuse him, who has fulfilled the Words of the Law, from breaking the Law by the Intent of the Words. And therefore inasmuch as these four Causes are the Occasion that the incertain Agreement was here made, and that a certain Agreement could not be made, it follows ex consequente that this shall be as profitable and available to the Party as a certain Agreement should be. Wherefore seeing the Statute saith, the Collector not agreed with, by which Words it gives an Authority to agree with the Collector, and Fogossa has made a special Agreement with him, which is an Agreement, and so within the Words of the Statute, it seems to me that by the Definition of the Word, by the Rules of the Common Law used in the Construction of Statutes, by the Intent of the Makers of the Statute, and by all Reason and Equity, it ought to be adjudged a sufficient Agreement, and warranted by the Statute; and so Judgment is to be given against the King.

The rest of the Record.

Edward the sixth, by the Grace of God King of England, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, and of the Church of England, and also of Ireland, in Earth the supreme Head. To the Treasurer and Barons of our Exchequer, Greeting. Where Roger Porter Servant to Robert Reniger Comptroller of our Customs and Subsidies in our Port of our Town of Southampton, and in all Places and Creeks to the same Port belonging, by the Commandment of the said Robert Reniger the seventh Day of November in the second Year of our Reign, at our Town of Southampton aforesaid seized, and to our Use and the Use of the said Robert, arrested 1693 Kintals of green Woad of the Goods and Chattles of one Anthony Fogossa Merchant Stranger, supposed by the said Robert to be forfeited, for that the said Woad should be laid on Land, the Subsidy thereof due not paid, nor the Customer in the said Port agreed with for the same, contrary to the Form of the Statute in that Behalf made and provided. And therefore the said Robert Reniger made Information before you our said Barons, as by the Records of our said Exchequer amongst others more plainly appeareth. We let you wit, that we be credibly informed, that the said Anthony Fogossa intended not to defraud us of our said Subsidy, nor of any other our Duties for the same, but laid the same Woad on Land by the License and Agreement of the Customer of our Port aforesaid. And we not minding the said Anthony Fogossa to be vexed, sued, troubled, or inquieted in Body, Goods, Lands, or Tenements, for the said 1693 Kintals of green Woad, or any Parcel thereof, or the said Woad to remain to us as forfeit by Reason of the said Seizure or Information, contrary to good Conscience, by the Consent of our Council, Will and Command you our said Treasurer and Barons, and every of you, not only to cancel and make void one Recognizance, wherein the said Anthony Fogossa and his Sureties stand bound to us in our said Exchequer for the Payment of the Price or Value of the said Woad (if the same hereafter for the Cause in the said Information specified be adjudged forfeit) but also utterly to surcease for ever of all Manner of Processes, Suits, Quarrels, Demands, Judgments and Executions made and hereafter to be made for us, or in our Names against the said Anthony Fogossa or any of his said Sureties, in or for the Premisses, or any Parcel thereof, or for or upon the said Information of the said 1693 Kintals of green Woad, or any Parcel thereof, or any other Thing the same Woad concerning, or by any Means touching, by Force or Reason of the said Information, or Seizure, or of any Thing, Article, or Clause therein contained; any Law, Statute, Use, or Course of our said Exchequer, or any Ambiguity, Doubt, Question, Matter or Cause whatsoever you or any of you to the contrary moving in anywise notwithstanding. And these our Letters shall be your sufficient Warrant and Discharge in that Behalf. Given under our Privy-seal at our Manor of Greenwich the 23d Day of June, in the fourth Year of our Reign.

And thereupon the same Anthony prays Judgment as above, &c. And because the aforesaid 1693 Kintals of green Woad were redelivered to the aforesaid Anthony Fogossa by Reason of a certain Recognizance entered into for the same before the Barons here in the Term of the Holy Trinity, in the third Year of the Reign of the said Lord the King, that now is, by the aforesaid Anthony Fogossa and certain others, viz. Henry Mody of the Parish of St. Michael Bassishaw in London Mercer, John Cosworth of the Parish of St. Bashing-Barth in the Ward of Bradstreet in London Mercer, William Merick of the Parish of St. Martin Owtwych in London aforesaid Merchant-Taylor, Richard Carrell of the said Parish of St. Martin in London aforesaid Mercer, Edward Cook of the Parish of St. Nicholas Acon in London Draper, Anthony de Marome of the Parish of St. Olaves in the Ward of the Tower of London Merchant Denizen, and John Quarles of the Parish of St. Peter the Poor in London aforesaid Draper, Recognitors, as the same Anthony before the aforesaid Barons here has acknowledged, and the Premisses being seen by the Barons, and mature Deliberation being had by them thereupon, it is granted by the same Barons that the said Recognizance and the Condition thereof in and by every Thing be made void, cancelled, and holden for none, by Reason of the Writ aforesaid, and that in and upon the Premisses Execution be no farther done. And that the same Anthony as touching the Premisses go at present without Day, saving always to the King his Action if hereafter, &c.

Judgment.

Nota bene, by the Reporter.

But note, (Reader) that (as I was credibly informed) the Opinion of all the Barons of the Exchequer, and of all the Justices of England, except Hales Puisn Justice of the Common Bench, and Mountague Chief Justice of the same Bench, was, upon Conference between them, against the King and the Informer, and with the Defendant; and therefore it was thought better that Judgment should be given against the King by Force of the * Privy Seal, than by the Rigour of Law, after the Argument of the Judges. And for this Reason the Privy-Seal was sent to the Court of Exchequer.

A Report of a Caſe argued in the Common Bench before all the Juſtices of the ſame Bench, in Eaſter Term in the fourth Year of the Reign of King Edward the Sixth, between Matthias Colthirſt Plaintiff and Peter Bejuſhin Defendant, in a Writ of Treſpaſs brought by the ſaid Matthias againſt the ſaid Peter. And the Record was as follows.

Trin. Term. 3; Edw. 6. Somerſet. Declaration.

PETER Bejuſhin late of Claverton in the County aforeſaid yeoman was attached to anſwer Matthias Colthirſt Eſquire of a Plea, wherefore with Force and Arms the Cloſe and Houſe of the ſaid Matthias at Barton and Walcot he broke, and his Graſs, to the Value of 20 l. there lately growing with certain Cattle eat up, tread down, and deſtroyed, and other Wrongs to him did, to the great Damage of the ſaid Matthias, and againſt the Peace of the Lord the King now, &c. And whereupon the ſame Matthias by John Bill his Attorney complains, that the aforeſaid Peter, the 18th Day of December in the ſecond Year of the Reign of the Lord the King now, with Force and Arms, &c. the Cloſe and Houſe of him the ſaid Matthias at Barton and Walcot broke, and his Graſs, to the Value, &c. there lately growing, with certain Cattle, to wit, Horſes, Oxen, Cows, Hogs, and Sheep eat up, tread down, and deſtroyed, the Treſpaſs aforeſaid, as to the eating up, treading down, and deſtroying the Graſs aforeſaid, from the aforeſaid 18th Day of December until the Day of obtaining the Writ Original of him the ſaid Matthias, viz. the 3d Day of January then next following, at ſundry Days and Times continuing; and other Wrongs, &c. to the great Damage, &c. and againſt the Peace, &c. whereby he ſays that he is injured, and hath Damage to the Value of 40 l. and therefore he brings Suit, &c.

Bar.

And the aforeſaid Peter by William Rede his Attorney comes and defends the Force and Injury, when, &c. And as to the Force and Arms, he ſays that he is not guilty thereof; and of this he puts himſelf upon the Country: and the aforeſaid Matthias does the like. And as to the Reſidue of the Treſpaſs aforeſaid above ſuppoſed to be done, the ſame Peter ſays that the aforeſaid Matthias his Action aforeſaid againſt him ought not to have, becauſe he ſays, that the Cloſe, and the Houſe aforeſaid, and alſo the Places in which the Treſpaſs aforeſaid is ſuppoſed to be done, are, and at the Time aforeſaid when the Treſpaſs aforeſaid was ſuppoſed to be done, were, one Meſſuage and 160 Acres of Land with the Appurtenances in Barton and Walcot aforeſaid, called the Grange, or the Farm of Barton near Bath, whereof long before the Time aforeſaid when, &c. one William Holeway late Prior of the late Monaſtery and Cathedral Church of Bath in the County aforeſaid was ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee, in right of his Church aforeſaid, and being ſo thereof ſeized, he the ſame late Prior and the then Convent of the ſame late Monaſtery, before the Time aforeſaid when, &c. viz. the 2d Day of January in the twentieth Year of the Reign of Lord Henry the Eighth late King of England, Father of the Lord the King now, at the Monaſtery of Bath in the County aforeſaid, by their certain Deed indented, (which the ſame Peter produces here in Court ſealed with the common Seal of the aforeſaid late Prior and Convent, the Date whereof is in the Chapter-houſe of the ſame late Prior and the then Convent there, the ſame Day and Year,) by unanimous Aſſent and Conſent, delivered, granted, and to farm let unto one Henry Bejuſhin Gentleman and Eleanor his Wife the Meſſuage and Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances amongſt other Things, by the Name of all their Grange and Farm of Barton, near Bath, with all the Houſes ſituate and ſtanding upon the ſame, and all the Demeſn-Lands, Meadows, and Paſtures to the ſame appertaining, that is to ſay, King's Mead, the Sleepy Heys, and the cloſes adjoining to the aforeſaid Farm and Grange, and a piece of Land called a Furlong, or Hakodwood in Lippwekſ-Wood called Middle-Wood, and a Cloſe or Parcel of Meadow or Paſture called the Amerry-Orchard, with the Paſture and Feeding of ten Heads of the Rother Beaſts going in the Lawn Park annually, as had been uſed and accuſtomed in Time paſt. And alſo with the Paſture of the Hawe, Wrogges-Mead, Broddecrofts, Long-Mead, and the Amerry-Mead, with the Eaſement of the Sheep-houſe in the aforeſaid Amerry, according to the Form and Effect of a certain Bill thereof made, to the Indenture aforeſaid annexed; and alſo all other Demeſn-Lands, Meadows, and Paſtures to the aforeſaid Grange and Farm appertaining, ſituate and lying in the Pariſh and Fields of Walcot and Barton, which the aforeſaid Henry then held, and which one Nicholas Saunders formerly held, had, occupied, and enjoyed by reaſon of the Farm aforeſaid, with all and all Manner of Tithes of Sheaves of Corn, Hay, Milch-Cows, Calves, Geeſe, Hogs, and Sheep, and all other Tithes annually renewing by reaſon of the aforeſaid Grange or Farm, with all Works of their cuſtomary Tenants and of other Inhabitants within their Hundred of Barton uſed and accuſtomed annually to be done there: And alſo one Parcel or Portion of their Mount of Launſdown, as appears by the Metes and Limits upon the ſame Down, with all Commons and Sleights in the aforeſaid Pariſhes and Fields of Walcot and Barton to the ſame late Prior and Convent belonging, for the feeding and paſturing of their Sheep called the Ewes-Flock of Barton, with 360 Ewes, each of the Price of 13 d. coming and paſturing upon the ſame, with the cuſtomary Works in waſhing and ſheering the aforeſaid Flock called the Ewes-Flock, annually accuſtomed to be done by their Tenants of Walcot, and all Wool, Lambs, and other Profits annually growing by reaſon of the aforeſaid Sheep, (the Tithes of the Wool and Lambs of the aforeſaid Sheep, and of all other Things nouriſhed and ſuſtained by the aforeſaid Farm and Grange excepted, to be paid yearly to the Sachriſt of the aforeſaid cathedral Church for the Time being, as they ſhould happen to fall.) And further the ſame late Prior and Convent by the ſame Deed indented in like manner granted and to Farm let to the aforeſaid Henry and Eleanor their Mount called the Down at Comb, and all other their Commons, Sleights, and Paſtures, as well ſeveral as common within their Demeſn of Comb, and the Park wholly reſerved by their Predeceſſors for the feeding, paſturing, and ſuſtaining of their Sheep, and of the Flock called the Wether-Flock of Comb in as ample Manner and Form as had been uſed and accuſtomed to be occupied in Times paſt, with all Works, Cuſtoms of waſhing and ſheering the aforeſaid Sheep according to Cuſtom to be done there, with three Carts of good Hay yearly to be made and carried by the Farmer of their Demeſn Lands of Comb aforeſaid, and alſo three other Carts of good Hay to be gotten within their Demeſn of Kingkome at their own proper Charges and Coſts, and to be carried yearly by the aforeſaid Henry and Eleanor at their own proper Charges and Coſts, with 360 Sheep, called Wether-Sheep, each of the Price of 16 d. going and paſturing upon the aforeſaid Down, and Common, and other Premiſſes with the Appurtenances, with all the Wool and other Profits and Encreaſe annually ariſing and growing by reaſon of the aforeſaid Sheep, and the Wether-Flock of Comb, (the Dung of the aforeſaid Sheep, and others there kept and paſtured by reaſon of the Farm aforeſaid only excepted, which Dung the aforeſaid Farmer of the aforeſaid Demeſn-Lands of Comb ſhould wholly have and enjoy for the Amendment of his Lands there:) To have and to hold the aforeſaid Grange and Farm of Barton, and all the Premiſſes to the ſame appertaining, with all and ſingular their Appurtenances, with all the Tithes thereof, as is aforeſaid, and alſo the aforeſaid Parcel of Launſdown, and the Rivers, Commons, and Sleights within the Pariſh of Walcot and Barton, with the aforeſaid 360 Ewes going and paſturing upon the ſame, called the Ewes-Flock of Barton, with all Iſſues and Profits of the ſame Sheep, as is before recited: And alſo all the aforeſaid Down, Paſtures, Sleights, and Commons at Comb aforeſaid, with all and ſingular their Appurtenances, with the aforeſaid 360 Sheep called Wethers, going and paſturing upon the ſame, called the Wether-Flock of Comb, with all the Profits thereof, as is above ſpecified (except as is before excepted) to the aforeſaid Henry Bejuſhin and Eleanor his Wife, for Term of their Lives, and of the longeſt Liver of them: And after the Death of the ſaid Henry and Eleanor, the aforeſaid late Prior and Convent willed and granted by the aforeſaid Indenture, that the aforeſaid Grange and Farm of Barton, with all and ſingular their Appurtenances to the ſame belonging within the Pariſh aforeſaid of Walcot, with all the Tithes of the ſame, as is above ſpecified, and alſo the aforeſaid Parcel of Launſdown, with all other Paſtures, Sleights, and Commons, with their Appurtenances, with the aforeſaid 360 Ewes, called the Ewes-Flock of Barton, with all the Iſſues and Profits thereof (except the Tithes of the Wool, Skins, and Lambs, which ſhould be annually paid to the Sachriſt of the aforeſaid Cathedral-Church for the Time being, when they ſhould happen to fall,) ſhould remain to William Bejuſhin, one of the Sons of the aforeſaid Henry and Eleanor, to have and to hold to the aforeſaid William for Term of his Life, if he ſhould inhabit and reſide wholly in and upon the aforeſaid Grange and Farm of Barton. And if it ſhould happen, that the aforeſaid William Bejuſhin ſhould die before the aforeſaid Henry and Eleanor, then the aforeſaid late Prior and Convent willed and granted further by the aforeſaid Deed indented, that the aforeſaid Grange and Farm of Barton, with all and ſingular the Appurtenances to the ſame belonging, and all the Tithes thereof, as is aforeſaid, and the aforeſaid Parcel of Launſdown, and all other Paſtures, Sleights, and Commons, with the aforeſaid 360 Ewes, called the Ewes-Flock of Barton, with all the Iſſues and Profits thereof (except the Tithes before excepted, to be paid as before is limited) ſhould remain to the aforeſaid Peter Bejuſhin another of the Sons of the aforeſaid Henry and Eleanor; to have and to hold to the ſame Peter for Term of his Life, if he alſo would inhabit and reſide within the aforeſaid Grange and Farm of Barton during the Term above expreſſed, as in the aforeſaid Indenture amongſt other Things more fully appears. By virtue of which Demiſe, the ſame Henry and Eleanor were ſeized of the Meſſuage and Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances in their Demeſn as of Freehold, and the ſame Henry and Eleanor being ſo thereof ſeized, the aforeſaid William Bejuſhin died in the Lifetime of them the ſaid Henry and Eleanor: And afterwards, and before the Time aforeſaid when, &c. the aforeſaid Henry and Eleanor died; after whoſe Deaths he the ſame Peter entered into the Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances, and was and yet is thereof ſeized in his Demeſn as of Freehold. And further the ſame Peter ſays that he continually after his Entry aforeſaid into the Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances, and hitherto has inhabited and been reſident within the aforeſaid Grange and Farm of Barton. And the aforeſaid Matthias claiming the Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances by Colour of a certain Deed of Demiſe thereof made to him for Term of his Life by the aforeſaid late Prior and Convent, long before the aforeſaid Demiſe by the ſaid late Prior and Convent of the ſaid Tenements with the Appurtenances to the aforeſaid Henry and Eleanor in Form aforeſaid made, (where nothing of the ſaid Tenements with the Appurtenances ever paſſed into the Poſſeſſion of him the ſaid Matthias by that Deed,) entered, upon the Poſſeſſion of which ſaid Matthias he the ſame Peter into the Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances afterwards, to wit, the ſame Time when, &c. re-entered, and the Graſs aforeſaid, as the proper Graſs of him the ſaid Peter then there growing with the Beaſts aforeſaid eat up, tread down, and deſtroyed, as it was lawful for him to do. And this he is ready to verify; wherefore he prays Judgment if the aforeſaid Matthias his Action aforeſaid againſt him ought to have, &c.

Colour.

The Plaintiff demurs.

And the aforeſaid Matthias Colthirſt prays Oyer of the Deed intended; and it is read to him in theſe Words. [Which was inrolled verbatim accordingly, &c.] Which ſaid Deed indented being read and heard, the ſame Matthias ſays, that the aforeſaid Plea of the aforeſaid Peter above in Bar pleaded is inſufficient in Law to preclude him the ſaid Matthias from having his Action aforeſaid againſt the aforeſaid Peter, and that he has no Neceſſity, nor is by the Law of the Land bound to anſwer the ſaid Plea in Manner and Form aforeſaid pleaded, wherefore for for want of a ſufficient Anſwer of the aforeſaid Peter in this Behalf, he the ſame Matthias prays Judgment, and his Damages by reaſon of the ſaid Treſpaſs to be adjudged to him, &c.

And the aforeſaid Peter, for that he has above alledged ſufficient Matter in Law to preclude the aforeſaid Matthias from having his Action aforeſaid againſt him, which he is ready to verify, which ſaid Matter the aforeſaid Matthias does not deny, nor thereunto in any wiſe anſwer, but the ſaid Averment refuſes to admit, prays Judgment, and that the aforeſaid Matthias may be precluded from having his Action aforeſaid againſt him, &c. And becauſe the Juſtices here will adviſe of and upon the Premiſſes before they give Judgment thereon, Day is given to the Parties aforeſaid here in eight Days of St. Michael to hear their Judgment thereon, becauſe the Juſtices here thereof not yet, &c. And ſo Continuance until fifteen Days of Eaſter, &c. The Judgment appears after the Arguments.

Joinder.

Continuance.

Pollard Serjeant briefly recited the Caſe in this Manner. You, my Lords, have well underſtood how that Matthias Colthirſt has brought an Action of Treſpaſs againſt Peter Bejuſhin for entering into and breaking his Cloſe and Houſe. And the Defendant has ſaid that the Prior of Bath was Lord of the Grange or Farm of Barton, and of ſo much land, which is the Place where, &c. in Fee, and he and the Convent leaſed it by Deed indented, ſhewn forth, to Henry Bejuſhin and Eleanor his Wife to have and to hold to them for Term of their Lives, the Remainder to William Bejuſhin one of the Sons of the ſaid Henry and Eleanor for Term of his Life, ſi ipſe habitaret, et reſidens eſſet omnino de et ſuper prædicta Grangia et firma de Barton: And if the ſaid William ſhould happen to die before the ſaid Henry and Eleanor then the ſaid Prior and Convent appointed that the ſaid Grange and other the Premiſſes ſhould remain to the ſaid Peter Bejuſhin, another of the Sons of the ſaid Henry and Eleanor, for Term of his Life, ſi ipſe etiam vellet inhabitare et reſidens eſſe infra prædictam Grangiam et firmam de Barton, durante termino ſuperius expreſſo; by Force of which the ſaid Henry and Eleanor were ſeized in their Demeſn as of Freehold; and they being ſo ſeized, the ſaid William Bejuſhin died in the Lifetime of the ſaid Henry and Eleanor, and afterwards Henry and Eleanor died, after whoſe Death the ſaid Peter now Defendant entered, and was and yet is ſeized in his Demeſn as of Freehold. And further he ſays, that all the Time ſince his Entry until now he has been an Inhabitant and Reſident in the aforeſaid Grange and Farm of Barton. And he gives Colour to the Plaintiff, whereupon the Plaintiff has demurred in Judgment. And it ſeems to me that the Plaintiff ſhall recover; and this for the Inſufficiency of the Form, as well as of the Matter contained in the Bar. And as to the Form, it ſeems to me to be inſufficient for two Cauſes; the firſt is, becauſe the Defendant has not ſhewn when he entered after the Remainder fell, but he has ſhewn the Death of him in the meſne Remainder, and afterwards the Death of the Huſband and Wife the particular Tenants, and that he entered after their Deaths, and that he has continually inhabited and been reſident thereupon all the Time ſince his Entry, and ſo he has not ſhewn that he has been reſident all the Time ſince the Remainder fell, and the Remainder was given to him for his Life, ſi ipſe vellet inhabitare et reſidens eſſe infra prædictam Grangiam et firmam de Barton, durante Termino ſuperius expreſſo, and then inaſmuch as the Poſſeſſion of his Eſtate for Life commenced and was caſt upon him by the Death of the Huſband and Wife, he ought to have ſhewn that he has been reſident ſince that, viz. ſince the Death of the Huſband and Wife. For this Clauſe durante termino prædicto is as much as to ſay, all the Time during the whole * Term, viz. from the Beginning unto the End thereof, which is from the Death of the Huſband and Wife unto the Death of the Defendant, and not once only during the Term; and ſuch was the Intent of the Condition, as it appears from the Matter, which ſhews and imports that continual Hoſpitality was intended to be there kept up and maintained from the Death of the Huſband and Wife during the Life of the Defendant. And for any Thing that is ſhewn it may be that the Huſband and Wife died ten Years ago, and that Hoſpitality has not been kept up there for all this Time, which is contrary to the Will of the Leſſor; and therefore although he has performed the Words of the Condition if ſo be he has been once reſident upon the Grange during the Term, and during all the Time ſince his Entry, yet he has not thereby performed the Intent of the Condition, which muſt be ſatisfied and fulfilled before the Condition ſhall be ſaid to be performed. [a] And therefore if a Man is bound in an Obligation upon Condition to infeoff J. S. of the Manor of D. and he makes a Feoffment to another of 20 Acres Parcel of the Manor, and afterwards infeoffs J. S. of the Manor, he has not performed the Condition, and yet he has performed the Words of the Condition; but the Intent was that J. S. ſhould have the whole Manor, which Intent he has not performed. [b] And in 21. H. 6. one was bound in an Obligation upon Condition that his Feoffees of the Manor of D. ſhould grant a Rent of 40*s.* to the Plaintiff for his Life, and he had three Feoffees, and two of them granted the ſaid Rent to him, and there all the Juſtices held, that by the Word (Feoffees) all his Feoffees are intended, ſo that all of them ought to grant the Rent, and therefore the Grant by two was no Performance of the Condition, although the Words were performed, for the Intent appears to be, that all his Feoffees ſhould grant it to him, which was not performed. So that the Intent of a Condition ought always to be performed as well as the Words thereof. And here it ſeems to be the Intent of the Condition, that Hoſpitality ſhould be kept up upon the Grange continually, that is to ſay, from the Beginning of the Time that he might be in poſſeſſion until the End of the Term, which is, from the Time of the Death of the Huſband and Wife unto the Death of the Defendant. And here he has not ſhewn that he entered as ſoon as he conveniently could after the Death of the Huſband and Wife, and therefore inaſmuch as he has not ſhewn and averred that, he has not ſhewn the Performance of the Condition by himſelf,

The CASE. Eaſter Term. 4. Edw. 6. Leaſe is made to Huſband and Wife for their Lives, Remainder to A. their Son for Life, and if he die living the Huſband and Wife, that then it ſhall remain to B. another of their Sons for Life, ſi ipſe vellet inhabitare, &c. This is a good Remainder on Contingency, viz. if A. dies before the Huſband and Wife. Vide 3. Co. 20. a. T. Raym. 144. Lane, 22.

ſelf, and it is the Performance of the Condition which makes the Continuance of his Eſtate, for which Cauſe his Plea is not good. And alſo the Plea is not good for another Reaſon, viz. becauſe the Defendant has not ſhewn the Day of his Entry; for if he had ſaid that he entered immediately after the Death of the Huſband and Wife, and had not ſhewn the Day certain, and that he had been continually reſident ſince his Entry, yet the Plea would not be good becauſe of the Incertainty of the Time of the Entry. For if the Plaintiff had replied that he did not enter at all, then the Iſſue would be incertain, and the Jurors could not know what Day of Entry to find; for which Reaſon the Day of his Entry ought to be ſhewn, and then the Plaintiff might traverſe his Entry at ſuch Day, and ſo Iſſue might be joined upon the Day. And therefore in all other Caſes where the Time is iſſuable the Day ought to be ſhewn certainly. [a] For which Reaſon it is held in 32. H. 6. that if a Man pleads a Leaſe for Years made to him, he ought to ſhew what Day the Leaſe was made, becauſe it is iſſuable. [b] So in 33. H. 6. in Debt by an Executor, the Defendant pleaded that the Teſtator made the Plaintiff and one R. his Executors at London, which R. is alive, not named, &c. Judgment of the Writ, and the Plaintiff confeſſing this replied, that afterwards the Teſtator made him ſole Executor in the County of Middleſex, and the Defendant ſaid, that after the Time laſt aſſigned by the Plaintiff, the Teſtator made the Plaintiff and R. his Executors in Manner and Form ut ſupra, abſque hoc that he made the Plaintiff his ſole Executor after that Time, and the Defendant's Plea was held not good, becauſe the Day on which the Plaintiff and R. were made Executors is incertain, which ought to be certainly alledged for the Knowledge of the Jurors, and therefore the Defendant was forced to put a Day certain in his Plea on which the Plaintiff and R. were made Executors, abſque hoc that the Plaintiff alone, after that Time, was made ſole Executor. And ſo the Defendant who miniſtred the Matter of the Iſſue was forced to ſhew the Day certain. [c] And in 3. H. 6. in Treſpaſs for wrongfully taking away his Servant, the Defendant ſaid, that long before the Servant made an Agreement with the Plaintiff, he made an Agreement with the Defendant himſelf at ſuch a Place, and from thence he went with the Defendant himſelf, at the Requeſt of the Defendant, to ſerve him: And the Plaintiff traverſed the Bar, et alii e contra, and this Iſſue was clearly holden not good, becauſe the Plaintiff did not ſhew what Day he retained him, for without that was ſhewn the Jurors could not know the Certainty of the Time ſo as to find with which of them he firſt made an Agreement, wherefore the Plaintiff was there put to ſhew the Day in certain. So here, if the Plaintiff ſhould traverſe the Defendant's Reſidence ever ſince the Remainder fell, this Iſſue would be upon an incertain Point, inaſmuch as no certain Time is ſhewn whereof they may enquire, for which Reaſon the Day ought to be ſhewn in certain. And it lies upon the Defendant here to ſhew it, becauſe he is in the affirmative, for the Plaintiff muſt ſtand to the Traverſe and Denial of the Entry at the Time, and he that is in the Negative ought not to ſhew that to be done, which he denies to be done, and therefore the Defendant being in the affirmative ought to ſhew it, and becauſe he has not done ſo, the Plea is naught. Then as to the Matter in Law, it ſeems that the Remainder is void for divers Cauſes; one Cauſe is, becauſe the Limitation of the Remainder is here appointed during the particular Eſtate, [d] and every Remainder ought always to be appointed and limited to take Effect, after the particular Eſtate ended, and not during the particular Eſtate, for if it is limited and appointed to take Effect during the particular Eſtate, then it ſhall be utterly void, becauſe it is repugnant to the firſt Eſtate. * As if a Leaſe is made for Life, the Remainder for Life, and if the firſt Tenant for Life die, that then it ſhall remain over to a Stranger in Fee, this is a void Remainder, becauſe it is appointed to take Effect immediately after the firſt Eſtate for Life determined, and when the firſt Eſtate for Life is determined, then the Remainder for Life commences, and from thence has Continuance: And if it continues from thence, then it follows that the Remainder in Fee may not take effect immediately after the firſt Eſtate for Life ended, for if the Remainder in Fee ſhould then begin to take Effect, it would avoid the firſt Remainder for Life, which cannot be avoided, becauſe it was firſt appointed; and therefore inaſmuch as the Remainder in Fee is limited to take Effect during the Eſtate precedent, which Eſtate precedent the Remainder in Fee muſt either avoid, or be void itſelf, it ſeems to me that it ſhall be void for the Repugnancy. [e] So if a Leaſe is made to two, the Remainder over in Fee after the Death of the firſt of them, this Remainder is void, becauſe the Survivor of them ſhall hold Place after the Death of the firſt, and inaſmuch as the Survivor of them ſhall have the Land immediately after the Death of the other, it cannot immediately remain over to another in Fee, for if ſo, then it muſt drown the firſt Eſtate, which continues; and therefore the Remainder ſhall be void for the Repugnancy, ſooner than it ſhall drown the firſt Eſtate, which was appointed and limited before the Remainder. So in the principal Caſe, it is given to Huſband and Wife for their Lives, the Remainder to the eldeſt Son for Life, upon Condition that if the eldeſt die living the Huſband and Wife, that then it ſhall remain to the Defendant for Life, which is as much as to ſay, that then immediately the Defendant ſhall have the Land, which cannot be, for the firſt Eſtate continues at that Time, and if the Remainder ſhould be good, it muſt drown the firſt Eſtate, which the Huſband and Wife have, which it ſhall not do, and therefore the Remainder ſhall be void for the Repugnancy and Contrariety it bears to the firſt Eſtate. Alſo the Remainder is void for another Cauſe, viz. becauſe it is limited to commence upon Condition, [f] which no Remainder may do, for Conditions always enure in Privity, ſo that none but Privies ſhall take advantage of them; [g] for none ſhall enter for a Condition broken except the Feoffor, Donor, and Leſſor, or their Heirs. And as none but Privies ſhall avoid an Eſtate before made for the Breach of of a Condition, ſo none but Privies only ſhall take a new Eſtate by Performance of a Condition. [a] And therefore if a Man makes a Leaſe for Life, reſerving Rent, upon Condition that if the Rent be behind it ſhall remain to a Stranger in Fee after the firſt Eſtate ended, this Remainder is void, becauſe it depends upon a Condition, and none ſhall take Benefit by it but only Privies, and the Stranger to whom the Remainder is appointed is not a Privy, but a Stranger, ergo he ſhall not take Benefit by the Remainder, for which Reaſon the Remainder is void. So if I make a Leaſe for Life, upon Condition that if the Leſſee do not pay me 20 l. at ſuch a Day, that then it ſhall remain over to a Stranger in Fee, and he fails of Payment, this is a void Remainder, cauſa qua ſupra. But if I make a Leaſe for Life, upon Condition that if the Leſſee do ſuch an Act he ſhall have Fee, and he does it accordingly, there he ſhall have the Fee; becauſe he is privy to the Condition, and therefore he ſhall take Benefit by it. And ſo the Diverſity appears where the Eſtate upon Condition is appointed to a Privy, and where to a Stranger. Then here in our Caſe the Remainder is appointed and limited to the Defendant, if his Brother firſt dies in the Life of the Huſband and Wife, and if he does not die in the Life of the Huſband and Wife, then the Defendant ſhall not have the Remainder. So that the Commencement of the Remainder is upon a Contingent, viz. upon this Word (if) which is a Word conditional, which precedes the Remainder. And for this cauſe the Remainder, which muſt here commence upon a Condition, is not good. [c] But if an Eſtate is made for Life upon Condition that if the Tenant for Life die, that then it ſhall remain over, this Remainder is good, becauſe it commences upon the Determination of the Eſtate which is certain and not incertain, and therefore it is no Condition. But in our Caſe it is incertain, and may be called a Condition, for there is no Condition but what is incertain, and may be performed or broken: And here it is incertain, and conſequently a Condition, and then the Remainder ſhall be void. And ſo the Remainder here is void for the two Cauſes before ſhewn. And further, my Lords, it is to be conſidered and obſerved, that in every Weal-Public it is neceſſary and requiſite that the Conveyances of Things ſhould be certain, for Certainty is the Mother of Repoſe, and Incertainty the Mother of Contention, which our wiſe and provident Law has ever guarded againſt and prevented all Occaſions thereof. For which Reaſon it has ordained certain Ceremonies to be uſed in the Change and Tranſmutation of Things from one to another, (and eſpecially in the Caſe of Freeholds which are of greater Price and Eſtimation in our Law than other Things) in order to know the certain Times when Things paſs; and therefore in every Feoffment the Law has appointed that [d] Livery and Seizin ſhall be had, and in every Grant of Reverſions or Rents, &c. that [e] Attornment ſhall be made, which are certain Points containing the Time when, and to whom ſuch Eſtates do paſs. And upon the ſame Reaſon the Law has ordained and appointed that every Remainder ſhall have three Things, beſides thoſe beforementioned, as Rules and Directions whereby to know and diſcern when Remainders are good; viz. [f] an Eſtate precedent made at the ſame Time that the Remainder commences, [g] and that the particular Eſtate continue when the Remainder veſts, [h] and that the Remainder be out of the Donor at the Time of the Livery; and if any of theſe three Things fail, the Remainder is void. [i] And therefore as to the firſt Point, if the Leſſor confirms the Eſtate of his Tenant for Years, the Remainder in Fee, this is a void Remainder, becauſe the Eſtate for Years was made before the Remainder, and not at the Time with the Remainder, and he ſhall not take it as a Grant of the Reverſion, becauſe he is not Party to the Deed. [k] So if the Leſſor diſſeizes his Tenant for Life, and afterwards makes a new Leaſe to him for Life, the Remainder in Fee, this Remainder is void, becauſe the Tenant for Life is remitted to his Eſtate, which was made long before the Remainder appointed; ſo that the Eſtate precedent was not made at the Time of the Remainder, and therefore the Remainder is void. [l] So if the Heir endows his Mother, the Remainder in Fee, this Remainder is void, although Livery and Seizin be made to the Woman, becauſe the Dower has Relation to the Death of the Huſband; and therefore inaſmuch as the Eſtate precedent was not made when the Remainder was appointed, the Remainder is void. And as to the ſecond Point, the Eſtate precedent ought to continue when the Remainder veſts. [m] And therefore Frowick is of opinion in 21. H. 7. that if one makes a Leaſe for Life upon Condition that if he do not ſuch an Act his Eſtate ſhall ceaſe, and that then it ſhall remain over in Fee, this Remainder is void; becauſe it does not veſt during the Eſtate precedent, for by the Ceſſer the firſt Eſtate is determined. [n] So if a man makes a Leaſe for Life, and that a Day after the Death of the Tenant for Life it ſhall remain over, this Remainder is void, becauſe the firſt Eſtate is determined before the Appointment of the Remainder. And as to the third Point, that the Remainder ought to paſs out of the Leſſor at the Time of the Livery made, or elſe it ſhall be void, this is proved by the Caſes before put: And alſo in the common Caſe, [o] where a Leaſe is made for Life, Remainder to the right Heirs of J. S. who is then alive, this Remainder paſſes out of the Leſſor preſently, although it does not veſt preſently. And ſo in all Caſes the Remainder ought to paſs out of the Perſon of the Leſſor at the Time of the particular Eſtate made. But in our Caſe the Eſtate precedent was made long before the Remainder, and therefore the Remainder ſhall be void, as in the other Caſes before; and alſo the Remainder was not out of the Leſſor at the Time of the Livery, but it was appointed to paſs upon the Performance of a Condition, for the Words are, "that if the Son "in the Remainder die, then it ſhall remain to the Defendant; &c." and this Word, (then) is a Relative, and has its Antecedent, which is to be tried by the Queſtion, when; as if it be demanded, when he ſhall have the Remainder, it is to be anſwered, when William is dead; then he ſhall have it, and not before. So that the Remainder did not paſs preſently, inaſmuch as the Condition precedes the Remainder. [p] And therefore in 15. H. 7. in the firſt Caſe, a Diverſity is held in a Writ of Annuity, that if I grant to one, that when he ſhall be promoted to a Benefice he ſhall have an Annuity, there if he demand the Annuity he ought firſt to ſhew that he is promoted to a Benefice; but if an Annuity is granted to one until he be promoted to a Benefice, there he ſhall have a Writ of Annuity, and need not ſhew that he is not yet promoted, becauſe the Annuity precedes, and the Promotion is ſubſequent and goes in Deſeaſance of the Annuity, nuity, and therefore ought to be ſhewn on the contrary Side. [a] And in 7. Ed. 3. a Man made a Leaſe for 8 Years rendering 100 s. Rent yearly, and if the Leſſee would hold the Land over the Term to him and to his Heirs for ever, that then he ſhould pay yearly 20 l. and within the 8 Years the Leſſor brought an Action of Debt for the 100 s. and it was held maintainable; which proves that the Fee did not paſs preſently, becauſe the Condition precedes the Fee, viz. if he will hold over, &c. and he had not determined his Pleaſure then, for if the Fee had paſſed preſently, the Action would not lie, for then the Rent ſhould not be a Chattle. [a] And in Pleſington's Caſe in 6. R. 2. where a Leaſe for Years was made to two, upon Condition that if the Leſſor die within the Term, or grant the Reverſion, that then the Termors ſhould have Freehold; there it is held that inaſmuch as the Condition precedes the Freehold, the Freehold is not out of the Leſſor preſently, and thereupon one of the Termors attorned as Termor for Years, ſaving his Advantage. Which Caſes prove that in our Caſe the Remainder did not paſs out of the Leſſor at the Time of the Livery, inaſmuch as the Condition precedes the Remainder; and they alſo prove that the Remainder commences upon Condition, and that the Remainder is appointed to commence after the Commencement of the particular Eſtate, which is contrary to the Rule of Law; and therefore for this and the ſaid other Cauſes the Remainder ſhall be void. And ſo the Plaintiff ſhall recover for the Inſufficiency of the Matter, as well as of the Form of the Bar.

Cook Serjeant to the contrary. As to the two Exceptions, which have been moved, viz. that the Plea is not good, becauſe he has not ſhewn that he has been reſident all the Time ſince the Remainder fell, neither has ſhewn what Day he entered; Sir, as to this it ſeems to me that it ſhall be taken that he entered immediately after the Death of the Huſband and Wife, and that he has been reſident all the Time ſince, for the Defendant has pleaded by Way of Bar, [b] and if the Bar has Matter of Subſtance, and is certain to a common Intent, it is ſufficient, although it is not certain to every ſpecial Intent. [c] And therefore in the ſaid Caſe of 33. H. 6. put by my Brother Pollard fo. 24. where the Defendant pleaded that the Teſtator made the Plaintiff and one R. his Executors, Judgment, &c. the Plea was good without ſhewing that this was after the Time that he made the Plaintiff ſole Executor, for it ſhall be ſo intended. So that if the Defendant's Plea be certain to a common Intent it is ſufficient. [d] So if the Defendant in Treſpaſs ſays, that the Place where, &c. is his Freehold, the Plea is good, and yet it may be that the Plaintiff has an Eſtate for Years, or ſome ſpecial Eſtate which may ſtand with his Bar, and that the Plaintiff may puniſh the Defendant; but ſuch ſpecial Matter ſhall not be intended, and therefore the Bar ſhall be good, becauſe it is good to a common Intent. [e] And ſo in 6. Ed. 4. in Debt upon an Obligation upon Condition indorſed for the Performance of all the Covenants contained in an Indenture, the Defendant ſaid that in the Indenture it was compriſed that the Defendant ſhould bring one to be an Apprentice to the Plaintiff in the Art de Tuma fila, and alſo that he ſhould inform another in the ſaid Art, and then the Obligation to be void, and he ſaid that he had performed them, upon which they were at Iſſue, and a Verdict for the Plaintiff, and it was moved in Arreſt of Judgment, that the Plea was not good, becauſe the Condition was that the Defendant ſhould perform all the Covenants in the Indenture, and he did not ſay in his Plea [f] that the ſaid two Covenants were all, ſo that he did not alledge Performance of all the Covenants, for which Reaſon his Plea was not good; but yet all the Juſtices held the Plea good, for that when the Defendant alledged the two Covenants in the Indenture, it ſhall not be taken by common Intent that there were more Covenants than thoſe, except the Plaintiff ſhews the contrary on his Part; and becauſe the Bar was good to a common Intent, the Plea was held to be good. [g] So in a Formedon ne dona pas is primâ facie a good Bar, and yet it may be that the Land was recovered in Value, in which Caſe the Plea is not proper, for other Land was given, and yet the Demandant ſhall there recover; but inaſmuch as it ſhall be intended a general Gift, the Plea ſhall be good. And ſo a Bar which anſwers a common Intent is good, although it does not anſwer every ſpecial Intent. [h] And in 3. H. 6. in Debt againſt Executors, who pleaded that they had fully adminiſtred the Goods of the Deceaſed the Day of the Writ purchaſed, and ſo nothing in their Hands, the Plea was good; and yet it is not good to every ſpecial Intent, for it may be (as the Caſe there was) that other Goods, which did not belong to the Teſtator the Day of his Death, are come into their Hands in Lieu of the other Goods, but yet the Bar was there held good, becauſe it anſwered a common Intent. [i] So in Aſſize if the Tenant pleads in Bar a Recovery in Aſſize heretofore againſt a Stranger, and that the Eſtate of the Plaintiff was Meſne between the Diſſeizin and the Recovery, the Plea is good, and yet it may be that the Plaintiff now in the Aſſize was in by Deſcent, or has a meſne Title, which ſhall take away the Aſſize of the other, and ſhall not be avoided by the ſaid Recovery; but this ſhall not be intended without being ſhewn, for which Reaſon the other Plea which is good to a common Intent ſhall ſtand. [k] So if one pleads in Bar that his Father was ſeized, and died ſeized, and the Land deſcended to him as Son and Heir, and he entered, &c. this is a good Bar, and yet it is not certain to every Intent, for it may be that a Stranger abated and died ſeized, in which Caſe the Entry of the Heir is not lawful: but this ſhall not be intended without being ſpecially ſhewn, and therefore the Bar, which anſwers every common Intent, is good. [l] So in our Caſe the Bar ſhall be good, becauſe by common Intendment it ſhall be taken that the Entry was immediately after the Remainder fell, and if it was not ſo the Plaintiff ought to have ſhewn it, for we by way of Bar ſhall not be compelled to ſhew the Certainty of the Time; but when the Thing commences in reſpect of Time, then the Certainty of the Time ought to be ſhewn. [m] As if one retains another to ſerve him a Year for 20 s. Wages, there if the Servant demands the 20 s. he ought to ſhew that the Time is paſſed, viz. that the Year is expired, and he ought to plead it certainly, becauſe his Action is given in reſpect of the Year paſſed, and of a Thing done in Time, and the Time is Parcel of the Cauſe of the Demand, and precedes the Demand. But here the Time purſues the Demand, and is not the Cauſe of the Demand, and therefore we ought not to ſhew it as certainly as where the Time gains the Thing, for here it goes goes in Defeaſance of the Thing, and therefore the Bar is good, notwithſtanding the ſaid two Exceptions. Further it ſeems to me, that the Remainder here is good, for firſt there is an Eſtate upon which the Remainder may be built, and the Remainder is here appointed upon it. But the Cauſe why the Remainder ſhall not be good is alledged in two grand Points, viz. becauſe the Fee does not paſs preſently out of the Leſſor, and alſo becauſe the Remainder may not paſs upon Condition. And it ſeems to me that the Remainder paſſes out of the Leſſor preſently, as in Littleton's Caſe, viz. [a] if one makes a Leaſe for 5 Years, upon Condition that if he pay to him 20 l. within the firſt two Years, that then he ſhall have Fee, the Fee paſſes out of the Leſſor preſently. [b] So where a Leaſe is made for Life, the Remainder to the right Heirs of J. S. who is alive, the Remainder is out of the Leſſor preſently, altho' it may not veſt preſently. So ſhall it be here. And, Sir, a Remainder may well commence upon Condition: [c] As if a Leaſe is made for Life, upon Condition that if J. S. marry my Daughter during the Eſtate for Life it ſhall remain to him, this is a good Remainder, and yet it commences upon a Condition, for here there is an Eſtate upon which the Remainder may be built: And as well as I might have given it to him immediately, ſo may I give it him by meſne Diſtance of Time, and upon Condition, for that which I may give without Condition, I may give upon Condition. [d] And in 34. Ed. 3. the Caſe is that one deviſed Land deviſable for Life upon Condition that if his Heir, to whom the Reverſion deſcended, diſturbed the Tenant for Life, or the Executors of their Adminiſtration, that then the Land ſhould remain to the Daughter of the Deviſor and to her Heirs, and he died, and the Tenant for Life died, and the Son of the Daughter brought a Formedon in Remainder againſt the Heir of the Deviſor, and alledged that he diſturbed the Tenant for Life, and the Executors alſo; and there the Tenant traverſed that he did not diſturb the Tenant for Life, nor the Executors, and upon this Iſſue was joined, which ſhould not have been ſo, if the Remainder had not been good: which Caſe proves that a Remainder may well be upon Condition. [e] And if one makes a Diſſeizin to the Uſe of a Stranger, and the Stranger afterwards agrees to it, he ſhall have the Land thereby. And if a Freehold may be transferred from one to another by ſuch Aſſent, à multo fortiore may it be transferred from one to another upon Condition, and eſpecially where there is an Eſtate of Freehold precedent to which the Condition may be annexed. And therefore for theſe Cauſes it ſeems to me that the Remainder is good.

Morgan Serjeant to the contrary. The Pleading is not good, becauſe he does not ſhew the Time of the Death of William, and of the Huſband and Wife. But I will not dwell long upon this, for there is another Blemiſh and Wound in the Pleading which is incurable, and that is, becauſe he has not ſhewn the Day of his Entry; for here the Condition is, ſi ipſe vellet inhabitare, &c. durante termino ſuperius expreſſo: which is for the whole * Term, viz. from the Beginning to the End; and then inaſmuch as he ought to dwell there all the Time, the Time is Parcel of the Matter, which ought to be ſhewn, for it is Part of the Subſtance of the Bar: And then although a Bar may be good to a common Intent, yet it ſhall not be good, † where Part of the Subſtance is omitted; but where ſuch Things are omitted, which by ſpecial Intendment, and not by general Intendment are omitted, the Law warrants ſuch Bar. [f] As if a Man pleads a Feoffment in Bar, this ſhall be intended good to common Intent, and yet it may be that the Feoffor was within Age, or in Priſon: But ſuch ſpecial Things ſhall not be intended by the Law, unleſs they be ſhewn. But if one is bound in an Obligation to infeoff another between the Date of the Obligation and the Feaſt of St. Michael next enſuing, there if an Action is ſued upon the Obligation, it is no Plea to ſay that he infeoffed him, but he ought to ſhew the certain Day, for the Time is Part of the Subſtance of the Bar, and if this be omitted, it ſhall never be ſupplied by Intendment; and alſo the Plea ſhould not be good, if he had ſaid that he infeoffed him before the Feaſt of St. Michael, without ſhewing the Day certain, in reſpect of the Knowledge of the Jurors if Iſſue ſhould be joined upon it. [g] So if one pleads in Bar that he was Lord, and an Alienation was made in Mortmain, and he entered, this is not a good Bar, for it ſhall not be intended that he entered within the Year, if it be not ſhewn, for there the Time is Part of the Subſtance of the Bar; and it ſhould not be a good Plea there to ſay, that he entered within the Year, without ſhewing the Day certain, for the Knowledge of the Jurors. [h] And I was of Counſel in the King's Bench in a Bill of Covenant brought by the Leſſee againſt the Leſſor, who had covenanted with him, that if he was lawfully ejected during the Term of any Part of the Land, he ſhould have as much other Land of the Leſſor during the ſame Term, and he ſhewed that he had been ejected of ſuch a Piece of Land, and did not ſay when, and it was holden that he ought to have ſhewn the Day certain, becauſe it was Matter of Subſtance. So in our Caſe the Time is Part of the Subſtance of the Bar, which ought to be certainly ſhewn, and foraſmuch as it is not, the Bar is not good. Further, there are two principal Things from whence Arguments may be drawn, that is to ſay, our Maxims, and Reaſon, which is the Mother [i] of all Laws. But Maxims are the Foundations of the Law, and the Concluſions of Reaſon, and therefore they ought not to be [k] impugned, but always to be admitted; yet theſe Maxims may by the Help of Reaſon, be [l] compared together, and ſet one againſt another, (although they do not vary) where it may be diſtinguiſhed by Reaſon that a Thing is nearer to one Maxim than to another, or placed between two Maxims, nevertheleſs they ought never to be impeached or impugned, but always be obſerved and held as firm Principles and Authorities of themſelves. And there is a Maxim, that when a Remainder is appointed to one, he to whom it is appointed ought at that time to be a Perſon able, and to have Capacity to take the Remainder, or elſe it ſhall be void. [m] As if a Leaſe is made to one for Life, the Remainder to J. S. in Fee, who is then a Monk profeſſed, and afterwards he is deraigned, and after that the Tenant for Life dies, J. S. ſhall not have the Remainder, becauſe he was not a Perſon able at the Time of the Remainder appointed to take it. [n] So if a Leaſe is made for Life, the Remainder to the Mayor and Commonalty of D. who have not then Capacity to purchaſe Lands, and afterwards they have Capacity to purchaſe, and after that the Tenant for Life dies, the Mayor and Commonalty ſhall not not take the Remainder, causâ qua supra. [a] So if the Remainder is limited to him whom the Tenant for Life shall name, and afterwards he names one, he shall never have the Remainder, causâ qua supra. [b] But if the Remainder is limited to the right Heirs of J. S. who is then alive, and he dies, and afterwards the Tenant for Life dies, the right Heir of J. S. shall have it. And I have read in our Books two Causes thereof, one Cause is, for that it shall be intended, that J. S. is then dead, the other Cause is, for that the Law presumes that J. S. shall have an Heir whom it will appoint to take the Remainder nolens volens, so that in respect of the Certainty of an Heir, the Remainder shall be good; but where it stands indifferent whether he, to whom the Remainder is appointed, shall be a Person able or not, there the Remainder shall not be good. And there is another Maxim concerning Remainders, which my Brother Pollard has divided into divers Branches, but I shall only mention one of them, and that is, [c] that the Remainder ought to pass out of the Lessor at the Time of the Livery. And this Littleton saith in his Book in the Case of Richil, [d] where the Father made a Gift in Tail upon Condition, that if the Donee aliened, &c. then his Estate should cease, and should remain to another of his Sons; this Remainder he holds void for divers Causes, whereof one Cause was, for that it did not pass out of the Donor at the Time of the Livery, so that Remainders ought always to pass by the first Livery. And in the other Cases which I have put before of a Monk, or of a Corporation who have not Capacity, this Cause may also be assigned to make such Remainders void, for there it does not pass presently, and then it shall never pass: And so one Cause holds Place in both the Maxims. And it cannot be said but that it does not pass here at the Time of the Livery, for the Condition precedes the Commencement of the Remainder, viz. "if William die living the Husband and Wife, that then it shall remain to the Defendant," in which Case it is not in him before the Condition performed: And therefore it does not pass out of the Lessor at the Time of the Livery, for which Reason it shall be void. But if the Remainder had preceded, and the Condition been subsequent, then the Remainder should have been good, but otherwise it shall be void; wherefore, &c. And so it seems to me that the Plaintiff shall recover.

E contra for the Defendant. Brook Serjeant to the contrary. As to the Incertainty of the Time of the Entry, the Bar shall be taken in the best Sense for the Defendant, and that is, that he entered immediately; [e] and a Bar which is good to a common Intent is sufficient. [f] And therefore about 20. Ed. 3. it is held, that if one pleads in Bar that J. S. died seized, and R. S. entered as Son and Heir to him, whose Estate he hath, this shall be a good Bar, and yet it may be that he was not his Heir; for it is not expresly said that he is his Son and Heir, but that he entered as Son and Heir, and yet because it is pleaded by Way of Bar the best shall be intended for the Defendant. So is it here. And he argued further much to the same Effect with the Argument of Cook.

[e] See ante 26. (b) and the Books there cited.
[f] Heath's Max. 56. Wing. Max. 189. pl. 40.

On the same Side. Saunders Serjeant to the same Purpose. It seems that the Bar is good to prove the Condition fulfilled, although it is not certainly expressed that he entered immediately, and although the certain Day thereof is not mentioned for the Information of the Jurors; for a Plea in Bar is always made for two Purposes; one is, to force the Plaintiff to make a Replication; the other is, to compel the Plaintiff to come to Issue. And therefore it is not necessary to shew every Thing certainly in the Bar; for perhaps the Issue will not be joined upon the Bar but upon the Replication, for the Defendant is not compelled to force the Plaintiff to come to Issue presently; for which reason the Bar is good enough if it be certain to a common Intent. [g] And therefore in an Assize, if the Tenant pleads in Bar a Descent to the Plaintiff and two others, and that he has the Estate of one of them, it is good, and yet he might have it by Disseizin, in which Case he shall be also a Disseizor to the Plaintiff, for he may not be a Disseizor to the one without the other; or he might have it lawfully, and so it stands in dubio, but yet it shall be taken according to common Intent that he has it lawfully, and therefore the Plea in Bar shall be good. [h] And in 27. Ass. in an Assize brought by the Heir, the Tenant said, that the Father of the Plaintiff, being Tenant by the Curtesy, and now alive, leased his Estate to the Ancestor of the Tenant, who died seized of that Estate, after whose Death he was in as Son and Heir, and demanded Judgment if Assize, &c. and this was held a good Bar, and yet he did not say that he was the first who entered after the Death of his Father, and if he was not the first that entered he has no Title, for the Land [i] occupanti conceditur in such Case, and that is to him that first enters, which might be the Plaintiff, but yet the Bar was held good, for that to common Intent it shall be taken that the Tenant was the first who entered after the Death of his Father, and if he was not, the Plaintiff may and ought to shew it. So a Bar is sufficient if it be good to a common Intent. [k] And in Assize if the Tenant pleads that he recovered in a Formedon in descender against one, and that the Title of the Plaintiff is mesne between the Gift and the Recovery, this is a good Bar, as it is held in 21. H. 6. and yet it may be that the Plaintiff was disseized by the Donor, and that he entered pending the Formedon, in which Case his Entry was good, and then his Recovery false; but such special Matter shall not be intended, and if in truth it be so, the Plaintiff ought to shew it; but the Bar is good without shewing it, because it answers the common Intent. And so it is a Principle in Law, that a Bar is good if it is certain to a common Intent; which Principle they utterly deny, who argue that the Bar here is not good for the Incertainty of the Day of the Entry. So that although they commend the Maxims in Words, yet they deny them in Fact. Further, as touching the Remainder, it seems to be good; and as they, who have argued to the contrary, have denied the Principle in Pleading, so have they denied the Principle in the Matter, viz. that Livery of Seizin shall not be taken most strongly against him that makes it; whereas it has always been held as a Principle, that when a Man makes Livery of Seizin, his Livery shall be taken most strongly against himself, as it may be proved by divers Cases. [l] And therefore if one gives Land to a Man et hæredibus, it shall be a Fee-Simple to him, though (suis) be omitted; and yet he did not give him a Fee-Simple expresly, but inasmuch inaſmuch as every Livery ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt him that makes it, for this Reaſon he ſhall have a Fee ſimple. [a] And in 18. Ed. 3. a Man made a Leaſe for Life, and after the Death of the Tenant for Life that the Lands redibunt to A. and B. in Fee, this is held a good Remainder, becauſe the Livery of every Man ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt himſelf. [b] And ſo if a Man makes a Leaſe for Life, the Remainder to the right Heirs of J. S. who is alive, this Remainder ſhall paſs out of the Leſſor preſently, and ſhall be in Abeyance rather than be void, or that the Leſſor ſhould take Benefit by it againſt his own Livery and Limitation. Which Caſe proves how ſtrongly the Law extends it againſt him that makes the Livery, and Limitation of the Eſtate, and yet the Law of its own Courſe oftentimes puts the Fee in Suſpence. But as Bracton ſays, Modus et conventio vincunt legem, the Manner and Form of the Gift alters the Law. [c] As if Houſes leaſed for Years be thrown down by the Violence of the Wind, the Law will excuſe the Leſſee in Waſte; but if he covenants to repair them, and to leave them in good Repair at the End of the Term, an Action of Covenant ſhall well lie againſt him for not repairing them, for his ſpecial Agreement alters the Law, and makes his Words to be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt himſelf. So that the Law interprets the Words and Actions of every Man moſt ſtrongly againſt himſelf. And then in our Caſe the Leſſor has made Livery and Seizin, and thereupon has annexed a Remainder to paſs upon a Condition firſt to be performed, and the Law ſays, that every Limitation of an Eſtate ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt him that appoints the ſame; from whence it follows that the Remainder ſhall be good. And although the Remainder does not paſs preſently to the Defendant, yet it has its Commencement upon the Livery, and ſhall have its Perfection upon the Performance of the Condition, and in the mean Time it ſhall be as a Thing ambiguous. And Bracton ſaith, Terminus et feodum poſſunt ſimul incipere in unâ perſonâ, ſed non ſimul ſtabunt, et non paribus paſſibus incedant: ſed unus eorum ſtabit, et alter eorum erit in pendenti. And therefore if I give Land to one upon Condition that if he marry my Daughter, that then he ſhall have the Land in Fee, he ſhall have it accordingly upon the Condition performed; for by the Livery it takes its Commencement, by the Performance of the Condition it takes its Perfection, and in the mean Time it is a Thing ambiguous. So if I make a Leaſe for Years upon Condition that one Month afterwards he ſhall have Fee, he ſhall have it after the Month accordingly, for the Thing ſhall paſs according to the Agreement moſt ſtrongly againſt the Donor. So ſhall it be where the Remainder is appointed to a Stranger, as if a Leaſe is made to two upon Condition, that if one die within ſeven Years, that then after the Death of the other it ſhall remain to a Stranger in Fee, this Remainder is good, for the Reaſon of the Condition to give the Eſtate to Privies or to a Stranger is all one, inaſmuch as there is an Eſtate firſt given, to which the Condition may be annexed, for the Livery and Limitation ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt him that makes it. And a Man ſhall have three Things by a Remainder, viz. firſt, he ſhall have the Remainder to veſt, ſecondly, Poſſeſſion in Law, and thirdly, Poſſeſſion in Deed, and if he to whom is is appointed be able to take it when the Poſſeſſion in Law is caſt, it is ſufficient. [d] And therefore it has been taken, that if Land is given to one, et filio ſuo primogenito, and he has no Son at the Time of the Gift, but afterwards he has a Son, this Son ſhall have the Land by Way of Remainder, and yet the Remainder was not out of the Leſſor, neither did it veſt at the Time of the Livery, but the Law conſtrues the Livery and Limitation moſt ſtrongly againſt the Leſſor: So that rather than the Remainder ſhall be void, it ſhall be in pendenti, as Bracton ſaith, as a meſne Thing performable by Poſſibility. And inaſmuch as the Son is able to take the Poſſeſſion in Law at the Time when it is caſt and fallen, the Remainder ſhall be good enough. [e] So in 39. Aſs. a Man gave Lands to Huſband and Wife, and to one Heir of their Bodies lawfully begotten, and to one Heir of the Body of that Heir only, and the Huſband and Wife had no Iſſue at that Time, but afterwards they had a Son, and they died, and the Donor entered, and the Son ouſted him, and the Donor brought Aſſize, and the Opinion of all the Juſtices there was, that the Plaintiff had no Cauſe to have Aſſize, but that the Son ought to have the Land, as a Remainder, as I take the Book, and not otherwiſe: and yet the Remainder did not paſs out of the Donor, nor veſt in the Son at the Time of the Livery, but inaſmuch as he was in eſſe at the Time of the Poſſeſſion in Law caſt it is ſufficient: For the Law continues the Livery and Limitation moſt ſtrongly againſt the Leſſor and Donor. [f] But if the Remainder is limited upon a Contrariety, then it ſhall not be good: as in Richil's Caſe in Littleton, for when he had made a Feoffment, it could not remain over: But the other Reaſon which Littleton aſſigns, viz. becauſe it did not veſt at the Time of the Livery, is no Reaſon, as it is proved by the Caſes before put. [g] And if Land be given to a Man and to his Heirs, as long as J. S. ſhall have Heirs of his Body, and if J. S. die without Heir of his Body, that then it ſhall remain to another in Fee, this Remainder is void for the Contrariety, for the firſt Eſtate was a Fee ſimple determinable, upon which a Remainder may not depend. [h] And ſo if a Leaſe for Life is made upon Condition that if a Stranger pay to the Leſſor 20 l. then immediately the Land ſhall remain to the ſame Stranger, this Remainder is void for the Contrariety, for the Tenant for Life ought to have it during his Life, and during that Time the Stranger cannot have it; but if it had been limited, that after the Death of the Tenant for Life it ſhould remain to the Stranger, this had been a good Remainder, for there is no Contrariety. So here it is appointed, that if William die living the Huſband and Wife, that then it ſhall remain to the Defendant, this is not to be intended that the Defendant ſhall have the Land immediately living the Huſband and Wife, but that it ſhall remain as a Remainder ought to do, viz. after the Death of the Huſband and Wife, in the ſame Manner and Form as William ſhould have had it; for which Reaſon there is not any Contrariety here, and therefore the Remainder is good. And as to the Condition which is ſubſequent, viz. ſi ipſe vellet inhabitare, &c. it ſeems that if he inhabit and be reſident once in the Grange, he has performed the Condition, for the Condition does not appoint any Time for his Reſidence, and therefore inaſmuch as it is referred to the Law, the Rule of Law before mentioned conſtrues that the Words of the Condition ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt him that ſpeaks them, viz. the Leſſor. And therefore foraſmuch as the Condition has two Intendments, one whereof is, that he ſhall inhabit there all the Term, and the other, at any Time during his Life, it ſeems to me that the Condition ſhall be taken ſtrictly againſt the Leſſor, and in the beſt Senſe for the Leſſee, and that is, that if he inhabit there at any Time during his Life, he has performed the Condition. As if a Feoffment in Fee is made upon Condition to pay 20 l. to the Feoffor, and no Time is limited for it, he has all the Time during his Life to pay it. So if the Condition be to ſerve the Feoffor in ſuch an Office, and it is not ſaid when, if he does it at any Time during his Life he has performed the Condition. So is it in the principal Caſe; and this makes an End of the Exception moved with Regard to the Incertainty of the Time, for if he has Time during his whole Life, then his Entry immediately after the Remainder fell is not requiſite, for which Reaſon it ſeems to me that the Pleading is good, and that the Plaintiff ſhall be barred.

On the ſame ſide. And at another Day Harris Serjeant argued thus to the ſame Purpoſe. As to the Exceptions taken becauſe the Defendant has not ſhewn that he has been reſident all the Time ſince the Remainder fell, nor has ſhewn the Day of his Entry in certain for the Knowledge of the Jurors, Sir, I ſhall make one Anſwer to both theſe Exceptions: And that is, that the ſhewing of the Condition by the Defendant is Surpluſage, and not material, which may as well be omitted as ſhewn by him, for the Condition here is ſubſequent, and goes in Defeaſance of the Eſtate, which the Party who claims the Eſtate ſhall not ſhew, but the other who ſhall defeat the Eſtate. [a] And therefore there is a Diverſity when the Condition comes after the Eſtate, and defeats the Eſtate, and when it comes before the Eſtate, and makes the Eſtate to continue. For if I grant to a Man a Rent-Charge out of my Land upon Condition that he ſhall do ſuch an Act, there he ſhall avow for the Rent without ſhewing the Act done, for the Condition is ſubſequent, and goes in Defeaſance of the Eſtate, which he who will have the Eſtate to continue ſhall not ſhew; but if I grant to one, that if he do ſuch an Act, then he ſhall have a Rent-Charge, &c. there he ſhall not avow, except he firſt ſhew the Performance of the Condition, for it is that which enables him to have the Rent. [b] So in 14. H. 8. Wheeler granted his Term to one upon Condition that he ſhould obtain the good Will of the Leſſor, there it is agreed that the Term paſſed preſently, becauſe the Grant precedes, and the Condition is ſubſequent to the Grant: but if he had granted, that if he ſhould obtain the good Will of the Leſſor, then he ſhould have his Term, there he ought to ſhew the Performance of the Condition before he may enable himſelf to have the Term. So in our Caſe the Remainder precedes the Condition, and by his Entry he has agreed to the Remainder, and the Condition goes in Defeaſance of the Remainder, which ought to be ſhewn by him who ſhall take Advantage of the Condition, and that is the Plaintiff, and the Defendant's ſhewing of it is Surpluſage, and not material, and then the Incertainty of Surpluſage ſhall make no Plea bad, [c] inaſmuch as the Omiſſion of all that is Surpluſage ſhall not vitiate it. And ſo the Pleading is good, notwithſtanding the ſaid Exceptions. And he argued further that the Bar was good, becauſe it was certain to a common Intent. And he ſaid, that the Remainder was good, and that a Remainder, which commences upon Condition, ſhall be good: and he argued much to the ſame Effect that Saunders did.

Hales J. At another Day Hales Juſtice ſaid, It ſeems that for the Inſufficiency of the Pleading only the Plaintiff ſhall recover, viz. becauſe the Defendant has not averred his continual Reſidence ſince the Remainder fell. For in the firſt Place, where the Remainder is appointed to the Defendant, ſi ipſe vellet inhabitare, &c. it ſeems to me that this Word (vellet) is a Condition, and is all one as if it had been, if he will inhabit, &c. And if the Words had been ſi ipſe habitabit it had been a Condition. And ſo the Sentence ſi ipſe vellet inhabitare is to be taken in the future Tenſe, and is the ſame in Senſe with the Words ſi ipſe inhabitabit; and therefore the Sentence is conditional. And further, it ſeems to me that theſe Words durante termino ſuperius expreſſo, are to be intended during the whole [d] Term, that is, from the Beginning, viz. from the Time that the Remainder firſt fell, until the End thereof. [e] As if a Man makes a Leaſe for Years rendering 20 s. Rent during the Term, this is during the whole Term. So if the Leſſee covenants to maintain the Houſes in all Repairs during the Term, this ſhall be during the whole Term. And ſo it is taken in Dockray's Caſe in 27. H. 8. [f] And if a Man is bound that his Feoffees ſhall make a Feoffment, hereby is underſtood all his Feoffees. [g] So that Conditions have always a reaſonable Conſtruction. And for the ſame Reaſon it ſhall be intended here that he ought to dwell upon the Grange during the whole Term, and not once during his Life, as it was argued at the Bar, for that would be contrary to Reaſon and the apparent Intent of the Leſſor. But if he does not inhabit all the Time upon the Land, but has been abſent for ſome reaſonable Cauſe, the Defendant ought to ſhew the ſame, and may excuſe himſelf for it. As if he was diſtant 200 Miles from the Grange at the Time of the Death of the Survivor of the Huſband and Wife, ſo that he could not have Notice of their Death until ſuch a Time, and he came immediately afterwards, &c. this ſhould excuſe him, and the Time thereof ſhould be tried by the Diſcretion of the Juſtices, as in another like Caſe, which is holden for Law in our Books, viz. [h] Tenant for Life makes a Leaſe for Years and dies, the Leſſor brings an Action of Treſpaſs againſt the Leſſee, who ſays, that as ſoon as he could after he had Notice of the Death of the Tenant for Life he drove his Cattle out of the Land, and alſo ſays, that the Treſpaſs was meſne between the Death of the Tenant for Life and the Driving, and this is held no Plea, for by the Death of the Tenant for Life the Leaſe for Years was [i] determined, and none was bound to give him Notice; and there it is held, that he ought to ſay, that ſuch a Day he drove out his Cattle, and he may ſhew that the Leſſor died in [k] another County, ſo that he could not have Notice ſooner, and it ſhall be tried by the Diſcretion of the Juſtices, whether the Avoidance was within a reaſonable Time. And ſo might the Defendant here alledge in Excuſe of his Entry, that the Place where the Survivor of the Huſband and Wife

Wife

Wife died was 200 Miles diſtant, &c. and that he could not have Notice ſooner. And as there he ought to ſhew the Day of his Avoidance for the Knowledge of the Jurors, ſo here he ought to ſhew the Day of his Entry for the ſame Reaſon. And as to that which has been ſaid, that a Bar ſhall be good if it is certain to a common Intent, it is true, [a] but that common Intent is not ſuch an Intent as ſtands indifferent, but ſuch as hath a more vehement Preſumption than any other Intent. [b] As to plead fully adminiſtred all the Goods which were the Teſtator's the Day of his Death is a good Bar, and yet it may be that he has Aſſets in his Hands of other Goods, which never belonged to the Teſtator, as Debts paid ſince, or Goods which came in lieu, &c. But this is not the moſt common Intent; but the moſt common Intent is, that he had no other Goods but thoſe which were the Teſtator's. [c] So in a Formedon in Deſcender ne dona pas is a good Bar, notwithſtanding it may be that he has recovered in Value, in which Caſe other Lands were given, and yet the Formedon lies, but this ſhall not be intended, but the common Intent is to expreſs the plain Gift by Livery. [d] But if I plead in Bar a Leaſe pur auter vie, there the Bar is not good, without averring the Life of Ceſtuy que vie, for it ſtands indifferent whether he is alive or not, and the Intent one Way is as ſtrong as it is the other Way, for which Reaſon his Life ought to be expreſly averred. So in Debt upon an Obligation, if the Defendant pleads in Bar a Releaſe bearing Date after the Obligation made, this is not a good Bar, except he ſhews expreſly that it was delivered after the Obligation was made, and yet there prima facie one would preſume that it was delivered when it bore Date, but it may alſo be preſumed on the other Hand that the Party would not have brought an Action of Debt, if the Releaſe had been delivered afterwards. So that the Preſumption is equally ſtrong either Way, and becauſe the Intent ſtands indifferent, it is not good except it be ſhewn by the Plea that it was delivered after the Obligation was made. And ſo is the Diverſity in Pleas which are good to a common Intent. Then in the principal Caſe it is incertain and ſtands indifferent whether or no he has inhabited all the Time ſince the Remainder fell, and the Preſumption one Way is as ſtrong as it is the other, for which Reaſon it ſhall not be taken according to common Intent, and therefore the Plea in Bar is not good without ſhewing the Continuance of his Habitation ſince the Remainder fell; for the continual Reſidence makes the Continuance of his Eſtate, without which he cannot plead in Bar, and then inaſmuch as the ſame is effectual and material, the Defendant ought to ſhew it, which he has not done, and for this Reaſon the Plea in Bar is not good. Then as to the Matter in Law, it ſeems to me that the Remainder is good. [e] For God has committed all worldly Things to the Order and Diſpoſal of Men, ſo that when a Perſon has a lawful Property in any Thing, he may give or convey away the ſame, where, when, and how he pleaſes, ſo that his Intent be not againſt Law or Reaſon, nor repugnant in itſelf. And here when the Leſſor appoints the Remainder to the Defendant ut ſupra, his Intent may be perceived herein, and it is reaſonable that the ſame ſhould be fulfilled, viz. that the Defendant ſhould have it in ſuch Manner and Form as it is appointed. And this Limitation of the Remainder is not againſt Law, nor againſt any Principle thereof, as I ſhall prove hereafter, neither is it repugnant in itſelf, ergo it is good. And to prove that it is not againſt Law, I ſhall put ſome Caſes founded upon like Reaſon, and which will alſo anſwer the Reaſon of that which has been alledged, viz. that the Remainder ought to paſs out of the Leſſor preſently, which I utterly deny. And therefore if I make a Leaſe for Years, the Remainder for Life, upon Condition that if he in the Remainder do not ſuch an Act, the Remainder ſhall be void, now before the Condition be broken the Remainder is good, and in him to whom it is appointed, but if the Condition be broken, then the Remainder is out of him, and in the Perſon of the Leſſor again, which proves that a Freehold by Agreement had upon the Livery may be transferred from one to another by Matter ex poſt facto. So if one grants a Rent or Reverſion, and afterwards Attornment is had, now the Reverſion ſhall paſs thereby, and yet it did not paſs preſently by the Grant, which Caſe proves that upon the Aſſent firſt had, and Act done afterwards a Freehold may be deveſted out of one and veſted in another. [f] So if a Man makes a Leaſe for Life by Deed, the Remainder to the King, and makes Livery and Seizin, the Remainder does not paſs preſently, but if the Deed is afterwards enrolled, then the Remainder ſhall be in the King from the Time of the firſt Livery. So that by the Limitation declared upon the Livery, the Remainder which did not paſs out of the Leſſor at the Time of the Livery ſhall paſs by Act done afterwards. [g] So in 6. R. 2. in Pleſington's Caſe one Condition was, that if the Leſſor died within the Term, then the Leſſee for Years ſhould have the Land for Life, and it is there held, that if the Leſſor died, his Eſtate ſhould be enlarged cauſa qua ſupra. [h] So if one makes a Diſſeizin to the Uſe of J. S. now the Freehold is not in J. S. but if J. S. afterwards agrees to it, then the Freehold is in him. Which Caſes prove that when Livery is made, or when a Man firſt meddles with the Poſſeſſion of Land, and thereupon Words are ſpoken, there by Force of ſuch Words, and of ſome Act afterwards done a Freehold may be transferred from one to another. So in the principal Caſe Livery is made, and thereupon the Leſſor hath declared and appointed, that if William die living the Huſband and Wife, then it ſhall remain to the Defendant, in which Caſe I will readily agree that the Remainder does not paſs out of the Leſſor until William is dead, and when he is dead, it ſhall well paſs by Force of the firſt Words annexed to the Livery. And the Reaſon of this, and of the other Caſes before put is all one, although they differ in terminis, and ſo like Reaſon makes like Law. [i] And alſo if a Woman is Tenant for Life, and Confirmation is made to her and to her Huſband, this ſhall enure as a Remainder to the Huſband, and yet it did not paſs out of the Leſſor at the Time of the firſt Eſtate. And to make a Difference where the Fee is appointed upon Condition to a Privy, and where to a Stranger, is but an idle and inſignificant Conceit. And, Sir, he that will argue that the Remainder ſhall be void, admits thereby that Words ſhall not be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt him that ſpeaks them, which is abſolutely contrary to the Rules of our Law, and therefore when the Law ſays, that every Man's Words and Actions ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt himſelf, it does does at the ſame Time affirm the Remainder here to be good. And as to what has been ſaid, that it is the Nature of a Condition to give Benefit only to thoſe who are Privies, and here he in the Remainder was no Privy, &c. Sir, this is not ſo, for he is privy enough, for if the Leſſor had reſerved a Rent out of both Eſtates, the Remainder ſhould be charged with it, and he in the Remainder ſhall have an Action of Waſte, and ſo he is Privy to the Leſſor, and to the particular Eſtate alſo. And as to what has been ſaid touching the Words if William die living the Huſband and Wife, then it ſhall remain to the Defendant, which Word (then) ſhall be intended preſently during the Lives of the Huſband and Wife, ſo as to deſtroy their Eſtate; Sir, the Sentence is not to be ſo underſtood, [a] but it ſhall have a beneficial Conſtruction, viz. that then it ſhall remain as a Remainder ought to do, and that is, to veſt and to be executed after the Death of the Huſband and Wife. As if a Gift in Tail is made to one upon Condition that if he does ſuch an Act, then the Land ſhall remain to his right Heirs, this Word (then) is not ſo to be underſtood as to avoid the Eſtate Tail, and to be executed preſently upon the Performance of the Act, but it muſt be taken in this Manner, viz. that upon the Performance of the Act the Remainder ſhall veſt, and after the Eſtate ended it ſhall be executed. So ſhall it be underſtood here, and then there is no ſuch Repugnancy as hath been alledged, nor is there any Prejudice to a Stranger. But if any Prejudice ſhould ariſe to a Stranger thereby, then the Remainder ſhould not be good. [b] As if it was, that if William die, then the Defendant ſhould have the Land during the Lives of the Huſband and Wife, this ſhould be void in reſpect of the Prejudice to the particular Eſtate, for Things which are done in Prejudice of others ſhall be void. [c] As in the Caſe in 21. Ed. 4. where the King had granted to an Abbot that he ſhould not be Collector when any Tithe was granted per Clerum Angliæ, and the Clergy of the Province of Canterbury granted a Tithe to the King, with a Proviſo, that no Collector returned by the Biſhop ſhould be diſcharged by any Letters Patent of Exemption made by the King, and the Biſhop returned the ſaid Abbot to be Collector, and there it is held that this Grant made by the Clergy in this Point, viz. to charge Perſons exempted is void, becauſe it is prejudicial to others. And ſo the Remainder here ſhould be void, rather than a Stranger ſhould be prejudiced by it. But as I ſaid before, the Limitation of the Remainder is confirmed by the Law to take Effect in Execution after the firſt Eſtate ended, and not otherwiſe, and ſo no Prejudice ariſes to a Stranger. * And if the Remainder had been appointed to commence upon an Impoſſibility precedent, or upon a Thing againſt Law, or upon a Repugnancy, as in [d] Pleſington's Caſe, there the Remainder ſhould be void, for ſuch a Condition ſhall always be void. And ſuch Conditions endorſed upon Obligations make the Obligations ſingle. [e] As if a Feoffment is made upon Condition that the Feoffee nor his Heirs ſhall not take the Profits of the Land, this is a void Condition, and the Feoffment is ſimple. So here if there had been any ſuch Contrariety or Repugnancy, I would readily acknowledge the Remainder to be void, but there is none; wherefore ſeeing it appears to be the Intent of the Leſſor, that the Defendant ſhould have the Term, it is reaſonable that he ſhould have it accordingly, and foraſmuch as neither his Intent nor the Limitation is againſt Law, nor repugnant, it follows that the Remainder is good. But for the Default before alledged in the Pleading the Plaintiff ought to recover.

Hinde Juſtice. It ſeems to me that the Plaintiff ſhall be barred. And as to that which was moved at the Bar, viz. that the Defendant ought to ſhew the Day on which William died, as alſo the Day on which the Survivor of the Huſband and Wife died, Sir, this [f] is not neceſſary, for it is not Matter of Subſtance, but only of Conveyance to the Execution of the Remainder; [g] And therefore a Man does not ſhew the Death of the particular Tenant in a Formedon in Reverter or Remainder, becauſe it is but Conveyance, and not traverſable nor iſſuable; for if the Plaintiff would traverſe the Death, and ſay that they are alive, thereby he would confeſs that he has no Title to the Land during their Lives, and ſo he would deſtroy his own Action; for which Cauſe it is not neceſſary to ſhew the Day; quod fuit conceſſum by all the other Juſtices who argued after him. And as to the other Exceptions, viz. becauſe he has not ſhewn his continual Reſidence ſince the Remainder fell, as well as the Day of his Entry, Sir, the Pleading is good notwithſtanding theſe Exceptions. [h] For the Condition that he ſhall be reſident is ſubſeqent to the Eſtate, and goes in Defeaſance of it, and ſhall be ſhewn by him who ſhall take Benefit by it. [i] For the Law will not force any Man to ſhew that which makes againſt him, and the Condition here makes againſt the Defendant, for which Reaſon he is not compelled by Law to ſhew it. [k] As if one grants to another an Annuity pro conſilio impendendo, the Grantee ſhall have a Writ of Annuity without ſhewing that he has given him Counſel, for the ſhewing thereof is not for his Benefit, and the Denial of Counſel goes in Defeaſance of the Annuity, which ought to be ſhewn by the Defendant, becauſe he ſhall have Benefit from the Defeaſance. [l] So in 15. H. 7. it is held if an Annuity be granted to a Man until he be promoted to a Benefice, he ſhall have a Writ of Annuity, without ſhewing that he is not advanced to a Benefice, for this goes in Defeaſance of the Annuity, which ought to be ſhewn by him that ſhall take Advantage of the Defeaſance; but it is there held, that if he had granted that if the Party ſhould do ſuch a Thing, then he ſhould have an Annuity, there he ought to ſhew the Performance of the Thing in his Count, in order to enable himſelf to have the Annuity, becauſe the Condition precedes the Eſtate and entitles him thereto, and ſo is the Diverſity. Here then the Law would not have compelled the Defendant to ſhew the Condition, and therefore the ſhewing of it is Surpluſage, and might have well been omitted. [m] And then the Incertainty of that which may well be omitted, and which is not material, ſhall not make the Plea bad, for it never was heard that the Incertainty and Imperfectneſs of Surpluſage makes any Plea vicious. For which Reaſon the Plea in Bar is good notwithſtanding the ſaid Exceptions. And as to the Matter itſelf, the Remainder is good. And with Regard to what has been ſaid to the contrary, viz. that the Remainder commences upon Condition, Sir, I deny that, for the Remainder is limited to the Defendant if William die living the Huſband and Wife, which is not a Condition, but a Limitation when the Remainder ſhall commence,

[a] for no Words make a Condition, unleſs ſuch as reſtrain the Thing given, as upon Condition that he ſhall not do ſuch an Act, or the like; but here theſe Words limit the Time when the Remainder ſhall commence, and do not reſtrain the Thing given, and therefore may not be called a Condition, but rather a Limitation. * And if I make a Leaſe for Life upon Condition that if the Leſſee die I may enter, this is only a Limitation of the Time of my Entry, which is void, becauſe it is no more than the Law itſelf ſays, and it is no Condition, becauſe it does not reſtrain the Eſtate. So if I make a Leaſe for Life upon Condition that if the Leſſee does waſt, and I recover the Place waſted, I ſhall enter into it, this is no Condition, becauſe it is no more than the Law ſays; but if it was upon Condition that if I recover in Waſt any Parcel, that I ſhall enter into the whole Land, &c. this is a Condition for that Part in which no Waſt was done, for the Condition is reſtrictive, and goes in Defeaſance of that Part. And the Common Caſe of Fines are, where an Eſtate Tail is, that if it happen the Donee die without Iſſue, that then it ſhall remain to a Stranger, which is not a Condition, but a Limitation of the Time when the Remainder ſhall commence. So in the principal Caſe, it is but a Limitation and an Explanation of the Time when the Remainder ſhall commence; and I do not ſee any Cauſe or Reaſon why I may not make a Remainder to commence and veſt in the midſt of a particular Eſtate, as well as I may at the Beginning or End of a particular Eſtate, for there is no repugnancy, but that it may commence to veſt at any Time during the particular Eſtate; for when the Fee-Simple is in me, I may condition with it as I pleaſe, if it be not contrary to Law, which it is not in our's, or in ſuch like Caſes. But if I make a Leaſe for Life upon Condition that if J. S. pays me 20 l. then I ſhall enter upon the Tenant for Life, and then it ſhall remain, &c. this Remainder is void, becauſe by the Entry the firſt Livery is annulled and defeated; and then there is no particular Eſtate continuing whereupon the Remainder may depend: but here there is no ſuch Matter, for which Reaſon the Remainder ſeems to me to be good. And if it be a Condition, yet the Remainder may commence upon it well enough, ſeeing it is the Will of the Leſſor that it ſhould do ſo, wherefore it ſeems to me that the Plaintiff ſhall be barred.

At another Day Brown Juſtice ſpoke to the ſame Purpoſe. And he argued that the Bar here was good to a common Intent, and that it ſhall be taken that he entered immediately after his Title accrued. And as to the Matter itſelf he argued that the Remainder ſhould be good upon Condition. And if it ſhould not be good upon Condition, he ſaid it ſhould be good to the Defendant as a Grant of the Reverſion; and therefore the Plaintiff ſhould be barred.

Brown J.

Mountague Chief Juſtice to the ſame Purpoſe: As to the Exception which has been taken, viz. that he has not ſhewn his Entry immediately, it ſeems to me that the Bar is to be ſo underſtod, for that is the moſt common Intent. [b] And if a Bar be good to the moſt common Intent, it is ſufficient. [c] As in Aſſize, if the Tenant pleads that his Father was ſeized, and died ſeized, after whoſe Death the Land deſcended to him as Son and Heir, and he entered, this is a good Bar, and yet it may be, and that conſiſtently with the Words of the Bar, that the Father of the Plaintiff abated after the Death of the Father of the Tenant, and died ſeized, and that the Plaintiff is in as Son and Heir, in which Caſe the Tenant may not enter, but this is not to be intended, but the moſt common Intent is, that the Tenant entered immediately after the Death of his Father; ſo ſhall it be here intended that he entered immediately after the Remainder fell. [d] And in 9 Ed. 4. in Debt againſt five Executors, at the Diſtreſs three of them made Default, and the other two appeared, and pleaded a Recovery againſt them two of 300 l. and that they had nothing in their Hands beſides: And Exception was taken to this Plea becauſe as there were five Executors, the two might have abated the firſt Suit, ſo that the Recovery was not duly had; but the Plea was held good, and the Recovery duly had, becauſe it might be that they two only then adminiſtred, in which Caſe the Action was duly brought againſt them two only, and foraſmuch as the moſt common Intent will ſay it was ſo, rather than that they would loſe the Advantage to have abated the Writ, the Plea in Bar was held good; and if it was not ſo, but that the others then adminiſtred with them, the Plaintiff ought to have ſhewn it; and ſo a Plea in Bar, which ſatisfies the common Intent, ſhall always be good. [e] And it is held in 21. Ed. 4. in a Formedon in Deſcender, that if the Tenant pleads a Releaſe of the Demandant without Warranty in Bar, the Plea is good, and yet it may be that the Releaſe was made by the Demandant in the Life of his Father, in which Caſe the Iſſue ſhall not be barred; but if it be ſo, the Demandant ought to ſhew it by way of Replication, or elſe it ſhall be taken that he made it after the Death of his Father. Wherefore a Bar that is certain to a common Intent is good. So in our Caſe it ſhall be intended that the Defendant entered immediately after the Death of the particular Tenants. But it is to be noted always for a general Rule, that if he who pleads in Bar is preſcribed to a certain Time he ought to ſhew the Day of his Act certainly; [f] as he who pleads in Bar by Entry for Mortmain ought to ſhew the certain Time of his Entry, ſo that it may appear to be within the Year. So if one juſtifies for common between Lammas and Candlemas, he ought to ſhew in certain the Time of his uſing it, ſo that it may appear to be done between that Time. And ſo he who juſtifies by Licence, by Warrant, or by Authority, ought always to ſhew the certain Time of his Juſtification. But he who pleads in the negative has no Need to plead certainly. [g] But he that pleads in Abatement of the Writ, or pleads a Plea after the laſt Continuance, ought to plead it certainly; and theſe are obſerved as Principles in our Law, and therefore I have ſhewn them briefly without multiplying Caſes upon them, becauſe they need not much Proof, being ſo well known. And further it ſeems to me here, that this is no Condition, for the Words are, ſi ipſe vellet inhabitare, &c. and this Word (vellet) is not conditional, but is of the ſame Effect as if it had been ſaid, if he pleaſes; and if it had been ſo expreſſed, then the Act would have been been referred to his free Election and Choice to do it or not, without any Reſtraint or Prejudice; and if it is without Reſtraint or Prejudice, then it is quite contrary to the Nature of a Condition, which is always compulſive, and is attended with ſome Prejudice to the Party if it is not performed. And here in our Caſe the Act is referred to his Will and Election, ſo that he may either do it or not without being prejudiced by it, but on the contrary he ſhall receive Benefit from it in either Caſe, which is directly oppoſite to the Nature of a Condition, and therefore it cannot be a Condition; and if it is not a Condition, then the Want of ſhewing the Time of his Entry ſhall not make the Plea vicious, becauſe it is not material whether he is reſident or not. And ſuppoſe it was a Condition, yet it cannot be denied but that it is [a] ſubſequent to the Eſtate, and goes in Defeaſance thereof, and therefore the Party, who ought to have Benefit by the Breach of the Condition, ought to ſhew it. As if the Condition enlarges the Eſtate, then the Defendant ought to ſhew it, becauſe he takes Benefit by the Enlargement. But inaſmuch as the Condition goes in Defeaſance of it, he that ſhall take Benefit by the Defeaſance ought to ſhew it, and that is the Plaintiff; for which Reaſon the Defendant was not compellable to ſhew it, and although he has ſhewn it, and that imperfectly, when it might have been well omitted, yet that is not material, ſeeing it is but Surpluſage as hath been ſaid; wherefore this makes an end of all the Incertainty. And alſo if it was a Condition, yet the Plaintiff has not enabled himſelf to take Benefit of it, (for as hath been ſaid) [c] none but Privies ſhall take Benefit of a Condition by Entry, by the common Law. And now by the Statute of 32. H. 8. cap. 34. the Grantees and Patentees [d] of the King ſhall alſo take Advantage of Conditions. And here the Plaintiff has not conveyed to himſelf a Capacity to take Benefit of the Condition, as Privy, nor as Grantee or Patentee of the King, nor in any other Manner. For the Defendant has pleaded in Bar without acknowledging the Reverſion in the Plaintiff, and the Plaintiff has not made himſelf any Title to the Land, nor has he enabled himſelf any Way to take Advantage of the Condition, but he has demurred generally upon the Bar, in which Caſe he does not appear by the Record to be any other than a meer Stranger, and then he ſhall not take Benefit of the Condition, nor of the incertain Pleading thereof; for which Reaſon there ſeems to be no ſort of Colour for the Plaintiff to take Advantage of the Condition. And ſo the Pleading is not good to prove him able to take Benefit of the Condition, (if it had been a Condition, which it is not, as I have ſaid before). But if it was a Condition then I would readily admit that it ought to be taken according to the Intent of it, that he ſhould be reſident all the Term, viz. from the Beginning, which is, from the Time that the Remainder fell, until the Death of the Defendant. [e] As if I am bound to perform the Covenants in ſuch an Indenture, all the Covenants are underſtood thereby. [f] Or if I am bound that my Feoffees ſhall make an Eſtate, it is to be intended that all my Feoffees ſhall make it. [g] So that Conditions have a reaſonable Intendment; and if ſometimes he be abſent from thence, and his Family be there, this ſhall be a Performance of the Condition; for our Law conſtrues all Things with Reaſon. But (as it ſeems to me) it is no condition, and therefore he is not forced to ſhew the certain Time of his Entry, nor that he has been always reſident; and if it is a Condition, yet it is ſubſequent, and the Incertainty is not material, and alſo the Plaintiff is not enabled as Privy or otherwiſe to take Benefit of it, for which Reaſon the Plea in Bar is good enough. And further the Remainder ſeems to be good, for in the firſt Place it appears to me that there is not any Condition here whereupon the Remainder depends, but that it is a Limitation and an Appointment of the Time when the Remainder ſhall veſt, and in this Point I agree in Opinion with my Brother Hinde. But even admitting it to be a Condition, or call it a Limitation, or give it what other Term you pleaſe, yet it ſeems to me that the Remainder is good; for every Man who is lawful Owner of any Land, may give it to what Perſon, in what manner, and at what Time he pleaſes, ſo that his Gift be not contrary to Law, nor repugnant. And here it ſeems to me that the Form of his Gift is not contrary to Law. [h] And therefore in 10. Ed. 3. a Man made a Leaſe for Years to J. S. and in Surety of his Term he made him a Charter of Feoffment upon Condition that if the Leſſee was diſturbed within the Term, that then he ſhould hold the Tenements to him and to his Heirs, and J. S. was diſturbed, and afterwards ouſted, and he brought an Aſſize, and it was awarded that he ſhould recover; which proves that a Freehold may paſs by a Conditon well enough, where the Condition was expreſſed at the Time of the Livery. And by the Reaſon of this Caſe a Man may make as many Remainders as he will to commence upon the like Condition, and although in the one Caſe he is immediately privy, and not in the other Caſe, this is no Matter to ſtay the Remainder, for his Livery ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt himſelf. And when I was at the Bar, I was of Counſel with one Mr. [i] Melton, and the Caſe was thus, that a Fine was levied ſur grant & render, whereby the Conuſee granted and rendered to the Conuſor the Tenements in Tail upon Condition that the Conuſor and his Heirs of, &c. ſhould bear the Standard of the Conuſee when he went to Battle, and if the Conuſor or his Heirs failed to do it, then the Land ſhould remain to a Stranger; and I moved the Caſe then to the Court, and it was greatly wondered that the Fine [k] upon Condition was received: But Fitzherbert then held the Remainder good, and they did not wonder at it, nor held it any great Queſtion but that it might commence upon Condition. So a Remainder may be to marry [l] my Daughter, or upon any other lawful Condition [m] precedent. But if the Condition is to kill a Man, or the like, or upon a Condition [n] impoſſible, there the Remainder ſhall not be good, for a Condition unlawful or impoſſible is of no Effect to gain any Thing by the doing of it in our Law. And in Pleſington's Caſe it is held, that an Eſtate of Freehold might commence upon Condition, but the Reaſon why he had not the Freehold upon the Performance of the Condition was for the Repugnancy. And ſo if a Gift in Tail is made upon Condition that if the Donee alien it ſhall remain to another, [a] this is repugnant, for when he has aliened to a Stranger, it is contrary to the Alienation to remain over. [b] But as to Remainders, we have a Learning in our Law that a Remainder ought to have án Eſtate precedent. [c] And therefore if a Leaſe for Life is made to Monk, the Remainder in Fee, this Remainder is void, becauſe the Monk had not Capacity to take the Eſtate for Life, ſo that the Eſtate which precedes the Remainder is void, and then ex conſequente the Remainder is void. And alſo we have another Learning touching Remainders, viz. that although there be an Eſtate precedent, yet if the Thing was not in eſſe before, the Remainder ſhall be void. [d] As if I grant a Rent out of my Land, the Remainder in Fee, this is a void Remainder, becauſe the Rent was not in eſſe before. And as to what has been ſaid, that the Remainder did not paſs out of the Leſſor preſently by the Livery, Sir, I abſolutely deny this, for it paſſed out of the Leſſor, altho' it did not veſt in the Defendant until the Death of William, and it was in Abeyance until the Performance of the Condition, in reſpect of the Poſſibility that it might be performed. [e] As if Land be given to a Man that has a Wife, and to another Woman that has a Huſband, and to the Heirs of their two Bodies begotten, the Fee-Tail paſſes out of the Donor preſently for the Poſſibility there is that they may intermarry, for if the Wife of the Man Donee, and the Huſband of the Woman Donee die, then they may well marry, and in the mean Time the Inheritance, viz. the Tail, ſhall be in Abeyance. So here the Remainder paſſed preſently out of the Leſſor upon the Poſſibility to be afterwards performed, and was in Abeyance until the Death of William. Upon the whole therefore I do not ſee any Reaſon why the Remainder ſhould not be good, for it is not contrary to Law, nor repugnant, and there is an Eſtate precedent, and the Thing was in eſſe before, and it paſſed by the Death of William, for which Reaſon the Remainder is good, and the Pleading alſo. And therefore the Plaintiff ſhall be barred.

At which Day here came as well the aforeſaid Matthias as the aforeſaid Peter by their Attornies aforeſaid, whereupon the Plea of the aforeſaid Peter by him above pleaded being ſeen, and by the Juſtices here more fully underſtood, it ſeems to the Court of the King here that the ſaid Plea is good and ſufficient in Law to preclude the aforeſaid Matthias from having his Action aforeſaid againſt the ſaid Peter in Form aforeſaid. Therefore it is conſidered that the aforeſaid Matthias take nothing by his Writ aforeſaid, but be in Mercy for his falſe Claim therein. And that the aforeſaid Peter go thereof without Day, &c.

The Judgment.

A Report of a Caſe argued in the Exchequer before the Barons of the Exchequer, in Eaſter Term in the fourth Year of the Reign of King Edward the Sixth, between Richard Platt, Adminiſtrator of the Goods of Henry Platt, Plaintiff and William Lock and John Ayliff Knights, late Sheriffs of London and Keepers of the Goal of Ludgate, Defendants, in a Bill of Debt brought by the Plaintiff againſt the Defendants. And the Record is entered in Hillary Term 4. Ed. 6. Rot. 4.

The CASE. A Priſoner in Ludgate in Execution for Debt goes into Southwark with a Servant of the Keeper, it is an Eſcape; and the Adminiſtrator of the Creditor may recover againſt the Sheriffs of London by Bill of Debt. Vide Latch, 168.

THE Caſe was thus. Richard Platt demanded by his Bill 94 l. 2 s. 5 d. and counted that Henry Platt the Inteſtate recovered the ſaid Sum in Guildhall in London, by a Plaint of Debt brought upon an Obligation againſt one John Goodlad, then being a Priſoner in Ludgate, and that it was awarded that the ſaid Goodlad ſhould remain in Ludgate in Execution for the ſaid Sum, who continued there as Priſoner until the Death of the Inteſtate, and afterwards, and after the Adminiſtration committed to the Plaintiff, until the ſecond Day of April in the third Year of the Reign of the preſent King, at which Day the Defendants being Sheriffs of London and Keepers of the ſaid Goal permitted the ſaid Goodlad to go at large into Southwark in the County of Surry the Plaintiff not being ſatisfied, by which an Action accrued to him. And the Defendants traverſed that they did not permit him to go at large, and upon this they were at Iſſue. And it was given in Evidence for the Plaintiff to the Jurors, that the ſaid Goodlad was in Southwark in Manner and Form as the Plaintiff had declared. And on the other Side, it was given in Evidence for the Defendants, that at the ſaid Time of the Eſcape ſuppoſed, one Thomas Fierman, a Servant to Roger Holt Keeper of the Goal of Ludgate, was attending upon the ſaid Goodlad by the Command of the ſaid Roger Holt, for which Reaſon the Defendants ſaid that Goodlad was not at large in Manner and Form, &c. And upon this Evidence the Plaintiff demurred in Judgment. And it was ſaid for the Defendants by their Counſel, that a Bill of Debt does not lie againſt them, becauſe the Statute 1. R. 2. cap. 12. gives the Action againſt the Warden of the Fleet, who is an Officer of a certain Place, and therefore ſuch Action given againſt the Officer of a peculiar Place ſhall not be extended by Equity to others, eſpecially where the Statute is penal. And further as to the Eſcape it was ſaid, that inaſmuch as the Officer of the Sheriffs was with the Priſoner, although he was in another County, yet this is a Reſtraint of his Liberty, ſo that he was always in Impriſonment. And the Plaintiff is concluded to ſay the contrary but that he was impriſoned and in Cuſtody in Surry, for the Bill of Debt is brought againſt the Defendants for ſuffering him to eſcape there, and he could not eſcape there if he was not impriſoned there; for as Atkins ſaid, the End of his Impriſonment is the Beginning of his Liberty, which Liberty is the Eſcape, ſo that the Impriſonment and the Eſcape are all at one Inſtant, and therefore the Party who has brought his Bill for the Eſcape in Surry, and thereby has admitted him to be lawfully impriſoned and detained in Surry by the Sheriffs of London, has not proved that he eſcaped there, for if he was once impriſoned there he was always, always impriſoned there, for the ſervant of the Goaler, who was the Servant of the Sheriff, was with him by Baſton always. And therefore the Action does not lie, nor is it an Eſcape.

E contra for the Plaintiff.

On the contrary it was argued, that the Action lies by the common Law, and if not, yet that it lies by the Statute: for the Effect of every Suit implies in itſelf three Things, firſt, that the Truth of the Matter be ſhewn to the Judge, and this is the Duty of the Party to do; ſecondly, that Judgment be had to recover, and to have Execution awarded, which belongs to the Judge to give; thirdly, that Execution be done by taking the body of the Defendant, and detaining it in Priſon, or otherwiſe, and this is the Buſineſs of the Officer; and if any of theſe three Things is not obſerved, the Order of the Suit is confounded, and he is to be corrected by whoſe Default ſuch Confuſion is occaſioned. And here, inaſmuch as the Party has done his Duty in ſhewing the Truth, and the Judge his Duty in giving the Judgment, and awarding Execution, and the Officer has not done his Duty in detaining the Body in Priſon, it is reaſonable that the Plaintiff and the Judge, who have well diſcharged their Duty, ſhould be excuſed, and that the Officer, who has offended, ſhould be puniſhed by being made reſponſible to the Plaintiff for the Loſs he has ſuſtained. [a] For where the Defendant is once impriſoned upon Execution, and eſcapes, the Plaintiff ſhall never have Remedy againſt him again, nor ſhall the Goaler ever retake him, becauſe he was once at large, and ſo diſcharged for that Time. [b] And if a perſonal Thing is once in Suſpence, or the Perſon of a Man once diſcharged for a perſonal Thing it is a Diſcharge for ever. [c] As if the Debtee makes the Debtor and another, who ſurvives the Debtor, his Executors, yet the Debt is extinct for ever, cauſâ quâ ſupra. Wherefore here inaſmuch as after the Eſcape the Plaintiff ſhall not have another Execution, ſo that he is without Remedy againſt the Defendant in the firſt Suit, the common Law, which is no other than common Reaſon, provides that the Plaintiff ſhall have an Action of Debt againſt the Goaler, by whoſe Default the Execution of the Plaintiff was diſcharged; and if it was otherwiſe the common Law would be greatly defective in this Point, which it is not. [d] And therefore in 45. Ed. 3. it appears that one had recovered Damages to the Value of 10 l. in Court of Piepowders of a Priory dative and removeable, and the Defendant was committed to the Cuſtody of the Prior in Execution for it, who let him eſcape, upon which the Plaintiff brought an Action of Debt for the 10 l. againſt the ſaid Prior, who was dative and removeable, and againſt the Abbot alſo who was his Sovereign, and becauſe the Prior, who was no more than one of the Monks, was named with the Abbot, where he could not be a Debtor, the Writ was abated, for it ought to have been brought only againſt the Abbot; by which it ſeems that if the Prior had been omitted in the Writ, the Writ would have been maintainable enough; and from hence it appears [e] that the Action lay in ſuch Caſe by the Courſe of the common Law, for this Caſe was before the Statute of Rich. 2. And ſo it ſeems upon the Matter that the Action was maintainable, although there was no Contract between them. [f] For upon a Liberate delivered to the Clerk of the Hanaper, who has Aſſets in his Hands, an Action of Debt lies againſt him, as appears by 2. H. 7. and yet there is no Contract between them, nor any Privity in Words; and ſo is it in many other like Caſes, as well as in the Caſe here; and therefore the Statute of Rich. 2. was made in Affirmance of the common Law. But although the Action ſhould not be maintainable by the common Law, and although the Statute was not made in Affirmance of the common Law, but was a new Ordinance, yet the Bill ſhall be maintainable by Equity of the Statute of Rich. 2. notwithſtanding the Statute does not give the Action by expreſs Words againſt any other than the Warden of the Fleet, for although it is penal againſt the Warden, yet it is beneficial to all others, and therefore ſhall be extended by Equity, for every Statute is penal to ſome Body. But inaſmuch as the taking it by Equity ſhall be more beneficial than prejudicial to the greater Number of Men, this is the Reaſon why it may be extended by Equity by the Rules of Law. [g] And therefore the Statute de circumſpecte agatis which ſays, uſe yourſelves circumſpectly in all Matters concerning the Biſhop of Norwich and his Clergy, is nevertheleſs extended to all other Biſhops. [h] And ſo the Statute which ſaith, that the Executor who firſt comes by Diſtreſs ſhall anſwer, is extended by Equity to Adminiſtrators. From whence we may ſee, that a Statute, which ſpeaks of a Perſon or Officer of a particular Place, ſhall be extended by Equity to others. [i] And ſo this Statute here, which gives an Action of Debt againſt the Warden of the Fleet, ſhall be extended to other Goalers and Officers. [k] And in 9. H. 6. an Action of Debt was brought againſt the Mayor of the Staple for letting one in Execution eſcape, and there by Award he was put to anſwer to the Writ; and in Excuſe of himſelf he ſaid that the Party was taken and in Cuſtody by force of a Plaint, abſque hoc that he was impriſoned by Way of Execution; by which it appears that an Action of Debt upon an Eſcape lay againſt another Officer than the Warden of the Fleet by Equity of the Statute, if any will ſay that it lay not by the common Law. And the ſame Statute of Rich. 2. is taken by Equity in another Point, viz. where it ordains, that the Warden of the Fleet ſhall not ſuffer any one who is in Execution to go out of the Priſon by Mainprize, Bail, or Baſton, it is taken by Equity of this Statute, that if any other Goaler lets ſuch an one, who is in Execution, go out of the Priſon by Mainprize, Bail, or Baſton, that this ſhall be an Eſcape. But notwithſtanding that this extends to all other Goalers as fully as if it had been expreſsly mentioned, [l] yet the Sheriffs of London uſe to let ſuch go at large by Baſton in any Place within their Juriſdiction, and this ſhall not be adjudged an Eſcape in them, as it ſhall be in the Warden of the Fleet, and the Reaſon of this is not becauſe the Statute or the Equity of it does not extend to them, but becauſe they claim a Preſcription in this Point, and all their Cuſtoms and Preſcriptions are [m] confirmed by Statutes, for which Reaſon they may preſcribe againſt the Equity and Words of Statutes that are contrary to their Cuſtoms and Preſcriptions; as againſt the Statute of Silva cædua, and ſo they may preſcribe to hold a Leet at other Times than the Statute appoints, and the like; and ſo they may preſcribe to let thoſe who are in Execution go at large within their Liberty by Baſton; but others ſhall be bound by the Equity of the ſaid Statute. And then inaſmuch as this Statute, which ſpeaks only of the Warden of the Fleet, ſhall be extended by Equity to other Officers in Point of Eſcape, ſo ſhall it be extended in Point of Action to charge other Officers, and therefore the Action ſhall be maintainable againſt the Sheriffs of London. And ſome argued that the Action ſhould be maintainable againſt them by the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 11. which gives an Action of Debt againſt the Goaler, who lets one at large that was committed to Priſon by Auditors for the Arrears of Account; but it was ſaid, that whether it be maintainable by the Common Law, or by the one Statute or the other, certain it is that the Action lies; and here the Action is confeſſed to be maintainable, and is admitted by the Defendants, for they have demurred in Judgment upon the Evidence, whether it be an Eſcape or no; whereby it is not to be now diſputed whether or no the Bill lies. And as to the Eſcape, it was argued by the Counſel for the Plaintiff, and by all the Barons of the Exchequer, that this is an Eſcape, and that he was out of Cuſtody by coming into Surry, for no Man may be lawfully impriſoned or in Cuſtody without a Keeper. [a] For if a Woman is Warden of the Fleet, and one impriſoned in the Fleet marries her, it is an Eſcape in the Woman, (as Chomley Chief Baron ſaid) and the Law adjudges the Priſoner to be at large, for he cannot be lawfully impriſoned but under a Keeper, and he cannot be under the Cuſtody of his Wife, for which Reaſon the Law muſt neceſſarily adjudge him to be at large. [b] So (he ſaid) if the Warden of the Fleet, who hath his Office in Fee, die ſeized, his Son and Heir being then impriſoned there, and the Office deſcends to him being in Priſon, the Law will adjudge him to be out of Priſon, although he has Fetters upon him, becauſe he cannot be his own Priſoner; ſo that no Man may lawfully be detained in Priſon without a Goaler or Keeper. [c] But here when the Priſoner came into Surry, he had no Goaler nor Keeper, as a Priſoner for the firſt Duty, for he that waited upon him by Baſton in the County of Surry could not be called a Servant to the Sheriff of London, who is an Officer of another County, [d] for the Power of a Sheriff does not extend beyond his County, and he ſhall only be adjudged a Sheriff and Officer within his County, and not elſewhere. [e] And therefore it is held in 13. Ed. 4. that if a Juſtice of Peace in one County purſues a Man into another County for a Felony done in the County where he is Juſtice, and takes him in the other County, he is his Priſoner in the County where he takes him, and there he ought to impriſon him, and he cannot carry him to a Goal in the County where he committed the Felony, for he is not his Priſoner there; for the Purſuit in ſuch Caſe is not material, and therefore he has no more to do in the County where he took him than a private Perſon has. By which it is proved, that a Juſtice of Peace in one County has no Authority in another County; no more has a Sheriff, for if he ſhould have Power in another County, then there would be two ſeveral Sheriffs in one ſame County, whereas in this Realm there are divers Authorities, and none may exceed his Limits and Bounds. [f] And therefore if the Marſhal holds Plea of a Thing done out of the Verge, [g] or the Admiral of a Thing done within the Body of a County, it ſhall be void, for their Authority extends to a certain Place, and within a certain Precinct, and not elſewhere, and if he who takes Sanctuary goes out, any one may take him, for he is not priviledged out of it, ſo that the Precinct of the Liberty may never be exceeded. And here the Sheriff has nothing to do in any Place but in London, and therefore when the Priſoner went out of the Liberty of London, at that Inſtant he was at large. And true it is that the End of the Impriſonment is the Beginning of the Eſcape, but yet it does not follow that he was in Cuſtody in Surry, as hath been ſaid, for the laſt Inſtant of Time when he was in the Liberty of London was the End of his Impriſonment, and the firſt Inſtant of Time when he came into Surry was the Beginning of the Eſcape, ſo that it is true that the End of his Impriſonment was the Beginning of the Eſcape, and yet he was not impriſoned in Surry. And if the Sheriff lets one go at large in London, and he goes into divers other Counties, the Party may have an Action of Debt againſt the Sheriff in every County where he who is let at large ſhall go; for the Words are true, that he ſuffered the Priſoner to go at large in every [h] County he came into. [i] And in 30. H. 6. a Man brought an Action of Debt againſt the Goaler of the Cinque Ports for letting one who was condemned in Debt and committed to his Cuſtody within the Cinque Ports go at large into London, and the Writ was adjudged good, and the Plaintiff recovered; for the Words are true, that he ſuffered him to go at large in all the Counties; and the ſame Exception was taken there as is here, for there it was ſaid that he could not be impriſoned for the Debt out of the Cinque Ports, and then the Goaler could not let him go out of Priſon at London, becauſe he was not impriſoned in London; but it was there anſwered that the Words are, quod permiſit ipſum ire ad largum in London, and this was true, for he let him go at large in all the Counties and Places where he was at large; and therefore it was adjudged ut ſupra. The ſame Reaſon holds Place in our principal Caſe. [k] But if the Sheriff had brought the Priſoner here by Force of the King's Writ or Command, or had ſent him here by Baſton, although he had come through divers other Counties, yet he ſhould be ſuppoſed to be in the Cuſtody of the firſt Sheriff continually, becauſe the Sheriff had Authority from the King to do it, by Reaſon of which Authority he ſhall be adjudged the Priſoner of the ſame Sheriff in every County; and by this Means there may be two Sheriffs in one County, viz. one to a ſpecial Intent, and the other to all general Intents and Purpoſes. But here it is entirely his own Folly, voluntarily to ſuffer him to go into another County. But if he had eſcaped, and the Sheriff having the View had made freſh Suit after him, and had taken him in Surry, there perhaps he ſhould have been his Priſoner in Surry, and he might have juſtified the taking of him there, notwithſtanding he is not Sheriff there. drives the Cattle out of the Land, the Lord may purſue them within the View, and take them in whoſeſoever Land they are, and yet now they are out of his Authority, but the Purſuit and the Poſſeſſion afterwards ſhall be adjudged as a continual Poſſeſſion when it is for Rent Service: But otherwiſe it is for Damage feaſant; and ſo is the Diverſity, as it is held in 16. Ed. 4. But in our Caſe there was no ſuch involuntary Eſcape, but a voluntary Folly, by Reaſon whereof he was out of Cuſtody when he came into Surry, and when the Servant by Baſton waited upon him, this was an Impriſonment, for every Reſtraint of Liberty is an Impriſonment, and the Party might have had an Action of falſe Impriſonment againſt him for it; for he was not in his Cuſtody as Servant of the Sheriff of London, nor was lawfully detained, but wrongfully impriſoned there, for which Reaſon he might have had a Writ of falſe Impriſonment well enough; and therefore he ſhall be adjudged to be let at large, and ſo the Plaintiff ought to recover. And afterwards it was awarded that the Plaintiff ſhould recover. And the Judgment was as follows:

The Judgment. Whereupon all and ſingular the Premiſſes being ſeen and read by the Barons aforeſaid, and fully underſtood, it is conſidered by the ſame Barons that the aforeſaid Richard Platt recover againſt the aforeſaid William Lock and John Ayliff his Debt aforeſaid of 94 l. 2 s. 5 d. aforeſaid, and his Damages aforeſaid, as well by Reaſon of the unjuſt detaining of the Debt aforeſaid, as for his Coſts, Charges, and Expences laid out in this Behalf about his Suit aforeſaid, taxed by the ſame Barons at 100 s. which ſaid Sums amount in the whole to the Sum of 99 l. 2 s. 5 d. And that the aforeſaid William Lock and John Ayliff be in Mercy of the Lord the King, &c.

Bar. And the aforeſaid Elizabeth Tailbois by John Poley her Attorney comes and defends the Force and Injury when, &c. And as to the coming with Force and Arms, ſays that ſhe is not guilty thereof. And of this ſhe puts herſelf upon the Country; and the aforeſaid Thomas Wimbiſh and Elizabeth his Wife do the like. And as to the Reſidue of the Treſpaſs aforeſaid above ſuppoſed to be done, the ſame Elizabeth Tailbois ſays, that the aforeſaid Thomas and Elizabeth his Wife their Action aforeſaid againſt her ought not to have, becauſe ſhe ſays, that the Cloſe aforeſaid, and alſo the Places in which the Treſpaſs aforeſaid is ſuppoſed to be done are, and at the aforeſaid Time of the Treſpaſs aforeſaid above ſuppoſed to be done were, 40 Acres of Meadow, and 206 Acres of Paſture, with the Appurtenances in Golthough aforeſaid, which ſaid 40 Acres of Meadow,

And the aforeſaid Thomas Burgh, Robert Tirwhit, Numan Markenfield, and Henry Gaſcoign ſurvived them, and held themſelves in the ſame Manor with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. and were thereof ſeized in their Demeſn as of Fee to the ſame Uſes by Right of Survivorſhip, &c. at and until the aforeſaid fourth Day of February in the twenty-ſeventh Year of the ſaid late Lord the King aboveſaid, on which Day the aforeſaid George Tailbois and Elizabeth then his Wife were ſeized of the ſame Manor with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. in their Demeſn as of Fee Tail to them and the Heirs of their Bodies between them lawfully begotten, as is aforeſaid. And the ſaid George and Elizabeth his Wife being ſo ſeized thereof, the ſame George afterwards, and before the aforeſaid Time when, &c. at Golthough aforeſaid, of ſuch his Eſtate of and in the aforeſaid Manor with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. died ſeized, and the aforeſaid Elizabeth Tailbois now Defendant ſurvived the ſaid George, and held herſelf in the ſame Manor with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. and was thereof ſole ſeized in her Demeſn as of Fee Tail (as is aforeſaid) by Right of Survivorſhip. And the aforeſaid Elizabeth Tailbois being ſo ſeized of the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. one William Tailbois Clerk the fifth Day of July in the thirty-third Year of the Reign of the ſaid late Lord the King, ſued forth of the Court of Chancery of the ſaid late Lord the King, (the ſame Chancery then being at Weſtminſter in the County of Middleſex) a certain Writ original of the ſaid late Lord the King in Form of a Gift in Deſcender againſt the ſame Elizabeth Tailbois now Defendant, by the Name of Elizabeth Tailbois Widow, concerning the aforeſaid Manor of Golthough with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. directed to the then Sheriff of Lincoln, by which ſaid Writ the ſame late Lord the King commanded the ſame then Sheriff of Lincoln to command the ſame Elizabeth Tailbois, that juſtly and without Delay ſhe ſhould render to the aforeſaid William Tailbois the aforeſaid Manor with the Appurtenances, which John Tailbois of Stalingburgh, John Fulmerley, John Turney, Henry Morley, and Lawrence Moine gave to Walter Tailbois Eſquire, and Alice his Wife, and to the Heirs Males of the ſaid Walter of the Body of Alice begotten, and which after the Death of the aforeſaid Walter and Alice, and William Son and Heir of the ſame Walter and Alice, and Robert Son and Heir of the ſame William, and George Son and Heir of the ſame Robert, and Gilbert Son and Heir of the ſame George the Son of Robert, and George Son and Heir of the ſame Gilbert, and Robert Brother and Heir of the ſame George the Son of Gilbert, ought to deſcend, according to the Form of the Gift aforeſaid, to the aforeſaid William Brother of the aforeſaid Gilbert the Son of George the Son of Robert, and Couſin and Heir Male of the ſaid Robert Brother of the ſaid George the Son of Gilbert, as he ſaid: And unleſs ſhe ſhould do this, and the aforeſaid William Tailbois ſhould make him the then Sheriff ſecure of proſecuting his Claim, that the ſame then Sheriff ſhould ſummon by good Summoners the aforeſaid Elizabeth, that ſhe might be before the Juſtices of the ſaid late Lord the King at Weſtminſter from the Day of St. Michael in fifteen Days then next coming, to ſhew wherefore ſhe did not do it. And that he ſhould have then there the Summoners and that Writ. At which ſaid fifteen Days of St. Michael, before John Baldwin Knight and his Companions then Juſtices of the ſaid late King of the Bench at Weſtminſter aforeſaid, came as well the aforeſaid William Tailbois by George Pullen his Attorney, as the aforeſaid Elizabeth Tailbois by Edward Bohun her Attorney, and Robert Tirwhit Eſquire then Sheriff of the County aforeſaid returned the Writ aforeſaid to him in Form aforeſaid directed in every Thing ſerved and executed, to wit, that the aforeſaid William Tailbois had found to the ſame then Sheriff Pledges of proſecuting that Writ, to wit, John Doe and Richard Roe: And that the aforeſaid Elizabeth Tailbois was ſummoned by Richard Fen and Henry Den. Whereupon the aforeſaid William Tailbois Clerk declaring againſt the aforeſaid Elizabeth Tailbois late Wife of the aforeſaid George the Grandfather, upon the Writ aforeſaid by the aforeſaid George Pullen his Attorney, demanded againſt the ſame Elizabeth the aforeſaid Manor of Golthough with the Appurtenances, which John Tailbois of Stalingburgh, John Fulmerley, John Turney, Henry Morley, and Lawrence Moigne gave to Walter Tailbois Eſquire and Alice his Wife, and to the Heirs Males of the ſaid Walter of the Body of the ſaid Alice begotten, and which after the Death of the aforeſaid Walter and Alice, and William Son and Heir of the ſame

Walter

Walter and Alice, and Robert Son and Heir of the ſame William, and George Son and Heir of the ſame Robert, and Gilbert Son and Heir of the ſame George the Son of Robert, and George Son and Heir of the ſame Gilbert, and Robert Brother and Heir of the ſame George the Son of Gilbert, ought to deſcend, according to the Form of the Gift aforeſaid, to the aforeſaid William Brother of the aforeſaid Gilbert the Son of George the Son of Robert, and Couſin and Heir Male of the ſaid Robert the Brother of the ſaid George the Son of Gilbert, &c. And whereupon he ſaid, that the aforeſaid John Tailbois, John Fulmerley, John Turney, Henry and Laurence gave the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances to the aforeſaid Walter and Alice, and to the Heirs Males of the ſaid Walter of the Body of the ſaid Alice begotten in Form aforeſaid, by which Gift they the ſame Walter and Alice were thereof ſeized in their Demeſn as of Fee and Right, by Form, &c. in Time of Peace, in the Time of the Lord Henry late King of England the Sixth from the Conqueſt, taking thereof Explees to the Value, &c. And from the ſaid Walter and Alice the Right deſcended by Form, &c. to one William as Son and Heir, &c. And from that William the Right deſcended by Form, &c. to one Robert as Son and Heir, &c. And from that Robert the Right deſcended by Form, &c. to one George as Son and Heir, &c. And from that George the Right deſcended by Form, &c. to one Gilbert as Son and Heir, &c. And from that Gilbert the Right deſcended by Form, &c. to one George as Son and Heir, &c. And from that George the Son of Gilbert, becauſe he died without Heir Male of his Body begotten, the Right deſcended by Form, &c. to one Robert as Brother and Heir, &c. And from that Robert the Brother of George the Son of Gilbert, becauſe he died without Heir Male of his Body begotten, the Right deſcended by Form, &c. to that William who then demanded as Brother and Heir, &c. And that after the Death, &c. And thereupon he brought Suit, &c. And the aforeſaid Elizabeth by Edward Bohun her Attorney then came and defended her Right, when, &c. and ſaid that ſhe could not deny the aforeſaid Action of the aforeſaid William then Demandant, nor could ſay but the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances was the Right of the ſaid William then Demandant, nor could ſay but the aforeſaid John Tailbois, John Fulmerley, John Turney, Henry Morley, and Laurence Moign gave the ſaid Manor with the Appurtenances to the aforeſaid Walter and Alice, and to the Heirs Males of the ſaid Walter of the Body of the ſaid Alice begotten, as the aforeſaid William then Demandant by his Writ and Declaration aforeſaid above ſuppoſed. And becauſe the Juſtices of the Bench aforeſaid would then adviſe of and upon the Premiſſes before they gave Judgment thereon, Day was given as well to the aforeſaid Walter then Demandant, as to the aforeſaid Elizabeth then Tenant, before the aforeſaid Juſtices of the Bench here at Weſtminſter, on the Octave of St. Hillary then next coming, to hear their Judgment thereon, becauſe the ſame Juſtices thereof then, &c. At which ſaid Octave of St. Hillary before the aforeſaid John Baldwin and his Companions Juſtices of the ſaid late Lord the King then of the Bench at Weſtminſter aforeſaid, came as well the aforeſaid William Tailbois the Demandant, as the aforeſaid Elizabeth Tailbois then Tenant by their Attornies aforeſaid, whereupon the Premiſſes being ſeen and by the ſame Juſtices more fully underſtood, it was conſidered in the ſame Court of the ſaid late Lord the King of the Bench aforeſaid at Weſtminſter aforeſaid, that the aforeſaid William Tailbois then Demandant ſhould recover his Seizin againſt the aforeſaid Elizabeth of the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances. And that the ſaid Elizabeth ſhould be nothing in Mercy, [a] becauſe ſhe came the firſt Day by Summons, &c. as by the Record of the Recovery aforeſaid here remaining in Court more fully appears. And further the aforeſaid Thomas Wimbiſh and Elizabeth his Wife by proteſting that the aforeſaid William Tailbois was not Couſin and Heir Male of the aforeſaid Walter Tailbois Eſquire of the Body of the aforeſaid Alice his Wife begotten, for Plea further ſay, that the Recovery aforeſaid of the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. in Manner and Form aforeſaid, was had by Covin between the aforeſaid William Tailbois and the ſaid Elizabeth Tailbois now Defendant, without the Conſent or Aſſent of them the ſaid Thomas Wimbiſh and Elizabeth his Wife or either of them. And moreover the aforeſaid Thomas Wimbiſh and Elizabeth his Wife ſay, that ſhe the ſame Elizabeth now Wife of the aforeſaid Thomas Wimbiſh, at the Time of obtaining the Writ original aforeſaid of the aforeſaid William Tailbois to wit, the aforeſaid fifth Day of July in the thirty-third Year of the Reign of the ſaid late Lord the King aboveſaid, and at the Time of the Judgment aforeſaid given upon the ſame Writ, was the Perſon to whom the Intereſt and Title of the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. belongs after the Deceaſe of the aforeſaid Elizabeth Tailbois Widow. By Reaſon of which Premiſſes the aforeſaid Thomas Wimbiſh and Elizabeth his Wife, as in Right of the ſaid Elizabeth, by virtue of a certain Statute made at a Parliament of the Lord Henry the Seventh late King of England, in the eleventh Year of his Reign, before the aforeſaid Time when, &c. entered into the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. And were thereof ſeized in their Demeſn as of Fee-Tail in Right of the ſame Elizabeth, to wit, to them and to the Heirs of the Body of the ſame Elizabeth lawfully begotten, until the aforeſaid Elizabeth Tailbois Widow the aforeſaid third Day of Auguſt, in the thirty-ſixth Year of the Reign of the ſaid late Lord the King Henry the Eighth aboveſaid, with Force and Arms the Cloſe of them the ſaid Thomas Wimbiſh and Elizabeth his Wife at Golthough aforeſaid broke, and their Graſs to the Value &c. there lately growing with the Cattle aforeſaid eat up, tread down, and deſtroyed, againſt the Peace of the ſaid late Lord the King Henry the Eighth, and againſt the Peace of the ſaid Lord the King now, as they above complain againſt her. And this, &c. wherefore for that the aforeſaid Elizabeth Tailbois Widow the Treſpaſs aforeſaid done in the aforeſaid 40 Acres of Meadow, and 206 Acres of Paſture with the Appurtenances above acknowledges, they the ſame Thomas Wimbiſh and Elizabeth his Wife pray Judgment, and their Damages by Reaſon of the ſaid Treſpaſs to be adjudged to them, &c.

Defendant demurs:

And the aforeſaid Elizabeth Tailbois ſays, that the aforeſaid Plea of the aforeſaid Thomas Wimbiſh and Elizabeth his Wife in Manner and Form above in replying pleaded is inſufficient in Law for the aforeſaid Thomas Wimbiſh and Elizabeth his Wife to have and maintain their Action aforeſaid againſt her the ſaid Elizabeth Tailbois, and that ſhe has no Neceſſity, nor is by the Law of the Land bound to anſwer the Replication aforeſaid in Manner and Form aforeſaid pleaded: And this ſhe is ready to verify. Wherefore for want of a ſufficient Replication in this Behalf, the ſame Elizabeth prays Judgment, and that the aforeſaid Thomas Wimbiſh and Elizabeth his Wife may be precluded from having their Action aforeſaid againſt the ſame Elizabeth Tailbois.

Joinder.

And the aforeſaid Thomas Wimbiſh and Elizabeth his Wife for that they have above in replying alledged ſufficient Matter in Law to have and maintain their Action aforeſaid againſt the aforeſaid Elizabeth Tailbois, which they are ready to verify, which ſaid Matter the aforeſaid Elizabeth Tailbois doth not deny, nor thereunto in any wiſe anſwer, but the ſaid Averment wholly refuſes to admit, pray Judgment, and their Damages by Reaſon of the ſaid Treſpaſs to be adjudged to them, &c. And becauſe the Juſtices here will adviſe of and upon the Premiſſes before they give Judgment thereon, Day is given to the Parties aforeſaid here until the Octave of St. Michael, to hear their Judgment thereon, becauſe the Juſtices here thereof not yet, &c.

Memorandum, before my coming to the City this Term Morgan and Brook Serjeants had argued. Cook Serjeant recited the Caſe briefly in this Manner. You, my Lords, have well underſtood how that Thomas Wimbiſh and Elizabeth his Wife have ſued an Action of Treſpaſs againſt Elizabeth Tailbois for a Treſpaſs done in Land; And the Defendant ſaith that long before the Treſpaſs ſuppoſed one George Tailbois Knight Grandfather of the Wife of the Plaintiff, whoſe Heir ſhe is, was ſeized of the Place where, &c. in his Demeſn as of Fee, and being ſo ſeized he, by his Deed ſhewn forth, thereof infeoffed the Biſhop of Wincheſter and others in Fee, to the Uſe of the ſaid George Tailbois and of the ſaid Elizabeth Tailbois then being his Wife, and the Heirs of their two Bodies begotten, and for Default of ſuch Iſſue, to the Uſe of the ſaid George Tailbois in general Tail, by Force whereof the ſaid Biſhop and others his Co-Feoffees were ſeized in Fee to the Uſes aforeſaid; and ſhe ſhews in Particular that ſome of the Feoffees died, and the others ſurvived them, and were ſeized in Fee to the Uſes aforeſaid until the Statute of 27. Hen. 8. of Uſes was made, by Force of which the ſaid George Tailbois and Elizabeth his Wife were ſeized of the ſaid Land in their Demeſn as of Fee Tail, and being ſo ſeized, the ſaid George Tailbois died, and the ſaid Elizabeth his Wife now Defendant ſurvived him, and was thereof ſole ſeized in her Demeſn as of Fee Tail by Right of Survivorſhip; and ſhe gives Colour to the Plaintiffs, and ſo juſtifies. And the Plaintiffs by their Replication ſay, that well and true it is, that the aforeſaid George Tailbois Grandfather of the ſaid Elizabeth the Plaintiff was ſeized of the ſaid Land in Fee, and thereof infeoffed the ſaid Biſhop and the others to the Uſes aforeſaid in manner and form aforeſaid, and that ſome of the ſaid Feoffees died, and that the Survivors were ſeized to the Uſes aforeſaid until the Statute of 27. Hen. 8. was made, in manner and form as is alledged. And further they ſay, that after the Death of the ſaid George Tailbois, one William Tailbois brought a Formedon in Deſcender for the ſaid Land againſt the ſaid Elizabeth now Defendant, and recovered at the firſt Day by nient dedire, and that the Feme Tenant was not amerced becauſe ſhe came the firſt Day; and the ſaid Plaintiffs by Proteſtation ſay, that the ſaid William Tailbois was not Couſin and Heir in Tail to the aforeſaid Donees ſuppoſed by his Formedon, and for Plea further ſay, that the ſaid Recovery was by Covin had between the ſaid William Tailbois and the ſaid Elizabeth Tailbois now Defendant, without the Aſſent or Conſent of the ſaid Plaintiffs, or either of them. And further they ſay, that the Wife of the Plaintiff, at the Time of the ſaid Formedon purchaſed, and of the Judgment given, was the ſame Perſon to whom the Intereſt and Title of the ſaid Land belongs after the Deceaſe of the ſaid Elizabeth Tailbois; by Reaſon of which Premiſſes the ſaid Plaintiffs as in Right of the ſaid Wife of the Plaintiff, by virtue of a certain Act of Parliament made in the eleventh Year of the Reign of King Henry the Seventh, entered into the ſaid Land, and thereof were ſeized in their Demeſn as of Fee Tail in Right of the ſaid Wife of the Plaintiff, viz. to them and to the Heirs of the Body of the ſaid Wife of the Plaintiff begotten, until the Defendant entered, and did the Treſpaſs; and upon this the Defendant has demurred in Judgment. And it ſeems to me that the Plaintiffs ſhall be barred, for the Replication is not good, for divers Cauſes. One Cauſe is, becauſe the Plaintiffs in the Replication have not ſhewn certainly how the Wife of the Plaintiff is Heir to the Tail, but have averred generally that the Wife of the Plaintiff is the ſame Perſon, to whom the Intereſt and Title, after the Death of the Defendant, belongs; and this is not good. For the Statute of 11. H. 7. cap. 20. ſaith, that upon a Recovery by Covin, it ſhall be lawful for the Perſon, to whom the Intereſt, Title, or Inheritance after the Death of ſuch Women belongs, to enter into the ſame Tenements. And then ſuch Perſon as will enter for ſuch Cauſe, ought to ſhew certainly how the Title or Inheritance, after the Death of the Woman, belongs to him, and ſo ought the Wife of the Plaintiff here, as to ſay, that ſhe was the Daughter of A. Son and Heir of the aforeſaid George Tailbois and Elizabeth his Wife, begotten of their Bodies, and upon this Iſſue might ariſe, as that A. was a Baſtard, or upon ſuch like Matter; but here it altogether wants Certainty. And therefore we may ſee that where ſuch Statutes generally give an Entry to one, who ſhall be in ſuch Degree, yet if he will take Advantage thereof, he ſhall not ſhew generally that he is the ſame Perſon, but he ought to ſhew how. As the Statute of 6. R. 2. cap. 6. ordains, that if a Woman raviſhed aſſent to the Raviſher, the next of Blood of thoſe Raviſhers, and of them that be raviſhed, to whom the Inheritance ought to deſcend, remain, or fall after the Death of the Raviſher, or of her that is ſo raviſhed, ſhall have Title immediately, that is to ſay, after the Rape, to enter upon the Raviſher, or her that is raviſhed: And yet there, if one in the Remainder, being next of Blood to whom, &c. will enter upon a Woman Tenant in Tail for ſuch conſent to the Raviſher, [a] he ought to ſhew certainly how he is next of Blood, as it is held in the Aſſize brought by Babington in 5. Ed. 4. and it is not ſufficient to aver that he is next of Blood, without ſhewing ſpecially how, notwithſtanding the Statute is general. And ſo the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 3. which gives Receit upon Default of Tenant for Life, ſaith, that upon Default of Tenant for Life they unto whom the Reverſion belongs ſhall be admitted if they come before Judgment, there upon Default of Tenant for Life if one prays to be received, and ſhews that he is in the Reverſion, this is not ſufficient, [b] but he ought to ſhew how he came to the Reverſion, as to ſay, that he leaſed the Land to the Tenant for Life, or that ſuch an one, who leaſed the Land, granted the Reverſion to him, and the Tenant attorned; and yet the Statute is general, as our Statute is here. And ſo the Statute of Mortmain, anno 7. Ed. 1. ſays, It ſhall be lawful for the chief Lords of the Fee to enter into the Land ſo alienedwithin a Year from the Time of the Alienation, and to hold it in Fee as an Inheritance: [c] And yet if one will intitle himſelf, in pleading, by ſuch Entry, it is not ſufficient to ſay that he was the chief Lord, but he ought to ſhew how, as to ſay, that the Tenant held of him by ſuch Service, &c. and yet the Statute is general, as the Statute of 11. H. 7. is; but nevertheleſs when one makes Title by a Statute which has ſuch general Words, he ought to ſhew in his Title the Matter and Conveyance ſpecially and certainly whereupon Iſſue may be taken, if the other Party chuſes. And ſo here, although the Statute is general, and ſaith, that it ſhall be lawful for the Perſon, to whom the Intereſt, Title, or Inheritance after the Death of ſuch Women belongs, to enter into the ſame Tenements, yet it is not ſufficient to aver generally, that the Wife of the Plaintiff is the Perſon, to whom the Intereſt and Title, after the Death of the Defendant, belongs, but they ought to ſhew ſpecially how, and inaſmuch as they have not done it, the Replication is bad. And as to that which was argued the other Day to the contrary, viz. that the Defendant, in the Beginning of her Bar, has alledged that George Tailbois, the Grandfather of the Wife of the Plaintiff, whoſe Heir ſhe is, was ſeized, &c. whereby ſhe has affirmed the Wife of the Plaintiff to be Heir to him; and therefore it is not neceſſary to ſhew particularly in the Replication how ſhe is Heir, Sir, as to that I anſwer, that the Defendant, by the Bar, has only confeſſed her to be Heir general, and that is, to all Fee Simples, but here ſhe conveys herſelf to her Entry as Heir Special, viz. as Heir to the Special Tail, and as begotten of the Body of the ſaid George Tailbois, and of the Defendant his Wife, ſo that the Defendant has not, by the Bar, alledged the Wife of the Plaintiff to be Heir to them both, but only Heir to the Huſband, viz. to George Tailbois; wherefore that Objection does not overthrow the Exception to the Replication, which is bad for want of Certainty in this Point. Alſo the Replication is not good for another Cauſe, viz. becauſe it is not alledged that Execution of the Recovery was ſued againſt the Defendant, for upon a Recovery without Execution the Recoveror is not Tenant, for his Wife ſhall not have Dower thereof, nor ſhall ſuch Recovery by the Brother make the Siſter to be Heir, if he has not Execution, for without Execution he has not the Poſſeſſion, ſo that the Execution makes the judgment full and perfect. And the Statute which ſays, "if a Woman by Covin ſuffer a Recovery," intends ſuch a Recovery as is full and perfect, and that is, a Recovery with Execution, which is not here ſhewn, wherefore, &c. Alſo the Replication is not good for another Cauſe, viz. becauſe the Covin is not averred ſpecially, but generally, and then the Covin without the ſpecial Matter of the Covin ſhewn is not well averred, for Recoveries are always to be intended true and upon good Cauſe, ſo that the Law gives the greateſt Credit to them, [d] for if a Recovery had been had by Default againſt Huſband and Wife of the Land of the Wife, ſhe after the Death of her Huſband could not enter upon the Recoveror, nor have any other Remedy than a Writ of Right, by the common Law, (as it is proved by the Recital of the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 3.) until the ſame Statute was made, which gives her a cui in vita; and the Reaſon why ſhe had no other Remedy at the common Law than a Writ of Right was, becauſe of the Credit the Law gives to Recoveries, which are always preſumed to be true and upon good Title. [e] And upon a feint Recovery againſt Tenant for Life, he in the Remainder had no Remedy before the ſame Statute, by Reaſon of the preſumption in Law of the Truth of the Title. And the Statute de Religioſis, which reſtrains Alienations in Mortmain, ordains that no religious Perſon by Craft or Engine do preſume to appropriate to himſelf any Lands, [f] yet if any religious Perſons had recovered any Lands by feint Title, this was held to be out of the Prohibition and Penalty of the ſaid Statute, in reſpect of the Truth which the Law ſuppoſed to be in the ſame; and therefore the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 32. was afterwards made, which puts a Recovery without Title in the ſame Plight as a Feoffment in Mortmain was; which Statutes prove what Credit the common Law gives to Recoveries, which are always preſumed to be true and upon good Title. And ſo the Recovery here ſhall be intended true and without Deceit, unleſs ſpecial Cauſe be ſhewn, which the Plaintiff ought to ſhew, if there be any, as to ſay, that he who recovered by the Formedon was a Baſtard, or that there was no ſuch Gift in Tail made, or ſome ſuch Matter, which proves the Recovery to be without Title and by Covin. [g] And if the Tenant in a Precite quod reddat vouch one of the Demandants, he ought to ſhew Cauſe, as it is held in 11. H. 4. for that the Law preſumes he has no Cauſe of Warranty againſt one of the Demandants; a multo fortiore he ought to ſhew Cauſe here, for in this Point of a Recovery the Law has the ſtrongeſt Preſumption of Truth. [h] And in 15. Ed. 4. in a Writ of Dower, the Tenant ſaid that long before the Writ purchaſed one A. was ſeized of the ſaid Land, until by the

the Tenant diſſeized, upon whom A. entered pending the Writ, Judgment of the Writ; and the Demandant ſaid, that A. entered by Covin to abate his Writ: And it is there held by the Opinion of the whole Court, that the Plaintiff's Plea was not good, for inaſmuch as the Tenant has ſhewn the Entry of A. by Title, the Demandant may not have ſuch general Averment of Covin, without ſhewing Cauſe. So here inaſmuch as the Law preſumes the Title of the Recovery to be good, ſuch general Averment of Covin is not good without ſpecial Cauſe ſhewn. And further, the Plaintiffs in their Replication have ſaid, that they entered upon the Woman Defendant, and were ſeized in Tail in Right of the Wife of the Plaintiff. And this is not true, for although the Statute gives an Entry, yet they cannot have an Eſtate Tail, for that cannot be but where the Anceſtor in Tail is dead: So that the Eſtate, which they ſhall have upon ſuch Entry, ſhall be rather for Life, than in Tail. Then as to the Matter in Law, it ſeems to me, that the Caſe here is clearly out of the Words and Penalty of the Statute of 11. H. 7. cap. 20. And therefore although the Statute of 27. H. 8. cap. 10. has executed the Poſſeſſion to the Uſe, yet the Caſe remains as if the Statute of 27. H. 8. had not been made, and it is as if the Woman had continued Tenant in Tail in Uſe, and had ſuffered a feint Recovery, in which Caſe (the Matter being as it is here) ſhe is out of the Penalty of the Statute, for the Penalty of the ſaid Statute extends only to Women who have an Eſtate by one of three Ways. For the Statute has three ſeveral Branches by which the Eſtate of the Women, who are within the Purview and Penalty of the Statute, are expreſſed. The firſt Branch ſpeaks of a Woman that has an Eſtate in Dower, for Life, or in Tail, jointly with her Huſband, or ſolely to herſelf, or to her own Uſe, in any Manors, Lands, Tenements, or other Hereditaments of the Inheritance or Purchaſe of her Huſband; this is all the firſt Branch, and I will prove that the Woman Defendant here is not within this Branch. For an Eſtate in Dower ſhe had not, nor an Eſtate for Life, but an Eſtate Tail, and the Eſtate Tail is not in Lands, but only in Uſe, and then ſuch Woman as hath any Uſe ought to have an Eſtate in the Thing out of which the Uſe iſſues, ſolely to herſelf, or jointly with her Huſband; for the Words are, that ſhe ſhall have an Eſtate in Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments to herſelf or to her own Uſe, and here ſhe has no Eſtate in any Hereditaments to her own Uſe, but ſhe has an Eſtate Tail in the Uſe, for Hereditaments to Uſe, and the Uſe itſelf are two diſtinct Things, for the Hereditaments to Uſe are the Matter and Subſtance out of which the Uſe iſſues, and the Uſe is no more than the Confidence of the Matter and Subſtance, ſo that the Subſtance and the Uſe are two ſeveral Things; and then ſuch Woman, to whom the Uſe is here appointed, ought to have an Eſtate in the Tenement or Hereditament out of which the Uſe iſſues. But it may be objected, that a Woman cannot have a Uſe, where ſhe has an Eſtate in the Land, Hereditament, or Thing out of which the Uſe iſſues, for the Poſſeſſion and Eſtate of the Thing, out of which the Uſe iſſues, ſuſpends the Uſe; to this I anſwer, that true it is ſo, but it is contained in the Statute, that if ſhe hath an Eſtate in Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments jointly with her Huſband, or ſolely to herſelf, or to her own Uſe, &c.; ſo that if ſhe alone hath an Eſtate in the Thing, then ſhe cannot have a Uſe, for then the Uſe is ſuſpended, and ſo the Uſe cannot be referred to a Woman who hath an Eſtate ſolely in the Thing out of which the Uſe iſſues, but it is referred to a Woman where the Huſband and Wife have a joint Eſtate in the Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments, for ſo it may ſtand together, * for two may have Lands to the Uſe of one of them, and ſo Huſband and Wife may have Lands to the Uſe of the Wife. And therefore the Uſe in the Wife ſhall be intended, where the Wife with her Huſband hath a Poſſeſſion in the Thing out of which the Uſe ariſes, and not where the Wife is ſolely ſeized of the Thing out of which the Uſe iſſues; and in this Manner the Senſe of the Letter of the Statute is full and perfect, and every Word hath its apt Relation. Wherefore inaſmuch as the Woman Defendant in this Action has not an Eſtate in the Thing, out of which the Uſe iſſues, it cannot be denied but that ſhe is out of this Branch of the Statute. And for another Cauſe alſo ſhe is out of this Branch of the Statute, for the Words of this Branch are, if any Woman hath an Eſtate (ut ſupra) in Manors, Lands, Tenements, or other Hereditaments of the Inheritance or Purchaſe of her Huſband, &c.; ſo that that which ſhe hath ought to be the Inheritance or Purchaſe of her Huſband, and here the Uſe which the Huſband hath appointed to him and to his Wife is a new thing, which is neither the Inheritance nor the Purchaſe of the Huſband, for it commences at preſent, and was not in eſſe before, and ſo never was in the Huſband; ergo it is out of the Words of the Statute. And therefore if a Man will grant to another a Rent out of his Land, to the Uſe of the Wife of the Grantor, this is out of the Words of the Statute, for neither the Rent nor the Uſe were in eſſe before, ſo that it is not the Inheritance nor the Purchaſe of the Huſband. † And if a Woman has a Seigniory in Tail given by her Huſband for her jointure, and afterwards the Tenancy eſcheats, and the Woman ſuffers a feint Recovery thereof againſt her, this is out of the Statute, for the Land eſcheated is a new Thing, which was not the Inheritance nor Purchaſe of the Huſband. And if the Huſband makes a Feoffment of his Land upon Condition to re-enfeoff him and his Wife in Tail, the Feoffee does it accordingly, the Huſband dies, the Wife ſuffers a feint Recovery, this Caſe is out of the Statute, for the Condition, which was the Cauſe of the Gift in Tail, was a new Thing, and when the Feoffee made the Gift in Tail, the Land then was his Purchaſe, and not the Inheritance or Purchaſe of the Huſband, for by the Feoffment the Land was removed out of the Poſſeſſion of the Huſband, and after that it could not be ſaid his Inheritance or Purchaſe. Wherefore here, inaſmuch as this Uſe is a new Thing, it cannot be ſaid the Inheritance or Purchaſe of the Huſband, and for this Cauſe it is out of the firſt Branch. And ſo it is proved by theſe two Cauſes, that the Woman Defendant is not within the firſt Branch. The ſecond Branch of the Statute is, where a Woman has any Eſtate in Land, (ut ſupra) given to the

Huſband and Wife in Tail, or for Term of Life, by any of the Anceſtors of the Huſband, &c. And the Woman Defendant here is not within this Branch, for ſhe has nothing of the Gift of any of the Anceſtors of her Huſband. And alſo by this Branch ſhe ought to have an Eſtate in the Thing out of which the Uſe iſſues, as ſhe ought to have in the former Branch, and that ſhe had not here. So that for theſe two Cauſes the Woman Defendant is not within the ſecond Branch. The third Branch is, where a Woman hath an Eſtate, (ut ſupra) by any other Perſon ſeized to the Uſe of the Huſband, or of his Anceſtors, &c. and the Defendant here is not within this Branch. For ſhe does not claim from the Feoffees, for the Uſe was appointed by the Huſband at the Time of the Eſtate of the Feoffees made, and not afterwards, ergo the Wife does not claim from them. And although the Statute of 27. H. 8. removes the Poſſeſſion from them to the Defendant, being ceſtuy que uſe, yet ſhe does not claim the Poſſeſſion by them, but by the Statute, and is in the ſame Courſe that ſhe was before the ſame Statute of 27. H. 8. for the Statute does not give the Poſſeſſion in any other Courſe or Degree than the Uſe was before, but in the very ſame Manner and Form. And then the Woman Defendant here is not within any of the three Branches, and ſo no Penalty nor Forfeiture enſues by ſuch Recovery. And admitting that ſhe was within the Words of the Statute, yet the Heir in her Life time could not enter, for the Statute has two Clauſes concerning the Entry. The firſt ſays, that ſuch Recoveries, Diſcontinuances, &c. ſhall be void and of no Effect, and that it ſhall be lawful for every Perſon, to whom the Intereſt, Title, or Inheritance, after the Death of ſuch Women, ſhall belong, to enter into the ſame Premiſſes, and them to enjoy in the ſame Manner and Form as he ſhould have done, if no Diſcontinuance, Warranty, or Recovery had been had or made. And then I ſay, that if no ſuch Recovery had been had, the Heir could not have entered until after the Death of the Tenant in Tail, and now the Statute ſaith, that they to whom, &c. ſhall enter into the Premiſſes, and enjoy them in the ſame Manner and Form as they ſhould have done if no Recovery had been had or made; and if they ſhall enter and enjoy the Tenements in the ſame Manner and Form as, &c. and in no other Manner and Form, then the Heir in Tail may not enter until after the Death of the Tenant in Tail. And as to the ſecond Clauſe of the Statute, it is as follows, viz. It is enacted, that if the Woman at the Time of ſuch Diſcontinuance, Alienation, Recovery, &c. be ſole, that then ſhe ſhall be barred and excluded of her Title and Intereſt from thenceforwards: and that the Perſon to whom the Title, Intereſt, or Poſſeſſion of them ſhall belong after the Death of ſuch Woman, immediately after ſuch Diſcontinuance, &c. ſhall enter into the ſame Tenements, and them ſhall poſſeſs and enjoy according to his Title in them. This Clauſe proves one Thing, and gives a Remedy over the other Branch before, that is to ſay, it proves that the Recovery or Diſcontinuance, &c. which the firſt Clauſe in the Statute makes to be void as before, ſhall be void againſt the Woman, as well as againſt him that ſhall have the Land after her Death, for if the Woman ſhould be barred by the Recovery before, then this ſecond Clauſe, which ſaith that the Woman ſhall be barred and excluded of her Title, where ſhe was excluded and barred by the Recovery or Diſcontinuance before were vain and Surpluſage. But the firſt Clauſe makes the Recovery void againſt the Woman, and this ſecond Clauſe bars and excludes the Woman, not againſt the Recoverer, but againſt thoſe who ſhall have the Land after the Death of ſuch Woman. So that the firſt Clauſe, which ſaith that the Recovery ſhall be void, is explained by this Clauſe, as it is ſaid before. Now the Benefit and Remedy which this laſt Clauſe of the Statute gives, is an immediate Entry to the Perſon, to whom the Title, &c. and a Power to poſſeſs and enjoy the Lands according to his Title, and this cannot be referred to the Heir in Tail, for he has not any Title in the Life of the Anceſtor, no more than the Son and Heir Apparent of Tenant in Fee ſimple has in the Life of his Father. For no Heir has any Right or Title but after the Death of the Anceſtor who has the Inheritance, and not during his Life; and this proves that the Statute, which ſaith that ſuch Perſon ſhall enjoy the Lands according to his Title, cannot be referred to the Heir in Tail, who has no Title in the Life of the Anceſtor, but it ſhall be referred to thoſe to whom it may reaſonably be referred, and that is, to thoſe who have Title and Right in eſſe, viz. they in Reverſion, for the Statute recites, Tenant in Dower, Tenant for Life, &c. And if any Woman, who is Tenant in Dower, or Tenant for Life, according to the Statute, ſuffers a feint Recovery, then he in the Reverſion ſhall enter preſently, and ſo ſhall the Statute be intended, for they have Title in the Life of Tenant in Dower, for Life, or Tenant in Tail after Poſſibility, &c. that is to ſay, they have the Reverſion: and the Intention of the Statute cannot be taken to reſpect the Iſſue in Tail, who has no Title in the Life of his Anceſtor. And therefore the Statute of 6. Rich. 2. cap. 6. provides, that when Women aſſent to their Raviſhers, the next of Blood of thoſe Raviſhers, and of them that be raviſhed, to whom, &c. ſhall have Title immediately, that is to ſay, after the Rape to enter upon, &c. and the ſame to hold in State of Inheritance, &c. The Makers of which Statute well perceived, that the Iſſue in Tail had no Title in the Life of his Anceſtor, and therefore they gave him Title, for the Statute ſaith, ſhall have Title to enter, &c. And if the Makers of the Statute of 11. H. 7. had intended that the Iſſue in Tail ſhould enter immediately, they would have given him Title by the like Words as the Statute of Rich. 2. has done; but the End of the Clauſe, which ſaith that they ſhall enjoy according to their Title, expreſſes that their Intention was not ſuch. For which Reaſons it ſeems to me that the Woman Defendant is out of the Penalty of the Statute, and that the Plaintiffs may not enter, and therefore they ſhall be barred.

Whiddon to the contrary. As to what has been ſaid, that the Plaintiffs ought to have ſhewn certainly how the Wife of the Plaintiff is Heir to the Tail, to this I ſay, that in the Beginning of the Bar the Defendant has ſaid, that George Tailbois was Grandfather of the Wife of the Plaintiff, and that ſhe was his Heir, and then inaſmuch as this Word Heir may be taken two Ways, viz. Heir general or Heir ſpecial, and the Replication proves that it is more advantageous for the Wife to be Heir ſpecial, for this Reaſon it ſhall be taken that ſhe is Heir ſpecial, for upon the Sequel of the Matter this ſhall be the beſt for the Wife, and a Plea [a] which has two Intendments ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt him that pleads it. [b] As in Treſpaſs a Releaſe generally is no Plea, for it may be delivered after the Treſpaſs or before, and becauſe it has two Intendments it ſhall be taken that it was delivered before the Treſpaſs, for this is the ſtrongeſt Conſtruction againſt him that pleads it, in which Caſe it is no Plea. [c] So if a collateral Warranty is pleaded in Bar, it is no Plea in Avoidance of the Warranty to ſay that he entered, for the Entry might be in the Life of the Anceſtor or afterwards, and therefore it ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt him, and that is, that the Entry was after the Deſcent. So here, inaſmuch as this Word (Heir) has two intendments, the ſtrongeſt ſhall be taken, and that is, Heir ſpecial. Alſo there is another Reaſon why it is not neceſſary for the Plaintiffs to ſhew how the Wife is Heir, and that is, becauſe ſhe had once entered and was ſeized. [d] And therefore if an Executor brings an Action of Treſpaſs for Goods taken out of his Poſſeſſion, he needs not ſhew the Teſtament, becauſe he was once poſſeſſed of them; but if he had never been poſſeſſed, but had demanded the Thing, then he ought to ſhew the Teſtament. So if the Wife of the Plaintiff here had brought a Formedon upon the Tail, ſhe ought to have ſhewn how ſhe was Heir, becauſe then it had been by Way of Demand, but here inaſmuch as ſhe was once ſeized by Entry, it is not neceſſary now to ſhew how ſhe is Heir. And if in rei veritate ſhe be not Heir, then the Defendant ought to traverſe that ſhe is not Heir; wherefore the Replication is good notwithſtanding this Exception. Then as to the Covin, I ſay it is not neceſſary to ſhew this certainly, [e] for Covin is a ſecret Thing contained in the Heart of a Man, which by Intendment another Perſon can have no Knowledge of; and then the Law will not force any Man to ſhew that [f] which it preſumes lies not in his Knowledge. [g] And for this Reaſon a Woman ſhall have Dower of a Rent Charge without ſhewing the Deed of Grant, becauſe the Deed does not belong to her. And if there be Lord and Tenant by Knights-Service, and the Tenant makes a Feoffment, and takes back an Eſtate for Life, Remainder to his Heirs, and dies, the Lord ſhall aver it to be by Covin generally. [h] So a Man may juſtify Imprisonment for Suſpicion of Felony, without ſhewing any Suſpicion, for Suſpicion, like Covin, lies ſecretly hid in the Heart of a Man. [i] And in 33. H. 6. in Treſpaſs, where the Defendant alledged in Bar that he had bought the Goods in Market overt of one J. O. the Plaintiff ſaid, that the ſaid Purchaſe was by Covin between the Defendant and the ſaid J. O. generally, without ſhewing any ſpecial Circumſtance of Covin, and the Plea was admitted good. And in a Precipe quod reddat brought againſt the Lord of ancient Demeſn, and againſt the Tenant of the Land, the Lord ſhall ſhew that he is Lord, and that this Action is brought againſt him by Covin generally. [k] But in 9. H. 6. in a Precipe quod reddat where the Tenant pleaded in Abatement of the Writ, that one A. after the laſt Continuance had arraigned an Aſſize againſt him, and recovered by Action tried, that is to ſay, by Verdict, and the Demandant ſaid that this Aſſize was brought by Covin between the ſaid A. and the Tenant, to the Intent to abate his Writ, there it is granted by the whole Court that this is no Plea without ſhewing Cauſe of Covin; and I will agree the Law to be ſo, and the Reaſon is, becauſe the Title was tried by Verdict of 12 Men, and his ſaying that it was by Covin ſhall not be intended true againſt the Verdict. But here the Recovery was by nient dedire, in which Caſe there is no Trial, but the nient dedire of the Defendant was the Cauſe of the Judgment, and therefore in this Caſe, and where the Recovery is by Default, a Man ſhall aver that it was by Covin generally; and ſo is the Diverſity. And as to what has been ſaid, that Execution of the Recovery ought to be ſhewn; Sir, this is not neceſſary, for the Statute ſpeaks only of a Recovery, and it is a Recovery without Execution. And therefore if a Fine be levied of the Reverſion, it is a Record before Attornment is had upon it; for Quid juris clamat, and per quæ ſervitia iſſue out of a Record. And the Habere facias ſeizinam recites, Cum A. recuperaverit ſeizinam ſuam, &c. So that this proves that it is a Recovery without Execution; wherefore this Exception is of no Weight. And as to the principal Point, it ſeems to me to be within the Words of the Statute, for the Woman Defendant had a Uſe in Tail of the Appointment of her Huſband, and the Huſband firſt made the Uſe, which making was the Purchaſe of the Huſband. And then when the Statute of 27. H. 8. executed the Poſſeſſion, this was in the ſame Manner as the Uſe was, and ſo within the Statute. And although it were not within the Words of the Statute, yet it ſhall be within the Equity of the Statute, notwithſtanding what has been ſaid to the contrary the other Day, that the Statute is penal, and ſhall not be extended by Equity. And he put many Caſes upon the Equity of Statutes, and ſaid it was no ſure Ground [l] that a penal Statute ſhould not be taken by Equity, for in many Caſes we ſee it otherwiſe. And alſo he ſaid, that by the Entry the Wife of the Plaintiff ſhall be ſeized as if the Tenant in Tail had been dead, and that is, in Tail; and for theſe Reaſons he held that the Plaintiffs ſhould recover.

Saunders and Harris argued the next Day to the contrary. But I came late, for Saunders had begun his Argument before I came, and I was diſturbed in my Place, ſo that I could not very well report all that was ſaid that Day, but Saunders firſt commenced his Argument upon the Equity of the Statute, as I heard. And after my coming he ſaid, that the Statute here was penal, inaſmuch as it infers a Penalty upon them who had the Eſtate before, and goes in Deſtruction of the Eſtates before made, and takes away their Power who had the ſame Eſtates, and abridges and puniſhes them, for which Reaſon the Statute ſhall not by the Rules of the Common Law be taken by Equity. And therefore the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 40. ſays, Where any doth alien the Right of his Wife, it is agreed that from henceforth the Suit of the Woman or her Heir, after the Death of her Huſband, ſhall not be delayed by the Nonage of the Heir that ought to warrantiſe, but let the Purchaſor tarry, who ought not to have been ignorant that he bought the Right of another, until the Age of his Warrantor, to have his Warranty: So that the Statute reſtrains the Common Law, and ſaith, Let the Purchaſor tarry. [a] Yet it is adjudged in 18. Ed. 4. that if he, who is the Purchaſor, makes a Feoffment over, this Feoffee ſhall vouch, becauſe a penal Statute made againſt one Perſon ſhall not extend to others. And therefore the Statute of 32. H. 8. cap. 33. ordains, "That the dying "ſeized of a Diſſeizor ſhall not take away the Entry of him that at the Time of ſuch Deſcent "had good and lawful Title of Entry, &c. except ſuch Diſſeizor have had peaceable Poſſeſſion "before for five Years." [b] Yet if an Abator die ſeized within the five Years, this Deſcent ſhall take away the Entry of him that hath Right, for he is out of the Words of the Statute, and it ſhall not be extended by Equity, inaſmuch as the Statute is penal, and the Words extend but to one Perſon, that is to ſay, a Diſſeizor. [c] And ſo if Tenant for Life is diſſeized, and the Diſſeizor dies within the five Years, and the Tenant for Life dies, he in the Reverſion or Remainder may not enter, for he was not a Diſſeizor to them, but to the Tenant for Life, and alſo at the Time of ſuch Deſcent they had no Title of Entry, but the Tenant for Life had, and therefore they are out of the Words of the Statute, and ſo out of the Equity of it. And thus we ſee where a Statute, which is penal, and abridges the Liberty or Benefit given by the Common Law, is made againſt one particular Perſon, it ſhall not extend to others. Let us then conſider our own Caſe. And I apprehend it cannot be denied but that our Statute is penal for the Cauſe before given, and that the Woman here is out of the Words of the Statute; and therefore I will examine the Statute. And the Statute has three Branches concerning the Eſtates of Women who are within the Purview thereof; the firſt is of Women, who have any of the Eſtates recited in the Statute, of Land of the Inheritance or Purchaſe of the Huſband, and here the Woman Defendant is not proved to have an Eſtate of ſuch Land, for it is ſhewn in the Beginning of the Replication, that George Tailbois was ſeized of, &c. in his Demeſn as of Fee, and being ſo ſeized made a Feoffment, ut ſupra, &c. And it is not ſhewn how he was ſeized, viz. by Purchaſe or Inheritance. And the Words (Inheritance) and (Purchaſe) have two different Meanings, [d] for this Word (Inheritance) has Reſpect only to ſuch Land to which a Man comes by Deſcent: As it is well proved by a Caſe in 7. [e] H. 4. for there a Woman brought a Cui in vita, and the Writ was, quam clamat eſſe jus et hæreditatem ſuam, and it was ſhewn that the Woman came to the Land by Purchaſe of the Feoffment of ſuch an one, and for this Cauſe Exception was taken to the Writ, and it was the Opinion of all the Juſtices that the Writ ſhould [f] abate, becauſe a Purchaſe may not be adjudged an Inheritance by common Intent. So that this Word (Inheritance) is to be intended a Poſſeſſion of Lands or Tenements, to which a Man comes by Deſcent only, and this Word (Purchaſe) is intended [g] a Poſſeſſion of Lands, to which a Man comes by Purchaſe, or by Gift without Recompence. And therefore a Purchaſe is always intended by [h] Title, and this Definition ſtands with Britton, and Littleton alſo. So that Inheritance and Purchaſe are two different Things. [i] And agreeable hereunto the Statute of 1. H. 5. cap. 3. of Forger of falſe Deeds, ſpeaks in the Preamble of thoſe who have Lands or Tenements by Purchaſe, or by Deſcent of Inheritance, &c. Which Statute being in the Disjunctive proves that there is a Difference between the Words. Wherefore, as I ſaid, an Inheritance is intended Land by Deſcent, and a Purchaſe is intended Land by Gift or Purchaſe, and ſo by Title, for if one has Land by Diſſeizin, this is no Purchaſe, for a Purchaſe is by Title, and Diſſeizin is without Title. And therefore where it is ſhewn in the Beginning of the Replication, that George Tailbois was ſeized in Fee, this may be by Deſcent, by Purchaſe, or by Diſſeizin, and if it be by Diſſeizin, it is out of the Intent of the Statute, for the Makers of the Statute would never have made Proviſion for a Recovery by Covin againſt a Woman, who had Land of the Aſſurance of her Huſband by Diſſeizin: So that the Plaintiffs ought to have ſhewn how the Huſband came to the Poſſeſſion, if they would have proved the Woman to be within the firſt Branch, for the Manner of his coming to the Land is iſſuable; and for this Cauſe the Woman is not ſhewn to be within the firſt Branch. And alſo, as it hath been ſaid, the Woman ought to have Manors, Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments to her own Uſe, &c. ſo that ſhe ought to have an Eſtate in the Thing out of which the Uſe iſſues, which ſhe had not here, and therefore ſhe is not ſuch a Ceſtuy que uſe, of which the Statute ſpeaks; and therefore for both theſe Reaſons ſhe is out of the firſt Branch. And as to the ſecond Branch, the Woman does not claim any Thing of any Anceſtor of her Huſband. And as to the third Branch, the Woman Defendant here is out of it, for ſhe does not claim any Thing of any one ſeized to the Uſe of the Huſband, or of any of his Anceſtors, for the Feoffees were not Feoffees to uſe before the Uſe appointed to him; and ſhe does not claim the Uſe from the Feoffees, but from the Huſband, and the Statute of 27. H. 8. does not put the Thing in any other Degree than it was before the Statute, ſo that ſhe does not claim from the Feoffees to the Uſe of the Huſband. And therefore the Law is as it was put by my Brother Cook, viz. if the Huſband makes a Feoffment upon Condition to make an Eſtate Tail to him and to his Wife, which is done accordingly, this is out of the Statute, for the Feoffees were not Feoffees to the Uſe of the Huſband. But if the Feoffment had been to the Uſe of the Huſband, and upon Condition ut ſupra, and the Feoffees had made an Eſtate Tail to the Huſband and Wife, this is within the Statute, for at the Time of the Eſtate made they were Feoffees to the Uſe of the Huſband, and ſo within the Letter of the Statute. And ſo likewiſe the Caſe put of the Eſcheat is good Law. From whence it appears clearly, that the Woman here is out of the Words of the Statute. And then inaſmuch as the Statute extends in Words to Women who have Eſtates expreſſed in the Statute, and the Woman here is not ſuch a Woman, nor hath any ſuch Eſtate, it follows that this Statute being penal ſhall not be extended by Equity to the Woman Woman here being a Stranger, and out of the Words of the Statute, no more than in the Caſes firſt put by me, where a penal Statute made againſt a particular Perſon ſhall not be extended by Equity to others. And further, although the Woman Defendant had been within the Words or Equity of the Statute, yet the Plaintiffs cannot enter during her Life. And this I venture to aſſert upon the Strength of the three Branches of the Statute which concern the Entry. The firſt Branch ſays, " That the Recovery ſhall be void, and that the Perſon, to whom, &c. ſhall enter, " as if no ſuch Recovery had been had." And if no ſuch Recovery had been had, then the Heir could not have entered in the Life of the Mother, no more can ſhe now. The ſecond Clauſe provides, " That if the Woman be, &c. that then ſhe ſhall be excluded, &c. and that the Perſon " who, &c. ſhall enter, and ſhall enjoy the Tenements according to his or their Title:" And the Iſſue in Tail has no Title in the Life of his Mother, and therefore he cannot be intended thereby. And the Statute of Rich. makes a Difference, as before is well ſaid. The third Branch of the Statute, which is the laſt Proviſo, ordains, " That it ſhall be lawful for every ſuch Woman being ſole " or married, after the Death of her firſt Huſband to give, alien, or make Diſcontinuance of any " ſuch Lands for Term of her Life only, after the Courſe and Uſe of the Common Law before " the making of the ſaid Act." And then inaſmuch as the Statute ſaith, that it ſhall be lawful for every ſuch Woman, &c. this ſhall be intended a Woman who hath ſuffered ſuch Recovery. And therefore it appears to be the Intent of the Statute to make the Recovery void againſt the Woman, and that ſhe ſhall have Power during her Life to diſcontinue, ergo during her Life the Heir may not enter by Force of ſuch Recovery. So that it ſeems by the ſaid three Branches that the Plaintiffs cannot enter during the Life of the Defendant being Tenant in Tail. And as to the Covin, it ſeems to me that it is not well averred, for by the Replication the Recovery is ſhewn, and the Title thereof; and then the Plaintiffs have not deſtroyed the Title, but have fully confeſſed it, for when a Thing is ſhewn, and is not afterwards traverſed, nor averred ſpecially to the contrary, it ſhall be taken to be confeſſed. So is it here; and the Proteſtation is not material, for when it is contrary to a Thing confeſſed by Implication, or by expreſs Words, it is to no Purpoſe. And therefore the Title ſhewn is not deſtroyed, but confeſſed, inaſmuch as it is not traverſed, nor confeſſed and avoided. And then the Covin is repugnant to the Confeſſion, for Covin and good Title are meerly contrary. [a] And this is proved by the ſaid Caſe in 15. Ed. 4. where in Dower the Tenant ſhewed that he had diſſeized one A. long before the Writ purchaſed, who had entered pending the Writ, Judgment of the Writ, and the Demandant ſaid that A. entered by Covin to abate his Writ, and there by the Opinion of the whole Court the Plea is not good, for inaſmuch as the Demandant had not denied the Title of A. he could not have the general Averment of Covin, for it is repugnant to the Thing confeſſed. And ſo if a Man marry a Woman Diſcontinuee in Tail, and afterwards in a Formedon he and the Woman confeſs the Action, if the Title of the Formedon is ſhewn, and the Confeſſion, it cannot be averred that he married the Woman, or ſuffered the Recovery by Covin, for there can be no Covin if the Title was good, and if no Wrong is in him that has the Title. [b] And in 19. H. 8. where one diſſeizes the Diſcontinuee of Tenant in Tail, and enfeoffs the Iſſue in Tail within Age, he ſhall be remitted, and by the better Opinion the Diſſeiſin by the Diſſeizor averred without making the Iſſue privy may not hinder the Remitter, inaſmuch as the Title is not denied. Whenever therefore the Title is confeſſed, Covin cannot be generally averred, without ſhewing a ſpecial Wrong done in him that has the Title; and here no Wrong is ſhewn to be done, but a nient dedire by Covin and Confeſſion, whereas a nient dedire is not bad, if the Title is good: For if the Title is not good, the Party is not driven by Law to maintain it, and to ſtand in Defence of it, for that would be contrary to good Conſcience, quiá a vero non declinabit juſtus. And therefore Confeſſion of an Action, or nient dedire is not ill, if the Title be good. And then when the Title is confeſſed to be good, and the nient dedire is averred to be by Covin, and to be bad, this is meerly repugnant to the Title which is confeſſed to be good. But he that will be aided by Covin ought to deſtroy the Title, or elſe to confeſs the Title, and ſhew a Wrong done afterwards in coming to it. [c] And therefore if a Tenant for Years would be received to defend his Term by the Statute of Glouceſter cap. 11. it is not ſufficient to ſhew that the Suit was brought by Covin, but he ought to ſhew how the Title is not good; as if it be in a Writ of Entry ſur diſſeizin, he ought to traverſe the Diſſeizin, as in many Books it is adjudged; or if he confeſs the Title to be good, then he ought to make him that has the Title privy. [d] As in 41. Aſſ. where it was found by Office, that one F. who had good Cauſe of Action of ad terminum qui præteriit againſt an Infant by Deſcent, cauſed one H. to diſſeize the Heir by Covin, againſt whom he recovered by his Writ of Entry ad terminum qui præteriit, there upon this Office found the King, of whom the Land was held, had Reſtitution of the Land during the Nonage of the Heir, notwithſtanding the Plea and Averment of F. in Maintenance of his Title. [e] So that altho' the Title be good, yet if Covin is practiſed by him that has the Title in coming to it, he ſhall not be remitted; and this ought to be ſhewn by him that ſhall take Benefit by it, or otherwiſe be made to appear. [f] And in 20. Aſſ. in Aſſize by an Abbot it was found for him, and that there was no Colluſion. And it was prayed by the King's Serjeant to enquire if the Abbot had releaſed, the Aſſize ſaid that the Abbot without his Convent, by Dureſs done to the Abbot by taking his Cattle, had releaſed all his Right to one A. named in the Writ Purveyor to the King, and it was enquired whether it was by Dureſs of Impriſonment, and the Aſſize ſaid that it was not, and there it is held, that although the Releaſe be found, which prima facie imports Covin, yet the King ſhall not have the Land during the Life of the Abbot, becauſe the ſpecial Matter there was and ought to be found, which proves the Releaſe void, and ſo no Colluſion. [a] And ſo in 9. H. 4. the King may not have Benefit of Colluſion found generally upon the Statute of Marlbridge cap. 6. without the ſpecial Cauſe thereof; for which Reaſon I ſay, that if the King ſhall not take Advantage of Colluſion generally found without the ſpecial Cauſe ſhewn, a multo fortiore a common Perſon ſhall not take Advantage of it, eſpecially where the Title is confeſſed to be good; and for theſe Cauſes it ſeems to me that the Covin is not here well averred without the ſpecial Cauſe ſhewn. And he argued further, that Execution of the Recovery ought to be ſhewn, for if the Tenant in Tail die before Execution, the Iſſue in Tail ſhall falſify this Recovery, for without Execution it is no Diſcontinuance, and therefore Execution ought to be ſhewn. And he argued alſo, that it ought to be ſhewn how the Wife of the Plaintiff was Heir to the Tail, and that ſhe could not be ſeized in Tail, and that the Statute here ought to be pleaded certainly, and that the Place of the making of it ought to be ſhewn; and for theſe Cauſes he held the Replication ill, and that the Plaintiffs ſhould be barred.

[a] M. 9. H. 4. 6. Fitz. Traverſe 15. Bro. Colluſion 16. 43.

Harris argued to the ſame Purpoſe, and he alſo took the Law to be that there could not be Covin where the Title is good, except a Wrong is done by him that has the Title, and this ought to be ſhewn; for here inaſmuch as the Title is confeſſed to be good, in that it is not traverſed, nor confeſſed and avoided, this Recovery may not be averred to be by Covin, for ſuch Averment is repugnant in itſelf, and it is inconſiſtent to ſay that he did Right by Covin, for if Right is done and no Wrong, then there is no Covin, for Covin is always taken in malam partem; and then if the Title be good, (as the Plaintiffs have here confeſſed it is) the nient dedire is well done, for if the Woman Defendant ſhould ſtand in Defence againſt a good Title, ſhe would act contrary to good Conſcience, and for this Reaſon the Averment of Covin is repugnant to the former Confeſſion. And the Statute was never intended to puniſh or defeat all Recoveries by Reddition, or nient dedire, but only all ſuch Recoveries as are upon a feint Title. And a Recovery upon good Title, where no Wrong is done, is out of the Danger of the Statute, and here the Title is confeſſed to be good, and then the Confeſſion is no Wrong, and without Wrong there can be no Covin, ergo the Covin is repugnant; and becauſe the Title is not defaced in any certain Point, the Averment of Covin is not good. And as to the Statute, he took the Caſe here to be out of the Words of it for the Reaſons before ſhewn; and as to the ſecond Clauſe of the Statute touching the Entry upon the Woman being ſole at the Time of ſuch Recovery, which ſaith "That the Woman ſhall be barred and excluded of her Title and Intereſt in the ſame Lands," whereas the Recovery before barred and excluded the Woman, he took it that the Words were not put there in vain. And the Intent of theſe Words (as it ſeemed to him) is thus, viz. before the Statute Women would have ſuffered feint Recoveries to the Uſe of themſelves for their Lives, and after to the Uſe of other Strangers, and whereas they ſhould have had the Uſe before, now the Statute has taken away the Uſe, and excludes and bars their Title and Intereſt, viz. the Uſe which they ſhould have had, and ſo inflicts a Penalty upon them, but does not give any Entry to the Heir in the Life of the Tenant in Tail; for the firſt Clauſe is, "That they ſhall enjoy the Tenements in the ſame Manner and Form as "they ſhould have done if no ſuch Diſcontinuance, Warranty, or Recovery had been had or made." And if no ſuch Recovery had been had, then the Heir ſhould not have entered upon the Tenant in Tail until after his Death, no more ſhall he now. And the ſecond Clauſe is ut ſupra, "and "that they to whom, &c. ſhall enter, and enjoy according to his or their Titles therein," and the Title of the Heir is not until after the Death of the Anceſtor, and not before; and ſo is it in the Caſe here. And according to this Expoſition, the ſaid Words, viz. "That the Woman ſhall be "barred and excluded," and the other Words alſo may ſtand together. And in this Senſe he took the Statute. And, note, he argued to the ſame Effect with the others before him as to all the reſt of the Points that were moved.

On the ſame Side.

At another Day Molineux Juſtice argued. It ſeems to me that the Plaintiffs ſhall recover. Firſt, as to the Covin, it ſeems to me that the Plaintiffs need not to ſhew ſpecial Cauſe thereof; for there is a Diverſity between Covin apparent, and Covin not apparent, for to aver that which is [b] apparent is vain, as to aver ſpecially that a Horſe I have bought, which has no Eyes, is blind, is in vain becauſe it is apparent. [c] And when the Tenant infeoffs his Son within Age by Colluſion, the Lord ſhall ſeize him for his Ward, and ſhall not be forced to ſhew this Colluſion ſpecially. And ſo here it is in vain to ſhew the Colluſion ſpecially, becauſe it is apparent, for the Woman Defendant, when ſhe was impleaded, came at the firſt Day, and therefore was not amerced, and alſo ſhe was not eſſoigned, nor had the View, and ſhe loſt her other Advantages, which the Law gave her, by which Act there appears a voluntary Aſſent in her, and Covin apparent, and then to aver that ſpecially, which appears by the Record, is in vain. [d] And the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 4. recites that the Law was, that if the Huſband would confeſs an Action, the Wife ſhould have Dower by the Common Law, for it is intended by the Law to be Covin apparent: But if the Recovery had been by Default, it was doubtful. [e] But here if the Action had been tried by Verdict of 12 Men, then the Cauſe of Covin ought to be ſhewn, for the Law gives Credit to the Verdict. [f] And therefore if a Man brings an Attaint he ſhall not have a Superſedeas, for the Law preſumes the Verdict to be true till the contrary is tried, which proves what Credit the Law gives to the Verdict of 12 Men: But upon Error in fait, or in the Record, the Party ſhall have a Superſedeas, for the Law judges indifferently of the Truth or Falſhood thereof, and therefore the Party ſhall have a Superſedeas, but not upon Attaint for the Cauſe aforeſaid, viz. for the Credit given to the Verdict. And ſo Covin, which is averred in Avoidance of a Trial by Verdict, ought to be ſhewn certainly. And the Averment of Covin generally is good for another Reaſon, viz. becauſe the Statute ſpeaks [g] generally of Recoveries by Covin. As the Statute of 4. H. 7. cap. 20. ſaith, that if any Recovery be pleaded in Bar againſt the Plaintiff in an Action popular, the Plaintiff may aver that the ſaid Recovery was by Covin; and there by the Generality of the Statute the Party may aver the Covin generally, ſo here. And, Sir, the Statute here, being general, prohibits Covin in Recoveries upon good

Titles, as well as upon falſe or feigned Titles, for the Statute is general, and then it follows that the Covin generally ſhewn is good, without falſifying the Title. And as to the other Exception, viz. the Entry upon the Recovery, this is not neceſſary to be ſhewn, becauſe the Statute ſpeaks of the Recovery only, and it is a Recovery without Execution, and the Statute intended Recoveries without Execution, as it is proved by a Proviſo in the Statute, which ſaith, "That the ſaid Sta- "tute ſhall not extend to any Recoveries to be had, except where ſuch Women were then alive, "and then took the Iſſues and Profits of the ſaid Lands, or ſome other to their Uſe, &c." and if they then took the Profits, it follows that Execution was not had, and ſo the Statute extends to ſuch Recoveries before Execution. And as to the other Exception which was taken, viz. becauſe it was not alledged how the Wife of the Plaintiff was the Perſon who, &c. Sir, as to this, it is not at all neceſſary, for that the Statute, being general, gives the Averment generally; and beſides inaſmuch as ſhe has alledged that ſhe herſelf was the Perſon to whom the Intereſt and Title, after the Death of the Woman Defendant, belongs, and the Defendant has demurred upon it, although the Replication in this Point were vicious before, yet the Demurrer has made it good, for a Demurrer is a Confeſſion [a] of the Matter of Fact before alledged. And ſo the Demurrer, which is a Matter ex poſt facto, has made the Plea, which was bad before, to be good now. [b] As in a Præcipe quod reddat, if the Tenant pleads non-Tenure the Day of the Writ purchaſed, it is no Plea, for he might be Tenant afterwards; but if Iſſue is joined upon it, and it is found that he was Tenant the Day of the Writ purchaſed, this has made the Plea good, for the Reaſon why it was bad is now diſproved. So in Debt againſt Executors, if they plead nothing in their Hands the Day of the Writ purchaſed, without ſaying, or ever after, the Plea is bad, but if Iſſue is joined upon it, and it is found that they had Aſſets, now the Iſſue, which was bad, is by the Verdict made good. So here the Plea, which was bad, is made good by the Demurrer, which is a Confeſſion of the Fact, for the Reaſon why it ſhould be bad is now confeſſed to be good; and ſo the ſaid Exceptions are of no Weight. And as to the Matter, it ſeems that the Caſe is within the Words of the Statute, for inaſmuch as it is here alledged that the Huſband was ſeized in Fee, by this it is proved that the Inheritance was his, for every Fee ſimple which a Man has is his Inheritance: And then ſhe had a Uſe in the Inheritance of her Huſband. And he argued as if theſe Words in the firſt Part of the Statute, viz. (to her own Uſe) had been in Uſe, and to ſuch Effect he took them, (as I apprehended him) and then he maintained that the Woman held the Inheritance of her Huſband, that is to ſay, his Land in Uſe jointly with the Huſband, and ſo within the Words of the Statute; and if it was not within the Letter of the Statute, then he argued that it ſhould be within the Equity and Intent of it; and he made no Queſtion but that the Heir in Tail ſhould enter [c] preſently, and ouſt the Woman Defendant; and ſo he held that the Plaintiffs ſhould recover.

Hales J. Hales Juſtice to the ſame Purpoſe. And as to the Covin, the Replication is good without ſhewing the Cauſe thereof; for firſt it is to be noted, that the Statute is general, for it is, if Women by Covin ſuffer any Recovery, &c. which general Words prohibit Covin in Recoveries upon good Title, as well as upon bad Title, and reſtrain that which was lawful before, for at the Common Law the Woman named in this Statute might lawfully make a Releaſe to the Diſſeizee with Warranty, or ſuch a Woman being ceſtuy que Uſe might make a Feoffment, or do other Acts at that Time lawful, which now the Statute prohibits. So that although a Recovery upon good or bad Title had been heretofore without Puniſhment, notwithſtanding they had been by Covin, yet the Statute now prohibits the Covin, as well where the Action is upon good Title, as where it is upon bad Title, and ſuch was the Intent of the Makers of the Statute. [d] For if a Woman had for her Jointure an Eſtate Tail according to this Statute with Warranty, and had been impleaded by Action upon good Title, and by Covin had confeſſed the Action, this is clearly within the Compaſs of the Statute, by the Intent of the Makers of it; for although the Title of the Action be good, yet if ſhe had vouched, and recovered in Value, this Recovery in Value ſhould go to the Benefit of the Iſſue in Tail, which now her Covin has deſtroyed. And ſo although the Title be good, yet this Covin ſhall bring the Woman within the Penalty of the Statute. And therefore Covin may be [e] where the Title is good, [f] for the Makers of the Statute conſidered the Frailty and Inconſtancy of Women, who might eaſily by flattering Words be deluded and enticed to Covin, and therefore they ordained againſt them a Penalty, as a Bridle to their Inconſtancy, and would not make them, who have ſo little Diſcretion, Judges of the Goodneſs or Badneſs of the Title of Actions, but prohibited their Covin. For which Reaſon one may aver the Covin generally. For if the Title be good, then there is no ſpecial Cauſe of Covin which may be alledged, but it ſhall be averred generally, as in the Caſe before put a Man ſhall aver generally that the Recovery in Action popular was by Covin; for there could be no ſpecial Cauſe of Covin there. And ſo by the Statute of 13. Rich. 2. cap. 17. which ordains, where Tenants for Life being impleaded are of Covin with the Demandants that the Tenements be recovered, he in Reverſion ſhall be received, &c. [g] there he ſhall ſay, that the Tenant for Life pleaded feintly, and he ſhall pray to be received, and this Cauſe generally ſhall be good by Reaſon of the Generality of the Statute, for whether the Title of the Action be good or ill, yet if the Tenants were of Covin with the Demandants, the Reverſioner ſhall be received, and then the ſpecial Cauſe of Covin or feint Pleading ſhall not be ſhewn in Reſpect of the Generality of the Statute. [h] So that where Statutes ſpeak of Covin generally, it ſhall be ſhewn generally, but otherwiſe of Covin at the common Law. And if the Makers of the Statute of 11. H. 7. had only intended Recoveries by feint Titles, they would have expreſly given the Penalty to Covin in Recoveries upon feint Titles, for it would have been a great Overſight in them to have ſpoken of Covin in Recoveries generally, when they only intended Covin in feint Recoveries. But that was not their ſole Intention. For the Iſſue in Tail might falſify a feint Recovery by Covin before, but whether the Title be feint or good, the Covin is only prohibited by the Statute, and

Covin may alter the Matter where the Title is good. [a] As in the ſaid Caſe of 19. H. 8. where one diſſeized the Diſcontinuee in Tail by Covin, to the Intent to enfeoff the Iſſue in Tail within Age, who had no Knowledge of the Covin, the Feoffee ſhall not be there remitted by the better Opinion, notwithſtanding his good Title, and this is becauſe of the covinous Intent. [b] And there it is put, that if my Anceſtor diſſeizes me, to the Intent to make a Feoffment with Warranty to bar me, although the Warranty is made 20 Months afterwards, yet it is a Warranty which commences by Diſſeizin; ſo that the Intent gives a different Effect to the Act. [c] And if a Woman has good Title of Dower, if ſhe be of Covin that the Tenant ſhall be ouſted by one againſt whom ſhe recovers, yet ſhe ſhall not hold it, but ſhall be a Diſſeizoreſs; and ſo Covin may be here, tho' the Title is good. And as to that which has been ſaid, a vero non declinabit juſtus, true it is, [d] but when Truth is mixed with Covin as a noxious Herb, and Covin with Truth, this Conjunction and Mixture makes the whole unſavory, and the Goodneſs is perverted to Wickedneſs. And the Covin here ſhews itſelf apparently, for it appears by the Record that the Woman Defendant being impleaded in the firſt Suit had not View, Voucher, Eſſoign, nor other Delays, which every one that is impleaded upon good Title may with ſafe Conſcience take as Advantages given by the Law, and therefore that which appears here need not be averred, ſo that for theſe Cauſes the Covin is well averred without ſpecial Cauſe ſhewn. And as to the other Exception, viz. that Execution of the Recovery is not ſhewn, this is not neceſſary to be declared, for the Statute ſays, that the Recovery ſhall be void, and then it was not the Intent of the Statute that Execution ſhould be ſued upon a void Recovery, for which Reaſon the Recovery ſhewn by itſelf is ſufficient. Then as to the other Exception, viz. [e] that it is not ſhewn certainly how the Wife of the Plaintiff is Heir; Sir, this is not neceſſary for four Cauſes; one Cauſe is, for that the Statute is general, viz. it ſhall be lawful for the Perſon to whom, &c. to enter: So that the Statute being general gives the Party a general Anſwer according to the Statute. And therefore if a Statute was made, that if any Woman conſent to a Raviſher, the Parſon of the Pariſh where ſuch Woman dwells ſhall enter and hold to him and to his Succeſſors, there if any ſuch Parſon conveys to himſelf Title of Entry, he ſhall ſhew the Conſent to the Raviſher, and ſhall ſhew that he is Parſon, and that he ought to enter, and he needs not ſhew how he was preſented, inſtituted, and inducted Parſon, becauſe he ſhall give an Anſwer as general as the Statute itſelf was. And the Statute of 5. R. 2. cap. 7. ordains, That none make Entry into Lands and Tenements, but in Caſe where Entry is given by Law, there the Writ upon this Statute, and the Count alſo ſhall be general, viz. that he hath entered into Lands and Tenements, where the Entry was not lawful, and the Plaintiff ſhall not ſhew any Title in himſelf, or Cauſe why the Entry of the Defendant was not congeable, but as general as the Statute is, ſo general ſhall the Writ and Count be. And ſo the Statute of 8. H. 6. cap. 9. ordains than none ſhall enter into Land with forcible Hand, there the Writ and the Count ſhall be general, viz. that the Defendant with forcible Hand hath expelled and diſſeized the Plaintiff of his Freehold, and he ſhall not ſhew Title to the Freehold, nor in what Manner, or of what Kind the Force is, and this is by Reaſon of the Generality of the Statute. And the Statute of [f] Maintenance ordains, that none ſhall maintain any Quarrel, &c. there the Writ and Count ſhall be general, viz. that the Defendant hath maintained ſuch an one in quadam tranſgreſſione, and he ſhall not ſhew ſpecially what Treſpaſs, &c. and this is becauſe of the Generality of the Statute. So here inaſmuch as the Statute is general, the Averment ſhall be general, for which Reaſon it is well averred. The ſecond Cauſe to prove the Averment good is, for that if the Wife of the Plaintiff ought to ſhew certainly how ſhe is Heir, yet it might be that another is now Heir, and yet ſhe ſhall hold the Land. As put the Caſe that the Wife was enſeint with a Son at the Time of the Death of her Huſband, and before the Son was born, the Wife ſuffered a Recovery by Covin, and the Daughter now Plaintiff entered, and afterwards the Son is born, now he is Heir, and yet the Daughter ſhall hold the Land during the Life of the Wife, becauſe ſhe was then in rerum naturâ, and took the Advantage which was then given to her alone, and ſhe ſhall hold it, and the Son born afterwards ſhall not recover it of her, no more than in the Caſe in 9. H. 6. [g] where a Man deviſed Land to one for Life, Remainder to the right Heirs Males of the Deviſor, and to the Heirs of his Body begotten, and Tenant for Life died, and the next Heir to the Deviſor being a Woman entered, and afterwards ſhe had a Son, and there it is held by the better Opinion, that the Son ſhall not ouſt the Woman, becauſe the Son born afterwards ſhall not take away the Land before veſted in the Woman as Heir for Default of ſuch a Perſon then in rerum naturâ to take the Deviſe. And ſo here, the Wife of the Plaintiff might be a Daughter, or the Iſſue of a Daughter, and might enter before a Son was born, in which Caſe ſhe ſhall hold it during the Life of the Tenant in Tail, and no longer, for this Statute has not deſtroyed the Tail, but the Intent of it is to preſerve the Tail; and then if the Wife of the Plaintiff ought to ſhew how ſhe is Heir, (there being a Son born ut ſupra) thereby ſhe would give the Defendant an Occaſion to ſhew that the Son was Heir, which would be a Means of joining Iſſue upon that which is not iſſuable, for the Matter may well ſtand together, and yet the Daughter ſhall hold the Land; ſo that this would be an apparent Contrariety in the Face of the Court, and for this Cauſe the Plaintiffs ſhall not be driven to ſhew how ſhe is Heir. The third Cauſe to prove this general Averment good is, for that it may be that he who has Cauſe to enter upon a Recovery by Covin may have one, two, or more Cauſes. As if a Leaſe for Life is made to a Woman for her Jointure according to this Statute, Remainder for Years, Remainder for Life, he in the Remainder for Years makes him in the Remainder for Life his Executor, and dies, the Woman Tenant for Life ſuffers a feint Recovery, he in the Remainder for Life being alſo Executor enters, if afterwards in pleading he in the Remainder might not ſay that he was the Perſon to whom, &c. but ſhould be driven to ſhew ſpecially how, then he ſhould ſhew double Matter, and ſo the Cauſe ſhewn would be double, or perhaps treble, which would much inveigle the Court. And alſo if he ſhould be forced to hold hold himſelf to one Cauſe, then it would be an Eſtoppel to him at another Time to ſay that he entered for another Cauſe, which would be miſchievous to him. Wherefore the Averment generally that ſhe is the Perſon to whom, &c. is good without ſhewing how. The fourth Cauſe to prove the general Averment good here without ſhewing how, &c. is, for that the Wife of the Plaintiff was once in Poſſeſſion, ſo that the Eſtate in the Thing is executed, and upon this the Plaintiffs have brought an Action of Treſpaſs, in which Caſe they ſhall not plead ſo ſpecially, nor be forced to ſhew as much Certainty, as if they were demanding the Execution of a Thing. [a] And therefore if Adminiſtrators bring an Action of Treſpaſs for Goods taken out of their Poſſeſſion, they ſhall not ſhew the Letters of Adminiſtration: Otherwiſe it is, if the Action was brought for Goods taken in the Lifetime of the Inteſtate, for there they never had any Poſſeſſion of the Thing, but it is to be executed. So if a Leaſe is made for Life, Remainder in Tail, and he in the Remainder is ſeized, after the Death of the Tenant for Life his Iſſue ſhall have a Formedon, and ſhall declare upon an [b] immediate Gift, and ſhall not ſhew the [c] Deed thereof; otherwiſe it is, [d] if it was to execute the ſame. So here, inaſmuch as the Plaintiffs were once ſeized, they need not ſhew how Heir, as they ought to have done, if they had ſought to execute the Thing; and therefore in this Point the Replication is good. And three Objections have been made to the contrary, which I will anſwer. Firſt, it has been ſaid, that if the Defendant ſhould anſwer and ſay that the Wife is not the Perſon to whom, &c. this Iſſue would be too incertain to be tried: Sir, as to this I anſwer, that in many Caſes Iſſues ſhall be joined upon as great an Incertainty as this is here. For in Treſpaſs if the Defendant will ſay it is his Freehold, the Plaintiff may ſay it is his Freehold, and traverſe without that that it is the Freehold of the other; this Iſſue is good and ſhall be received, notwithſtanding there may be many Ways to prove it; and ſo although it is in a Manner incertain how it is his Freehold, yet the Iſſue is good. So in Waſt, no Waſt done, or in Treſpaſs, not guilty, are good Iſſues, and yet they comprehend no Certainty. [e] And in Treſpaſs for Goods taken, the Defendant juſtified as joint Executor with the Plaintiff to J. S. and that the Goods belonged to the Teſtator, &c. the Plaintiff ſaid that the ſaid Teſtator deviſed to him all his Goods which remained after the Legacies paid, and ſhewed that he made ſuch and ſuch Legacies, which were all his Legacies, and that they were paid, aud that afterwards the Plaintiff was poſſeſſed of the Goods as of his own proper Goods until, &c. and the Defendant ſaid, that the Teſtator made ſuch a Legacy to ſuch an one, which is not yet paid, without that, that the Legacies ſhewn by the Plaintiff are all the Legacies, &c. and this was held a good Iſſue, and yet whether or no all the Legacies were paid was an incertain Iſſue, but nevertheleſs the Iſſue was holden good. [f] And ſo if one counterpleads a Voucher, viz. that neither he nor any of his Anceſtors ever had any Thing, &c. he ought to ſay, and of this he puts himſelf upon the Country, ſo that the Iſſue is joined preſently upon an Incertainty. And the like is done in many other Caſes, and ſo is it here. Secondly, it was objected, that if it was ſhewn certainly how the Wife of the Plaintiff was Heir, the Defendant might ſay that ſhe had a Brother, Sir, to this I have already given for Anſwer, that ſo it might be, and yet the Wife of the Plaintiff ſhould hold the Land during the Life of the Woman Defendant. And it was alſo ſaid, that the Defendant might ſay, that the Plaintiff is a Baſtard; Sir, to this I ſay, that the Defendant might not have ſuch, nor any other Anſwer to the Cauſe, no more than upon Receit of him in Reverſion, for that ought to be ſhewn, but it is not traverſable; no more ſhall the Cauſe here be, wherefore this is ſufficiently anſwered. Thirdly, it was objected that Pleas ought to be certain to every Intent, which the Replication here is not in this Point; Sir, this is not ſo, for in Treſpaſs his Freehold is a good Plea, and yet it is not certain to every Intent, for it may be that the Plaintiff has an Eſtate for Years, in which Caſe he ſhall puniſh the Defendant notwithſtanding it be his Freehold. And ſo Diſſeizin by J. S. to the Defendant who enfeoffed the Plaintiff, upon whom the Deſendant entered, is a good Plea, and yet it may be that the Defendant releaſed after the Diſſeizin. So that Certainty in Pleas is not always requiſite. [g] And there is a Caſe where Tenant at Will brought an Action of Treſpaſs againſt one Continuando, &c. and recovered Damages by Award; and yet the Replication, in which the Eſtate at Will was firſt ſhewn, was not certain, for he ſhewed in the Replication that ſuch an one was ſeized, and leaſed at Will, &c. in which Caſe it might be that he had determined his Will afterwards, but yet the Replication was adjudged good, notwithſtanding the Incertainty; ſo ſhall it be here notwithſtanding any of theſe three Objections. Another Objection was made to the Replication, becauſe the Plaintiffs have ſaid, that upon their Entry they were ſeized in Tail in Right of the Wife of the Plaintiff; Sir, this is well enough ſaid, for they have ſaid, quorum premiſſorum prætextu, which Clauſe refers to the whole Matter, viz. to the Statute, and to that which is expreſſed in the Anſwer and in in the Replication; and the Defendant hath ſaid in her Anſwer, that the Wife of the Plaintiff was Heir to George Tailbois, and then inaſmuch as the Defendant has confeſſed her to be Heir, and the Statute gives the Entry to the Heir ſpecial, viz. in Tail, and the Averment is that ſhe was the ſame Perſon ut ſupra, which is to be intended in Tail, it ſeems to me that the Plaintiffs ſhall be ſaid to be ſeized in Tail, in the ſame Manner as if the Defendant had been dead; for the Statute ſaith, that the Perſon to whom, &c. ſhall enter, and enjoy according to his Title, and upon the whole Matter the Tail is ſhewn to be their Title, and thereof they ſhall be ſeized. And in Treſpaſs, if the Defendant will ſay, that J. S. the Father of the Plaintiff, whoſe Heir he is, leaſed the Land to the Defendant for Years by Deed which he ſhews forth, in which there is a Condition to re-enter for Default of Payment of Rent, and the Deed is entered verbatim, it is ſufficient for the Plaintiff to ſay that the Rent was in Arrear to him at ſuch a Day, and he entered for Default of Payment, and this Replication is good without ſhewing that he is Heir to the Father, and that the Reverſion deſcended to him &c. for upon the whole Matter diſcloſed by the Plaintiff and Defendant his Entry appears to be lawful. So here, upon the whole Matter the Eſtate, viz. the Tail appears, and therefore the Replication is good.

And as to the Exception taken becauſe it was not ſhewn certainly whether it was an inheritance or Purchaſe, Sir, this is not material to be ſhewn, for it ſhall not be intended to be by Diſſeizin, except it be ſo ſhewn. And as to the Exception taken, becauſe they have not pleaded the Statute certainly, nor the place where it was made, Sir, this is not neceſſary, for it is a general Act, of which all People are bound to take Notice; and therefore it is not neceſſary to ſhew it certainly, quod omnes Juſticiarii conceſſerunt. Then as to the Statute, it ſeems to me that the Woman Defendant here is within the Words of the Statute, and if ſhe be not, yet ſhe is included within the Equity of it. For firſt the Words are, that if any Woman, who hath an Eſtate in Dower, for Life, or in Tail, jointly with her Huſband, or ſolely to herſelf, or to her own Uſe, in any Manors, Lands, &c. theſe Words may be taken, where ſhe has a Uſe in Land, or Land in Uſe, which is all one, and theſe Words which are obſcure are explained by the Words following in the Statute, which are, that if ſuch Women ſuffer any Recovery of the ſame Lands againſt them, or any of them, or any other ſeized to their Uſe, or to the Uſe of any of them, according to the Form aforeſaid, that then, &c. which Words, viz. or any other ſeized to their Uſe, fully declare and explain the Senſe and Manner in which the Words aforeſaid are to be taken, which is, that thoſe Women, that have a Uſe, ſhall be within the Words, &c. For an Eſtate in Uſe is not mentioned but in one Place in the Premiſſes of the Statute, viz. where it is ſaid, or ſolely to herſelf, or to her own Uſe, for the other Clauſe which ſpeaks of a Uſe, viz. or by any Perſon ſeized to the Uſe of the ſaid Huſband, or of his Anceſtors, is to be intended where the Thing out of which the Uſe iſſues is given, viz. the Demeſn, ſo that an Eſtate in Uſe is not mentioned or intended by this Clauſe, nor in any other Clauſe before it, but only in the ſaid Clauſe which ſaith, or ſolely to herſelf, or to her own Uſe. And then if this Clauſe only ſpeaks of a Woman ceſtuy que Uſe, and the ſaid Clauſe after, which ſpeaks of Recoveries had againſt Women, or any ſeized to their Uſe, or to the Uſe of any of them, is only referred to this, it cannot be denied but that the Caſe here, where the Woman had a joint Eſtate in Tail with her Huſband in Uſe of Land of the Inheritance of the Huſband, is fully within the Words of the Statute. And it is to be noted, that this Statute was made within 15 Years of the Statute of 1. Rich. 3. cap. 1. which ordains, that the Acts of Ceſtuy que Uſe ſhall bind him and his Feoffees; and perhaps ſome, who were Makers of the ſaid Statute, were alſo at the making of the Statute of 11. H. 7. and therefore they well conſidered the Effect of the firſt Statute, which was, that a Recovery had againſt Tenant in Tail was not good longer than during the Life of the Tenant in Tail. And then if the Statute of 11. H. 7. ſhould ordain no other Penalty than only to make the Recovery void againſt the Iſſues, and that they ſhould enter as if no ſuch Recovery had been, then the Statute would be in vain, for it would provide only for that which was provided for before; but the Statute has a quite different Intendment, for it makes that which was lawful before to be now unlawful; and if Tenant in Tail of Land had ſuffered ſuch a feint Recovery, as in our Caſe is alledged, this had been avoidable by the Iſſues in Tail, as it ſhall be by the Iſſues in Tail in Uſe. And then inaſmuch as the Tenant in Tail in Uſe might do as great prejudice as Tenant in Tail in Poſſeſſion, and no more, and they are in equal Degree, it ſeems the Intent of the Statute was to provide as well for the one as the other, and ſo the Intent [a] ſhall aſſiſt the Obſcurity of the Words in the Conſtruction of the Words themſelves. And if ſhe be not within the Words of the Statute, yet the Equity of the Statute will extend to her. For although this Statute reſtrains a Principle of Law, in that it will not ſuffer Tenants in Tail to bind their Iſſues by Recoveries, or Warranty, &c. yet it ſhall be extended by Equity, inaſmuch as it was made in Reſtraint of the Liberty which the common Law gave to the Prejudice of others. And upon this Ground there are many ſuch Statutes extended by Equity. As the Statute of Marlbridge cap. 6. ſpeaks of thoſe that fein falſe Feoffments of their Lands, which they will leaſe for Term of Years, to defraud the chief Lords of their Wards; which Statute ſpeaks only of Eſtates for Years, and Feoffments, yet a Leaſe for Life, or a Gift in Tail to the Iſſue is taken within the Equity of the Statute, becauſe the Statute was made in Reſtraint of that hurtful Liberty, which Tenants enjoyed by the common Law to the Prejudice of their Lords. * So the Statute of 4. H. 7. cap. 17. ſaith, that if ceſtuy que Uſe of Land holden by Knight's Service d e, and no Will by him declared, the Lord ſhall have the Ward, there if he declare a Will in Tail, yet the Lord ſhall have the Ward by the Equity and Intent of the Statute, and not by the Words; for a Will in Tail is a Will, although the Reverſion of the Uſe deſcends; but the Equity of the Statutte extends to it, for the Statute was made to give Remedy, where Wrong, Injury, and Covin were before; for ſuch Uſes [b] were invented and deviſed upon Craft and Subtilty to defraud Lords of their Wards and other Things. So the Statute of Weſtminſter, 2. cap. 1. ſpeaks only of three Gifts in Tail, viz. in ſpecial Tail, in Frank Marriage, and in general Tail, and recites the Words of the Gifts; [c] yet if Land is given to one and to his Heirs, and if the Donee die without Heir of his Body, that it ſhall remain to another, this ſhall be a good Tail by the Equity of the Statute although it be out of the Words: For at the common Law the Intent of the Donor was infringed and eluded, which was contrary to right and good Conſcience, and therefore the Statute, being made to reſtrain that vicious Liberty of breaking ſuch Intents, which was ſuffered by the common Law, ſhall be extended by Equity. [d] And ſo the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 3. ſaith, the Heirs, and they to whom the Reverſion belongeth ſhall be admitted, &c. by the Equity of which Statute he in Remainder ſhall be received, for the common Law, which would not permit him to be received, ſuffered a Wrong, and this Statute being made for the Relief thereof, ſhall be extended by Equity. [e] And ſo by the Equity of the Statute of 13. Rich. 2. cap. 17. which gives Receit for feint Pleading, Receit ſhall be had for feint defending. And an Action of Account which is given to Executors by Statute ſhall be extended by Equity to Adminiſtrators.

[b] And ſo the Statute of 1. H. 5. cap. 3. gives an Action for forging falſe Deeds, by which the Titles and Poſſeſſions of others are troubled; here the Statute is in the copulative, yet if the Title only be diſturbed, it ſhall be taken within the Equity of the Statute, for the Diſſeizee who hath only a Right ſhall have an Action, as it is adjudged. So that we ſee where the Common Law ſuffers any thing to be done, or gives any Perſon a Liberty or Priviledge, which is hurtful or prejudicial to another, and a Statute is made for the Redreſs of it, that by the Equity of that Statute a like Thing ſhall be taken within the like Purview. And ſuch Conſtruction of Statutes is of great Help and Relief to innocent and guiltleſs Perſons, and a great Diſcomfort and Terror to the guilty and evil Doers, and therefore it is beneficial to the Public-Weal, which the Law principally regards. In our Caſe then, the Liberty which the Law gave to Tenant in Tail to diſcontinue, or ſuffer a Recovery, or to do ſuch Acts, was prejudicial to many; for the Reverſion was thereby deveſted out of the Donor, and Prejudice was done to the Iſſues, for ſuch Recovery (as is here alledged) made by William Tailbois was a diſcontinuance to them, which alſo was contrary to the Intent of the Donor; ſo that more received Prejudice than Benefit from it. And thus it was with regard to Tenant in Tail in Uſe, for the Recovery here had by William Tailbois for the Time took away the Reverſion of the Uſe, [c] for he who recovers having the Land is ſeized to no Uſe. And then when the Statute was made in Reſtraint of ſuch hurtful Liberty of the Tenant in Tail in Poſſeſſion, and the ſame Miſchief and Prejudice is done by Tenant in Tail in Uſe, I conclude that this ſhall be taken within the Equity of the Statute for the Cauſes before ſhewn. And ſo the Woman Defendant is within the Purview of the Words of the Statute, and within the Equity of it alſo. And therefore for theſe Cauſes the Plaintiffs ſhall recover.

Brown J.

At another Day Brown Juſtice argued. And he was of the contrary Opinion for two Cauſes in the Pleading. One was, for that the Cauſe of Covin is not ſhewn. For although the Statute ſpeaks generally of Covin, yet it refers the Pleading thereof to the Common Law, and therefore inaſmuch as the Cauſe of the Covin is not ſhewn, the Replication is bad. The other Cauſe was [d], for that the Plaintiffs have not ſhewn how the Wife of the Plaintiff was Heir, and therefore ſhe could not be ſeized in Tail as it was pleaded. And as to the Execution, he held that it was not neceſſary to be ſhewn. And as to the Matter in Law, he held the Caſe here within the Words of the Statute, and if it was not, yet he held it to be within the Equity of it, becauſe the Statute was made in Avoidance of Covin, which is to be abhorred, and therefore the Statute is beneficial to the public Weal. But for the ſaid Defects in the Replication, he held that the Plaintiffs ſhould not recover.

Mountague C. J.

Mountague Chief Juſtice. It ſeems to me, that for one Defect only in the Replication the Plaintiffs ſhall not have Judgment. Firſt it ſeems to me, that Covin is well averred without ſpecial Cauſe ſhewn. [e] For Covin (according to the true Definition of it) is a ſecret Agreement determined in the Hearts of [f] two or more Men, to the Prejudice of another. As if Tenant for Life will ſecretly conſpire with another, that the other ſhall recover to the Prejudice of the Reverſioner, for by this his Reverſion ſhould be taken away; and this Conſpiracy is and may be termed Covin, for all the Parts of the Definition of Covin are there fully performed, for there is an Union of their two Hearts, and it is done ſecretly, and it is to the Prejudice of a third Perſon, and ſo it is a perfect Covin without Defect or Blemiſh. * And, Sir, this Covin to have a Recovery may be as well where the Title of the Recovery is good, as where it is feint or bad. [h] And therefore, if a Woman has Cauſe of Dower, and is of Covin that the Tenant ſhall be ouſted by A. againſt whom ſhe recovers, and has Execution, her Eſtate ſhall be adjudged, as againſt the Diſſeize, to be by Diſſeizin, and yet the Title of the Recovery is good and true, but the Covin is the Cauſe why it ſhall be looked upon to be by Diſſeizin. [i] So if the Iſſue in Tail who has good Cauſe to have a Formedon in Deſcender upon a Diſcontinuance, be of Covin that A. ſhall diſſeize R. againſt whom he recovers, he ſhall not be remitted, although his Title be good, but he ſhall be adjudged a Diſſeizor by reaſon of the Covin. And theſe two Caſes are ſo adjudged in our Books, which prove that Covin may be where the Title is good, and the Title ſhall not give Benefit to him that has it, by reaſon of the Covin, for the Mixture of the good and ill together makes the whole bad, and the Truth is obſcured by the falſhood, and the Virtue drowned in the Vice. And ſo here, although the Title of William Tailbois, who recovered in the Formedon, be good, yet there might be Covin between the Woman now Defendant and the ſaid William Tailbois, and then to ſhew Cauſe of Covin to falſify the Title in any Point is not requiſite, becauſe the Title may be good, and yet there may be Covin, and ſo they may ſtand together, and therefore it ſhall not be neceſſary to ſhew Cauſe, &c. And, Sir, the Title is to be tried between William Tailbois and others, and not between the Plaintiff and the Defendant here, for they are Strangers to the title of the Formedon, and it is not the Courſe of Law to try the Title of any Man between Strangers, where he that has the Title is not Party. But if the Plaintiffs had claimed by William Tailbois, or under his Title, then it would be more reaſonable to force them to try the Title by whom they claim, but they don't claim by ſuch Title, and therefore by the due Courſe of Law the Diſcuſſion of it does not come now in Debate, and for this Cauſe it ſhall not be ſhewn. Alſo there is another Reaſon to prove that the Cauſe of Covin ſhall not be ſhewn, for at this Time the only Thing to be diſcuſſed is, whether or no the Woman Defendant was Party to the Covin, and (as I ſaid) inaſmuch as Covin is a ſecret Thing, whereof by Intendment of Law a Stranger cannot have Knowledge, for this Reaſon

Reaſon the Law will not force a Stranger to ſhew the Cauſethereof. [a] And if the Defendant pleads that the Plaintiff holds jointly with another, he ſhall not be forced to ſhew of whoſe Feoffment, becauſe by Preſumption of Law he cannot have Knowledge thereof; otherwiſe it is of Jointenancy pleaded on his own Side. And alſo if a Man pleads a Deed which does not belong to him, he ſhall not be driven to ſhew it. So here, foraſmuch as by Preſumption of Law the Specialty of Covin does not lie in the Knowledge of the Plaintiffs, they ſhall not be compelled by Law to ſhew it. Alſo there is another Reaſon to prove that the general Averment of Covin is good. For if the Law be that there may be Covin although the Title is good, then there may be ſpecial Cauſe of Covin. And in all ſuch Caſes a Man ſhall aver the Covin generally, where the Averment of it is given by Statutes, or by the common Law. The Statute of 13. Rich. 2. cap. 17. gives Receit for feint Pleading, and feint Pleading and Covin are all one: and there he ſhall pray to be received by Allegation of feint Pleading generally. And ſo Tenant for Years by the Statute of Glouceſter ſhall be received, and ſhall ſay that the Action was brought by Covin generally, as it is adjudged in many Caſes. [b] And in Aſſize againſt three, one made Default, and a Perſon anſwered for him as Bailiff, and afterwards he came in and diſallowed him for his Bailiff, and ſaid it was his Will that no other ſhould anſwer for him, but he would make Default, and not appear, and the bailiffs of the Place where the Aſſize was brought came and demanded Conuſance by the King's Charter, and ſaid that this Default was of Covin to take from them their Conuſance, and this Averment of Covin generally was held good, for there is not any ſpecial Cauſe of Covin. [c] And in a Formedon by two Coparceners againſt one, the Parties were at Iſſue, and the Tenant challenged one of the Jurors, and one of the Demandants agreed to his Challenge, to the Intent that the Inqueſt ſhould not be taken, becauſe he was infeoffed to his own Uſe, and the other Demandant averred the Challenge to be by Covin, and prayed that the Covin might be tried, and the general Averment was held good, and it was adjudged that the Covin ſhould be tried. So that Covin was averred generally, where there could not be any ſpecial Cauſe thereof. And ſo if a Man will alledge Impriſonment in Excuſe of his Default, the other may ſay that this Impriſonment was by Covin generally. [d] And ſo if a Sale in Market-overt be pleaded, the other may aver it to be by Covin generally, cauſâ qua ſupra. So if a Feoffment is pleaded, the other may aver that it was by Champerty, generally, without ſhewing any ſpecial Cauſe thereof. [e] And ſo in all Caſes where Averment of Covin, or of any other Thing, is given by Statutes or common Law, there a Man ſhall aver the ſame generally, where there cannot be any ſpecial Cauſe thereof; but where there may be a ſpecial Cauſe it is otherwiſe. As in 9. H. 6. where in a Præcipe quod reddat the Tenant pleaded in Abatement of the Writ, a Recovery in Aſſize by a Stranger by Action tried, and the Demandant would have averred that the ſaid Aſſize was brought by Covin between the Plaintiff in the Aſſize and the Tenant, and he was not admitted to that general Averment without ſpecial Cauſe ſhewn, for there is a ſpecial Cauſe there to put the Party to anſwer, and therefore the Party ought to ſhew the Title to be falſe, for if the Title is good, there cannot be Covin. But here whether the Title is good or not, yet the Statute prohibits the Covin, and the Covin is a Condition annexed to his Eſtate, which makes the Eſtate defeazible, and therefore it is not the Title which is in queſtion, but the Covin, and for this Reaſon the Covin may not lie in a ſpecial Cauſe, and then it ſhall be generally averred, as it is, and ſo the Averment of it is good. Alſo there is another Cauſe to prove it good. [g] For as the King's Subjects are born to inherit Land and other Things, ſo are they born to inherit and enjoy the Laws of this Realm, and every Man alike may have the Benefit of the Law, and the common Preſumption is, that every Man chuſes to accept of it. But the contrary appears in the Woman Defendant, for when ſhe was impleaded in the Formedon, ſhe had not View, nor was eſſoigned: and it is to be preſumed that ſhe had Cauſe of Voucher, inaſmuch as the Tail is ſo old, and ſhe did not vouch, but loſt the Advantages given her by the Law; and alſo ſhe came the firſt Day, (and therefore was not amerced) and ſaid that ſhe could not deny the Action, all which Things prove [h] openly a Covin, and as the common ſaying is, it hath Meat in its Mouth. [i] And it is holden in one Book, that where a woman received pleaded in Abatement of the Writ, that another had brought a Writ againſt her Huſband and her, pending this Writ, upon eign Title, and had recovered by nient dedire, and had ſued Execution, that this was no Plea, becauſe no Title was tried in the other Writ, and a nient dedire is no more than a Confeſſion of the Tenant, and his own Act. So here, the Recovery by nient dedire is the Act of the Party himſelf, and appears to be covinous, and then to ſhew Cauſe of Covin, or to aver that ſpecially which appears [k] openly is vain. And therefore for all theſe Cauſes the general Averment of Covin is good. And as to the Exception taken becauſe Execution is not alledged to be ſued, Sir, this is not neceſſary, for the Statute ſpeaks of Recoveries by Covin, and it is here a Recovery by Covin, although Execution is not ſued. And as to what has been ſaid to the contrary, [l] that if a feint Recovery is ſued againſt Tenant in Tail, and he dies before Execution, the Iſſue is remitted, and the Recovery is not executory againſt him, and then if this be ſo, it is out of the Miſchief of the Statute; Sir, as to this, if it be ſo, yet it is within the Purview of the Statute. For the Condition, which the Statute has annexed to the Eſtate of the Woman is broken, viz. by the Recovery with Covin. [m] For if a Man makes a Feoffment to one upon Condition that he ſhall not infeoff J. S. although the Feoffee within Age makes a Feoffment to J. M. yet the condition is broken, notwithſtanding the Eſtate is defeazible. So here, although the feint Recovery be defeazible by the Remitter, if Execution is not ſued in the Life of the Tenant in Tail, yet the Covin in the Recovery (which is in Nature of a Condition) is the Cauſeof Forfeiture of the Eſtate. For there was perfect Covin, and a Recovery without Execution, for which Reaſon the Replication is good without ſhewing the Execution. And as to the other Exception ception taken, becauſe it was not ſhewn certainly how the Wife of the Plaintiff was Heir, [a] it ſeems to me, that for this Cauſe only the Replication is bad. For it is a Learning in our Law, that [b] Replications, [c] Titles, [d] Pleas in Abatement of Writs, and [e] Eſtoppels ought to comprehend Certainty. And the Reaſon why Replications ought to be certain is, becauſe Replications force the Party to Iſſue, and in order that the Court and the Jurors, who try the Iſſue, may not be inveigled or miſled by Incertainty, the Law, which is founded upon Reaſon in this Point, ordains and provides that Replications, which make the Iſſues, ſhall be certain. [f] But a Bar, which contains Certainty to a common Intent, is good: [g] for a Man may plead in Bar que eſtate, without ſhewing how; but in the Replication if he pleads que eſtate generally, it is not good, as it is held in 2. Ed. 4. but he ought to ſhew how he came to the Eſtate for the Reaſon aforeſaid, viz. for the ſake of Certainty. And every Replication ought to be directly contrary to the Bar, and then the Party ought to traverſe, or elſe confeſs and avoid the Bar. And here the Bar is good, and the Replication contains a Miſbehaviour of the Woman Defendant, by which her Eſtate is avoidable, whereupon the Plaintiffs ought to make themſelves able to take Benefit of the Miſbehaviour of the Defendant, and if this Ability is not certainly pleaded, then the Bar, which is fully confeſſed, is not fully avoided; for no Man in the World can diſcern or judge by the Pleading how the Wife of the Plaintiff is Couſin to George Tailbois, and it may be that ſhe is Couſin by Blood to him, and not Couſin and Heir to the Land, for it may be that he had a Son who had a Son. And theſe Words prætextu quorum præmiſſorum, &c. don't make the Matter better, for they neither [h] encreaſe nor diminiſh, but are referred to that which is ſaid before, and to no more, as they are well taken and expounded in the Bill of Debt againſt the Warden of the Fleet in [i] 7. H. 6. And here if Iſſue ſhould be joined, that ſhe was not the Perſon to whom, &c. this Iſſue comprehends no Certainty. [k] And therefore in 4. H. 7. where the Condition of an Obligation was that the Obligor ſhould not enter nor claim a certain Houſe, and the Defendant ſaid that he did not enter nor claim it, and the Plaintiff ſaid that he did claim it, this Replication was held not good for the Incertainty, but he ought to have ſaid that he came to the Land, and claimed it, and entered into it, and this would make a good Iſſue. [l] And if a Man would make himſelf Title in his Replication by Entry into Land as next of Blood of a Woman raviſhed, who has conſented to the Raviſher, he ought to ſhew how he is next of Blood. [m] And ſo if a Man makes himſelf Title in his Replication as Lord by Entry in Mortmain, he ought to ſhew how he is Lord; and if he in the Reverſion prays to be received, he ought to ſhew how he came to the Reverſion. And all theſe Caſes are given by Statutes, which ſpeak generally, as the Statute here does, but yet for the Cauſes before ſhewn a Man ought to make a ſpecial Conveyance to the Thing or Benefit given by the general Words. And in a Writ of Ward if the Defendant will ſay that the Anceſtor of the Infant held of the Plaintiff in Socage, and not by Knights-Service, this hath been adjudged no good Plea, without ſhewing how in Socage, as by Fealty only, becauſe otherwiſe the Iſſue is incertain. And ſo inaſmuch as this Replication, which ought to be certain becauſe it tenders an Iſſue, is incertain, and alſo inaſmuch as it ought to enable the Plaintiffs to take Benefit of the Miſbehaviour of the Woman Defendant, and makes them Actors in this Cauſe, (for which Reaſon they ought to alledge every Thing certainly, and the whole is incertain) for theſe Cauſes it ſeems to me that the Replication is not good in this Point. And as to what has been ſaid by my Brother Hales, that the Averment ſhall be general becauſe of the Generality of the Words of the Statute, I have anſwered that before: And as to the Caſe put by him for an Example, viz. if a Statute was made, that the Parſon of the Church ſhould enter for a Rape, he ſhould ſay generally that he was Parſon, without ſhewing Inſtitution or Induction; Sir, I confeſs this to be Law, for if he ſhews that he was Parſon of the Church, he pleads certainly, for that is a Certainty. But if the Caſe had been put that he ſhould ſay he was the Perſon who ought to enter, and did not ſhew that he was Parſon of the Church, this had been more like our Caſe, and I apprehend this would not be a good Title. And as to the Caſes put of Writs of Entry upon the Statute, and Declarations, Sir, they are not like unto a Title, for ſome of the Writs and Declarations are general, and ſome are ſpecial. But Titles ought always to be certain, for he that makes Title is thereby become Actor, and he that is Actor ought always to plead certainly. And as to what is ſaid by my Brother Hales, that the Plaintiffs ſhall not be compelled to ſhew how ſhe is Heir becauſe it may be that another is now Heir, as the Son born afterwards, and yet the Wife of the Plaintiff ſhould the Land during the Life of the Tenant in Tail, Sir, as to this I ſay that it is a Matter worthy of Conſideration. And it ſeems to me, [n] that the Son born afterwards ſhall enter and ouſt the Daughter; for the Statute of 11. H. 7. ſaith, that the Perſon, to whom the Title belongs after the Death of ſuch Woman, ſhall immediately enter into the Tenements, and the ſame ſhall poſſeſs and enjoy according to his Title in them, and then I ſay, that the Title, which the Daughter had to enter was in Tail, and after the Son is born, the Title to the Tail is devolved from the Daughter; then if ſhe ſhall poſſeſs and enjoy the Tenements acording to her Title in them, and in no other Manner, and by the Birth of the Son the Title to the Tail is devolved from the Daughter, and veſted in the Son, then I ſay, that the Son, in whom the Title now is, may enter. And it is not like to the Caſe where a Woman ſeized in Fee conſents to a Raviſher, and the Daughter being next of Blood enters, there I will agree [o] that the Son born afterwards ſhall not take away the Title and Poſſeſſion of the Daughter, for there it is of a Fee-Simple. [p] And ſo where a Remainder is appointed in Fee to the right Heirs of J. S. who dies having a Daughter, who enters after the Death of the Tenant for Life, there I agree that the Son born afterwards ſhall not remove the Lands before veſted in the Daughter as a Purchaſe, for there it is a Fee ſimple, to which the Son born afterwards hath no Right, for the Land never was in any of his Anceſtors before. But here the Eſtate is an Eſtate Tail, and the Son ought to have it per formam doni. Et poſſeſſio fratris de feodo ſimplici facit ſororem eſſe hæredem. [a] But the Poſſeſſion of the Brother of an Eſtate Tail as Heir to his Father will not make the Siſter to be Heir, but it ſhall deſcend to the younger Son of the half Blood. [b] And if the Baſtard eign abates into Fee ſimple Land after the Death of the Father, and dies ſeized without Interruption, and his Iſſue enters, he ſhall hold it, and the Right of the mulier puiſn, and of his Heirs is bound for ever. [c] But otherwiſe it is of Lands in Tail, for the Right of the mulier puiſn or of his Iſſues ſhall not be bound there. So that there is a great Difference between Fee Simple Lands and Lands in Tail. And therefore here inaſmuch as the Title is in Tail, and the Act ſaith that the Perſon ſhall enjoy it according to his Title, which is here in Tail, and the Eſtate of the Woman, who ſuffered the Recovery by Covin, was defeated by the Entry of the Daughter, the Son born may for this Cauſe enter and ouſt the Daughter, for the Title in Tail is in him, and there the common Proverb is verified, viz. one ſhall beat the Buſh, and another have the Bird. [d] As if a Man has Land by Deſcent on the Part of his Mother, and he makes a Feoffment upon Condition, and dies without Iſſue, and the Heir of the Part of the Father enters, the Heir of the Part of the Mother ſhall ouſt him; and ſo I have declared my Opinion in the ſaid Caſe: but it was well moved, and it is a cunning Caſe. And as to what was alſo ſaid by my Brother Hales fo. 52. that if the Plaintiff ſhould ſhew how ſhe is Heir, then it would give Occaſion to the Defendant to ſay that ſhe was a Baſtard, or had an elder Brother; Sir, whether or no it be reaſonable to give ſuch Anſwer, I myſelf report to the Audience quaſi diceret that it is reaſonable, for this deſtroys the Title of the Plaintiffs without ſhewing the ſpecial Matter. And as to what was alſo ſaid by him, that if the Party ſhould be forced to ſhew how he had Title, then it might be that he had double Title, as in the Caſe there [e] put, and the ſhewing of that would make the Plea double, Sir, as to that the Plaintiffs have prevented this well enough, for being afraid that the Plea might be double, they have ſhewn nothing, and now this is worſe than a double Plea, for a double Plea has Matter of Subſtance, but here there is no Matter of Subſtance. And, Sir, in the ſaid [f] Caſe the Title will not be double, for the Remainder for Years, and the Remainder for Life commence at one Time, and upon one Livery, and are no more than one Title, and whether there be one or two Titles, in our Law a Man ought to hold himſelf to one matter, and not to double matter. And as to what has been [g] ſaid, that it would be an Eſtoppel, Sir, this is not ſo, for when one is forced to ſhew a Thing certain, and to rely upon one Point, he ſhall not be eſtopped at another Time to ſhew another Thing, which he could not ſhew before, for if he ſhould the Law would be unreaſonable in this Point, for it would prejudice a Man, where there was no Default in him; for which Cauſe it ſhall not be an Eſtoppel. And as to the other Reaſon moved by my Brother Hales, [h] that the Plaintiffs need not ſhew how Heir, becauſe they were once ſeized, as if a Remainder in Tail is once executed, the Iſſue in Tail ſhall have a Formedon, and ſhall declare upon an immediate [i] Gift; Sir, I agree to this Caſe, for all paſſes at one Time, and upon one Livery. But if it was by Way of Grant of a Reverſion, there although they were once ſeized it would be otherwiſe; for in [k] 20. Aſs. a Diverſity is taken between a Remainder and a Reverſion, for there the Plaintiff in Aſſize after the Bar made himſelf Title by a Grant of the Reverſion, and it was held that he ought to ſhew the Deed of Grant thereof, notwithſtanding he was once ſeized by Force of the ſame. So that he that makes Title is always Actor, and ought to plead certainly. [l] And it is held in 2. H. 6. that if one makes himſelf Title by Force of the King's Letters Patents, he ought to ſhew them, notwithſtanding he is once ſeized; and perhaps in the Caſe of the Remainder, if one be to make himſelf Title in his Replication by Force of ſuch Remainder veſted in him, he ought to ſhew the Eſtate precedent, and may not plead a Feoffment to him generally; for when a Man makes Title to himſelf, he pleads as certainly as if the Thing was to be executed, notwithſtanding he is once ſeized, for he is thereby become Actor (as I ſaid). Wherefore for theſe Cauſes the Replication is not good in this Point. And as to the Matter in Law upon the Statute, it ſeems to me that this Caſe is within the Letter of the Statute in one or two Places. Firſt, we have a Learning in our Law, [m] that if the Terms and Letter of any Statute are obſcure and difficult to be underſtood, we ought to have Recourſe to the Intent of the Makers, and thereby we ſhall come at the Meaning of the Letter. And therefore the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 3. ſays, In caſe when a Man doth loſe by Default the Land which was the Right of his Wife, it was very hard that the Wife after the Death of her Huſband had no other Recovery but by a Writ of Right, &c. Here the Statute ſpeaks, where the Huſband loſt, &c. [n] And if the Huſband alone had loſt, the Law always was that the Wife might enter, and ſhe was not driven to her Writ of Right, but the Expoſition of the Statute is, where the Huſband and Wife loſe by Default, for ſuch was the Intent of the Statute. [o] And the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 1. ſaith, that if a Fine be levied hereafter upon ſuch Lands, ipſo jure ſit nullus; which Words ſeem to make the Fine void, but yet it is not void, but works a Diſcontinuance, though it is void as to barring the Right of the Tail. And thus the ambiguous Words of Statutes have always been expounded according to the Intent of the Makers. And the Statute of Glouceſter cap. 3. ſaith, Likewiſe the Heir of the Wife ſhall not be barred of his Action after the Death of his Father and Mother, to demand the Inheritance of his Mother by Writ of Entry, which his Father did alien in the Time of his Mother, whereof no Fine is levied in the King's Court: Which Words whereof, &c. are doubtful and incertain in the Letter, [p] but the Meaning of them is, whereof no Fine is levied by the Huſband and Wife, for Fines may well be levied by them, and ſuch has been the Expoſition ever ſince according to the Intent of the Makers. So that the Intent of the Legiſlature is to be ſought for in the Expoſition of the ambiguous Words of Statutes, and the Letter ſhall be aided by the Intent. The Words then being doubtful here, we muſt enquire into the Intent of the Legiſlature. And as to this it is firſt to be obſerved, that the Marriages of Women and their Advancement thereby is greatly favoured in our Law, inſomuch that if a Woman gives [a] Land to a Man cauſâ matrimonii prælocuti, and he will not marry her, but marries another, ſhe ſhall have a Writ to recover the Land. [b] And if Land is given in Frank-marriage, and the Parties are afterwards divorced, the Woman ſhall have all the Land. [c] And where a Cui in vita is given by the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 3. upon Recovery by Default againſt the Huſband and Wife, by the Equity thereof a Woman divorced ſhall have a Cui ante divortium to recover the Land loſt by the Huſband and Wife by Default before the Divorce. Which Caſes prove how greatly the Proviſion of Marriage and the Eſtate thereof is favoured by the Common Law. And then if they, whoſe Eſtates are ſo greatly favoured by the Law, will be of Covin and Deceit to hurt and impair thoſe Eſtates, and to diſinherit the Heirs, and ſo to reward Benevolence with Wrong and Diſheriſon, certainly it cannot be thought but that every Man would wiſh to ſee ſuch Women puniſhed, and that the Intent of the Makers of the Statute of 11. H. 7. was as extreme againſt them as poſſible. And ſo it ſeems to me that the Intent of the Makers of the Statute is to be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt theſe Women, and then if the Words of the ſame Statute are doubtful, they ſhall be interpreted moſt ſtrongly againſt them. And with Regard to the Words, Sir, the firſt Part of the Statute (which is in the Disjunctive) ſaith, that if any Woman, who hath had, or afterwards ſhall have any Eſtate in Dower, for Term of Life, or in Tail, jointly with her Huſband, or ſolely to herſelf, or to her own Uſe, in any Tenements, &c. of the Inheritance or Purchaſe of her Huſband, &c. ſo that the Eſtate in Dower may not be referred to theſe Words, jointly with her Huſband, for a Woman cannot have an Eſtate in Dower jointly with her Huſband, but theſe Words, jointly with her Huſband, ſhall be referred to the two other Eſtates, viz. for Life, or in Tail, and here the Eſtate is in Tail, and ſo within the Words. But then the Eſtate is referred to the Things following, viz. in Manors, Lands, Tenements, or other Hereditaments; and, Sir, here it cannot be denied but that the Eſtate is an Hereditament, that is to ſay, in the Uſe, for a Uſe is an Hereditament, and ſuch an Hereditament, whereof [d] poſſeſſio fratris in feodo ſimplici facit ſororem eſſe hæredem, as it is held in 5. Ed. [e] 4. and ſuch an Hereditament, that if a Man has to the Value of 40 s. therein, he ſhall be [f] ſworn in an Aſſize by the Common Law: And it is ſuch a Thing, as Statutes (ſuch as the Statute of Pernor of Profits, and others) have admitted to be an Hereditament. Here then the Woman has an Eſtate Tail in an Hereditament; but there is one Circumſtance wanting, and that is, that the Hereditament ought to be of the Inheritance or Purchaſe of her Huſband. And as to this, I ſay, that here the Uſe and the Land alſo was the Inheritance of the Huſband, for his Heir might inherit it, and an Inheritance is ſuch an Eſtate as may be inherited by the Heir. And as to the Definition of Britton which makes a Diſtinction between an Inheritance and a Purchaſe, Sir, I have no great Regard to it, for his Book contains many Errors; but the Book of Littleton, according to the firſt Edition, wherein the new Additions are omitted, which is the trueſt and ſureſt Regiſter of the Grounds and Principles of our Law, defines [h] quod feodum ſimplex idem eſt quod hæreditas legitima vel pura. So that he takes every Fee Simple to be an Inheritance, and he ſays that this Word (Inheritance) is not only intended where a Man has Land by Deſcent, but alſo that every Fee Simple or Tail, which a Man has by Purchaſe, is an Inheritance. [i] And as to the Caſe put in 7. H. 4. of a Cui in vita, Sir, at the End of the Caſe it appears that Thirning had been in the Chancery to enquire the Form of the ſaid Writ, and they ſaid that the Form was both the one Way and the other, viz. quam clamat eſſe jus et hæreditatem, &c. or de dono talis, &c. And I have alſo looked into the [k] Regiſter, which is accordingly; wherefore this Reaſon does not at all diſprove the Matter. And another Caſe was put, [l] that if a Woman purchaſe an Advowſon, and a Uſurpation is had when ſhe is covert, ſhe ſhall be without Remedy after the Death of the Huſband, becauſe the Statute ſays, the ſame ſhall be obſerved in Preſentments made unto Churches being of the Inheritance of Wives, &c. Which (it has been ſaid) is to be intended of a Deſcent; Sir, as to this, it is referred to the Sentence before, which ſaith, he ſhall have the ſame Action as the laſt Anceſtor ſhould have had, &c. and for this Cauſe it is to be intended of Advowſons by Deſcent, for this Statute is like that of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 41. which gives a Ceſſavit of a Chantery. and ſaith, An Action ſhall lie for the Donor or his Heir to demand the Land ſo given in Demeſn, where it gives an Action to the Anceſtor, or to his Heir. And ſo the ſaid Statute of Quare Impedit gives the Action, which the Anceſtor might have had; which proves that the Statute intended a Deſcent; wherefore neither the ſaid Statute, nor the Caſe put, do at all prove that a Purchaſe is not an Inheritance. And in a Writ of Right of Land of his own Purchaſe the Writ ſhall ſay, quam clamat eſſe jus et hæreditatem ſuam. For which Reaſon it ſeems to me, that the Uſe here and the Land alſo are the Inheritance of the Huſband, for his Heir might inherit it, and though the Uſe is the Inheritance of the Huſband and Wife, ergo it is the Inheritance of the Huſband. And then all the Words of the Statute are ſatisfied, for here the Woman has an Eſtate, what Eſtate? an Eſtate Tail; in what? in an Hereditament; what Hereditament? a Uſe; in what Manner? jointly with her Huſband; how? to her own Uſe; of whoſe Inheritance? of the Inheritance of the Huſband; and ſo all the Words of the firſt diſjunctive Sentence are fully performed in the Caſe here. And if the Caſe was not within the Words of the firſt disjunctive Sentence, yet ſhould it be within the Words of the ſecond disjunctive Sentence, which is, or given to the Huſband and Wife in Tail by any Perſon ſeized to the Uſe of the Huſband, &c. For it cannot be here denied but that the Feoffees were ſeized to the Uſe of the Huſband, until the Statute of 27. H. 8. was made, for if they were ſeized to the Uſe of the Huſband and Wife, ergo they were ſeized to the Uſe of the Huſband. And the Huſband had the entire Uſe, and the Wife the entire Uſe, for there there are no Moieties [m] between Huſband and Wife. And when

when the Statute of 27. H. 8. was made, it gave the Land to them that had the Uſe. It is to be ſeen then, who ſhall be adjudged in Law the Donor after the Execution of the Poſſeſſion to the Uſe. And, Sir, the Parliament, (which is nothing but a Court) may not be adjudged the Donor. For what the Parliament did was only a Conveyance of the Land from one to another, and a Conveyance by Parliament does not make the Parliament Donor; but it ſeems to me that the [a] Feoffees to Uſe ſhall be the Donors, for when a Gift is made by Parliament, [b] every Perſon in the Realm is privy to it, and aſſents to it, but yet the Thing ſhall paſs from him that has the moſt Right and Authority to give it. [c] As if ceſtuy que uſe and his Feoffees join in a Feoffment, it ſhall be ſaid the Feoffment of the Feoffees, for they have the greateſt Authority to give it. [d] And if Tenant for Life and he in the Reverſion join in a Feoffment, it ſhall be adjudged the Livery of the Tenant for Life, becauſe he has the greateſt Authority to do it. [e] And ſo if one who is ſeized in Fee of Land, and another who has nothing in it join in a Feoffment, it ſhall be ſaid the Feoffment of him that hath Right, and the Confirmation of the other. So here it ſhall be ſaid the Gift of the Feoffees by Parliament, and the Aſſent and Confirmation of all others. For if it ſhould be adjudged the Gift of any other, then the Parliament would do a Wrong to the Feoffees in taking a Thing from them, and making another the Donor of it. [f] And, Sir, in the Caſe of the Rector of Edington 19. H. 6. where the King had granted to the Rector and his Brethren, that when a Tithe ſhould be granted to him by the Clergy, they ſhould be diſcharged, and afterwards a Tithe was granted by the Clergy in their Convocation, there it is held by the better Opinion, that the Rector ſhould be diſcharged by the ſaid Grant of the King, notwithſtanding he be adjudged in Law one of the Convocation, and as ſuch one of the Grantors, for the Common Law ſaith, that none ſhall be damnified by ſuch ſpecial Grant made by Parliament. [g] And therefore the Writ of Right Patent in London was not taken away by the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 1. De donis conditionalibus, but it remains at this Day, and the Demandant ſhall make his Proteſtation to ſue in Nature of a Formedon in Deſcender, as he ſhall do in other real Actions there. [h] So that Acts of Parliament will not prejudice any. And here the Land is by the Act of Parliament removed from the Owners, that is to ſay, the Feoffees, to the Ceſtuy que uſe, and the Statute would do wrong if it ſhould not adjudge them the Donors, for they have the greateſt Authority to give it, and the Parliament is only a Conveyance, and therefore it ſhall be adjudged the Gift of the Feoffees by Parliament, and ſo the Gift of the Feoffees who were ſeized to the Uſe of the Huſband, and then within the Words of the ſecond disjunctive Sentence of the Statute of 11. Hen. 7. And if the Feoffees ſhould not be adjudged the Donors, then George Tailbois ſhould, but this ſeems repugnant for him to be taken to be [i] Donor to himſelf, and therefore the Feoffees ſhall be adjudged the Donors ut ſupra, and ſo within the Words of the Statute. And if the Caſe here was out of the Words, yet it ſhould be within the Equity of the Statute. For it is to be conſidered, that the Statute was made for the Redreſs of falſe Covin, and to give a ſpeedier Remedy to Right. [k] And all ſuch Statutes are in Advancement of Juſtice, and beneficial to the public Weal, and therefore ſhall be extended by Equity. And although it reſtrains the Liberty of Tenant in Tail, Sir, every Statute, which ſhall be extended by Equity, reſtrains ſome Body, and is penal to ſome Body. But yet inaſmuch as it is beneficial to the greater Number, it ſhall be taken by Equity, and ſo is this Statute, for it tends to the Suppreſſion of Deceit, and to the Advancement of Truth. And the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 3. gives a Cui in vita upon Recovery by Default, before which Statute ſuch Recovery was a Wrong to the Wife, and a Hardſhip as the Statute ſaith, and therefore a [l] Cui ante divortium is given by the Equity of that Statute. And the Statute of Marlbridge cap. 6. ſpeaks of them, who uſe to infeoff their eldeſt Sons and Heirs being within Age; [m] yet if his firſt Son be dead, and he infeoffs his ſecond Son, who is his Heir, it is within the Equity of the Statute; [n] or if he levy a Fine to him, which is Matter of Record, this ſhall be within the Equity of the Statute, and yet it ſpeaks of a Feoffment. And the Reaſon is, becauſe Covin is always abhorred in our Law, and Statutes made in Suppreſſion thereof are for the public Good, and therefore ſhall be extended by Equity. And ſo the Statute of 1. Hen. 7. cap. 1. which gives a Writ of Formedon in Remainder againſt the Pernor of Profits, was made in Suppreſſion of Covin, for the Feoffment made to Perſons unknown to defraud thoſe that had Right to the Land was a great Covin and Deceit in the Law; [o] and therefore a Scire Facias to execute a Remainder ſhall be maintainable againſt the Pernor of the Profits, as it is adjudged in 14. H. 7. and all this is for the Cauſe above given. So it is here, for Bracton ſaith, de ſimilibus ad ſimilia eadem ratione procedendum eſt, and therefore inaſmuch as this Statute was made in Suppreſſion of Covin, it ſhall be extended by Equity, eſpecially as the Intent of the Minds of the Makers of the Statute are to be ſuppoſed very ſevere againſt the Women therein mentioned, as I have ſaid before. And then the Statute of 27. H. 8. which executes the Poſſeſſion to the Uſe, makes the Poſſeſſion ſubject to the Condition, which was annexed to the Eſtate being in Uſe. As the Statute de prerogativa regis cap. 1. ordains that the Lord the King ſhall have the Wardſhip of all the Lands of ſuch as hold of him in chief by Knight's Service, of whomſoever they hold elſe by ſuch Service, &c. and the Statute of 4. Hen. 7. cap. 17. ordains, that if Ceſtuy que uſe die, no Will by him declared, and his Heir within Age, the Lord ſhall have a Writ of Ward as well for the Body as for the Land, as he ſhould have had if the Anceſtor had been in Poſſeſſion of the ſame Eſtate: [p] Now the Law was upon the Conjunction of theſe two Statutes together, that if the King's Tenant had died ſeized, having alſo a Uſe in Land holden of other Lords, the King ſhould have his Prerogative in them, for the ſaid Statute of 4. Hen. 7. makes the Land in Uſe ſubject to the King's Prerogative. And ſo here, the Statute of 27. Hen. 8. which unites the Poſſeſſion to the Uſe, makes the Poſſeſſion ſubject to Covin annexed to the Eſtate in Uſe. For which Reaſons it ſeems to me that the Caſe here is within the Words of the Statute of 11. H. 7. And if it be not, yet it is within the Equity of it, and ſo the Entry of the Plaintiffs is maintainable: but for the ſaid ſingle Fault in the Replication they ſhall not recover.

A Report of a Caſe argued in the Common Bench before all the Juſtices of the ſame Bench, in Michaelmas Term, in the fourth Year of the Reign of King Edward the Sixth, between Lewis Dive late Sheriff of Bedf. Plaintiff and John Maningham Defendant, in an Action of Debt upon an Obligation brought by the ſaid Plaintiff againſt the Defendant. The Record was as follows: Rot. 559.

Bedf. Declaration. JOHN Maningham late of Baldock in the County of Hertford Draper, otherwiſe called John Maningham of Baldock in the County of Hertford Draper, was ſummoned to anſwer Lewis Dive Eſquire, late called Lewis Dive Eſquire Sheriff of the County of Bedford, of a Plea that he render to him 40 l. which he owes him, and unjuſtly detains, &c. And whereupon the ſame Lewis by Thomas Grendon his Attorney ſays, that whereas the aforeſaid John the laſt Day of May in the thirty-eighth Year of the Reign of the Lord Henry the eighth late King of England the Father of the Lord the King now, at Bedford by his certain Writing obligatory acknowledged himſelf to be bound to the ſame Lewis in the aforeſaid 40 l. to be paid to the ſame Lewis on the Feaſt of Pentecoſt then next coming, nevertheleſs the aforeſaid John, although often requeſted, the aforeſaid 40 l. to the ſame Lewis hath not yet rendered, but the ſame to render to him hath hitherto refuſed, and yet doth refuſe. Wherefore he ſays, that he is damnified and hath Damage to the Value of 100 Shillings: and therefore he brings Suit, &c. And he produces here in Court the Writing aforeſaid which witneſſeth the Debt aforeſaid in Form aforeſaid, the Date whereof is the Day and Year aboveſaid, &c.

Plea. And the aforeſaid John by John Poly his Attorney comes and defends the Force and Injury when, &c. and prays oyer of the Writing aforeſaid, and it is read to him, &c. and alſo prays oyer of the Indorſement of the ſame Writing, and it is read to him in theſe Words; The Condition of this Obligation is ſuch, that if one Thomas Maningham of Luton in the County of Bedford Yeoman ſave and keep harmleſs the within named Sheriff againſt our Sovereign Lord the King, and one Thomas Palley of London Fiſhmonger, and at all Time and Times be at the Commandment of the ſaid Sheriff as a true Priſoner, to appear before the King's Juſtices at Weſtminſter, or elſewhere within the King's Realm, that then this Obligation to be void, and of none Effect, or elſe to ſtand in his full Strength and Virtue. Which being read and heard, the ſame John Maningham ſays, that the aforeſaid Lewis his Action aforeſaid thereof againſt him ought not to have, becauſe he ſays that at a Parliament of the ſaid Lord Henry late King of England the Sixth from the Conqueſt, holden at Weſtminſter the twenty-fifth Day of February in the twenty-third Year of his Reign, amongſt other Things it was enacted, that no Sheriffs, Under-ſheriffs, Sheriffs-clerks, Stewards or Bailiffs of Liberties, Servants or Bailiffs, nor Coroners ſhould take any Thing by Colour of their Office by themſeves, or by any Perſon to their Uſe, of any Perſon for making a Return or Panel, and for every Copy of a Panel 4 d. And that the aforeſaid Sheriffs, and all the other Officers and Miniſters aforeſaid ſhould let out of Priſon all and all manner of Perſons by them or any of them arreſted, or being in their Cuſtody by virtue of any Writ, Bill, or Warrant in any Action perſonal, or by Cauſe of an Indictment of Treſpaſs, by reaſonable Surety of ſufficient Perſons, being ſufficient within the County, where ſuch Perſons be ſo let to Bail or Mainprize, to keep their Days and in ſuch Places as the aforeſaid Writs, Bills, or Warrants ſhould require: (ſuch Perſon or Perſons as ſhould be, or then were in their Cuſtody by Condemnation, Execution, capias utlagatum or excommunicatum, Suerty of the Peace, and all ſuch Perſons as ſhould be or then were committed by ſpecial Command of any Juſtices, and Vagabonds refuſing to ſerve according to the Form of the Statute of Labourers, only exccepted.) And that no Sheriff, nor any of his Officers or Miniſters aforeſaid ſhould take or Cauſe to be taken or made any obligation for any Cauſe before recited, or by Colour of their Office, but only to themſelves, of any Perſon, nor by any Perſon, as ſhould be in their Cuſtody by Courſe and Order of Law, but by the Name of their Office, and upon Condition that the aforeſaid Perſons appear at the Day contained in the ſaid Writs, Bills, or Warrants, and in ſuch Places as the aforeſaid Writs, Bills, or Warrants ſhould require. And if any of the aforeſaid Sheriffs, or the Officers or Miniſters aforeſaid ſhould take any Obligation in any other Form by Colour of their Offices, that the ſame Obligation ſhould be void, as by the ſame Act amongſt other Things more fully appears. And the ſame John Maningham ſays, that after the making of the aforeſaid Act of Parliament, and before the making of the Writing aforeſaid, to wit, the eighteenth Day of May, in the thirty-eighth Year of the Reign of the Lord Henry late King of England, the Eighth ſince the Conqueſt, one Thomas Palley of London Fiſhmonger ſued forth out of the Court of Chancery of the ſaid late King, then being at Weſtminſter in the County of Middleſex, a certain Writ of the ſaid late King of Liberari facias againſt the aforeſaid Thomas Maningham, directed to the then Sheriff of the aforeſaid County of Bedford, by which ſaid Writ the ſame Lord the King reciting that whereas Thomas Maningham of Luton in the County of Bedford Yeoman, before the Reverend Edward Mountague, Knight, Chief Juſtice of his Bench, deputed to take Recognizances of Debts, acknowledged himſelf to owe to Thomas Pllacy Citizen and Fiſhmonger of London two hundred Marks Sterling, which he ought to pay him on the Feaſt of Eaſter then next to come, and hath not yet paid the ſame, as it was ſaid, the King commanded him by his Writ to take the Body of the aforeſaid Thomas Maningham (if he were a Layman) and him ſafely keep in the Priſon of the ſaid late King, until he ſhould fully ſatisfy the Debt of the aforeſaid Thomas Palley, and carefully to extend and appraize, according to the true Value thereof, all the Lands and Chattels of the ſaid Thomas Maningham in his Bailiwick by the Oaths of good and lawful Men of the ſame Bailiwick, by whom the Truth of the Matter might be better known, and to cauſe them to be ſeized into the Hands of the ſaid late King, and to be delivered to the aforeſaid Thomas Palley until he ſhould be fully ſatisfied for his Debt aforeſaid, according to the Form of the Statute of Weſtminſter for the Recovery of ſuch Debts lately made and provided. And how the ſame Precept of the ſaid late King was executed, he ſhould certify by his Letters ſealed to the ſame late King in his Chancery at a certain Day then paſt whereſoever he ſhould then be: and that he ſhould have there the Writ aforeſaid. And the ſame late King commanded his Sheriffs of London, Middleſex, and Hertford, that they ſhould take the Body of the aforeſaid Thomas Maningham (if he were a Layman,) and him ſafely keep in his Priſon, and that they ſhould carefully extend and appraize all the Lands and Chattles of the ſaid Thomas Maningham in their Bailiwicks, and cauſe them to be ſeized into the Hands of the ſaid late King in Form aforeſaid; and the ſame Sheriff returned into the Chancery of the ſaid late King, that the ſaid Thomas Maningham in the Writ aforeſaid named, at the Day and Time of the Recognizance of the Debt in the ſame Writ ſpecified, and afterwards, was and now is ſeized in his Demeſn as of Freehold, of ſix Meſſuages, four Gardens, ſix Acres and a half of arable Land with the Appurtenances in Luton aforeſaid in the aforeſaid County of Bedford. And further, that the aforeſaid Thomas Maningham at the Time of the Recognizance aforeſaid, or at any Time afterwards had not any other or more Manors, Meſſuages, Lands, or Tenements, Goods or Chattles in his Bailiwick which might in any wiſe be extended and appraized, or ſeized into the Hands of the ſaid late King; which ſaid Lands and Tenements, as alſo all the Goods and Chattles aforeſaid he had cauſed to be ſeized into the Hands of the ſaid late King, as it was commanded him, and that the aforeſaid Thomas Maningham was not to be found in his Bailiwick, wherefore the ſame late King commanded the aforeſaid late Sheriff of Bedford, that he ſhould deliver to the ſame Thomas Palley the aforeſaid Meſſuages, Gardens, Lands, and Tenements, with the Appurtenances, and alſo the Goods and Chattles aforeſaid, if he ſhould be willing to receive them at the Extent and Appraizement aforeſaid, to have, that is to ſay, the ſaid Goods and Chattles in Part of Satisfaction of the Debt aforeſaid, and alſo to hold the Meſſuages, Gardens, Lands, and Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances to him and his Aſſigns, as his [a] Freehold, until he ſhould be fully ſatisfied his Debt aforeſaid together with his Damages, Coſts, and Expences which he had ſuſtained in this Behalf: and nevertheleſs that he ſhould take the Body of the aforeſaid Thomas Maningham (if he were a Layman) and him ſafely keep in the Priſon of the ſaid late King, until he ſhould fully ſatisfy the ſaid Thomas Palley for his Debt aforeſaid together with his Damages, Coſts and Expences aboveſaid, in Form aforeſaid: And how this Precept of the ſaid late King was executed, he ſhould make known by his Letters ſealed to the ſame late King in his Chancery, on the Morrow of the Aſcenſion of our Lord then next coming, whereſoever he ſhould then be, and that he ſhould have then there that Writ. At which ſaid Morrow of the Aſcenſion of our Lord, before the ſame late Lord the King in his Chancery, the ſame Chancery then being at Weſtminſter in the County of Middleſex, the ſame late Sheriff returned, that by virtue of that Writ directed to him, he on the thirtieth Day of May, in the thirty eighth Year of the Reign of the ſaid late King, appraized and delivered to the aforeſaid Thomas Palley the Meſſuages, Gardens, Lands and Tenements above written with the Appurtenances, as alſo the Goods and Chattles aforeſaid, to have, to wit, the ſaid Goods and Chattles in Part of Satisfaction of the Debt aforeſaid, and alſo to hold the Meſſuages, Gardens, Lands, and Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances to him and his Aſſigns, as his Freehold, until he ſhould be fully ſatisfied the Debt aforeſaid, together with his Damages, Coſts, and Expences, which he had reaſonably ſuſtained in this Behalf: and alſo that he had taken the Body of the aforeſaid Thomas Maningham, and had kept the ſame in the Priſon of the ſaid late King, in Form aforeſaid. And the ſame John Maningham further ſays, that the aforeſaid Thomas Maningham at Luton in the aforeſaid County of Bedford was arreſted by virtue of the aforeſaid Writ above ſignified, and for that Cauſe was impriſoned by the ſaid Lewis Dive (he the ſame Lewis then being Sheriff of the aforeſaid County of Bedford) at Bedford in the ſame County of Bedford, under the Cuſtody of the ſaid Lewis then Sheriff of the ſame County. And the ſame Thomas being ſo impriſoned, the ſame John, for the Delivery of him out of Priſon, by the aforeſaid Writing obligatory bound himſelf to the ſame Lewis then Sheriff of the ſame County, in the aforeſaid 40 l. And this he is ready to verify; wherefore for that the Writing aforeſaid was not made on ſuch Condition, as by the Statute aforeſaid it ought to be made, he prays Judgment if the aforeſaid Lewis by virtue of the Writing obligatory aforeſaid ought to maintain his Action aforeſaid thereof againſt him, &c.

Plaintiff demurs. And the aforeſaid Lewis ſays, that the Plea of the aforeſaid John is inſufficient in Law to preclude him the ſaid Lewis from having his Action aforeſaid againſt the aforeſaid John, and that he has no Neceſſity, nor is by the Law of the Land bound to anſwer that Plea in manner and form aforeſaid pleaded. And this he is ready to verify; wherefore for Want of a ſufficient Anſwer of the ſaid John in this Behalf, the ſame Lewis prays Judgment, and his Damages by reaſon of the detaining the ſaid Debt to be adjudged to him, &c.

Joinder. And the aforeſaid John, for that he hath above alledged ſufficient Matter in Law to preclude the aforeſaid Lewis from having his Action aforeſaid againſt him, which he is ready to verify, which ſaid Matter the aforeſaid Lewis does not deny, nor thereunto in any wiſe anſwer, but the ſaid Averment wholly refuſes to admit, prays Judgment, and that the aforeſaid Lewis may be precluded from having his Action aforeſaid againſt him, &c. And becauſe the Juſtices here will adviſe of and upon the Premiſſes before they give Judgment thereon, Day is given to the Parties aforeſaid here until the Morrow of the Holy Trinity, to hear their Judgment thereon, becauſe the Juſtices thereof not yet, &c. The Judgment appears after the Arguments.

The CASE. Mich. Term 4. Edw. 6. One being in Execution upon a Recognizance made according to the Statute of 23. H. 8. is bound to the Sheriff upon Condition that the Priſoner keep without Damage the Sheriff againſt the King and the Party, who ſued the Execution, and at all Times be at the Command of the Sheriff, as a true Priſoner, &c. this is void by the Statute of 23. H. 6. cap. 10.

The Caſe was rehearſed briefly in this Manner. Lewis Dive late Sheriff of Bedford has brought an Action of Debt for 40 l. againſt John Maningham, upon an Obligation by him made to the Plaintiff, which Obligation was indorſed upon Condition that if one Thomas Maningham ſhould keep without Damage the ſaid Sheriff againſt our Lord the King and one Thomas Palley, and at all Times ſhould be at the Command of the ſaid Sheriff (as a true Priſoner) to appear before the Juſtices of the King at Weſtminſter or elſewhere within the Realm, that then the Obligation ſhould be void. And the Defendant ſaith, amongſt other Things it was enacted, &c. And reciting three Branches of the Statute of 23. H. 6. cap. 10. (viz. the Clauſe concerning letting Priſoners to Bail, and the Clauſe concerning the Exception, and the Clauſe concerning the making of Obligations without Condition to be void, and thoſe alſo which are made to the Sheriff without naming him Sheriff, and all the reſt of this Branch) ſays further, that the ſaid Thomas Palley purchaſed out of the Chancery a Writ of Liberari facias out of a Recognizance made to him by the ſaid Thomas Maningham, which was directed to the Sheriff of Bedford, commanding him to do the Contents of the ſaid Writ, and to certify into the Chancery (at a Day then paſſed) how the Writ was ſerved; and he ſhews alſo that the King had ſent to the Sheriffs of London, Middleſex and Hertford other Writs in Form aforeſaid; and the ſame Sheriff returned the Writ into the Chancery, to wit, that he had extended the Lands, and that the ſaid Thomas Maningham was not to be found, &c. whereupon a Liberate was awarded to the Sheriff of Bedford, who returned the Delivery, and that he had taken the Body of the ſaid Thomas Maningham, and kept him in Priſon. And further the Defendant ſaith, that by Force thereof the ſaid Thomas Maningham was in Priſon under the Cuſtody of the Plaintiff, then Sheriff of the ſaid County, and that he the ſame Defendant made the Obligation to the ſaid Plaintiff for the Delivery of the ſaid Thomas Maningham out of Priſon: And this he is ready to verify; wherefore inaſmuch as the ſaid Deed was not made upon ſuch Condition as by the ſaid Statute it ought to be, he demands Judgment, if the Plaintiff by virtue of the ſaid Deed ought to maintain his Action,. And upon this Plea in Bar the Plaintiff has demurred in Judgment. And it was argued at the Bar for the Plaintiff, that the Bar was not good. For the Defendant has recited the Record commencing at the Writ of [a] Liberari facias, and this he ought not to do, for before the Delivery the Extent is always awarded and returned, and when the Thing appears certainly thereby, then a Liberate ſhall be awarded. For the Statute of 23. H. 8. cap. 6. of Recognizance of Debts refers the Order of the Execution to the Order of the Execution of the Statute Staple, which is referred to the Statute Merchant, which is referred in ſome points to the Statute of Acton Burnel. And by them it appears that an Extent ſhall be

For the Plaintiff. [a] Note, the Writ, which is called in the Record a Liberari facias, is an extendi facias, and theſe Words in the End of the Writ, viz. et ea præfato Thomæ, &c. liberari facias, are falſe, for it ſhould be ut ea præfato Thomæ, &c. liberari facias, as it appears by the Regiſter, and ſo the et put for ut, alters the Senſe, and this being not well underſtood here makes the Doubt and the Argument.

firſt had, and afterwards a Writ of Liberate ſhall be awarded, and Delivery ſhall not be made at the Beginning. * And when a Man pleads or recites a Record in any Temporal Court in our Law, he ought to plead or recite it fully, and in good order, and certainly, which is not done here, and alſo he ought to commence at the firſt Acknowledgment of the Debt, and this he has not done, and for this Cauſe the Plea in Bar is vicious. Further, it is alledged in the ſaid Record, that the ſaid Writ was directed to the Sheriff of Bedford: and it was commanded him to certify into the Chancery how the Writ was ſerved, at a Day then paſſed, &c. and every Writ appoints a Day for the Return which is to come, and not which is paſſed, and ſo inaſmuch as this Word (then) is a Word ſignifying the Time paſt, and the Return ought to be at a Time to come, this Reaſon alſo proves the Record badly recited, and ſo the Plea in Bar is inſufficient. Further, it is contained in the Bar, that the ſame Sheriff returned the Writ, and there are four Sheriffs mentioned before, viz. the Sheriff of Bedford, the Sheriff of London, the Sheriff Middleſex, and the Sheriff of Hertford, and then to ſay that the ſame Sheriff returned the Writ, is quite incertain, and the Sheriff laſt named is the Sheriff of Hertford, and always [a] when the Writ is returned, the Name and Surname of the Sheriff ought to be put to the Return: and ſo he ought to have done here. For there is a common Diverſity holden at Moots in Court and Chancery, that the Writ ſhall be directed to the Sheriff of ſuch a County generally, without naming his Name, but he ought to put his Name to the Return, and ſo here, wherefore inaſmuch as the Name of the Sheriff is not expreſſed, and alſo inaſmuch as it is incertain to what Sheriff the Return ſhall be referred, the Plea in Bar is for this Cauſe inſufficient. And as to the Matter, the Obligation is good and out of the Proviſion of the Statute for divers Cauſes, for firſt it is to be conſidered, that the Statute has three principal Branches touching this Point. The firſt is, a Commandment to the Sheriff to let to bail ſuch Perſons there expreſſed. The ſecond is, to reſtrain the others contained in the Exception. The third is, to make Obligations taken in other Manner than the Statute limits to be void. But it is to be conſidered, that the laſt Branch is referred only to the firſt, for the Words of the third Branch are, that no Sheriff, nor any of his Officers or Miniſters aforeſaid take or cauſe to be taken or made any Obligation for any Cauſe aforeſaid, &c. and theſe Words, viz. for any Cauſe aforeſaid, are referred to the firſt Branch only, viz. to ſuch Perſons as are mainpernable, and not to the ſecond Branch, for thoſe in the Exception, which are in in the ſecond Branch, are not mainpernable. And then the Intent of the Statute was not to make Obligations void for letting any at large, but ſuch only as were bailable. And here Thomas Maningham was in upon Execution, and was one of thoſe contained in the Exception, and the letting him go at large is an Eſcape, and ſo is out of the Intent of the Statute, and is meerly at the common Law, in which caſe the Obligation ſtands at common Law, and ſo is good. And alſo it is proved by other Words in the laſt Branch of the Statute, that the Statute does not extend to avoid the Obligation here. For the Statute ordains that Obligations ſhould not be taken but upon Condition that the Priſoners appear at the Days contained in the ſaid Writs, Bills, or Warrants, &c. and here the Priſoner had no Day to appear, for which Reaſon it appears to be out of the intent and Words of the Statute, and to be at common Law, and ſo the Obligation is good. And as to theſe Words which are contained in the Statute, viz. vel colore officii ſui, they are referred to the ſaid firſt Branch of the Statute, that is to ſay, concerning Obligations taken of thoſe who are in by Writ, Bill, or Warrant, and have a Day to appear, &c. But to refer it to thoſe, who are not bailable, could never be the Intention of the Statute, for the Sheriffs would always ſafely keep ſuch Perſons for their own Indemnity, that is, to avoid Eſcapes, and it was rarely ſeen that any, who were not bailable, were let at large, and Statutes are not made to remedy ſuch rare miſchiefs, but common Miſchiefs, and for theſe Cauſes the ſaid Words colore Officii ſui are only referred to thoſe who are bailable, and not others. And therefore our Caſe (where Thomas Maningham was not bailable) is out of the Intent of the Statute, and conſequently the Obligation for his Deliverance is ſo too. And alſo for another Cauſe the Caſe here is out of the Proviſion of the Statute, and that is, becauſe Thomas Maningham was impriſoned, and the Obligation is made by John Maningham now Defendant, and John Maningham was not impriſoned, and then the Statute does not extend to avoid any Obligation made but only by thoſe Perſons who are in their Cuſtody by Courſe of Law, and here inaſmuch as he that made the Obligation was at large and never impriſoned, this was out of the Words of the Statute, and the Statute being penal ſhall not be extended by Equity; for which Reaſons the Obligation is at the common Law, and not touched by the Statute, and ſo good: and therefore the Plaintiff ſhall recover.

On the other Hand it was argued at the Bar for the Defendant, that the Plaintiff ſhould be barred. And as to the firſt Exception, which has been taken, for that the Extent ought to be firſt awarded, and after that the Liberate, and now the Writ of Liberari facias is firſt awarded; as to that it was ſaid, that there is in the firſt Writ an extendi facias with a Seizure, and alſo with a liberari facias, in which Caſe as to the Extent the Writ is good, and the liberari facias is more than neceſſary in the ſame Writ, for in rei veritate the liberate is a ſeveral Writ in itſelf, but yet as to the Extent and Seizure into the King's Hands, the Writ is good, and as to the reſt it is Surpluſage. [b] As in 7. H. 4. in Treſpaſs upon the Caſe by the Lord of a Town, eo quod tolloneum aſportavit, & illud ſolvere recuſavit, Exception was taken to the Writ, becauſe he could not carry away the Toll, except it was paid before, but yet the Writ was adjudged good, for although the firſt Words are void, the others, viz. ſolvere recuſavit were ſufficient. So here the one Part of the Writ is good, though the other is not ſo, and that which is good is ſufficient, and for the other Part it ſhall be Surpluſage. But be the Writ good or bad, yet inaſmuch inaſmuch as it is an ancient Record, it ſhall ſtand in Force until it be annulled by Error: And then the Recital ought to be according to it; wherefore this Exception is ſufficiently anſwered. And as to the other Exception which has been taken, viz. that the Writ is recited to certify the King at a Day then paſſed, as to this it is to be known, that this recital is made now when it was pleaded, and then theſe Words, (at a Day then paſt) ſtand well together with the Recital, for the Day was paſſed at the Time of the Recital, although it was to come at the Time when the Writ was awarded, and ſo this Exception is fully anſwered. And as to the other Exception which has been taken, viz. that the ſame Sheriff returned the Writ, and he has not ſhewn what Sheriff in certain, nor has recited his Name or Surname; as to this, it ſhall be intended that the Sheriff of Bedford now Plaintiff did it, for the Proceſs was directed to him, and it appears by the Return that he returned the Extent of the Land in the County of Bedford, and no other Sheriff than the Sheriff of Bedford could do it, wherefore there is ſufficient Intendment hereof. And perhaps the firſt Record has not his Name certain, but has theſe very Words here and no other, and then we cannot vary from the Record, but we ought to recite it as it is. [a] And be it good or bad, it ſhall ſtand in Force until it be reverſed by Error, as is aforeſaid. Wherefore theſe Exceptions are of no Weight. And as to the Statute, there are there Branches in it, as hath been ſaid. And the laſt Branch, which ſaith, that no Sheriff nor any of his Officers or Miniſters aforeſaid ſhall take or cauſe to be taken or made any Obligation for any Cauſe aforeſaid, &c. hath Relation as well to the Exception as to the firſt Clauſe, for this Word (aforeſaid) has the Meaning of (beforementioned), and the Exception is as well mentioned before as the firſt Clauſe is, and this Word (aforeſaid) being general, and having Relation to both the Clauſes extends to the Caſe here. And if it ſhould not, yet the other Clauſe in the laſt Branch, viz. colore officii ſui will extend to it well enough, for it cannot be denied but that Thomas Maningham here was in the Cuſtody of the Plaintiff as Sheriff, and he let him to Mainprize as Sheriff, and he took the Obligation as Sheriff, and by the Name of Sheriff, and if ſo, then it is colore officii ſui, and conſequently within the Words of the Statute. [b] And in Proof hereof in 37. H. 6. Moile Juſtice is of Opinion, that if the Sheriff lets one to mainprize, who is excepted by the Statute as not bailable, and takes a ſimple Obligation, it ſhall be void, quod alii Juſticiarii ibi conceſſerunt. [c] And, Sir, theſe Words, colore officii, are always taken in malam partem, and differ from the Words virtute officii, or, ratione officii, which are always taken in bonam partem, and where the Office is the juſt Cauſe of the Thing, and the Thing is purſuant to the Office. But colore officii implies that the Thing is under Pretence of Office, but not duly, and the Office is no more than a Cloak to Deceit, and the Thing is grounded upon Vice, and the Office is as a Shadow thereto. And that is the Caſe here, for the Obligation is not taken lawfully, for it is taken for the letting him go at large, who was not bailable, and he let him go at large as Sheriff, and ſo it is colore officii, and the Colour of the Office is moſt properly ſeen here. And then inaſmuch as this Word (aforeſaid) has Relation to the Exception, and alſo the Obligation is here made by Colour of his Office, there is nothing more to be conſidered, but whether the Obligation is made in other Form than the Statute limits. And this it is for two Cauſes. The one is, becauſe he has no Day to appear by the Condition. For the Statute appoints, that this ſhall be contained in the Condition, which it is not here; for he has no Day in Court appointed. The ſecond Cauſe is, for that there are other Things alſo contained in the Condition. For if it be contained in the Condition, that he ſhall appear at the Day, &c. and alſo that he ſhall do other [d] Things, then is it in other Form than the Statute limits, for the Statute limits the Condition to contain only the Day and Place of Appearance. And therefore inaſmuch as this Word (aforeſaid) and alſo theſe Words, colore officii, have Relation to the Exception in the Statute, and the obligation here is taken for one contained in the Exception, and is in other Form than the Statute limits, it follows ex conſequente that the Obligation ſhall be void. And, Sir, if the Obligation was not touched by the Statute, yet it ſhould be void by the Courſe of the common [e] Law, for (as it hath been confeſſed) the Priſoner here was not bailable, in which Caſe the letting him go at large by Mainprize is a tort, and a Thing contrary to Law, and then the Obligation is made to aid the Sheriff in the doing of a tort, in which Caſe by the Courſe of the Common Law the Obligation is void. [f] As if the Obligation was to ſave one harmleſs if he killed ſuch an one, or did ſuch a Treſpaſs, &c. the Obligation ſhould be void. So ſhall it be here, for the Obligation is to ſave the Sheriff harmleſs for doing a tort and a Thing contrary to Law, in which Caſe the Obligation is void by the Courſe of the Common Law. [g] And therefore there is this Caſe in one of our Books, that where the Plaintiff in Replevin had a Withernam out of the Common Bench, by Force whereof one of the Sheriff's Bailiffs took four Oxen of the Defendant's in Name of Withernam, and afterwards delivered them to the Defendant again, and the Defendant became bound to him to keep him without Damage concerning the ſaid four Oxen, and afterwards he being damnified brought an Action of Debt upon the Obligation, and it was held by the better Opinion that the Obligation was void; for the Writ of Withernam is [h] capias in Withernam, &c. et ea detineas quouſque, &c. ſo that the Sheriff ought to have kept the Cattle, and not to have delivered them to the Party, and then the Delivery of them to the Party was a tort, and the Obligation was made to aid him in that tort, and therefore void. So is it in our Caſe, for which Reaſons the Plaintiff ſhall be barred.

Afterwards Molineux, Hales, and Brown Juſtices argued to the ſame Purpoſe: But I was not preſent till the latter End of Brown's Argument.

ception before moved, viz. that the Act is a particular Act, and ought to be recited at large, and not as it is recited, viz. inter alia enactatum fuit, &c. Sir, as to this, I agree that he ought to recite the Act, [a] for the Act is particular in a Generality, that is, it is univerſal to all Sheriffs and Officers contained therein, and inaſmuch as it is not general to all the King's Subjects, but only to all the ſaid Officers, it is well called an Act particular in a Generality. [b] As if an Act of Parliament were made, that all Biſhops, or all Juſtices ſhould do ſuch an Act, or have ſuch a Benefit, this Act is called an Act particular in a Generality, and ought to be pleaded, for inaſmuch as it operates againſt ſome particular Perſons, that is to ſay, Officers, and not againſt all, for this Reaſon the Juſtices are not bound to take Notice of it. [c] And therefore in 13. Ed. 4. in the Lord Say's Caſe, it was held that an Act of Parliament, by which all Corporations and Licences granted by King Henry 6. ſhould be void, ought to be pleaded, and the Court is not bound to take Notice of it, no more than of a particular Act touching a particular Perſon. And ſo in our Caſe the Act is particular in a Generality, or it may be called general in a Particularity, in which Caſe the Act ought to be pleaded. But if it was a general Act which concerns all the King's Subjects, it needs not be pleaded, but the Juſtices ought to take Notice of it; and ſo is the Diverſity. Then inaſmuch as the Act here ought to be pleaded, it is to be ſeen whether it be well pleaded or not, ſeeing the whole Act is not ſhewn, but only Part of it, which is recited in this Manner, viz. Cum inter alia enactatum fuit, &c. And, Sir, as to this, I take a Diverſity when a Man ſhall plead a Record for Parcel inter alia, and when not. [d] And therefore in 22. Ed. 4. in a Scire facias to have Execution of 200 Acres of Land, the Tenant pleaded that after the Scire facias ſued, one J. B. brought a Formedon of 100 Acres inter alia, and recovered, and had Execution, &c. Judgment of the Writ for that Parcel: And there the Opinion is, that the Plea is not good, for this is not the right Form of pleading ſuch a Recovery, for every Recovery had in our Law ought to be pleaded certainly to every Intent, and theſe Words inter alia are certain to no Intent; but there it is held that he ought to have pleaded that J. B. brought a Formedon of 200 Acres, whereof the 100 Acres now in Demand are parcel, and recovered, and had Execution; and there the Tenant by Licence of the Court amended his Plea; by which it appears, that to plead a Recovery inter alia &c. is not good. And the Reaſon thereof is becauſe every Recovery is entire, and there is one Original, and one Judgment upon it, and ſo the Recovery is one entire Matter, and therefore to ſay, that inter alia he recovered, &c. is not good, but he ought to plead certainly. [e] But, Sir, to ſay that inter alia enactatum fuit, is well pleaded, for the ſaid Act of Parliament made Anno 23. H. 6. is ſeveral, and has ſeveral Branches, one in Reſtraint of letting Counties to Farm, another for not returning Officers or Servants, &c. the third for the Fees, &c. the fourth for letting Men to Bail, &c. the fifth for reſtraining ſome Perſons; the ſixth for making Obligations void; ſo that theſe Branches, though they are contained in one Chapter, are ſeveral Acts of Parliament, and concern ſeveral Matters, and then where one Branch only ſerves a Man's Purpoſe, it is ſufficient for him [f] to recite that only: For the Recital of that only is a Recital of an entire and ſeveral Act of Parliament; but otherwiſe it is of a Recovery, for all that is contained in the Record is but one Recovery, and therefore all ought to be recited, and ſo is the Diverſity. And then here the Act being particular in a Generality, and which of Neceſſity ought to be recited, is well recited; and ſo this Exception is anſwered. Another Exception was taken, viz. that divers Sheriffs are named, and at laſt it is ſaid that the ſame Sheriff returned the Writ, &c. which is ſaid to be incertain; Sir, as to this, [g] it is certain enough that it ſhall be referred to the Sheriff of Bedford, for the Return contains an Extent of the Land in the County of Bedford, and none could do this but the Sheriff of Bedford, and the whole Sum of the Execution is referred to him, and ſo it cannot be otherwiſe intended but that the Sheriff of Bedford made the Return; wherefore the Law ſaith that this is certain enough. Another Exception has been taken, becauſe the Defendant has not begun at the Commencement of the Record, but begins firſt at the Liberate; Sir, admitting this, [h] yet it is well enough pleaded; and therefore I take a Difference when a Record ought to be intirely and certainly recited, and when not: As to which I hold, [i] that if a Record is pleaded in Bar, it ought to be entirely and certainly recited, becauſe the Record only is the Matter of the Subſtance and Effect of the Bar, which ought to be full and perfect; but here the Recital of the Record is only Conveyance to the Benefit of the Statute, and is not the Effect of the Bar, but an Inducement and Conveyance to it, and then it is not neceſſary for [k] ſuch Conveyance and Inducement to be as certainly pleaded as the Subſtance itſelf ought to be. [l] And therefore there is a Caſe in 34. H. 6. where Tenant by Elegit made Avowry in Replevin, becauſe he had Execution as Tenant by Elegit, and leaſed 20 Acres Parcel of the Land to the Plaintiff for three Years, rendring 50 s. per annum, &c. and for the Rent in Arrear he avowed, and there it was argued whether he ought to plead the whole Record in certain, by which he became Tenant by Elegit, and it is there held by the better Opinion that it is not neceſſary, but that it is ſufficient to plead, that heretofore he recovered Damages againſt the Party, and had an Elegit, and this Land was delivered to him, without pleading the whole Record entire, how he brought his firſt Action, and what Anſwer the Defendant made, or the like, but it is ſufficient to commence at the Execution, for the Leaſe made by the Avowant rendring Rent is the Effect of the Avowry and of the Execution by Elegit, and the Record, from whence it iſſues, is only a Conveyance to the Effect, and therefore it is not neceſſary to recite the entire Record, but that Part only, which proves the Execution, is ſufficient. [m] And in 19. H. 6. a Bill of Diſceit was ſued againſt two Attornies of the Common Bench for embezzeling and withdrawing a Writ of habeas corpora in placito terræ upon a Formedon between the Plaintiff and another, there Judgment was demanded of the Bill, becauſe it did not contain the Original, the Certainty of the Land, and the whole Record in certain, but there the Bill was awarded good, notwithſtanding it did not recite the Record certainly, becauſe the Record is only Conveyance to the Suit of Diſceit; but it is there held, that if the Record had been pleaded in Bar, the Certainty of the Land ought to be ſhewn, and the whole Record, for there the Record may be denied, inaſmuch as it is the Subſtance of the Bar; but in the other Caſe to ſay nul tiel Record is no Plea, becauſe it is but Conveyance, as is ſaid before. So in our Caſe the Record is ſhewn to no other Intent than to make Thomas Maningham a Priſoner, and that is not ſhewn but as a Conveyance to the Benefit of the Statute, viz. to make the Obligation void, and then altho' the Record is not fully nor entirely recited, yet it is well enough. Further, it ſeems to me that the Defendant has not well nor wiſely concluded his Plea, for he has concluded, Unde ex quo ſcriptum prædictum non fuit factum ſub tali conditione quali per ſtatutum fieri deberet, petit judicium; which ſpecial Concluſion has ſo ſtraitned the Defendant, that if the Obligation be void for any other Cauſe than for that which the Defendant has mentioned in the Concluſion, he ſhall not, by Courſe of Law, have Benefit of it. [a] And therefore in 34. H. 6. one deviſed a Reverſion of Tenant for Life to another in Fee, by the Name of omnium terrarum et tenementorum quæ in manibus of the Deviſor adtunc fuerunt, and the Heir of the Deviſee brought an Action of Waſt, reciting in his Count the ſpecial Grant ut ſupra: And the Defendant ſaid, ex quo per narrationem prædictam apparet that the Deviſor did not deviſe the Reverſion, but by the ſaid Words ut ſupra, and the Tenant for Life then held the Tenements, and nothing of the Reverſion paſſed by the general Words to the Deviſee, he demanded Judgment, &c. and upon this the Plaintiff alſo demurred: And there it is holden, that inaſmuch as the Defendant has demurred upon a ſpecial Point, and has rehearſed the Cauſe of his Demurrer, if there be any other Matter in the Declaration, whereof the Defendant might have had Advantage, he ſhall not now take any Advantage of it. So here in our Caſe, if there be any other Cauſe which will make the Obligation void, beſides the Condition of the Obligation, (as it ſeems to me there is, which I ſhall ſhew hereafter) yet the Defendant by his ſpecial Concluſion has loſt the Advantage of it; ſo that there appears little Policy in the Concluſion. [b] But when a Man concludes or demurs generally, he ſhall have Benefit of every Thing mentioned in the Record, or of every Point which the Law gives him. And ſo is the Diverſity, where the Concluſion or Demurrer is general, and where ſpecial. And here inaſmuch as the Concluſion is ſpecial, altho' the Obligation is void for other Cauſes than for the Condition (as in Truth it is) yet the Defendant ſhall not take Advantage thereof. But it is further to be ſeen, whether the Concluſion here, viz. Judgment ſi actio, be proper or not; and it ſeems to me that it is not, [c] but he ought to have concluded, ſic non eſt factum; for the Statute ſaith, if an Obligation be taken in other Form than is contained in the Statute, it ſhall be void, and from what Time ſhall it be void? I ſay, from the Beginning, and if it be void from the Beginning, then it never was his Deed, and if it never was his Deed, then he ought to have concluded, non eſt factum. [d] As if a Man will plead, in Avoidance of a Deed, that he was a Man not-letter'd, and that the Deed was read to him in other Form, or [e] that he delivered it with his own Hand as an Eſcrow to be delivered over, after the Performance of a Condition, as his Deed, and that before the Condition performed the Bailee delivered it over, there he ought to conclude, non eſt factum, becauſe the Matter proves that it never was his Deed. [f] But if it was once his Deed, and afterwards the Duty thereof became extinct, then he ought to demand Judgment ſi actio. [g] As if a Releaſe of the Duty he pleaded, he ought to demand Judgment ſi actio, for there it was once his Deed, and therefore he cannot ſay, non eſt factum, but Judgment ſi actio; becauſe the Duty is now extinct. So if an [h] Infant, or a Man by [i] Dures make an Obligation, they ſhall demand Judgment ſi actio, becauſe the Delivery of the Deed was not void. And ſo is the Diverſity where a Man ſhall ſay, non eſt factum, and where he ſhall demand Judgment ſi actio. But here, inaſmuch as upon the Matter it never was his Deed, he ought to have concluded non eſt factum, and not Judgment ſi actio, as he has done, for which Reaſon the Concluſion is bad. Further, inaſmuch as the Concluſion in this Point is bad, it is to be ſeen what ſhall be done, if it appears to us Judges that upon the Matter in Law the Deed is void; and it ſeems to me, that we by our Office ought to give Judgment againſt the Plaintiff, for altho' the Defendant may not take the Advantage, yet inaſmuch as it appears to us that the Plaintiff has no Cauſe of Action, [k] we ought to give Judgment againſt him. [l] And therefore in 7. Ed. 4. where an Action of Treſpaſs was brought againſt Tilly and Wody for taking five Boxes with Charters, &c. Tilly pleaded, Not guilty, and Wody made Title to himſelf by a Gift, and the Plaintiff traverſed the Gift, and upon theſe Matters they were at Iſſue, and Tilly was found guilty, and the Iſſue was found for Wody againſt the Plaintiff, and altho' the Iſſue was found againſt Tilly, yet by clear Opinion in a Manner the Plaintiff ſhould not have Judgment againſt him, for it was found between the Plaintiff and Wody that the Plaintiff had no Title, and then inaſmuch as it appears to the Judges by the Record that the Plaintiff had no Title, they ex officio ought to give Judgment againſt the Plaintiff. [m] And in 10. Ed. 4. there is a like Caſe, viz. in an Action of Treſpaſs by Leſſee for Years for Cattle taken, the Defendant ſaid that the Leſſor held of him by the Services, &c. and for ſo much in Arrear he took the Cattle, the Plaintiff replied rien arere, &c. and upon this they were at Iſſue, and it was found for the Plaintiff, and the Opinion of all the Juſtices there was, that notwithſtanding the Defendant had accepted the Writ good, yet the Plaintiff ſhould not have Judgment, but the Court ſhould abate the Writ, for it appears to the Court that the Defendant was Lord, againſt whom an Action of Treſpaſs lies not, for the Statute ſays, non ideo puniatur Dominus, &c. [n] And in an Appeal by a Woman of the Death of her Father, altho' the Defendant affirms the Writ, yet the Court ex officio ought to abate it, for it appears to the Court, that by the Statute [o] no Woman may have an Appeal of Death of any but of her Huſband. So that always if it appears to the Court that the Plaintiff has no Title, he ſhall not have Judgment, although the Defendant admit his Title. So here, although the Defendant by his bad Concluſion has concluded himſelf of his Advantage, the Plaintiff ſhall be barred by the Court ex officio, if ſo be it appears that he has no Title. Then it is to be ſeen here, whether the Statute makes the Obligation void, or not. And it ſeems to me, that the Obligation here is void by the Letter of the Statute. The Statute, amongſt other Things, has three notable Branches, which have been rehearſed. The firſt is a Command and Authority to Sheriffs to let to bail ſuch Perſons as are bailable, and this is no new Proviſion, [a] for the Common Law has been always ſo before, for the Common Law, which is common Reaſon, did ever allow that ſuch Perſons as were taken by Writ, Bill, or Warrant in any Action perſonal, or Indictment for Treſpaſs, might be let at large upon Sureties, for it ſtands indifferent in a Manner whether they are guilty or not, and then if they are not guilty, and ſhould be reſtrained of their Liberty, it would be a great Inconvenience, which the Common Law will never ſuffer; and therefore as to this firſt Branch, it was made in Affirmance of the Common Law. The ſecond Branch, viz. the Exception, was alſo made in Affirmance of the Common Law, for ſuch Perſons as were in by Condemnation, Execution, Capias utlagatum, and ſuch other Cauſes contained in the Exception, were not bailable before, as any one may eaſily judge by the Inconvenience that would follow from it. But the Proviſion is only in the third Branch, viz. in Avoidance of Obligations taken in other Manner than is expreſſed in the Statute, and this Branch has Relation to avoid Obligations made for letting to mainprize as well thoſe who are contained in the ſecond Branch, as thoſe in the firſt. For theſe Words in the third Branch, viz. for any Cauſe aforeſaid, have Relation to all that is ſpoken before; [b] for (aforeſaid) contains all that is before mentioned, and is in Latin prærecitata, and this Word prærecitata has the ſame Meaning as infra contenta, expreſſa, or præmiſſa, which has Relation to all, that is, as well to Things excepted, as otherwiſe. [c] And therefore if one makes a Leaſe for Years of a Manor except a Cloſe, &c. rendring annually a Rent, &c. and the Leſſee is bound to perform all Grants, Covenants, and Agreements contenta, expreſſa, or recitata in the Indenture, if he diſturbs the Leſſor in the Occupation of the Cloſe excepted, he has forfeited the Obligation, for when he excepts the Cloſe, the other is content with it, and that the Leſſor ſhall occupy it, and then this is an Agreement, and the ſaid Words, viz. contenta, expreſſa, et recitata do each of them go as well to the Exception as to the reſt. [d] And in 45. Ed. 3. where a Vicar had leaſed his Church to three by Indenture, and divers Contracts were compriſed in the Deed, and at the End of the Deed there were theſe Words, et ad omnia et ſingula in prædicto ſcripto contenta bene et fideliter facienda obligamus nos et quemlibet noſtrum in ſolido per præſentes, there it is holden that this Word contenta reaches to every Covenant, and ſo does prærecitata; wherefore it ſeems to me clear enough that this Word (aforeſaid) and in Latin prærecitata, reaches well enough to the ſecond Branch, viz. the Exception. And, Sir, the Intent of the Statute was accordingly ſo, [e] for at the Common Law before this Statute, when a Man was condemned in any Sum, and in Execution for it, the Sheriffs or other Officers would let him at large upon Condition to ſave them harmleſs; as if he had been condemned in 100 l. the Sheriff or other Officer would take an Obligation of 300 l. and ſuffer him to go at large, and then the Party Plaintiff had no other Remedy but only to ſue the Sheriff or other Officer upon the Eſcape, and he ſhould recover no more than his firſt Debt or very ſmall Damages, and perhaps it would be one or two Years before the Plaintiff could recover it againſt the Sheriff or Goaler, and in the mean time the Priſoner is at large, and will encreaſe the Sum in which he was condemned more than the Sheriff or other Officer ſhould render in Damages. And ſometimes the Sheriff or other Officer would for ſuch Favour gain a Piece of Land, ſometimes he would compound with the Priſoner by this Means to get his Son and Heir married to his own Daughter, and he never was without great Reward for ſuch Favour. And ſo Sheriffs and other Officers by ſuch Crafts and Devices were enriched, and were ſure to be kept without Damage by ſuch Obligations for the Sum in which they ſhould be condemned for the Eſcape, and thus their Bribery had ſafe Conduct. For this Cauſe the Statute was made to avoid ſuch Obligations, ſo that if Sheriffs or other Officers will let Priſoners at large, they muſt do it at their Peril, for by this Statute their ſafe Conduct, that is to ſay, the Obligations to ſave them harmleſs, is cut off and deſtroyed. And therefore ſeeing the Miſchief was ſo great, it cannot be taken but that it was the Intent of the Makers of the Statute to cure it, and this was one of their principal Views in this Statute, and was a Thing that had the greateſt Need to be remedied. And, Sir, I don't ſee to what Intent this Exception was put or mentioned in the Statute, if it was not to make void Obligations taken for letting them go at large, who were not bailable. For to reſtrain them from Bail was in vain, for the Common Law had done that before, and then the Exception was not put in the Statute for ſuch frivolous Purpoſe, but upon great Conſideration, and that was, to make Obligations taken for letting them to bail who were not bailable, utterly void, by the Relation of this Word (aforeſaid) to the ſaid Clauſe. [f] And, Sir, in the ſaid Caſe of Debt in 37. H. 6. brought by a Sheriff upon a ſingle Obligation made by one, who was in his Cuſtody for Suſpicion of Felony, and which is there holden void, it is put obiter by Moile, that if the Sheriff had let one to mainprize, who is excepted in the ſaid Statute as not bailable, and had taken a ſimple Obligation, it ſhould be void, quod alii Juſticiarii ibi conceſſerunt: Which proves that they being nearer to the Statute than we are took it that an Obligation taken for one not bailable, and made in other Form than the Statute limits, ſhould be void, and that I believe. And ſo, as it ſeems to me, the Words of the Statute, and the Intent of the Statute, make the ſaid Word (aforeſaid) to have Relation to the ſecond Branch, and conſequently to make the Obligation (if it is taken in other Form than the Statute limits) to be utterly void. And further, if the Obligation is not void for this Cauſe, it ſeems to me that (if it is taken in other Form than the Statute tute limits) theſe Words, viz. colore officii, will make it void, for it is to be conſidered that Thomas Maningham was in Execution, and no Man can be in Execution but under ſome Officer, and here he was in Execution under the Cuſtody of the Plaintiff, not as Lewis Dive, but as Sheriff, for the Writ to take Thomas Maningham was directed to him as Sheriff, and ſo as Officer he had the Cuſtody of him, then when he took the Obligation, he took it as Officer, but he took it unduly, for he was not bailable, but yet he took it as Sheriff, ergo he took it colore officii ſui; for this Word colore officii ſui is always taken [a] in malam partem, and ſignifies an Act badly done under the Countenance of an Office, and it bears a diſſembling Viſage of Duty, and is properly called Extortion. As if an Officer will take more for his Fees than he ought, this is done colore officii ſui, but yet it is not Part of his Office, and it is called Extortion, [b] which is no other than Robbery, but it is more odious than Robbery, for Robbery is apparent, and always hath the Countenance of Vice, but Extortion, being equally as great a Vice as Robbery, carries the Maſk of Virtue, and is more difficult to be tried or diſcerned, and conſequently more odious than Robbery. Wherefore here inaſmuch as the Obligation was made for the Deliverance of Thomas Maningham, who was in the Cuſtody of the Plaintiff, as Officer, it cannot be denied but that he took the Obligation for his Deliverance colore officii, altho' it was not virtute officii ſui. And as to what was ſaid at the Bar, that if a Sheriff or other Officer takes an Obligation of a Priſoner for his Meat and Drink, that this is colore officii, and yet out of the Statute, Sir, I utterly deny this, [c] for the Obligation is void. [d] For if one be in Execution he ought to live of his own, and neither the Plaintiff nor the [e] Sheriff is bound to give him Meat or Drink, no more than if one diſtrains Cattle, and puts them in a Pound, for there the [f] Owner of the Cattle ought to give them Meat, and not he that diſtrained them, no more is the Party or the Sheriff, who has one in Execution, bound to give Meat to the Priſoner, but he ought to live of his own Goods, altho' he be in for Felony, until he be attainted, and this by the Courſe of the Common Law. [g] For before Attainder the Goods are his, and in his Hands, and the Common Law in this Point is confirmed by a [h] Statute; and if he has no Goods, he ſhall live of the Charity of others, and if others will give him nothing, let him die in the Name of God, if he will, and impute the Cauſe of it to his own Fault, for his Preſumption and ill Behaviour brought him to that Impriſonment. Inaſmuch then as the Sheriffs or other Officers are not bound to find their Priſoners Meat, an Obligation taken for Meat is void, for it is colore officii, and the Sheriff cannot take an Obligation of his Priſoner but in a ſmall Number of Caſes. For his Ability in this Point is ſtraitned by this Statute, and ſo of all other Officers except the Warden of the Fleet, and of the King's Palace at Weſtminſter, [i] who are excepted by the Statute. [k] And therefore in 7. Ed. 4. one was in Cuſtody of the Sheriff by a Capias upon an Indictment of Treſpaſs, and the Sheriff let him to Mainprize, and he made an Obligation to another upon Condition to keep his Day, &c. and this he did for the Suerty of the Sheriff, and there it is held that the Obligation was void, becauſe the laſt Branch of the Statute prohibits any Sheriff from taking an Obligation for any Cauſe aforeſaid, or by Colour of their Office, but only to themſelves, and there inaſmuch as it was taken to another, it was void: And alſo there the Court held, that if the Obligation has not the Conditions expreſſed in the Statute, it is not the Deed of the Party: Ex quo ſequitur, that he ought to conclude non eſt factum, and hereto the Opinion there tends, which confirms my Opinion that the Concluſion ought to be as I have ſaid before. And ſo the Capacity of Sheriffs or other Officers is abridged and ſtraitned in this Point. And thus is my Mind perceived in theſe Matters; for I apprehend that this Word (aforeſaid) has Relation to the ſecond Branch, and to make the Obligation here void, and if it ſhould not, yet theſe Words colore officii will make it void, if ſo be the Obligation is taken in other Form than the Statute limits; to which Point I am now to argue. And, as it ſeems to me, it is taken in other Form than the Statute limits, for the Statute contains that it ſhall be in the Name of their Offices, and upon Condition to appear, and here it is not ſo, for he has no Day in Court, wherefore it is void; and the laſt Part of the Condition of the Obligation is, if he ſhall be at the Command of the Sheriff as a true Priſoner, and then the Sheriff might command him not to eſcape, and he might go to Bed and ſleep there ſafely, but it never was the Intent of the Statute to give him ſuch Eaſe, and ſuch Condition was never intended by the Statute; and if any will argue that the laſt Part of the Condition is according to the Statute, yet the firſt Part is not ſo, for the firſt Part is, if Thomas Maningham keep without Damage the ſaid Sheriff againſt our Lord the King, and one Thomas Palley, &c. and it does not ſay for [l] what he ſhould keep him without Damage, ſo that it is general, and ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt him, and that is, for all Things, as for Felonies, for Treaſons, for the Sheriff's Account in the Exchequer, and for all other Charges; nor does it ſay how long he ſhall keep him without Damage, and then it ſhall be taken for ever. And ſo it ſhall be conſtrued, for every Thing, and for ever, et ſic per omnia ſecula ſeculorum. And, Sir, I apprehend that if the Obligation had been conditioned according to the Statute, and had had another [m] Thing alſo in the ſame Condition, that the Obligation, by Reaſon of this Condition, would be utterly void. As a Formedon and Action of Waſt are given by Statute, there if a Man will add other Words in the Writ, the whole is void. [n] And if the King licenſe one to alien the third Part of his Land, and he aliens the whole, the Licenſe is totally void. And I was of Opinion in the firſt Statute of Deviſes, which gives Authority to deviſe two Parts, that if he had deviſed the whole, the whole ſhould be void. And ſo if another Thing is added to a Thing given by Statute, it ſhall make all void. So here, altho' the laſt Part of the Condition was according to the Statute, yet the firſt Part was not, and that ſhall make the whole Obligation void. And, Sir, the Obligation varies from the Form of the Statute in another Point, for in the firſt Branch it is commanded to

to the Sheriff to let the Perſons therein mentioned to mainprize upon reaſonable Suerty of ſufficient Perſons, having ſufficient within the Counties, where ſuch Perſons are ſo let to Bail or Mainprize; ſo that the Statute is of ſufficient Perſons, ut ſupra, and is in the plural Number, in which Caſe there ought to be two * Suerties at leaſt, and here there is but one Suerty, viz. John Maningham only, and this is not according to the Words nor Intent of the Statute, for the more and the more able the Suerties are, the ſooner will they cauſe him to appear who is let to Mainprize, and ſo Juſtice will be more ſpeedily done; and therefore the plural Number of Suerties was well conſidered and put into the Statute, but here there is but one Suerty, viz. the Defendant only; And the letting them to Bail, who are mentioned in the ſecond Clauſe, ought to be upon like Suerties, and in the ſame Manner as is contained in the firſt Branch; and therefore ſeeing there is but one Suerty here, it is in other Manner than is contained in the Statute. And then if the Obligation is taken in other Form than is limited in the Statute, the Statute ſaith it ſhall be void. But the Defendant has loſt the advantage of the Obligation in its Variance from the Order of the Statute in this Point, by his ſpecial Concluſion and Reliance upon it that it was not made upon ſuch Condition as is limited in the Statute, as I have ſhewn before; yet becauſe the condition varies from the Statute he ſhall have Benefit by the Office of the judge, notwithſtanding his bad Concluſion to the Action, as I have ſaid before, and ſo for theſe Cauſes the Plaintiff ſhall be barred.

Note, (Reader) that as to what was moved for the Plaintiff, that the Obligation here ſhould be out of the Danger of the Statute, becauſe it is not made by him who was impriſoned, but by the Defendant who was at large, this ſeems no Matter for two Cauſes. The firſt is, becauſe the firſt Branch requires, that the Suerty ſhall be of ſufficient Perſons, having ſufficient within the Counties where, &c. And ſo the Words and alſo the Intent of the Statute, by theſe Words, appears to extend to thoſe Suerties at large taken for them in Priſon, ſo that they have ſufficient within the County. The ſecond Cauſe is, for that the third Branch ordains, that no Sheriff ſhall take any Obligation for any Cauſe aforeſaid, or by Colour of their Office, but only to themſelves, of any Perſon, nor by any Perſon that is in their Cuſtody, &c. ſo that theſe Words, viz. (of any Perſon) are general, and extend to all Perſons, viz. at large, or not, &c. or at leaſt they extend to all that are at large, and theſe Words (by any Perſon that is in their Cuſtody) extend to all Priſoners only, and theſe Words, (which are in their Cuſtody) are only to be referred to the Perſons laſt named, and not to theſe Words (of any Perſon) firſt named; and then theſe Words will alſo make an Obligation taken of him at large to be void, as well as if it was taken of the Priſoner himſelf. And perhaps for theſe Cauſes it was held ſo clear, that it was not anſwered by the other Side, nor by the Lord Mountague. Nota bene by the Reporter.

At which Day here comes as well the aforeſaid Lewis, as the aforeſaid John Maningham by their Attornies aforeſaid, and thereupon the Premiſes being ſeen and by the Juſtices here more fully underſtood, it ſeems to the ſame Juſtices here, that the Plea of the aforeſaid John above in Bar pleaded is good and ſufficient in Law to preclude the aforeſaid Lewis from having his Action aforeſaid againſt the aforeſaid John Maningham. Therefore it is conſidered, that the aforeſaid Lewis take nothing by his Writ aforeſaid, but be in Mercy for his falſe Claim therein. And that the aforeſaid John go thereupon without Day, &c. Enquire the Names of the Pledges, &c. And alſo it is conſidered, that the aforeſaid John recover againſt the aforeſaid Lewis 24 Shillings adjudged to the ſame John by the Diſcretion of the Juſtices of the Lord the King here, according to the Form of the Statute therein made and provided, for the Coſts and Expences of the aforeſaid John by reaſon of the Premiſſes, &c. The reſt of the Record. Judgment.

A Report of a Judgment given in the Common Bench by deliberate Advice of all the Juſtices of the ſame Bench, in Hillary Term in the 4th and 5th Years of the Reign of King Edward the Sixth, between Lawrence Kidwelly Plaintiff and William Brand Defendant, in an Action of Treſpaſs brought by the ſaid Plaintiff againſt the ſaid Defendant.

IT appears amongſt the Records in the Term of St. Hillary in the 4th and 5th Years of the Reign of King Edward the Sixth, Rot. 355. that Lawrence Kidwelly brought an Action of Treſpaſs againſt William Brand for breaking his Cloſe at Lomer, in the County of Southampton, &c. and the Defendant pleaded, not guilty, &c. And it was found by Verdict before Juſtices of Niſi prius, that John Salcot Abbot of the late Monaſtery of Hyde near Wincheſter in the ſaid County of Southampton was ſeized of and in the Site of the Manor of Lomer, with a Grange ſituate upon the ſaid Site, and of and in 100 Acres of Land, 40 Acres of Paſture, and 40 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances in Lomer abovewritten, (whereof the Place where the Treſpaſs is ſuppoſed to be done is, and at the ſaid Time of the Treſpaſs ſuppoſed to be done was, Parcel) in his Demeſn as of Fee, in Right of the ſaid Monaſtery, and being ſo ſeized, the ſame Abbot and Convent by their Indenture made between the ſaid Abbot and Convent of the one Part, and John Cropp, Thomaſin his Wife, and John their Son of the other Part, (one Part whereof ſealed with the common Seal of the ſaid Abbot and Convent, bearing Date the 21ſt Day of September, in the 26th Year of the Reign of King Henry the Eighth, was ſhewn in Evidence) leaſed to the ſaid John Cropp, and Thomaſin his Wife, and John their Son, the ſaid Site and others the Premiſſes, to have and to hold to them and to their Aſſigns, from the Feaſt of St. Michael next enſuing the Date of the ſaid Indenture until the End of twelve Years then next following; Paying

Of a Demand or Tender of a Rent reſerved payable at a Place out of the Land, out of which it iſſues. S. C. Dyer 68. pl. 23.

Paying annually during the ſaid Term to the ſaid Abbot and Convent and their Succeſſors, for the ſaid Site and others the Premiſſes at Hyde aforeſaid, 4 l. 8 s. 10 d. at the Feaſts of the Annunciation of our Lady, and St. Michael, by equal Portions. And if it ſhould happen the ſaid Rent of 4 l. 8 s. 10 d. to be in Arrear and not paid in part or in whole by the Space of 40 Days after any of the ſaid Feaſts on which it ought to be paid, that then it ſhould be lawful for the ſaid Abbot and his Succeſſors into the ſaid Site and others the Premiſſes whereof, &c. to enter, and them to reſeize, hold, enjoy, and the ſaid John Cropp, Thomaſin his Wife, and John their Son from the ſame totally to expell. By Force whereof, the ſaid John Cropp, and Thomaſin, and John their Son entered into the Premiſſes, and were thereof poſſeſſed. And they found further, that the Reverſion of the Premiſſes came to the King by the Diſſolution of the Monaſtery, and that the King granted it over to William now Earl of Wiltſhire, and to his Wife, and to the right Heirs of the Earl, who granted it over to the Wife of the Plaintiff for her Life, &c. and they found Attornment accordingly. They found alſo, that the Leaſe came from the ſaid John Cropp, and his Wife, and their Son John to one John Fernhold, and from the ſaid John Fernhold to the Wife of the Defendant. And they found further, that becauſe 44 s. 5 d. of the ſaid Rent for one half Year ending at the Feaſt of the Annunciation of our Lady, in the third Year of the Reign of the King that now is, were in Arrear to the Plaintiff and his Wife after the Attornment made, and before the Time when, &c. and by the Space of 40 Days next after the ſaid Feaſt, the ſaid Plaintiff before the Time when, &c. that is to ſay, the fourth Day of May, in the third Year of the Reign of the King that now is (which fourth Day was the laſt of the ſaid forty Days next after the ſaid Feaſt of the Annunciation of our Lady) ſent one Walter Thomas his Servant to the ſaid Site and others the Premiſſes leaſed as is aforeſaid, whereof, &c. to demand the ſaid 44 s. 5 d. and therefore the ſaid Walter by the Command of the ſaid Plaintiff, the ſaid fourth Day of May, went to a certain Place called Lomer's-Barns Parcel of the Premiſſes leaſed in Manner and Form aforeſaid, and he was and tarried in the ſaid Place called Lomer's-Barns from the riſing of the Sun on the ſame fourth Day until the ſetting of the ſun the ſame Day, to demand the aforeſaid 44 s. 5 d. of the aforeſaid Rent in Manner and Form aforeſaid being in Arrear, for the aforeſaid Lawrence his Maſter, and to the Uſe of the ſame Lawrence, and there was none then and there to render or pay the ſame 44 s. 5 d. And the Jurors aforeſaid alſo ſay, that the aforeſaid Lawrence was in his proper Perſon the aforeſaid fourth Day of May, in the third Year aforeſaid, at Hyde aforeſaid at the 10th Hour before Noon of the ſame fourth Day, to demand the aforeſaid 44 s. 5 d. of the aforeſaid Rent in Form aforeſaid being in Arrear. And then the aforeſaid Lawrence at Hyde aforeſaid requeſted one Richard Bothell that if the Rent aforeſaid in Form aforeſaid being in Arrear ſhould be brought to Hyde aforeſaid, that then the ſame Richard would receive the ſame Rent for the ſame Lawrence, which ſaid Richard was and tarried at Hyde aforeſaid from that tenth Hour of the aforeſaid fourth Day of May until the ſetting of the Sun the ſame Day, to demand the Rent aforeſaid for the aforeſaid Lawrence, and to his Uſe: and none came to pay the ſame Rent. And upon this, for Default of Payment, the Plaintiff in Right of his Wife entered, whereupon the Defendant re-entered, and committed the Treſpaſs, as the Plaintiff hath declared. And upon this the Jurors pray the Diſcretion of the Juſtices, whether the Defendant be guilty or not. And the Juſtices had Copies of the Verdict delivered to them, and the Councel for the Parties would have argued the Caſe, if the Juſtices had held it ſo doubtful as to need an Argument. But the Juſtices well adviſed themſelves, and at laſt they all agreed without open Argument of Councel, and by good Advice they adjudged, that the Defendant was guilty upon the Matter, and they awarded that the Plaintiff ſhould recover 10 l. for his Damages aſſeſſed by the Court.

Ex quo, Lector, four Things are to be noted. The firſt is, that although the Rent was not demanded on the Day it was firſt due, that is, on the Day of the Feaſt of the Annunciation of our Lady, nor the Plaintiff ready the ſame Day on the Land, nor at Hyde to receive the ſame Rent, yet this is not material, nor ſhall it hurt his Entry, but he may well enter, for Default of Payment, the laſt inſtant of the laſt of the 40 Days. [a] So that the fortieth Day only is material for the Leſſor to demand the Rent, and the not being ready to receive the Rent the firſt Day on which it is due is not prejudicial to him in the Reverſion, nor is his Attendance on that Day any thing to the Purpoſe. The ſecond Thing to be noted in this Judgment is, that when the Rent was reſerved to be paid at Hyde, and if it be in arrear by 40 Days that then, &c. [b] in this Caſe the Rent ſhall be paid at Hyde the laſt of the 40 Days, as well as the firſt day on which it is firſt due. For although it is not ſaid by expreſs Words, that if the Rent be in arrear not paid at Hyde by the Space of 40 Days, &c. yet it ſhall have Relation to the Place which is firſt named; and ſo the Law ſaith that the Rent ſhall be paid at Hyde the laſt of the 40 Days, although it is not ſo expreſſed in plain Words. The third Thing to be noted in this Judgment is, that the Plaintiff might enter without any [c] Demand of the Rent, for Walter Thomas's being upon the Land was not material, inaſmuch as he did not demand the Rent in deed, but was there to demand the Rent aforeſaid, and it does not appear in the Record that he did demand the Rent aforeſaid, for if his being there had been material, he ought to have demanded the Rent, although none was there ready to pay it, and then inaſmuch as he did not demand the Rent at all, his being there was in vain, and is all of one Effect as if he had been abſent; and ſo the Act of the ſaid Walter Thomas ſhall not give Benefit to the Plaintiff, nor ſhall aid him in his Entry, but the only Cauſe for which the Entry was good and congeable was becauſe the Defendant did not offer the Plaintiff the Rent at Hyde; for inaſmuch as the Rent is payable there, the Plaintiff is not bound to demand it. And therefore Mountague Chief Juſtice (as I heard, for I was abſent when this Matter was touched) put a Difference when he in the Reverſion ſhall demand the Rent, and when the Leſſee ought to offer it; as if a Man makes a Leaſe for Life or Years, rendering ing Rent at ſuch a Feaſt, and if it be in arrear that he ſhall enter, there the Leſſor ought to come to the Land, and demand the Rent, or elſe he ſhall never enter; for the Rent is only payable upon the Land, and the Land is the Debtor, for in Aſſize for the Rent the Land ſhall be put in View, and he ſhall diſtrain in the Land for the Rent, ſo that the Land is the principal Debtor, * and the Perſon of the Leſſee is no Debtor, but in reſpect of the Land: † for if the Land is recovered upon eign Title, then the Perſon ſhall be diſcharged of the Rent from thenceforward; ſo that the Land is the original and moſt effectual Debtor; and therefore although the Leſſee be abſent, yet the Leſſor ought to demand the Rent of the Land, as principal Debtor, and as that which may render Diſtreſs, if the Rent is not ready upon it; and if he does not make a Demand, he ſhall never re-enter for Default of Payment, although the Leſſee be abſent. [a] But when the Rent is payable in another Place out of the Land, then the Leſſor is not driven by the Law to demand the Rent, for his principal Debtor is abſent, that is, the Land, and although the Leſſee is preſent, that is not material, for he is not the original Debtor, nor hath the Leſſor any Intereſt to Demand the Rent of him, but the Leſſee ought to offer it for his own Indemnity, as the obligor ought upon an Obligation, or as the Grantor of an Annuity ought to offer the Annuity at the Day, &c. to excuſe himſelf of Damages. So ought the Defendant here to offer the Rent for his own Indemnity to ſave himſelf from the Penalty of Forfeiture. [b] And it cannot properly be called a Rent in another Place out of the Land, but rather a Sum of Money, which the Leſſee, by this Agreement of Payment out of the Land, ought to offer to the Leſſor, ſo that he has altered the Nature of it as to this Purpoſe by his own Aſſent. And this is the Diverſity with regard to the Demand, where the Rent is payable upon the Land, and where out of the Land. And then here, inaſmuch as the Rent was payable at Hyde, the Plaintiff may enter without Demand.

It ſeems from hence, that if one grants a Rent-Seck in Fee out of Land in one County, payable annually ſuch a Day and Place in another County, and the Grantee is ſeized of the Rent, that if the Grantee comes to the Place appointed for the Payment, and there demands the Rent upon the Day accordingly, if the Rent be denied, this is no Diſſeizin of the Rent, as it ſhould be in Caſe of a Denial upon the Land, where the Rent is payable upon the Land. Nota bene by the Reporter.

The fourth Thing to be noted in the ſaid Judgment is, that although the Verdict does not find that Hyde was in the Hands of the Plaintiff or Defendant (for which Reaſon it ſhall be intended in the Hands of ſome Stranger, as in rei veritate it was, [c] yet the Defendant ought to come to it to pay the Rent, and the Plaintiff ought to come there to receive it. Quære if they ſhall be Treſpaſſers to the Stranger by coming there? And it ſeems to me that they ſhall not, for ſince the Abbot was Owner of Hyde at the Time of the Leaſe, and had reſerved the Rent to be paid there, the Leſſee ſhould not be a Treſpaſſer to the Abbot by coming there to pay it, for by the Reſervation of the Rent at Hyde it was charged with this Liberty, and the Reſervation to be paid there was an Aſſent that he ſhould come there, ſo that by his coming there he ſhould not be a Treſpaſſer. [d] As if A. is bound to B. in an Obligation of 20 l. for the Payment of 10 l. to him at ſuch a Day, there inaſmuch as no Place is expreſſed for the Payment, A. is bound to ſeek B. whereſoever he ſhall be. And if B. is in his own houſe, and A. comes to him there, and tenders the Money, he ſhall not be a Treſpaſſer by coming there; but if he had been in the Houſe of another Man, there he ſhould be a Treſpaſſer to that Perſon, if he had a Mind to take advantage of it, but he ſhould not be a Treſpaſſer to the Obligee by coming into his own Houſe, as is aforeſaid, for inaſmuch as by the taking of the Obligation he aſſented that A. ſhould pay him the 10 l. by Neceſſity of Reaſon he ought to be aſſenting that he ſhould come to him to offer him the 10 l. for the coming to his Perſon precedes the offer; and then inaſmuch as he was aſſenting that he ſhould pay him the 10 l. and therein it was contained that he was aſſenting that he ſhould come to him for that Purpoſe, it follows ex conſequente that he ſhall not puniſh him for doing that, to which he himſelf was privy and aſſenting, that is, for his coming there, and then if he ſhall not puniſh him as a Treſpaſſer for coming to the Place which was not appointed him by the Party in expreſs Words, a multo fortiore the Abbot ſhould not puniſh the Leſſee here for coming to Hyde, which was appointed by expreſs Words for the Tender of the Rent, for (as hath been ſaid) the Reſervation of the Rent to be paid there is an Aſſent that he ſhall come there, and by this Aſſent the Place is charged. And ſo the Leſſee had Title and intereſt in the Place as to his coming there, and the Place was charged to the Leſſee with this Liberty, and the Leſſee had Authority and Intereſt in the ſaid Place as to this Purpoſe, and this by the Act of thoſe, who had Authority to charge the ſaid Place at that Time, that is, the Abbot and Convent. And then if the Leſſee ſhould not be a Treſpaſſer to the Abbot by his coming to Hyde to pay the Rent there, no more ſhould he be to the King when Hyde was in the King's Hands, for the Statute of Suppreſſion ſaves the Intereſt of every Stranger; and then he who is the King's Patentee of Hyde ſhall hold it charged with the ſaid Authority and Intereſt. And therefore the Defendant might come there to pay the Rent without Offence or Treſpaſs, and by the ſame Reaſon it ſeems that he in the Reverſion, viz. the Plaintiff might come there alſo to receive the Rent without any Offence or Treſpaſs, for he has the like Authority, Privilege and Intereſt in Hyde, as the Leſſee hath.

Therefore it is conſidered, that the aforeſaid Lawrence recover againſt the aforeſaid William Brand his Damages aforeſaid to 10 l. by the Jury aforeſaid in Form aforeſaid aſſeſſed. A Re-

A Report of a Judgment given in the Chancery, by deliberate Advice, upon an Argument in Eaſter Term in the fifth Year of the Reign of King Edward the Sixth, in a Writ of Audita Querela brought by Robert Roſs of Ingemanthorp in the County of York Eſquire Plaintiff againſt Sir Thomas Pope Knight Defendant.

Where Purchaſe of Part of Land chargeable with an Execution of a Recognizance diſcharges or ſuſpends the Execution in the whole.

IT appears amongſt the Rolls remaining in the Court of Chancery de Termino Anno regni Regis nunc, that the ſaid Roſs entered into a Recognizance of 500 Marks to the ſaid Pope, and one Robert Curſon Eſquire, according to the Form of the Statute of 23. H. 8. cap. 6. And afterwards the ſame Roſs and his Wife by Fine gave to the ſaid Conuſees the fifth Part of the Manors of Burton, Conſtable, and other Lands in the ſaid County of York in Fee. Afterwards the ſaid Pope, as Survivor, ſued Execution of the ſaid Recognizance in London againſt the ſaid Roſs, and his Body was taken, and the ſaid Roſs, ſuppoſing that the ſaid Fine of the Lands aforeſaid diſcharged the ſaid Recognizance, ſued the ſaid Writ of Audita * Querela comprehending the whole Matter, which Writ bore Date the ſecond Day of November laſt paſt, and was returned into † Chancery on the Octave of St. Hillary laſt paſſed, at which Day the ſaid Sir Thomas Pope appeared: And upon the ſaid Writ and Declaration he demurred in Judgment. And in this preſent Eaſter Term 4. Edw. 6. the Matter was moved and touched many Times. And now the Lord Rich Chancellor of England ſent for Portman one of the Juſtices of the King's Bench, and Hales one of the Juſtices of the Common Bench, to have their Advice, what the Common Law was in this Caſe. For he ought to adjudge in this Caſe according to the Courſe of the Common Law, inaſmuch as the Matter came before him by original Writ; but upon Matters depending before him by Bill he may adjudge according to Conſcience, but here according to the Common Law. And the ſaid Juſtices came into the Chancery, and ſat there with the Chancellor, where the Matter was ſpoke to, and the Opinion of the Chancellor, and of the ſaid Juſtices, and of the whole Court of Chancery was, that the Audita Querela did not lie, becauſe the Land, which the Conuſees took from the Conuſor and his Wife by the Fine, was not the Debtor, but the Body of the Conuſor remained Debtor, and the Land was liable only in reſpect that it was in the Hands of the Conuſor at the Time of the Recognizance or after. But the Land was not charged with the Debt, but chargeable at the Election of the Conuſees. [a] But the Perſon was charged, and in reſpect of the Perſon the Land was chargeable, and the Perſon was not chargeable in reſpect of the Land, for if ſo, the Recognizance would be diſcharged by the taking of the Land by the Conuſees: As if there be Lord and Tenant, now the Tenant is chargeable to do Fealty, and the other Services to the Lord in reſpect of the Land, but if he infeoffs the Lord of the Land, his Perſon ſhall be diſcharged, for his Perſon was chargeable in reſpect of the Land, and the Services were iſſuing out of the Land, and therefore ſhall be extinct by Unity of Poſſeſſion. But here the Conuſor was not Debtor in reſpect of the Land, for if he had aliened the Land to another, yet he ſhould remain Debtor, and his Body and Goods ſhould be taken, for he was not chargeable in reſpect of the Land, but the Land was chargeable in reſpect of him, and therefore before that the Land is charged with the Debt, his Perſon is only Debtor, and then the Execution is well ſued. But if Execution had been ſued of the Body and of the Land, and afterwards the Conuſor had [b] infeoffed the Conuſees of the Land, or had [c] ſurrendred Parcel of the Land, or the Fee-Simple of Parcel had [d] deſcended to them, in all theſe Caſes the Body ſhall be diſcharged, for by the Execution the Land was de facto charged, and ſo became Debtor, and by the Feoffment, Surrender or Deſcent it was diſcharged, becauſe the Diſcharge of Part of a Thing in Execution is a Diſcharge of the whole, be it by Act of the Party, or by Act of Law, for the Duty being perſonal and entire, the Execution for it is entire alſo. But here inaſmuch as the Fine of the Land was before Execution, it cannot be diſcharged of the Execution, for the Land was not then charged in Deed. [e] And therefore it was ſaid, that in 25. Aſs. where the Conuſor after the Recognizance infeoffed the Conuſee of the Land, who re-infeoffed the Conuſor, who infeoffed a Stranger, there it is adjudged that the Conuſee ſhall have Execution againſt the Stranger, for the Execution was not diſcharged by the Poſſeſſion of the Conuſee after the Recognizance made, cauſâ qua ſupra. [f] But if the Conuſor infeoff the Conuſee of Parcel of the Land, and a Stranger of an other Part, and Reſerve Part in his Hands, now the Conuſee ſhall not have Execution againſt the Stranger. For by the ſame Reaſon that one Feoffee [g] of the Conuſor (if his Land only is put in Execution) ſhall have an Audita Querela againſt all the other Feoffees, to make their Land alſo to be put in Execution, and to be contributory to the entire Charge, by the ſame Reaſon if the Conuſee himſelf is one of the Feoffees, his entire Execution ſhall be diſcharged for the Land againſt the other Feoffees of the Conuſor, for he ſhall not be contributory for a perſonal Thing due to himſelf, nor may the Duty be apportioned or divided, but all ſhall be extinct againſt the Feoffees, but yet againſt the [h] Conuſor the Conuſee ſhall have Execution of that Parcel which remains in his Hands. For although each Feoffee ſhall have an Audita Querela againſt the Conuſor to make him contributory to their Charge, if the Execution is ſued againſt him only, [i] yet he ſhall not have an Audita Querela againſt any of them to make their Land contributory to the Charge, if the Land left in his Hands is only put in Execution for the Entirety, for the Burthen is his own, and he only is Debtor, as is ſhewn before. And then if the Conuſor ſhall not have Remedy for Contribution againſt the other Feoffees, by the ſame Reaſon he ſhall not diſcharge the Execution by the Purchaſe of the Conuſee, for the Execution of the Conuſee ſhall be diſcharged in conſideration that he ſhould be contributory if he was Feoffee and not Conuſee, and then inaſmuch as he ſhall not be contributory if he was Feoffee and not Conuſee, he ſhall not be diſcharged being Conuſee, quia ceſſante cauſâ ceſſabit effectus. And for theſe Cauſes the Acceptance of the Land ſhall not diſcharge the Execution here. Wherefore Judgment was afterwards given that the Plaintiff ſhould take nothing by his Writ.

† It ſeems by this Precedent, that there may be a Demurrer in Abatement of the Writ for any Inſufficiency appearing within it, and this Authority is countenanced by Theol. Dig. lib. 15. cap. 9. § 1. Dy. 341. pl. 51. Lutwy. 1644. But of late Time this Doctrine has been impugned, for Per Holt C. J. 6. Mod. 195. there can be no ſuch Thing as a Demurrer in Abatement: And in the Caſe of Docmannee v. Davenant, the Defendant demurred in Abatement, and Plaintiff joined in Bar, and Judgment final was given for the Plaintiff, for the Court ſaid they knew not what a Demurrer in Abatement was, for if the Cauſe be apparent to the Court, they would abate the Writ themſelves, if not, it ought to be pleaded, and they ſaid they would turn all ſuch Demurrers into Bars, tho' Eyre quoted this Precedent here as an Authority for a Demurrer in Abatement. 6. The CASE. Where a Writ original or judicial ſhall be directed to the Coroners for Default in the Sheriff, and how. S. C. 2. Rol. Abr. 668. pl. 4. Theol. Dig. lib. 7. cap. 1. § 6.

Cook and Saunders Serjeants took divers Exceptions in Abatement of the Writ. Firſt they argued, that the Writ directed to the Coroners was not well directed. For all original Writs are awarded out of the Chancery by the Chancellor, who is thereunto deputed by the King, and the Power, which the Chancellor hath concerning the Writs of the Common Law, is certainly defined and expreſſed by the Common Law, and if he exceeds his Authority, or does not purſue it in ſuch Order as the Law hath appointed him, then the Party by Exception ſhall abate ſuch Writ. And here the Chancellor ought to have awarded the Writ to the Sheriff, who is the Officer [a] to all the Courts to execute the Writs of the Common Law, and whom the Law preſumes to be indifferent between Party and Party. And if he is not ſo, but makes the Jury in Aſſize favourably to either of the Parties, the other may abate it by Exception, and then the Plaintiff ſhall have a new Writ awarded by the Juſtices of Aſſize to the Coroners, where the Default in the Sheriff is firſt known to the Court, and of Record. But the Chancellor has no Authority to take Conuſance of this before Exception of the Party, nor may he change the Officer to execute the Writ, for if he might change the Officer, by the ſame Reaſon he might change the Order and Form of the Writ, and by the ſame Reaſon alſo he might take away the Juriſdiction of the Courts, and make a Thing, which is pleadable in one Court, to be pleaded in another Court, which he cannot do. And therefore in a Writ of Right if the Land is holden of a Manor, it ought to be directed to the Lord of the Manor, for the Land ought to be demanded there, and the Lord of the Manor ought to have the Fines, Iſſues, Amercements, and other Profits ariſing by Reaſon of the Plea. And therefore if the Lord of the Manor has a-mind that the Land ſhall be impleaded in the King's Court, then after this is certified to the King in Chancery, the Demandant ſhall have a Writ of Right returnable in the Common Bench, which ſhall have this Clauſe at the End of it, [b] Quia B. capitalis Dominus feodi illius nobis inde remiſit curiam ſuam. And there is in the Regiſter the Form of the Lord's Certificate, that he is content to remit his Court. And this is grounded upon good Reaſon, that the Lord's Aſſent ſhall be certified, before that the Chancellor by any Writ ſhall take away his Court, and his Profits. And ſo in a Recordare or an Accedas ad curiam to remove a Replevin out of the baſe Court of any Lord, there is the Cauſe of Removal expreſſed in the Writ, and alſo there is this Clauſe in the Writ, [c] Fiat executio iſtius brevis, ſi cauſa ſit verâ, aliter non; which Clauſe is conſonant to Reaſon, that when the Party complains to the Chancellor that the Lord of the Court favours the other Party, or that he cannot have Juſtice done him in the baſe Court, yet inaſmuch as the Lord ſhall loſe his Court and his Profits ariſing from this Plea, neither the Chancellor nor the King ſhall believe the Complaint, for perhaps the Surmiſe is falſe, and therefore the Sheriff is by the ſaid Clauſe made Judge of the Matter. Which Caſes argue that the Chancellor ought not to take preciſe Conuſance of Surmiſes, nor ought he to take away the Juriſdiction of any Court, nor the Profit of any Perſon, by giving Credit to ſuch Suggeſtions. With Regard to the principal Caſe then, no more than the Chancellor may, by ſuch Surmiſes, take away the Juriſdiction of Courts of other Lords, or their Profits in them, no more may he take away the Juriſdiction of the Sheriff, and his Fees and Profits, which ariſe to him from the Execution of ſuch original Writs. But judicial Writs may be directed to the Coroners, as the Venire Facias where the Parties are at Iſſue, [d] but there upon the Surmiſe of the Plaintiff that the Sheriff is his Couſin, and upon Prayer that the Venire facias may be directed to the Coroners, to avoid the Delay which may happen by the Challenge to the Array, the Defendant ſhall be examined whether it be true or not, and if he confeſs it, then the Venire facias ſhall be awarded to the Coroners, for then it appears to the Court, by the Confeſſion of the Defendant, that the Sheriff is not indifferent: But if the Defendant will not confeſs it, but deny it, then the Proceſs ſhall be awarded to the Sheriff, becauſe his Authority and Profits ſhall not be taken away without certain Cauſe appearing to the Court. [e] But if the Defendant will alledge that the Sheriff is his Couſin, and pray the Venire facias to the Coroners, there the Plaintiff ſhall not be examined at the Prayer of the Defendant, becauſe Delays are for the Defendant's Advantage; and ſo is the Diverſity. Wherefore in judicial Writs at the Requeſt of the Plaintiff it ſhall be done ut ſupra: But in original Writs there is nothing but the Surmiſe of the Plaintiff only without any Examination or Confeſſion of the Defendant, for the Defendant has no Day in Court before the Return of the Writ, to which Surmiſe of the Plaintiff the Chancellor ought not to give Credit: For if he ought to give Credit to the Surmiſe of the Plaintiff, that the Sheriff is his Couſin, by the ſame Reaſon he ought to give Credit to him, if he ſays that the Coroners alſo are his Couſins; and then if the Chancellor will name any other to execute the Writ, by the ſame Reaſon the Chancellor ought to give Credit to the Plaintiff that ſuch other Perſon alſo is his Couſin, if he will ſurmiſe the ſame; and by this Means every one would be Couſin to the Plaintiff, or would have ſome other Fault in him, if the Plaintiff had a mind to ſurmiſe it, and he would be ſure to ſurmiſe Default in all other Perſons, but in his own Confederates or Friends: And thus would he have the Writ directed to what Perſon he pleaſed, which is the ſame in Effect as if the Writ was directed to himſelf, nay much worſe, for if it was directed to himſelf, the Defendant might quaſh the Array for the Preſumption of his Partiality in his own Cauſe, but it would be hard to try the Favour or Partiality of ſuch Perſon as the Plaintiff would appoint, for he would appoint ſuch a one as would be partial and favourable in Fact, and yet his Partiality would be hard and difficult to be tried, and ſo the Miſchief would be very great. For if the Plaintiff would ſurmiſe that the Sheriff is his Couſin, and ſo pray the Writ of Aſſize to the Coroners, where in rei veritate the Sheriff is not his Couſin, upon which the Coroners make the Panel, the Defendant may not challenge the Array for this Cauſe, for he ſhall not falſify the Surmiſe upon the Challenge to the Array by ſaying that the

the Sheriff is not Couſin to the Plaintiff. For if the Law ſhould be that he might challenge the Array for this Cauſe, this would be a falſifying of the Surmiſe, which ſhall never be anſwered nor falſified by Law, and alſo this ſeems Matter of Abatement of the Writ, which he hath affirmed before to be good, and therefore the moſt proper Time to find Fault with the Direction is in taking Exception to it in Abatement of the Writ, and if upon Exception to it in Abatement of the Writ, the Writ ſhould not abate, then would it be a great Miſchief, as it is ſaid before, and no Way to avoid it; for which Reaſons it ſeems that the Writ ought to abate. And if the Law was that the Writ might be directed to the Coroners, it would ſometime have been put in uſe, for it is a Matter which comes often in Practice, but neither in the Regiſter, nor in the Book of Aſſizes, nor in any other Book of the Law, can there be found ſuch a Writ as is here; wherefore the Writ ought to abate. Another Exception they took, viz. altho' upon the Matter the Writ might be directed to the Coroners, yet the Writ, as it is here, is not good, for it is not well directed. For it is directed Coronatoribus ſuis in comitatu Lincoln; and it is not de comitatu Lincoln: In which Caſe if there were ten Coroners, two might ſerve the Writ, and fulfil the Words, for two of the Coroners are Coroners in the County, but Coroners of the County are all the Coroners, ſo that Part of the Coroners may and ſhall be intended Coroners in the County, and not of the County. Wherefore inaſmuch as the Writ carries with it an Intendment to be directed to Part of them, as much as to all, the Direction is not good. And alſo if there was a Coroner within the Franchiſe of the City of Lincoln by the King's Letters Patent, he is Coroner in the County of Lincoln, and not of the County of Lincoln. And if a Man be bound in an Obligation to pay 20 s. ſuch a Day at the City of Lincoln, to every one that ſhall be Coroner in the County of Lincoln, the Obligor is bound to pay 20 s to the Coroner of the Franchiſe of Lincoln, and to the Coroners of Cambridge and Yorkſhire, if they are there at the Day limited, or elſe he ſhall forfeit the Obligation; for the Words (Coroners in the County) cannot be intended Coroners of the County, and he who is Coroner of the County of York, if he be in the County of Lincoln, yet is he then Coroner of the County of York, and conſequently Coroner in the County of Lincoln, for his coming into the County of Lincoln does not take away nor deveſt him of his Office of Coroner of the County of York, altho' he cannot exerciſe nor execute it in the County of Lincoln. And if a Gentleman of the County of York comes into the County of Lincoln, he is a Gentleman in the County of Lincoln, for Names of Offices or Dignity don't leave a Man by his going from one Place to another, nor are they removed by the Removal of the Perſon. So here, the Writ which is directed Coronatoribus in comitatu Lincoln has no certain Intendment to be directed to the Coroners of the County of Lincoln, no more than if the Writ was directed to the Sheriff or Biſhop in Lincoln, it could not be intended to be directed to the Sheriff or Biſhop of Lincoln, nor is it the uſual Direction. For which Cauſe alſo the Writ ought to abate. Another Exception they took, which was, that the Writ, at the Beginning, is directed Coronatoribus, and afterwards at the End of the Writ Richard Curſon one of the Coroners is excepted, ita ſe non intromittat in the Execution of the Writ, in which Caſe there is a Repugnancy in the Writ. For it is directed Coronatoribus, which ſhall be intended all the Coroners, and then by the Exception of one it is not directed to all, for which Reaſon it is repugnant; and alſo it might happen that there were but two Coroners in the whole County, in which Caſe this Exception, when the Truth of the Matter appears, is contrary to the Premiſſes: For the Writ was directed to the Coroners, which is to two at leaſt, and upon the Matter it is but directed to one, and ſo the Writ ought to abate for the Repugnancy. And altho' the Truth be that there are ſix Coroners in the County of Lincoln in our Caſe, yet this does not alter the Matter, for the Law ſees before-hand what may be, and will prevent it, and therefore the Chance that there may be ſix Coroners will not excuſe the Negligence of the Party, if ſo be he might have purchaſed a better Writ, as in Truth he might; for inaſmuch as he takes Conuſance of one of the Coroners, he might have taken Conuſance of all, and have had the Writ directed to all the other Coroners, naming their ſeveral Names, and have ſhewn the Cauſe in the Writ why Curſon was omitted, and if it had been ſo, then no Repugnancy could poſſibly have been objected. And becauſe he might have had the Writ directed better, ſo that there could not poſſibly be any Defect in it, and the Writ is not directed ſo, it ought for this Cauſe alſo to abate. Another Exception they took was, that the Cauſe why the Writ was directed to the Coroners, and not to the Sheriff, is put in the End of the Writ, viz. the Conſanguinity between the Wife of the Sheriff, and the Wife of the Plaintiff, and the Degrees are ſhewn, and Maud is expreſſed to be Siſter to George Tailbois, but inaſmuch as the whole Blood is not ſhewn, it may be that ſhe is Siſter of the half Blood, and ſo it ſhall be intended. For every Thing that is ſhewn ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt the Perſon that ſhews it. And if a Challenge had been taken, it ſhould not have been a principal Challenge without ſhewing the whole Blood, for without that the Land could not deſcend from the one to the other, and for the ſame Reaſon the Cauſe here is not ſufficient. And for theſe four Cauſes they prayed that the Writ might abate.

E contra.

On the contrary it was argued by Daliſon and Gawdy Serjeants elect, that the Writ was good enough. And as to the firſt Exception, viz. that the Writ might not be directed to the Coroners upon the Surmiſe; they ſaid, it ought to be conſidered that Aſſizes are the moſt * expeditious Suits in the Law, as the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 25. recites, which ſays, Foraſmuch as there is no Writ in the Chancery whereby Plaintiffs can have ſo ſpeedy Remedy as by a Writ of Novel Diſſeizin, &c. And then inaſmuch as this is ſo ſpeedy a Suit, the Law ſhews great Favour to it, as well as to all Things that have Speed and Expedition in them, and abhors all Delays that tend to retard Aſſizes. In our Caſe therefore if the Law ſhould be that the Writ of Aſſize ought to be directed to the Sheriff, where he is Couſin to the Plaintiff, and that upon the Array being challenged by the Defendant for this Cauſe and quaſhed, a new Writ ſhould be awarded to the Coroners, none can can deny but that this would be a great Delay to the Aſſize, and a vain and frivolous Circuit, which the Law, that favours Speed, and abhors Delays, will never encourage, but will ſuffer the Writ to be directed to the Coroners at firſt, and herein no Inconvenience or Miſchief can reaſonably be objected, for if the Surmiſe be falſe, the Party comes to no Damage hereby, and yet he may not traverſe it, * for Surmiſes ſhall never be traverſed: [a] As if a Writ comes to receive a Woman in the Reverſion upon Default of Tenant for Life, by Attorney, becauſe ſhe is groſſment enſeint, this Surmiſe is not traverſable, although it be falſe; ſo here, for it comes after the Teſte of the Writ, and ſo is not Part of the Subſtance of the Writ, and therefore without Queſtion, whether the Surmiſe be falſe or true, it ſhall never be anſwered by Way of Challenge to the Array, or otherwiſe: Quod fuit conceſſum by all thoſe that I heard argue in the Caſe. And although the Defendant may not traverſe the Surmiſe, it is not prejudicial to him if the Writ be directed to thoſe who are indifferent, and if it is not, then the Defendant may challenge the Array for that Cauſe. And as to what has been ſaid, that there may be Partiality, and yet difficult to be tried, Sir, how can he ſay the Perſon is partial or favourable, if he does not know it? and if he does know it, he can try it. And our Law ſays that nothing is true but what may be tried, for Truth never wants Trial. So the Defendant receives no Damage hereby; but if the Plaintiff ſhould not have the Writ directed to the Coroners upon his own Surmiſe, it would be hurtful to him, becauſe otherwiſe the Array would be quaſhed, and he driven to a new Writ to make a new Panel. Therefore as this Writ is, there is no Prejudice to either Party, but Delays are greatly avoided by it, which is a Thing the Law much aims at, and eſpecially in Aſſizes: And ſo the Plaintiff has Benefit hereby, and the Defendant has no Damage. But if it was in a Præcipe quod reddat, let the Demandant make what Surmiſe he will, yet the Writ ſhall not be directed to the Coroners until the Venire facias: and when the Venire facias ſhall be awarded to make the Panel, then upon ſuch Surmiſe the Defendant [b] ſhall be examined, and if he cannot deny it, the Venire facias ſhall be awarded to the Coroners, and the Defendant ſhall not afterwards traveſe the Surmiſe, but ſhall be bound by his firſt Confeſſion and Admittance. But in our Caſe the Panel is made the firſt Day, ſo that the ſame Reaſon which ſays in the Præcipe quod reddat that the Demandant ought to make the Surmiſe when the Writ iſſues to make the Panel, viz. the Venire facias, the ſame Reaſon alſo ſays in our Caſe, that the Plaintiff ought to make the Surmiſe when the Writ iſſues to make the Panel, which is, at the Time of the Writ purchaſed, for the Writ of Aſſize is to make a Jury the firſt Day, viz. at the Day of the Return. And ſo Reaſon itſelf allows this Surmiſe, as it is made in our Caſe, and the Direction of the Writ accordingly to be good. And as to what has been ſaid, that the Allowance of the Surmiſe, and the Direction of the Writ is the Act of the Chancellor, it is not ſo, for it is the Act of the King, and the Writ is made in his Name, and his Seal is put to it, which makes it his own Act. [c] For if the King's Seal is put to any Patent or Writing made in the Name of the King without Warrant, this is Matter of Record preſently, and ſhall bind the King. So here this Writ made in the Name of the King, and ſealed with his Seal, and the Allowance of the Surmiſe therein, is the Deed of the King, and not of the Chancellor. And as to what has been ſaid, that in the Writ of Right, quando capitalis Dominus remiſit curiam, the Aſſent of the Lord is firſt known, and ſo in the Recordare the Clauſe is, ſi cauſa ſit vera, aliter non, Sir, this is founded upon good Reaſon, but is not like our Caſe. For there it is Part of the Lord's Inheritance to have the Plea holden in his Court, and to have the Profits and Caſualties ariſing thereupon, which it is not reaſonable to take from him without Cauſe. But in our Caſe the Sheriff is no more than the King's Miniſter appointed by him, and he has not any Profit, but only an Allowance for his Labour, viz. the uſual Fees for the Execution of Writs, and if any other ſerves the Writs, the Sheriff loſes nothing, for he has no Labour nor Trouble. And if the King changes his Officer, there is no Wrong done to the Officer, and ſo this cannot be reſembled to the other Caſes: And therefore the Writ is maintainable notwithſtanding the ſaid Exception. Then as to the other Exception, viz. that the Writ is directed Coronatoribus in comitatu Lincoln, Sir, this is to be intended [d] Coronatoribus de comitatu Lincoln. For it is to be conſidered that the Writ was directed to the Intent to be executed, and that duly, which could not be but by the Coroners of the County, and therefore the Intent, which the King had in the Direction of the Writ, ſhall be taken and conſtrued the beſt Way. [e] As in a Præcipe quod reddat directed to the Sheriff of Middleſex, the Writ is, præcipe quod reddat 20 Acres in D. and it is not expreſſed in what County D. is, yet the Writ is good, for inaſmuch as the Writ was directed with an Intent to be executed, it ſhall be conſtrued that D. is in the ſame County of which he is Sheriff. So here this Word (in the County) ſhall be intended that they are Coroners of the County; for if it be well conſidered that the King directed the Writ, and ſpoke the Words in it, and if it be alſo conſidered that the Words of the King ſhall be conſtrued moſt ſtrongly to fulfil his Intent, it cannot be otherwiſe taken, but that the Writ is directed to the Coroners of the County, and not to other Coroners, viz. ſuch as are in the County, and not of the County; for that would have been too hard and ſtrained an Expoſition even if any other than the King had ſpoken the Words. And, Sir, this Word (in) and the Word (of) have many Times all one Conſtruction in Law. [f] And therefore in 41. Aſs. it is taken all one to grant a Rent in manerio de D. and de manerio de D. And ſo here Coroners in the County, and Coroners of the County may be taken to one Intent, in conſtruing this Word (in) to be (of). And the Order in the Regiſter is, that the Writs, which are directed to the Sheriff, ſhall be to the Sheriff of the County, and all Writs directed to Coroners are directed to the Coroners in the County. As an Attachment againſt the Sheriff for not returning a Replevin is directed Coronatoribus in comitatu, &c. [g] And a Writ to certify Outlawry ſhall be directed Coronatoribus in comitatu, as you may ſee in the Book of Entries. And ſo all other like Writs, as diem clauſit extremum, [h] which is Eſcheatori in comitatu.

And he that finds any fault with this Direction argues againſt the Regiſter, which is the Foundation of the Law in theſe Points, and alſo againſt the Uſage of the Law, which has been heretofore. For which Reaſons the Writ is good, notwithſtanding the ſaid Exception. And as to the third Exception, viz. that the Writ is directed Coronatoribus, and afterwards Curſon is excepted, Sir, this is as well and better than if it had been directed to the five Coroners, omitting Curſon, for upon the Matter it is not directed to any more than the five Coroners, and the Exception of Curſon out of the general Number is good. * And therefore a Feoffment to A. B. his Heirs and Aſſigns, with proviſo that he ſhall not alien to any Perſon, is void; but that he ſhall not alien to J. S. is good, for upon the Matter he has given the Land to him and all his Aſſigns, except J. S. And ſo here, Sir, the matter is directed to all the Coroners but Curſon. And to direct any Writ to the Coroners, naming their ſeveral Names, is not the Courſe, nor has it been ever ſeen, ſo that there is not any Contrariety in this Matter; wherefore it ſhall be good. And as to the laſt Exception, † it ſhall be intended that Maud was Siſter to George of the whole Blood, and if it be not ſo, the Defendant ought to ſhew it, but without it be ſhewn to the contrary ſhe ſhall be preſumed to be Siſter of the whole Blood, and in theſe laſt Exceptions there is little Weight. Wherefore it ſeemed to them that the Writ ſhould be good, notwithſtanding any of the four Exceptions.

Glouceſt. Declaration.

JOHN STRANGE late of the City of Oxford in the County of Oxford Gentleman, and John Croker of Hucknorton in the County of Oxford Eſquire, were ſummoned to anſwer as well * the Lord the King as William Partridge of a Plea, that they render to them 80 l. which they owe the ſame Lord the King and the aforeſaid William, and unjuſtly detain by reaſon of a certain Attempt contrary to the Form of a Statute made in the Parliament of the Lord Henry the Eighth late King of England, Father of the Lord the King now, holden at Weſtminſter in the thirty-ſecond Year of his Reign, againſt thoſe, who ſhall bargain, buy, or ſell, or by any Ways or Means obtain, get, or have any pretenced Rights or Titles, or take promiſe, grant, or covenant to have any Right or Title, of any Perſon or Perſons, in or to any Manors, Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments, (except ſuch Perſon or Perſons, as ſhall ſo bargain, ſell, give, grant, covenant, or promiſe the ſame, their Anceſtors, or they by whom he or they claim the ſame, have been in Poſſeſſion of the ſame, or of the Reverſion or Remainder thereof, or taken the Rents or Profits thereof, by the Space of one whole Year next before the ſaid Bargain, Covenant, Grant, or Promiſe made) upon pain that he, who ſhall make any ſuch Bargain, Sale, Promiſe, Covenant, or Grant, ſhall forfeit the whole Value of the Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments, ſo bargained, ſold, promiſed, covenanted, or granted, contrary to the Form of the Statute aforeſaid amongſt other Things made and provided, &c. And whereupon the ſame William, who proſecutes as well for the Lord the King as for himſelf, by John Stocks his Attorney ſays, that whereas by the aforeſaid Act made in the aforeſaid Parliament of the aforeſaid late King holden at Weſtminſter aforeſaid the twenty-eighth Day of April, in the aforeſaid thirty ſecond Year of his Reign, amongſt other Things it was enacted by Authority of the ſame Parliament, that no Perſon or Perſons, of what Eſtate, Degree, or Condition ſoever he or they be, ſhould from thenceforth bargain, buy, or ſell, or by any ways or means, obtain, get, or have any pretenced Rights or Titles, or take Promiſe, Grant, or Covenant, to have any Right or Title, of any Perſon or Perſons, in or to any Manors, Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments, (except ſuch Perſon or Perſons, who ſhould ſo bargain, ſell, give, grant, covenant, or promiſe the ſame, their Anceſtors, or they by whom he or they claim the ſame, had been in poſſeſſion of the ſame, or of the Reverſion or Remainder thereof, or taken the Rents or Profits thereof, by the Space of one whole Year next before the ſaid Bargain, Covenant, Grant or Promiſe made) upon pain that he, who ſhould make any ſuch Bargain, Sale, Promiſe, Covenant or Grant, ſhould forfeit the whole Value of the Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments ſo bargained, ſold, promiſed, covenanted, or granted, contrary to the Form of the ſame Act. And the Buyer or Taker thereof, knowing the ſame, ſhould forfeit alſo the Value of the ſaid Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments, ſo by him bought or taken, as is aboveſaid; whereof one half of the ſaid Forfeitures ſhould be to the Lord the King, and the other half to the Party that would ſue for the ſame in any of the King's Courts of Record, by Action of Debt, Bill, Plaint, or Information, in which Action, Bill, Plaint, or Information no Eſſoign, Protection, Wager of Law, nor Injunction ſhould be allowed, as in the ſame Act amongſt other Things is more fully contained. Nevertheleſs the aforeſaid John and John the Statute aforeſaid not weighing, after the making of the ſaid Statute, to wit, the ſixth Day of July, in the fourth Year of the Reign of the ſaid Lord the King, at Minty in the aforeſaid County of Glouceſter bargained, granted, and to Farm let for a Term of Years to one Robert Mill and Gabriel Pledall one Meſſuage called Genetts, and eleven Acres of Land to the ſame Meſſuage belonging, and ſeven Acres and three Fardels of Land in the Field of Minty aforeſaid with the Appurtenances in Minty aforeſaid in the aforeſaid County of Glouceſter, of the Value of 80 l. of which ſaid Tenements the ſame John and John, or any of their Anceſtors, or they by whom the ſame John and John claim the ſame Tenements, were not in poſſeſſion of the ſame, nor of the Reverſion or Remainder thereof, nor took the Rents or Profits thereof by the Space of one whole Year next before the aforeſaid Bargain, Grant, and Demiſe to Farm thereof made, by which Means an Action hath accrued to the ſame William Partridge to demand and have of the aforeſaid John and John, for the aforeſaid Lord the King and himſelf, the aforeſaid 80 l. for the Value of the Tenements aforeſaid contrary to the Form of the Statute aforeſaid bargained, granted, and to Farm let. Nevertheleſs the ſame John and John although often requeſted the aforeſaid 80 l. to the ſaid Lord the King and the ſame William have not yet rendered, but the ſame to them to render have hitherto refuſed, and yet refuſe: wherefore the ſame William ſays that he is damnified, and hath Damage to the Value of 20 l. And therefore he brings Suit, &c.

Defendants demur.

And the aforeſaid John and John by Roland Durant their Attorney come and defend the Force and Injury when, &c. And ſay that the Matter in the Declaration aforeſaid above ſpecified is inſufficient in Law for the aforeſaid William to have and maintain his Action aforeſaid againſt them the ſaid John and John, and that they have no Neceſſity, nor are by the Law of the Land bound to anſwer the ſaid Matter in manner and form aforeſaid declared: and this they are ready to verify; wherefore for Want of ſufficient Matter in the Declaration aforeſaid ſpecified, the ſame John and John pray Judgment, and that the aforeſaid William may be precluded from having his Action aforeſaid againſt them, &c.

Joinder.

And the aforeſaid William, for that he hath above declared ſufficient Matter in Law to maintain his Action aforeſaid, which he is ready to verify, which ſaid Matter the aforeſaid John and John do not deny, nor to the ſame in any wiſe anſwer, but the ſaid Averment wholly refuſe to admit, prays Judgment and his Debt aforeſaid together with his Damages by reaſon of the detaining the ſaid Debt to be adjudged to him. &c. And becauſe the Juſtices here will adviſe of and upon the Matter in the Declaration aforeſaid ſpecified before they give Judgment thereon, Day is given to the Parties aforeſaid here until the Octave of St. Michael, to hear their Judgment thereon, becauſe the Juſtices here thereof not yet, &c.

The CASE. Hillary Term 6 & 7. Edw. 6. An Action upon the Statute of 32. H. 8. cap. 9. of pretended Titles, for that the Defendants leaſed Land of which neither they nor their anceſtors were poſſeſſed, nor took the Profits by the Space of a Year next before: and adjudged, that a Leaſe for Years is within the Statute, as well as to recite the Statute, but yet if he does and miſrecites it, as in the Day of the making of it, the Count ſhall abate, and the miſrecital of it ſhall not be aided by the Demurrer of the adverſe Party; that the Statute, being penal, ſhall not be taken by Equity; that though the Statute ſpeaks of pretenced Rights or Titles in the plural Number, yet a pretenced Right or Title in the ſingular Number is within the Statute; that the Plaintiff ought to aver it to be a pretenced Right or Title; and if the Plaintiff declares that the Defendant bargained, granted, and demiſed to Farm, the e three Words ſhall be taken in Aggravation of the Offence, and ſhall not make the Count double, by 2 Juſtices againſt 2. S. C. Dyer 74. pl. 19. Vin. Abr. tit. Maintenance T. pl. 22.

Morgan Serjeant recited the Caſe in this manner. You (my Lords) have well underſtood by the Record, how that William Partridge has ſued here before you, for himſelf and the King, an Action of Debt againſt John Strange and John Croker, and demands 80 l. which they owe to the King and himſelf by reaſon of an attempt againſt the Form of a Statute in the Parliament of the late King Henry the Eighth at Weſtminſter in the 32. Year of his reign publiſhed and provided. And he counts, that whereas by the ſaid Act made in the ſaid Parliament of the ſaid late King holden at Weſtminſter the ſaid 28th Day of April, in the ſaid 32d Year of his Reign, amongſt other Things it was enacted, That no Perſon or Perſons, of what Eſtate, Degree, or Condition ſoever he or they be, ſhould from thenceforth bargain, buy, ſell, or by any Ways or Means obtain, get, or have any pretenced Rights or Titles, or take Promiſe, Grant, or Covenant to have any Right or Title, of any Perſon or Perſons in or to any Manors, Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments, (except ſuch Perſon or Perſons, as ſhould ſo bargain, ſell, give, grant, covenant, or promiſe the ſame, their Anceſtors, or they by whom he or they claim the ſame, had been in poſſeſſion of the ſame, or of the Reverſion or Remainder thereof, or had taken the Rents or Profits thereof by the Space of one whole Year next before the ſaid Bargain, Covenant, Grant, or Promiſe made,) upon pain that he who ſhall make any ſuch Bargain, Sale, Promiſe, Covenant or Grant, ſhall forfeit the whole Value of the Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments ſo bargained, ſold, promiſed, covenanted, or granted contrary to the Form of the ſame Act: And that the Buyer or Taker thereof, knowing the ſame, ſhall forfeit alſo the Value of the ſaid Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments ſo by him bought or taken, as is aforeſaid, one Moiety of the ſaid Forfeitures to be to our Lord the King, and the other Moiety to the Party that will ſue for the ſame in any of the King's Courts of Record, by Action of Debt, Bill, Plaint, or Information, in which no Eſſoign, Protection, Wager of Law, or Injunction ſhall be allowed, as in the ſaid Act amongſt other Things is contained. Notwithſtanding this, the ſaid Defendants, ſuch a Day, after the ſaid Act, had bargained, granted, and demiſed to farm for a Term of Years, to Robert Mill and Gabriel Pledall, one Meſſuage called Genetts, and eleven Acres of Land to the ſame Meſſuage belonging, and ſeven Acres, and three Fardels of Land in Minty in the ſaid County of Glouceſter, of the Value of 80 l. of which Lands and Tenements neither the Defendants themſelves, nor any of their Anceſtors, nor they by whom the Defendants themſelves claim the ſame Tenements, were in poſſeſſion, nor of the Reverſion or Remainder thereof, nor took the Rents or Profits of the ſame by the Space of one whole Year next before the ſaid Bargain, Grant, and Demiſe thereof made, by which Means an Action hath accrued, &c. and upon this Count the Defendants have demurred in Judgment. And it ſeems to me that the Count is inſufficient, for it is both too abundant, and defective, and alſo wants Form. [a] For the Statute is recited to be made the 28th Day of April in the 32d Year of the Reign of King Henry the Eighth, where in rei veritate the Statute commenced the 28th Day of April in the 31ſt Year of the Reign of King Henry the Eighth, and was continued by Prorogation until the 32d Year of the Reign of the ſaid late King, and then the Act was made, ſo that there was no Parliament holden the 28th Day of April in the 32d Year of that Reign, as the Plaintiff has rehearſed. Then he has grounded his Action upon a Statute, where it appears to the Court there is no ſuch Statute, in which Caſe for his Miſtake the Count ſhall abate it. [b] As if a Man vouch a Record, and the other denies it, and at the Day he brings in ſuch Record, but it varies in the Year or Term, he has failed of his Record, for there is no ſuch Record, the Time being Part of the Matter. So here there is no ſuch Statute made ſuch a Day as he has rehearſed. But it ſeems to me that it ſhall be accounted an Act from the laſt day of the Parliament, [c] for three Things are neceſſary to conſtitute it an Act, to wit, the Aſſent of the Lords, of the Commons, and of the King, and one or two of them without the third don't make it an Act. For although the Lords and Commons agree to a Thing, yet it is no Act until the King hath alſo aſſented, and his Aſſent always comes after their Aſſent, and for the moſt part it is given the laſt Day of the Parliament, and then from that Day forwards it is an Act, and not before that Day, for before the King's Aſſent it is like an Iſſue in ventre ſa mere, which is not a perfect Iſſue until it is born, ſo the Statute is not full nor perfect until the King's Aſſent is given to it, and from the Time of the King's Aſſent it is accounted in Law an Act, and from no Time before; which all the Serjeants who argued after him, and all the Juſtices denied. [d] For they ſaid, that the Aſſent of the King, and of the Lords, and Commons alſo ſhall have Relation to the firſt Day of the Parliament, and from the firſt Day forwards it ſhall be accounted in Law a perfect Act, and from the firſt Day forwards all ſhall be puniſhed for an Offence done againſt it after the firſt Day, except a certain Time is appointed, when the Act ſhall firſt take Effect. [e] But Hales Juſtice ſaid, if the Parliament has divers Prorogations, and in the ſecond or third Seſſion an Act is made, this ſhall not have Relation to the Day of the Beginning of the Parliament, that is, to the firſt Day of the firſt Seſſion, but only to the firſt Day of the ſame Seſſion in which it is made. As the Parliament of 27. H. 8. was holden upon Prorogation, and the common [f] Pleading of a Uſe is, viz. that the Feoffees were ſeized to the Uſe of J. S. until the fourth Day of February, in the 27th Year of King Henry 8. at which Day he was ſeized of the Demeſn, &c. And Mr. Morgan argued further and ſaid, that for the Miſtake of the Day of the Act the Count ſhould abate. But it has been objected, that the Statute is general, in which Caſe it is not neceſſary to be rehearſed, but the Judges ought to take notice of it without it's being recited, and then the Recital of it is Surpluſage, and the Miſrecital of what is Surpluſage ſhall not hurt the Party; Sir, I agree that it is not * neceſſary to recite the Statute, no more than it is neceſſary to recite the Statute of Champerty, or Maintenance, in which Caſes it is ſufficient to ſay contrary to the Statute in ſuch Caſe provided, without further Recital: But yet I ſay, [g] that if he recites a Statute to be made preciſely ſuch a Day, where there is no Statute made that Day, he has failed: for he does not refer the Statute to the Knowledge of the Judges, as he would have done, if he had ſaid, contrary to the Form of the Statute in ſuch Caſe provided, in which Caſe, if he had ſaid ſo, the Law would refer the Matter to ſuch Statute as was moſt apt for it) but he has recited an Act, and does not intend or mean any other, and if there is none ſuch as he has recited, then he has grounded his Action upon that which is not: And ſo the Recital of the Day, which is ſuperfluous and Surpluſage, makes the Matter faulty, if it is miſrecited. [h] As if one brings an Action of Debt by the Name of J. S. Parſon of D. the Defendant ſaith, nul tiel Ville as D. this ſhall be a good Plea in Abatement of the Writ, and yet the naming him Parſon was Surpluſage. Therefore this Surpluſage ſhall marr the Matter.

ter. So here the Recital of the Day of the Parliament, which is miſrecited, ſhall vitiate the Matter. Further it ſeems to me, [a] that the Plaintiff ought to have recited the Number and Certainty of the Years, for it is to be conſidered that the Statute, without the Leaſe, is not the Cauſe of the Action, but the Leaſe and the Statute together. And then if the Leaſe is one of the chief Cauſes of the Action, the Certainty of it ought to be ſhewn. And as to what is ſaid, that the Plaintiff is a Stranger to the Leaſe, and therefore ſhall not be compelled to ſhew it, inaſmuch as he is not privy to it, nor can have knowledge of it, Sir, if he can take notice of Part, he may may take notice of the whole, and how in Reaſon can he take advantage of a Thing, if he does not know the Thing? Certainly he cannot, and if he knows the Thing, it is reaſonable that he ſhould ſhew it certainly. And this is not like the Caſes where a Man ſhall claim by a Deed to which he is a Stranger, without ſhewing it. For although he ſhall not be compelled to ſhew the Deed, becauſe it belongs to another, yet he ought to take certain notice of the Contents of it. So here he ought to take notice of the Certainty of the Leaſe, that is, of the Time of the Commencement and End of it, and the Number of the Years, and ſince this is not ſhewn, the Count is bad. Then as to the Matter, it ſeems to me, [b] that this Leaſe is out of the Danger of the Statute. For it is to be noted, that the Statute here is penal, becauſe it gives a greater Puniſhment for the Offence than the Law gave before. And then if the Leaſe is not within the Words of the Statute, it is out of the Danger of the Statute. And it ſeems to me to be out of the Words and Intent of the Statute alſo, for the Statute has three Branches; the firſt is, that none ſhall bargain, buy, or ſell pretenced Rights or Titles of any Perſon or Perſons; the ſecond is, concerning the obtaining or taking ſuch Rights or Titles of any Perſon or Perſons; the third is, concerning the taking of a Promiſe of any Right or Title of any Perſon or Perſons; but in what is it? Sir, it is, in or to any Manors, Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments, ſo that theſe Words, Manors, Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments, are referred to each of the three Sentences. Then the Statute is, that none ſhall bargain, or buy any pretenced Rights or Titles, in any Manors, Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments. And what is the Senſe thereof? Sir, I ſay that the Meaning of it is, that he ſhall not bargain or buy all the Right or Title of any Perſon. For if he has bargained or bought no more than an Eſtate for Years, then he has not his Right or Title, but part of it only; for the Leſſor himſelf has the Right of the Freehold or Inheritance after the Leaſe for Years made. And, Sir, it ſhall be intended that the Leſſors here had a greater Eſtate than for Years, and it cannot be intended that they had a leſſer Eſtate than a Fee. For it can never be taken that the Leſſors had a particular Eſtate, becauſe the Commencement of it is not ſhewn. And then if the whole is not granted, ergo his Right or Title is not granted. And therefore the Statute of 1. H. 5. cap. 3. reciting, that whereas ſome Perſons have forged falſe Deeds to change the Lands of the good Men of the Country, and to deſtroy and trouble the Poſſeſſions and Titles of the Liege Subjects of our Lord the King, &c. provides and ordains that the Party grieved thereby ſhall have his Suit in ſuch Caſe: And there I apprehend the Law to be, [c] that if a Man forge and publiſh a falſe Deed of a Leaſe for Years, a Writ of Forger of falſe Deeds does not lie thereupon; for when the Statute ſaith, to change the Lands, and to trouble the Poſſeſſion and Title, this cannot be intended of an Eſtate for Years, ſo that a Leaſe for Years is not included in it; no more is it in our Caſe. And ſo the Statute of Weſtminſter. 1. cap. 25. ordains, that no officer of the King, by themſelves nor by other, ſhall maintain Pleas, Suits, or Matters hanging in the King's Courts for Lands, Tenements, or other Things, &c. [d] which Words, (other Things) include Leaſes for Years, but if there had been only the Words (Lands and Tenements) Leaſes for Years had not been included in them, which the Makers of the Statute well perceived, and therefore they put in the ſaid Words (other Things.) And ſo the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 49. ordains, that none ſhall receive Lands or Tenements in Fee, by Gift, nor by Purchaſe, nor to Farm, nor to Champerty, nor otherwiſe, &c. And there it is to be noted, that if the Statute had ſaid, none ſhall receive Lands or Tenements only, then a Receit of a Leaſe for Years had not been prohibited by thoſe Words, and therefore was it put in (in Fee, nor to Farm) for if a Term had been prohibited by the firſt Words, then the Words (to Farm) would have been put in the Statute in vain, which is never to be intended. Which Statutes argue in our Caſe that the Prohibition of our Statute againſt bargaining and buying &c. of Manors, Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments, does not extend to a Term. And for another Cauſe we ought to conſtrue the Statute not to extend to a Term, for the Penalty is to forfeit the whole Value of the Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments. And inaſmuch as it is ſo, it cannot be taken to be the Intention of the Legiſlature, that he ſhould forfeit the whole Value of the Inheritance for a Leaſe for Years, but that he ſhall forfeit the whole Value where the whole Eſtate is ſold or bought. For to ſay that he ſhall forfeit as much for taking of a Leaſe, as he ſhall forfeit for taking the whole Inheritance, is an Inequality of puniſhment, and inconſiſtent with the Diſcretion of thoſe who were aſſembled in that Parliament. Wherefore it ſeems to me, that upon the whole Matter this Caſe is out of the Danger of the Statute. Further it ſeems to me, that if a Leaſe for Years be within the Danger of the Statute, yet it ought [e] to be averred that it was a pretenced Right or Title, for every Eſtate, which is within the Words of the Statute, is not within the Danger of it. And therefore if a Man dies ſeized in Fee of certain Land, and a Stranger abates, to whom the Heir releaſes, and afterwards the Heir, notwithſtanding his Releaſe, claiming the Land by Deſcent makes a Leaſe for Years to a Stranger, now this Leaſe (admitting that a Leaſe for Years is within the

is within the Penalty of the Statute) is within the Words of the Statute, becauſe his Anceſtor, by whom he claims, was in Poſſeſſion for a whole Year, and ſo out of the Penalty of the Statute by the very Words. But if it was averred to be a pretenced Right, then this Averment would help the Matter, and bring it within the Penalty of the Statute, as in rei veritate it is, and ſo the Averment and not the Words makes the whole Matter. So it ſeems here that it ought to be averred a pretenced Right or Title, wherefore in this Point the Declaration is defective. And thus it is too abundant, as well as defective, as is ſhewn before, and the Medium is the Perfection which is here wanting; for which Reaſon the Declaration is not good, and ſo the Plaintiff ought to be barred.

Whidon to the contrary. And as to the firſt Point, it is to be conſidered, that the Statute here is general, as is the Statute of 27. H. 8. concerning the Conveyance of the Poſſeſſion to Uſes, and needs not be recited, for without Recital the Party ſhall take Advantage of it; as if the Tenant vouch out of the Line, the Demandant ſhall demur without reciting the Statute of Weſtminſter 1. cap. 39. made thereupon. So it is a good Counterplea to ſay, that he who vouched was the firſt that abated, without reciting the ſaid Statute of Weſtminſter 1. And Executors of Executors ſhall have an Action of Account without reciting the Statute of 25. Ed. 3. cap. 5. made thereupon. For theſe Statutes are general, and the Judges are bound to take Notice of them. [a] And ſo the Book is in 5. H. 7. that an Information upon the Statute of Liveries is good, without reciting the Statute cauſâ qua ſupra. So this Statute in our Caſe needs not be recited, nor was it requiſite to ſhew the Day of the making of it. [b] And then the Miſrecital of that which is Surpluſage ſhall not vitiate the Matter. As if one as Executor brings an Action of Debt upon a Contract made to him, he ſhall not ſhew the Teſtament, for the naming himſelf Executor is Surpluſage. [c] So in Detinue againſt two as Executors, they ſhall not plead that another is Co-Executor with them, for they are not charged as Executors, but the Detinue is the Cauſe of the Action, and the naming them Executors is Surpluſage. [d] So if one by Deed by the Name of A. B. Heir to J. S. makes a Feoffment, at another Time he ſhall ſay that he is not his Heir, and ſhall not be eſtopped, for the naming himſelf Heir was not material. So the Recital of the Day of the Statute here is not material, and therefore the Miſrecital ſhall not hurt the Plaintiff. Then as to another Exception, which was laſt moved, viz. that he ought to have averred the Title or Right to be pretenced, Sir, this is [e] not neceſſary. [f] For the Statute declares and intends the Title to be pretenced, if neither he, nor his Anceſtors, nor they by whom they claim, have been in Poſſeſſion thereof, or of the Reverſion or Remainder thereof, nor taken the Rents and Profits thereof for one whole Year next before the Bargain, &c. And therefore a Man ſhall not aver that which is apparent by the Statute. [g] As where it is prohibited that none ſhall alien in Mortmain, if the Lord ſhews that he entered into the Land within the Year, becauſe his Tenant alien'd in Fee to Dean and Chapter, he ſhall not aver that this is Mortmain, becauſe upon the Matter it appears to be ſo. [h] So here, inaſmuch as in the Count it is declared that neither the Defendants, nor any of their Anceſtors, nor they, by whom the Defendants claimed, were in Poſſeſſion, Reverſion, or Remainder thereof, nor took the Profits by the Space of one whole Year before the Leaſe, it appears to be pretenced, and that in the true Meaning of the Word, as the Statute has conſtrued and taken it: and then an Averment of that which is apparent is not neceſſary, and ſo the Count is good notwithſtanding this Exception. And as to the other Exception, viz. that the Certainty of the Term ought to be ſhewn, Sir, this is not neceſſary, for the Term is only a Conveyance to the Sum which he demands, and thoſe Things which are only [i] Conveyance need not be ſo certainly recited as that which is Matter of Subſtance. [k] And therefore in a Decies tantum all the Record ſhall not be ſhewn in certain, but that Part of it only which conveys the Plaintiff to his Action. But if a Writ judicial iſſues out of a Record, he ought to recite the Record certainly; for the Record is the Effect and Subſtance, and not only Conveyance, as it is in our Caſe. Wherefore inaſmuch as the Leaſe here is but Conveyance and Inducement to the Debt, he ſhall not be compelled to ſhew the Certainty of it. Alſo he ſhall not ſhew the Certainty of it, becauſe he is a Stranger to it; and it may well be reſembled to the Caſe of ſhewing of Deeds. [l] And therefore in 35. H. 6. a Man brought an Action of Treſpaſs for Goods taken, the Defendant juſtified for that at the Time of the Treſpaſs ſuppoſed he was Mayor of the Town of C. and that the King had granted to the Defendant then being Mayor, and to the Commonalty, and to their Succeſſors, all the Goods of Perſons outlawed within the ſame Town, and ſhewed that the Plaintiff was outlawed, and ſo juſtified; and by the better Opinion the Plea is good without ſhewing the Letters Patents, becauſe now they belong to his Succeſſor, and not to him, and he is a Stranger to them now, altho' he was once privy. [m] So a Woman ſhall have a Writ of Dower of a Rent Charge granted to her Huſband, without ſhewing the Deed cauſâ qua ſupra. And ſo if a Man brings an Action of Debt againſt his Leſſee for Years for the Rent reſerved, he ſhall ſay that the Eſtate, which his Leſſor had, was upon Condition, and that ſuch an one entered for the Condition broken before the Time when the Rent is ſuppoſed to be in Arrear, Judgment ſi actio, and the Plea is good without ſhewing what the Condition was, or the Certainty of it, becauſe he was not privy to the Condition. So in our Caſe he is not privy to the Leaſe, and therefore he ſhall not ſhew the Certainty of it; and therefore the Count is good, notwithſtanding this Exception. Then as to the Matter, it ſeems that it is [n] within the Statute, for the Plaintiff has counted that the Defendants bargained, granted, and demiſed to Farm the Meſſuage, &c. And a Man may bargain Land as well for Years, as in Fee Simple, and ſome Men will be as ready to maintain to have a Leaſe for Years, as to have a Leaſe for Life, or a Fee Simple. And the Effect of the Statute would be in a great Meaſure taken away, if Leaſes for Years are not prohibited as well as greater Eſtates. And inaſmuch as it is ſhewn that the Defendants were not in Poſſeſſion for a whole Year before, &c. it is fully ſhewn to be within the Words of the Statute. And if it was not within the Words, yet ſhould it be within the Equity of the Statute, for it is in equal Miſchief. On the ſame Side.

Saunders, It appears to me in the ſame Light. This Demurrer is in Conſideration of two Things, viz. the Statute, and the Record in Court. And if the Statute is well weighed and conſidered, it will clear up ſeveral of the Doubts moved in the Record. And as to the Statute, it was made to remedy divers great Miſchiefs and Inconveniences, viz. Maintenance, Embracery, Champerty, and Subornation of Witneſſes, which are Enemies to the due Adminiſtration of Laws, and the Deſtruction of the Trial of the Truth of Iſſues, in which conſiſts the main Point, viz. the Adminiſtration of the Law. And it was alſo made for the Preſervation of Tranquility, Peace, and Concord; and as the wiſe Solomon ſaid of Wiſdom, ſo may it be ſaid of Concord, viz. Omnia bona pariter cum illa: and where Concord is exiled, there ſhe leaves in her Room Diſcord, Injuſtice, Trouble, Vexation, and all Iniquity in general, which are the Root and Foundation of Perjury and Oppreſſion; to avoid which this Statute was made, as appears by the Preamble of it. [c] And then I ſay, altho' the Statute gives a Penalty, yet ſeeing it is very beneficial to the public Weal, Things which are out of the Letter ſhall be taken within the Equity of it: And if the Words of it are obſcure, they ſhall, for the ſame Reaſon, be expounded moſt ſtrongly for the public Good. [d] For Words, which are no other than the Verberation of the Air, do not conſtitute the Statute, but are only the Image of it, and the Life of the Statute reſts in the Minds of the Expoſitors of the Words, that is, the Makers of the Statutes. And if they are diſperſed, ſo that their Minds cannot be known, then thoſe who may approach neareſt to their Minds ſhall conſtrue the Words, and theſe are the [e] Sages of the Law, whoſe Talents are exerciſed in the Study of ſuch Matters. And to prove this, the Statute of Weſtminſter 3. cap. 2. is, that if the Tenant alien part of his Land, he ſhall hold of the chief Lord for the ſame Part, ſecundum quantitatem terræ ſo ſold, and there the Sages of the Law have not expounded the Words (ſecundum quantitatem terræ) according to the Letter, but have interpreted them [f] ſecundum valorem terræ: for that was the Intent of the Makers of the Statute. [g] And ſo the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 1. concerning Lands entailed, ſaith, "And if a Fine be hereafter levied upon ſuch Lands ipſo jure "ſit nullus;" there the Sages of the Law did not take the Words according to their common Meaning, but they have taken the Words (ipſo jure) in this Light, that as to binding the Right, the Fine ſhall be null and void, but as to the Poſſeſſion, it works a Diſcontinuance; for this was the Intent of the Statute, and yet the Words are ipſo jure ſit nullus, which ſeems in common Underſtanding to mean, that in Law it ſhall be void. And ſo the Statute of Glouceſter cap. 3. is, that the Heir of the Mother ſhall not be barred to demand the Inheritance of his Mother aliened by the Father whereof no Fine is levied in the King's Court, yet if the Father only levy the Fine, he ſhall be received to demand the Land againſt the Fine, and ſo the Expoſitors of the Law have taken it; and they have expounded the Intent of the Statute to be, [h] whereof no lawful Fine is levied, to wit, by the Father and Mother. So that the Efficacy of Statutes conſiſts not only in the Words, but in the Intent thereof, which Intent ought always to be greatly conſidered, and made agreeable with the Words; and upon like Reaſon a penal Statute ſhall be extended by Equity, if the Intent of the Makers of it may be ſo perceived. And therefore the Statute called the Statute Merchant, binds all the Lands of the Conuſor to the Execution, and provides, that they ſhall be delivered to the Conuſee upon reaſonable Extent, and ſpeaks not a Word of the delivering them to the Extendors, if they extend them too high, [i] yet they ſhall be delivered to the Extendors in that Caſe by Equity of the Statute of Acton Burnel made before, which ſaith, "That the Goods appraized too high ſhall be delivered to the Appraizers themſelves at the Rate "they ſet upon them," which Statute is penal. [k] And if the Plaintiff is nonſuited in ſecond Deliverance, the Defendant ſhall recover Damages, as well as if he had barred the Plaintiff in Deed, becauſe Return irrepleviſable ſhall be awarded, and ſo by this Means the Plaintiff is barred, and this by the Equity of the Statute of 7. H: 8. cap. 4. and yet the Statute is penal, but becauſe the Expoſitors of the Statute took the Intent of the Makers of it to be ſuch, viz. to give Damages in Caſes of like Nature, that is the Reaſon thereof. And ſo the Intent of the Makers of Statutes directs the Words, and Equity of them; which Conſideration being applied to the Statute in our Caſe, and the Minds of the Makers of it being well perceived as well by the Preamble, as by the Body of the Act, will ſet aſide three Objections which have been made againſt the Plaintiff. The firſt is, that the Count is not good, becauſe it is not averred that it was a pretenced Right or Title, Sir, to this I ſay, that whatever Right it be which the Defendants bargained, whether pretenced or not, it is within the Danger of the Statute. For the two firſt Branches go to pretenced Rights or Titles; but the third is, viz. or take Promiſe, Grant, or Covenant to have any Right or Title, which Words (any Right or Title) are general, and include every Right, whether pretenced or not. But then it may be objected, that theſe Words extend only to him who takes a Promiſe, Grant, or or Covenant, and not to him who makes the Promiſe, Grant or Covenant, as our Caſe is, Sir, as to this I ſay, that the Words after prove that it extends as well to them who part with the Eſtate, as to them who take the Eſtate. For the Words after are, except ſuch Perſon as ſhall ſo bargain, ſell, give, grant, covenant, or promiſe the ſame, &c. Which Words refer to him who parts with the Right or Title; and ſo are the Words afterwards, upon Pain that he who ſhall make any ſuch Bargain, Sale, Promiſe, Covenant, or Grant, ſhall forfeit, &c. which Words alſo refer to him who parts with the Thing; and ſo altho' the Words in the third Branch go to him who takes any Right or Title, they alſo reach to him who makes Promiſe or Grant to part with any Right or Title; wherefore this Word (any) is general, ſo that whether it be pretenced or not, it is within the Compaſs of the Words, as well as to the Bargainor, as the Buyer, ergo it ought not to be averred that it was a pretenced Right or Title. The ſecond Objection is, in that the Statute ſaith, pretenced Rights or Titles, ſo that the Statute is in the plural Number, and then one Right or Title is not within the Words, becauſe it is in the ſingular Number, and the Statute is in the plural; Sir, to this I anſwer, that if there were no more Words in the Statute than theſe in the plural Number, yet theſe do contain every ſingular Number, and eſpecially here, inaſmuch as the Words are (any pretended Rights or Titles) ſo that this Word (any) includes the ſingular [a] Number without Doubt. Alſo the third Branch is (any Right or Title), and therefore is in the ſingular Number, and our Caſe is within this Branch, as I have proved before. So that this Objection is ſufficiently anſwered. Then as to the other Objection, that he ought to have the whole Right, and that a Leaſe for Years is not within the Compaſs of the Statute, Sir, [b] this it not ſo. For (as hath been ſaid before) the Words of the third Branch are (any Right or Title), which Word (any) contains every Right or Title, ſo that be the Right or Title in Fee, in Tail, for Life, or for Years, it is included in this Word (any); for a Title for Years is a Title, and is included in the Word (any.) Therefore whether it be taken that the Defendants had a Fee, and made the Leaſe for Years, or that they had the Leaſe for Years and granted it over, it is all one: for a Leaſe for Years is within the Words (any Right or Title) and he that has a Leaſe for Years has a Right and Title for Years. And to prove that he has a Right, Eſtate, and Title, firſt Bracton ſaith, that he, who has a Leaſe for Years, habet jus utendi et fruendi in alieno libero tenemento; and ſo by his Opinion he has a Right in the Land. And to prove an Eſtate in the Termor, Sir, [c] a Remainder, by the Rule of Law, cannot be but where there is an Eſtate precedent; and if a Leaſe for Years be made, the Remainder in Fee, the Remainder is good, for the Leaſe for Years is an Eſtate in the Eye of the Law. And to prove that he has a Title, in 7. H. 7. Brian is of Opinion, that the Termor might [d] falſify a feint Recovery againſt his Leſſor by the Common Law, before the Statute of Glouceſter, in an Ejectione Firmæ, becauſe he was not Party, and had a Title. And ſo it ſeems the Leſſee for Years has a Title in the Land. From whence it appears to me, that the Leſſee for Years has a Right, Eſtate, and Title in the Land. [e] And in 9. H. 6. in the Caſe of Maintenance brought by Thomas Rothwel, it is ſaid, if I grant to one B. that if my Tenant for Term of Life dies during my Life, the ſaid B. ſhall have the Land for the Term of 10 Years, and afterwards my Tenant is impleaded, there B. may lawfully maintain, and yet he hath nothing, and it is doubtful whether he ſhall have his Term or not, nevertheleſs becauſe he hath Colour of Title he may well maintain. And then if the Leſſee for Years hath ſuch an Intereſt that by the Common Law he might maintain, there was great Need of a Remedy in the Caſe. And, Sir, this Statute has provided for it, wherein all other Statutes before were defective. For all other Statutes, which were made concerning Maintenance or Champerty, were made to avoid Maintenance pending the Suit only. And this Statute is made to avoid meddling in other's Affairs before any Suit or afterwards. And it was as neceſſary to provide a Remedy againſt him that had an Eſtate for Years, or a Promiſe thereof, as againſt one that had a greater Eſtate. [f] For he that has an Eſtate, or a Promiſe to have an Eſtate for 100 Years, will maintain, as well as he who has an Eſtate, or a Promiſe to have an Eſtate for Life, or in Tail, or in Fee, altho' the Eſtate of the former is not ſo great. And therefore if the Statute be deliberately weighed and conſidered, a Leaſe for Years will be taken within the Purview of it. And ſo it ſeems the Statute maintains the Count, and avoids the ſaid three Objections. Then as to the Count's being too abundant in reciting the Day, where it is not neceſſary, and miſreciting it, Sir, there is a Statute, [g] that no Count ſhall abate for want of Form, if it has Subſtance. And here there is Subſtance in the Count, viz. the Deed as it was made. And as to the Statute, you Judges have a private Knowledge, and a judicial Knowledge, and of your private Knowledge you cannot judge, but may uſe your Diſcretion. [h] As it appears in 7. H. 4. where the King demanded of Gaſcoign Juſtice, if he ſaw one in his Preſence kill J. S. and another that was innocent was indicted for it before him, and found guilty of the ſame Death, what he would do in ſuch Caſe? and he anſwered, that he would reſpite Judgment, becauſe he knew the Party was innocent, and make further Relation to his Majeſty to grant his Pardon, and the King was well pleaſed that the Law was ſo; but there he could not acquit him, and give Judgment of his own private Knowledge. But where you have a judicial Knowledge, there you may, and you may give Judgment according to it. [i] As if one is arraigned upon an Indictment for an Offence which is pardoned by Parliament, there you ought not to proceed in it, nor give Judgment, if he is found guilty, becauſe it appears to you by your judicial Knowledge that you ought not to arraign him. For the Judges ought to take Notice of Statutes, which appear to them judicially, altho' they are not pleaded, and then the Miſrecital of that, whereof the Judges ought to take Notice without Recital, is not material, and it is not like to

to the Caſes of Procedendo and Protection where the Day is miſrecited, becauſe that is a private Record. And as to the Certainty of the Term, he ſhall not ſhew it, becauſe he is a Stranger to it. [b] As the Defendant ſhall plead Jointenancy on the Part of the Plaintiff, without ſhewing of whoſe Gift, and ſo the Tenant ſhall ſay, que eſtate J. The Reſolution of the Court.

Afterwards the Juſtices argued two other Days in the ſame Term, and in ſome Things they agreed, which, to avoid Prolixity and Tediouſneſs to the Reader, I apprehend it is better to recite briefly all together, than to declare their ſeveral Arguments at Random. [c] Firſt, all the Juſtices, except Mountague Chief Juſtice, agreed that it was not neceſſary for the Plaintiff to recite the Statute, becauſe it is a general Statute, and extends to every one of the King's Subjects, and the Juſtices are bound to take Notice of it, without the Recital of the Party, and if he had ſhewn the Deed, and had concluded, contrary to the Form of the Statute in ſuch Caſe provided, it had been very well. And without reciting ſo much it had been good, as they held. But Mountague was of Opinion that he ought to recite the Statute certainly, for the Statute is the Ground of his Suit, and he ought always to recite the Subſtance of his Action. But all the four Juſtices agreed [d] that the Count ſhould abate for the Miſrecital of the Statute. [e] For Declarations ought to have two Things, the firſt is, certainty, in order that the Defendant may know what he is to anſwer to. [f] And therefore in 3. Ed. 4. a Man retained in Huſbandry brought an Action of Debt againſt a Prioreſs for his Salary, and declared that he was retained with her Predeceſſor, and did not ſhew what Perſon retained him, and by the better Opinion the Count ſhall abate for the Incertainty, for it might be that one, who had no Warrant, retained him to be with her Predeceſſor. [g] In ſome Caſes the Count and the Writ alſo are general without Certainty, as Aſſizes, but there the Certainty ought to be ſhewn by the Replication; and in ſome Caſes the Writ, and the Count, and the Replication alſo are incertain, but there the Certainty ſhall appear by the Verdict, as in a Quare Impedit, the Value of the Church does not appear in the Count, nor in the Replication, but it ſhall appear by the Verdict, for they ſhall aſſeſs double Damages, or Damages for half a Year, according to the Value of the Church, as the Caſe requires. So in a Writ of Ward, the Jury ſhall find whether the Heir be married or not, and they ſhall aſſeſs Damages for it, and yet no ſuch Matter appears either in the Count or in the Replication. So in Detinue, the Value of the Goods ſhall appear by the Verdict, and in many other Caſes. Wherefore Certainty ought always to appear to the Court: And if it is requiſite to be ſhewn in the Count, then it ought not to be omitted in it. The other Thing, which the Law requires in Counts, is [h] Truth, which ought to be joined to Certainty: and if it appears to the Court that Falſhood is uttered in the Room of Truth, the Party, who ſhews the ſame, has confounded and annoyed himſelf. [i] And therefore if a Man brings an Action Debt for two Payments at two Days, whereof one is not yet come by his own ſhewing, he has thereby abated his own Writ, becauſe he has ſhewn Falſhood. And ſo in our Caſe he has grounded his Action upon a Statute by him recited, where it appears to us judicially that there is no ſuch Statute made at that Time, and therefore he has abated his Count by his own ſhewing. [k] So in 20. H. 6. a Writ of Champerty was brought, which was not warranted by any Statute, and there Newton ſaid, that if the Party could not ſhew them ſome Statute by which it was warranted, that they would award that the Writ ſhould abate. And as to what has been ſaid, that it is not neceſſary to recite the Statute, and therefore the Miſrecital of it is not material, it ſeemed to them, that altho' it is not neceſſary, yet if he recites it, and there is no ſuch Statute, he has failed in Subſtance: for the Court will not aid him, nor take that which he intends otherwiſe than it is ſhewn. [l] And this Abundance in reciting more than is neceſſary ſhall hurt the Party oftentimes. [m] And therefore in 20. H. 6. a Man brought a Writ of Forger of falſe Deeds, and the Writ was diverſa facta et munimenta, &c. and he counted but of one Deed only, and by the Aſſent of all the Juſtices it was awarded that the Writ ſhould abate, becauſe the Writ was of divers Deeds, and he counted but of one Deed, and yet it might be ſaid, that the Writ, in that it contained divers Deeds, had Surpluſage, for it was not neceſſary to have contained more than quoddam factum in the ſingular Number, but yet ſuch Abundance there ſhall abate the Writ. And if one makes Title in Aſſize in his Plaint where it is not neceſſary, if it is unformal the whole ſhall abate, and yet there is Abundance, and more than he is compelled to do. So is it in the principal Caſe. And they put many other good Caſes on this Head, and for theſe Reaſons they were agreed ut ſupra. And whereas it was ſaid that the Defendants by the Demurrer have confeſſed ſuch an Act of Parliament as the Plaintiff has declared, they held that admitting the Demurrer to be a Confeſſion thereof, yet it ſhould not bind the Court, which is a third Perſon, as appears by the Caſe in [n] 10. Ed. 4. where in Treſpaſs for taking Cattle brought by the Leſſee for Years, the Defendant ſaid that the Leſſor held of him by ſo much Rent, which was in arrear, for which he took the Cattle, and the Plaintiff replied rien arere, and there notwithſtanding the Defendant had admitted the Writ good, yet the Opinion of all the Juſtices was that the Court ought to abate the Writ, becauſe it appears that the Defendant was Lord, againſt whom the writ did not lie. [a] And ſo if the Defendant will admit an Appeal to be good, which is brought by a Woman of the Death of her Father, yet the Court ought to abate it, as it is there alſo holden, becauſe the [b] Statute ſays, none ſhall be taken or impriſoned upon the Appeal of a Woman for the Death of any other than of her Huſband. And ſo the Court, (which is the third Perſon) ſhall abate the Count, notwithſtanding the Admittance of the Party (if it was an Admittance of the Defendants here, as in rei veritate it is not.) [c] For a Demurrer is a Confeſſion of all Matters of Fact, but not of Matters of Law, for by the Demurrer they put themſelves upon the Judgment of the Court, and don't confeſs the Law to be againſt them. And here perhaps the Miſrecital of the Statute was the Cauſe of Demurrer, wherefore the Exception is good notwithſtanding. And as to what was ſaid at the Bar, that the King is Party here, and a Miſrecital ſhall not bind him, they held that the King has divers Prerogatives; and that he may [d] wave Iſſue and demur in Law, et e contra, and other Prerogatives he has, [e] but yet by Miſrecital, Miſuſer, or Miſconceiver of Action he ſhall be bound, and upon ſuch Matters his Writ ſhall abate, as well as in the Caſe of a common Perſon. And if the Law be ſo where the King is ſole Party, a multo fortiore ſhall it be ſo where [f] another is Party with him. And therefore notwithſtanding any of the ſaid Reaſons given againſt the Exception, they held that the Count ſhould abate.

Further, as to the Incertainty of the Leaſe, Cook Juſtice was of opinion, that the Plaintiff ought to ſhew the Certainy of it, becauſe without the Leaſe he has no Cauſe of Action. And although he is not privy to it, yet inaſmuch as it is the Effect of the Action, he ought to take notice of it at his Peril, as in Champerty he ought to ſhew the Certainty of the firſt Plea. *And ſo in a Decies tantum he ought to ſhew the Certainty of the Sum received. And in Treſpaſs, if the Defendant pleads that it is his Freehold, and the Plaintiff intitles himſelf by a Leaſe for Years made by him, if the Defendant will ſhew that the Plaintiff made a Feoffment, and that he entered for a Forfeiture, he ought to ſhew the Name of the Feoffee, and the Certainty of the Feoffment, though he is a Stranger to it. So here the Plaintiff ought to ſhew the Certainty of the Term. But all the other Juſtices were of opinion [g] againſt him: But the Caſes put by him are good Law. For in the Caſe of Champerty, he is privy to the Record; and in the Caſe of Decies tantum, he ought to ſhew the Certainty of the Money, becauſe he ſhall recover ten times as much, which he cannot do without ſhewing how much it is: And in the Caſe of the Forfeiture, the Leſſor in the Reverſion is privy to it. And ſo in all Caſes the privy ought to ſhew the Certainty. [h] And if the Heir will plead in Bar in a Writ of Dower, Detinue of Evidences, he ought to ſhew the Certainty of the Evidences, for he is privy to them, which he affirms to belong to him, [i] but if he ſaith, a Bag ſealed with Charters, this is good without ſhewing the Certainty of them, as it is held in 18. H. 8. by all the Court, except Engleſield, for the Bag ſealed is certain enough. And ſo in all other Caſes Privies ought to ſhew Certainty. But here the Plaintiff is a Stranger, and therefore he cannot be ſuppoſed to have Knowledge of it. And therefore an Indictment of Murder [k] de quodam ignoto, or of ſtealing [l] the Goods cujuſdam ignoti, is good, where the Perſon killed or robbed is unknown. So here the Leaſe might be made privately, ſo that the Plaintiff, being a Stranger, could not by Intendment have knowledge thereof. Alſo the ſhewing of the Commencement and the End of the Years is to no other Purpoſe but only to ſhew the Length or Shortneſs of the Time, which is not material here. For if it be for an hour, or for 100 Years, it is all one. As if Leſſee for Life is charged that he ſhall not alien in Fee, if he alien in Tail only it ſhall be a Forfeiture: So here whether it be for a ſhort Time, or for a long Time, it is all one. But if he ſhould recover according to the Value of the Leaſe, then the Commencement and the End of it ought to be ſhewn: As in a Decies tantum, the Certainty of the Money ought to be ſhewn, for he ſhall recover ten times the Value and Quantity of it. But here it is not neceſſary to ſhew more than the Quality of the Leaſe; and that was their Opinion as to this Point.

Further, whereas it was moved at the Bar, that it appears in the Declaration that the Bargain and Leaſe for Years was made of one Meſſuage called Genett's, and eleven Acres of Land to the ſame Meſſuage appertaining, and that as to theſe eleven Acres of Land the Count is not good, nor may the Plaintiff recover the Value of them, becauſe Land may not be appurtenant to a Meſſuage, as to this Exception, all the Juſtices except Cook (who did not ſpeak to this Point, but omitted it in his Argument) agreed in Opinion [m], that Land may not be appurtenant to a Meſſuage, and this was a Ground in the Law, as the Lord Mountague ſaid. But yet they all held that the Declaration, as to this Point, was good enough. For the Quantity of the Land is expreſſed, viz. eleven Acres; and ſo theſe Words (appertaining to the ſaid Meſſuage) are void, becauſe Land may not be appurtenant to a Meſſuage, and therefore it is the ſame as if theſe Words (appertaining to the ſaid Meſſuage) had been omitted, and then the Declaration is, one Meſſuage, and eleven Acres of Land, in which Caſe it is good. And ſo the three Juſtices held the Declaration good, as to this Point. And the Lord Mountague ſaid, [n] that the ſaid Words (appertaining to the ſaid Meſſuage) are Matter to be given in Evidence to prove what eleven Acres the Plaintiff means. [o] As if I have two Manors of D. and I levy a Fine of the Manor of D. Circumſtances may be given in Evidence to prove what Manor I intend, as appears in 12. H. 7. And the Phraſe made uſe of in ſpeaking is of great help to find out the Meaning of Perſons. [a] As if I give you a Cup of Wine, you ſhall not have the Cup, but if I give you a Hogſhead of Wine, you ſhall have the Hogſhead, for the Intent appears from the Manner of the Expreſſion. So the ſaid Words (appertaining, &c.) declare what eleven Acres were meant. And Hales ſaid, [b] that a Garden may contain eleven Acres in Quantity, and by this ſpecial Way it may be Parcel of a Meſſuage.

Further it was moved by Cook, [c] that the Declaration ſhould be double becauſe it is contained in it, that the Defendants had bargained, granted, and demiſed to Farm, ſo that there are three Words to which they ought to anſwer, where in rei veritate one had been ſufficient; [d] as in Debt upon an Obligation for the Non-performance of divers Covenants ſhewn to be broken, is double, for one Covenant broken makes a Forfeiture of the whole Obligation. So here the Plea is double, quod Mountague conceſſit. [e] For if the Heir in Detinue will declare that his Father (now dead) delivered the Deed to be re-delivered to him and his Heirs, and that he is his Heir, and ſhews alſo that he has the Land by Deſcent, it ſhall be double; ſo is it here. But Brown and Hales were of a contrary Opinion as to this Point. For they ſaid, that by the three Words the Offence is declared to be the greater. [f] And in falſe Impriſonment a Man may ſhew 20 Cauſes in Juſtification of the Impriſonment, and it ſhall not be double, for the Number of Things increaſes the offence. And the Statute of 8. H. 6. is, if any Man ouſt another with Force, or enter peaceably and hold with Force, that then, &c. [g] And in 3. Ed. 4. a Man brought a Writ of forcible Entry upon both the Points, and Exception was taken to it, becauſe the Statute is in the disjunctive, ſo that he ought to have brought his Action upon one Point only, but there the Writ was awarded good, becauſe if the Makers of the Statute had a mind that a Man ſhould be puniſhed, who offended in one Point, a multo fortiore their Intent was to puniſh thoſe who offended in both Points. So here if the Intent of the Makers of the Statute was, that he, who offended in one Word ſhould forfeit the Value of the Land, a multo fortiore he who offends in three of the Words ſhall forfeit the Value of the Land, and then the ſhewing of it is not double, eſpecially where they all tend to one Effect and Meaning. And ſo as to this Point, two of the Juſtices were againſt the other two.

Further, whereas the Record ſaith that the Parliament was holden the ſaid 28th Day of April, Hales Juſtice was of opinion that the Count was bad, becauſe no 28th Day of April is mentioned before, and then when he ſaith, the ſaid 28th Day of April, it has Relation to a Thing, where there is none ſuch. But the Lord Mountague was againſt him in this Point, for when he ſaith, the ſaid 28th Day of &c. where in rei veritate no ſuch Day was mentioned before, the Word (ſaid) is Nugation and Abundance: And inaſmuch as it appears by the Record, that it can not be referred to any Thing, becauſe no ſuch Thing is mentioned before, it follows that it is no more than a void and vain Recital and Abundance, which leaves the Matter in the ſame Caſe as if he had ſaid the 28th Day of April, in the Year, &c. omitting the Word (ſaid.)

Then as to the Statute, all the Juſtices agreed, [h] that it ſhould not be taken by Equity, for it is a penal Statute; and although it is made in Avoidance of Perjury and Oppreſſion, yet it ſhall not be extended by Equity; no more than Statutes that give Attaints, [i] which, though they were provided to avoid Perjury, yet ſhall not they be extended by Equity, as it is adjudged in divers Books. And by the Statute of 25. Ed. 3. it is declared, that if a Servant kills his Maſter it is Treaſon. [k] And in 19. H. 6. one was arraigned upon an Indictment for killing the Wife of his Maſter, and he confeſſed it, and there it came in queſtion whether he ſhould be drawn, or hanged only, whereupon it is to be ſeen whether it be Treaſon or not, and there it is adjudged, by the Advice of all the Juſtices of the one Bench and of the other, that he ſhould be drawn and hanged, becauſe it was Treaſon; and there it is not taken within the Equity of the Statute, which ſpeaks only of killing his Maſter, but it is rather within the Words of the Statute, for Maſter and Miſtreſs are the ſame Thing in Effect. So that there the taking it to be Treaſon is a Declaration of the Words of the Statute, rather than an equitable Conſtruction of it. And this Caſe was put by Cook Juſtice. Therefore Statutes, which are made to puniſh great Offences worthy of Puniſhment, and which increaſe the Severity of the Puniſhment inflicted by the common Law, are penal, and ſhall not be extended by Equity, though the Words of them may be conſtrued beneficially according to the [l] Intent of the Makers thereof; but Things, which don't come within the Words, ſhall not be taken by Equity. And this was the Opinion of all the Juſtices in this Point.

Further, as to what was moved, that the Statute ſpeaks of pretenced Rights and Titles in the plural Number; Hales (for the other Juſtices did not ſpeak to this Point) was of opinion, that a [m] pretenced Right and Title in the ſingular Number is within the Penalty of the Statute: for the plural Number contains in itſelf the ſingular Number and more. [n] And therefore the Statute of 1. H. 5. cap. 3. recites, that whereas ſome People do of late uſe to forge divers falſe Deeds and Muniments, &c. therefore it ordains, that the Party thereby grieved ſhall have his Suit in that Caſe, &c. here the Statute ſpeaks of falſe Deeds in the plural Number, yet if a Man forge one falſe Deed, he ſhall be puniſhed by the Statute, as it is held in many Books. So the Statute of 5. R. 2. cap. 7. ordains, "that none ſhall make entry into any Lands and Tenements, except "in caſe where Entry is given by Law," yet if a Man enters into one Tenement, he ſhall be puniſhed, notwithſtanding the Statute is in the plural Number, as in divers Books it is holden. So that the plural Number contains in it the ſingular Number. And if one Right or Title ſhould not be contained here, the Effect of the Statute would be ſet aſide, and alſo every Right or Title is is contained in the laſt Branch by this Word (any). And therefore for this Reaſon, a Right or Title in the ſingular Number is within the Statute.

Further, as to the Point which was moved, viz. whether a Leaſe for Years be within the Danger of the Statute, all the Juſtices agreed clearly [a] that a Leaſe or Promiſe for Years made contrary to the Form of the Statute was within the Danger of the Statute, as well as an Eſtate for Life, in Tail, or in Fee. For the Scope and Deſign of the Statute was to root out Maintenance, and Bargains or Promiſes of Titles. And if it ſhould be lawful to make a Leaſe or Promiſe or Bargain for one Year, by the ſame Reaſon it would be lawful to make it for two Years, and ſo for ten or an hundred Years, and ſome Men will maintain as much for ſuch an Eſtate, as for an Eſtate for Life, or in a Manner for an Eſtate in Tail, or in Fee. And the Intent of the Makers of the Statute was utterly to avoid ſuch Maintenance and buying of Titles, and the Words ſhall be conſtrued moſt favourably to ſatisfy the Intent of the Makers. And the Words here are not, that none ſhall bargain, &c. the Right or Title, for then there would be more Colour to ſay, that the Word (the) contains (all); but the Words are, (any Right or Title) in which Caſe, if he has a Fee, and promiſes a Leaſe for Years, this is a Right or Title, which is contained in the Word (any). And under this Word (any) the leſſer Eſtate ſhall be contained in the greater, as the leſſer Part ſhall be in the greater. And therefore the Statute of 23. H. 6. cap. 10. ordains, that no Sheriff ſhall let to Farm in any manner his County, &c. by theſe Words it is contained, that he ſhall not let to Farm any [b] Part of his County, for the leſs is contained in the greater. And as to the Caſe put, viz. that the Statute of Mortmain ordains, that no religious Perſon ſhall buy any Lands or Tenements, &c. which is intended of the whole Eſtate, viz. the Fee, and a Leaſe for Years is not within the Danger of the ſame Statute; and alſo as to the Caſe put, that the Statute of Pernor of Profits grants that the Diſſeizees ſhall have an Action againſt the Diſſeizors, or their Feoffees, ſo that they take the Profits at the Time of the Writ purchaſed, notwithſtanding a Feoffment or Gift, &c. but yet, [c] if the Diſſeizor or his Feoffee had no other Eſtate than a Uſe for Years, where the Freehold of the Uſe was in another, and thus took the Profits, an Action real would not lie againſt him, becauſe an Eſtate for Years ſhall be out of the Statute, where it is not expreſsly mentioned; As to theſe Caſes, they are not at all like the Caſe here, becauſe in the one Caſe, if the Reverſion remains as it was before, then the Services, and Ward, Marriage, and Relief ſhall belong to the Lord, and in ſuch Caſe the Leaſe for Years is out of the Intent of the Statute. And in the other Caſe, he, who takes the Profits, ought to have a Freehold in the Uſe, to make an Action real lie againſt him; for an Action real does not lie but againſt him that has a Freehold, and no other Intent than this can be ſuppoſed in the Act, which gives an Action againſt Pernors of the Profits. But our Caſe here is grounded upon another Purpoſe, to wit, to avoid buying of Titles and Maintenance, which Things are practiſed as well for a Leaſe for Years, as other Eſtate, and therefore a Leaſe for Years is included within the more extenſive Words, and within the Meaning of the Statute. And as to what was ſaid, that a Leaſe for Years cannot be taken within the Intent of the Makers of the Statute, becauſe of the Largeneſs of the Penalty, which creates a Forfeiture of the Value of the whole Land, as to this, they took it, that the greater the Penalty was, the ſooner People would avoid the Danger of the Statute: And the Words being as they are, it cannot be intended but they meant the Forfeiture of the whole Value, as well for a Leaſe, as for the Fee. For which Reaſon, it ſeemed to all the Juſtices, that if the Leaſe here be well ſhewn to be made contrary to the Form of the Statute, it ſhall be within the Danger of the Statute, as well as any other Eſtate, and that the Defendants ſhall forfeit the whole Value of the Eſtate in Fee for it.

Further, as to the Statute, the Juſtices varied in the Expoſition of it. Cook Juſtice. It ſeems to me, that the Leaſe for Years here is within the Statute, and that it is not neceſſary to aver [d] it to be a pretenced Right, for inaſmuch as it is ſhewn by the Count, that neither the Defendants themſelves, nor any of their Anceſtors, nor they by whom the Defendants claim, were in poſſeſſion of the Lands, nor of the Reverſion or Remainder thereof, nor took the Rents or Profits thereof by the Space of one Year, &c. ergo it is pretenced: for the Statute makes the Right of him, who hath not been ſo in poſſeſſion, &c. pretenced, and that is the Intent of the Statute, and then to aver that, which by the Statute and Declaration is apparent, is unneceſſary: For the Body of the Matter ſhews that it is a pretenced Right; [e] as if it is pleaded, that the Leſſee ſurrendered to the Grantee of the Reverſion, it is not neceſſary to plead Attornment, for that is an Attornment as well as Surrender; ſo here the ſhewing that they have not been in poſſeſſion, nor, &c. ut ſupra, ſhews that it is a pretenced Right, and ſuch as the Statute intends. And alſo theſe Words (any Right or Title) include our Caſe, for he, that makes a Leaſe for Years, claims a Right and Title. So that it ſeems to me, the Leaſe here is ſhewn to be made contrary to the Form of the Statute. — Hales Juſtice. I am of a contrary Opinion in this Point, viz. that the Plaintiff has not ſhewn the Leaſe to be made contrary to the Form of the Statute. For every Leaſe for Years made where the Leſſor has not been in poſſeſſion, nor received the Profits for a Year, according to the Statute, is not within the Danger of the Statute. [f] For if one recovers by ſeveral Writs of Formedon Lands in divers Counties, and many Miles diſtant, he cannot very well occupy all this in his Hands, but he may leaſe it out well enough, and ſuch a Leaſe ſhall be out of the Penalty of the Statute, although it be made within the Year. For it is reaſonable that men ſhould do to others, as they themſelves would have others do to them. And therefore it is reaſonable that a Man may leaſe his Land, to which he comes lawfully, although he has not been in Poſſeſſion for the Space of a Year. And to ſay that the Intent of the Statute was

was to reſtrain ſuch Leaſes, would be too hard an Expoſition, and contrary to all Reaſon and Equity, but if he was out of poſſeſſion, then there is good Reaſon to reſtrain ſuch Promiſes or Bargains, for the Law preſumes they cannot be made without an Intent of Maintenance. And if the Statute had ſtopped before the ſaid Clauſe (except, &c.) then it had reſtrained all Perſons from making any Bargain, Leaſe, or Promiſe; but the Clauſe, (except, &c.) and that which comes after it, was made for the Advantage of Leſſees, and thoſe who ſhould take Eſtates. As if there was a Prohibition that none ſhould go to Paul's, this reſtrains all, but if afterwards is ſays, except he ſhall firſt pay to the Mayor of London 20 s. this ſhall be for the Benefit of him that ſhall go there. So here the (except, &c.) and that which comes after it, is for the Advantage of thoſe who take the Eſtate. But to conſtrue it in ſuch Light, that no Man ſhall let his Land until he has been firſt in poſſeſſion for a Year without Interruption, would be againſt all Reaſon. But the Intent was that a Man ſhould not demiſe or bargain his Land to any for Maintenance, except he have been in poſſeſſion for a Year. So that here inaſmuch as the Plaintiff has not averred the Bargain and Leaſe to be made for Maintenance, he has not ſhewn the Caſe to be within the Danger of the Statute: For this was the Point of the Statute. And therefore the Statute of Forger of falſe Deeds is in the Copulative, viz. for forging and publiſhing; [a] yet if he publiſh it only, it is within the Statute, but there it ought to be averred that he publiſhed the ſame to trouble the Poſſeſſion and Title of the Plaintiff, for that is the Point of the Statute; ſo here the Leaſe ought to be averred for Maintenance, that being the Point of our Statute. And becauſe it is not ſo, it is not ſhewn to be within the Danger of the Statute. ——— Mountague Chief Juſtice. It ſeems to me that the Leaſe here is not ſhewn to be within the Danger of the Statute. But before I enter into the Conſideration of the Statute, I will lay down what is a pretenced Right or Title. And it ſeems to me that a pretenced Right or Title is but in one Caſe, and that is, [b] where one is in poſſeſſion of Lands or Tenements, and another, that is out of poſſeſſion, claims them, or ſues for them, that is a pretenced Right or Title. For if one has Right or Title to Land, and afterwards he comes to the Poſſeſſion of the ſame Land, his Right or Title is extinct or ſuſpended in the Land, for during the Time that he has the Land, it is not in eſſe, ergo during that Time it cannot be termed a Right or Title. And that ſuch is a pretenced Right or Title, is proved by the Statute itſelf, which has a Proviſo in it, that it ſhall be lawful for any one, being in lawful Poſſeſſion, to buy or obtain the pretenced Right or Title of any Perſon or Perſons to ſuch Lands, &c. ſo that when the Statute ſaith, he in the Poſſeſſion may buy the pretenced Right of any other, it declares my Definition to be true. Further, I take the Statute, [c] that if he, who is out of poſſeſſion, bargains or ſells, or makes any Covenant or Promiſe to part with the Land after he ſhall have obtained the Poſſeſſion of it, this ſhall be within the Danger of the Statute, whether he, who ſo bargains, ſells, or promiſes, have a good and true Right or Title, or not; and in this Point the Statute has not altered the Law, for the Common Law before this Statute was, that he, who was out of poſſeſſion, might not bargain, grant, or let his Right or Title, and if he had done it, it ſhould have been void. Then this Statute was made in Affirmance of the Common Law, and not in Alteration of it, and all that the Statute has done is, it has added a greater Penalty to that which was contrary to the Common Law before, viz. that a Man ſhall forfeit the Value of the Thing bargained or promiſed, &c. and to avoid ſuch Bargains or Promiſes, where a Man is out of poſſeſſion, is the only Point which the Statute here remedies. For to conſtrue the Statute, that he, who is in poſſeſſion, ſhall not make a Leaſe, Bargain, or Feoffment, except he has been in poſſeſſion, or taken the Profits for a Year before, would be a hard Law, and contrary to all Reaſon and Equity: and ſuch an Expoſition of the Statute was never intended by the Makers of it. For it was always lawful and agreeable with good Reaſon and Policy to permit him, who was in Poſſeſſion, to make Feoffments, Bargains, and Leaſes of his Land, altho' he had not been in Poſſeſſion but a Day before. [d] And that, which Law and Reaſon allows, ſhall be taken to be in Force againſt the Words of Statutes. And therefore the Statute of Articuli ſuper Chartas cap. 11. ordains, that no Officer, nor any other, (for to have Part of the Thing in Plea) ſhall take upon him the Buſineſs that is in Suit; [e] yet if the Tenant, pending a Præcipe quod reddat againſt him, infeoffs his Son and Heir apparent, this ſhall be out of the Danger of the Statute, as it is taken in 6. Ed. 3. for the Son could not be ſaid a Maintainer to the Father, but on the contrary he is bound to aid his Father as often as he can. So that there they would not expound the Statute contrary to what the Common Law and common Reaſon allowed, notwithſtanding the Words were againſt it. [f] In like manner the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 12. ordains, that in an Appeal it ſhall be enquired, who were the Abbettors, and that they ſhall render Damages to the Party acquitted; yet if the Heir abett his Mother to bring the Appeal, although he is within the Words of the Statute, he ſhall be out of the Danger of it; and ſo Herle took it in the ſaid Caſe of 6. Ed. 3. For Common Law and Reaſon ſay, that he ſhall aid his Mother, and abett her. So there is a Statute which inflicts Puniſhment Malefactoribus [g] in Parcis, yet if he does [h] no other Treſpaſs in a Park than Hunting, he is out of the Danger of the Statute, although he is within the Words, and that by the Intent of the Statute. So here in our Caſe, if it was fully within the Danger of the Words of the Statute, which are, that a Man ſhall not alien nor make a Leaſe except he has been in Poſſeſſion for a Year before, yet we are not to intend that he, who makes a Leaſe bonâ fide and without ill Deſign of any Land whereof he has not been in Poſſeſſion for ſo long a Time, ſhall be within the Penalty of the Statute, becauſe good Reaſon and Equity allows ſuch an one do it. But, Sir, it ſeems to me that the Words ought to receive ſuch Conſtruction as ſhall not claſh with common Reaſon, and that is in this Manner, viz. except ſuch Perſon or Perſons, &c.

&c. have been in Poſſeſſion thereof, here there ſhould be a full Point and Reſt; or of the Reverſion or Remainder thereof, this makes another full Sentence; or have taken the Rents or Profits thereof by the Space of one whole Year next before, here there is another full Period; ‡ ſo that theſe Words (by the Space of one whole Year, &c.) ſhall only have Relation to the next Sentence before, viz. to the taking of the Rents or Profits; and the Clauſes of being in Poſſeſſion, Reverſion or Remainder are abſolute, and ſtand by themſelves, and are to be thus taken, viz. if one hath been in Poſſeſſion, Reverſion, or Remainder, tho' it be but for an Hour, it is ſufficient, and he may alien without Danger of the Statute. And this ſeems to me the beſt Expoſition of the Statute. And yet every one who has taken the Profits for a Year may not make a Feoffment or Leaſe; for if the Iſſue in Tail of full Age marries with a Woman Diſcontinuee in Tail, againſt whom he has Cauſe of a Formedon, there if he makes a Leaſe or a Feoffment he is within the Danger of the Statute, becauſe he takes the Profits in Right of his Wife, and he has given the Right which he had in him, and which was not in his Wife, in Reſpect whereof he is in Danger of the Statute. So if he takes the Profits as Guardian, &c. Wherefore it ſeems to me, that (the Space of a Year) ſhall be referred only to the next Clauſe, and not to the Poſſeſſion, or to him in Reverſion or Remainder. And if any one thinks this Expoſition too hard, he ought to conſider that it is not ſo hard as the other, viz. that none ſhall make a Leaſe or Feoffment, if he has not been in Poſſeſſion for a whole Year before, for then he that enters * for Mortmain, or he that recovers in a Writ of Right ſur diſclaimer, might not make a Leaſe within the Year, according to that Expoſition, becauſe neither he, nor any by whom he claims, had been in Poſſeſſion for whole Year before, &c. whereas there the Lord does not claim the Land by the Tenant, nor by them into whoſe Hands it was amortized, but by Matter in Law; and therefore the Intent of the Statute never was according to that Expoſition, for if it ſhould be ſo taken, it would do more Harm than Good; for which Reaſon it ſeems to me that the Statute ſhall be intended ut ſupra. Then in the principal Caſe, inaſmuch as the Leaſe is newly made, and commences at this Day, none can make Title to it except of late Time, no more than one may to Common or a Rent granted de novo out of Land; and therefore the Plaintiff ought to have ſhewn that the Leaſe was in Poſſeſſion of ſome Perſon, where the Defendants pretended a Right or Title to it, or, that the Defendants promiſed a Leaſe in the Land of which they were not in Poſſeſſion, and foraſmuch as this is not ſhewn, there is not any Matter ſhewn to be done contrary to the Form of the Statute: for as the Matter is here declared, it ſhall be intended that the Defendants were in Poſſeſſion of the Land, in Reſpect it is ſhewn that they made the Leaſe, and he that makes a Leaſe ſhall be intended in Poſſeſſion. And if it be ſo, tho' they had been in Poſſeſſion but for an Hour, the Matter is out of the Danger of the Statute. Therefore it ſeems to me, that here is no Offence ſhewn to be done againſt the Statute.

A Report of a Judgment given in the Guildhall of London in the Huſtings there, in the Time of Lent, in the Seventh Year of the Reign of King Edward the Sixth, by the Sheriffs of London Judges there, in an Aſſize of freſh Force brought by John Pollard and Mary his Wife, againſt Bartholomew Jekyl and others.

MEMORANDUM, That John Pollard Eſquire, late one of the Serjeants at Law, and diſcharged thereof by the King's Letters Patent, and placed as Vice-Preſident of the King's Councel in the Marches of Wales, and Mary his Wife, in the Huſtings in the Guildhall of London, the Monday next before the Feaſt of St. Martin in the ſixth Year of the Reign of King Edward the ſixth, brought an Aſſize of freſh Force upon a Plaint of Intruſion commenced before the Mayor and Aldermen, and ſent to the Sheriffs according to the Cuſtom of the City, againſt Bartholomew Jekyl, Ralf Foxley and Agnes his Wife, and eleven other Perſons, upon a Diſſeizin done to them of Land in London, and ten of the Defendants appeared by Bailiff, and pleaded as follows, to wit, † that there never was in Being any ſuch Agnes Wife of the aforeſaid Ralf Foxley, as by the Plaint aforeſaid is ſuppoſed, and this they are ready to verify, &c. Wherefore they pray Judgment of the Plaint aforeſaid, and that it may be enquired by Aſſize. And if, &c. then they ſay, that they have done no Injury nor Diſſeizin to the aforeſaid Plaintiffs touching the Tenements aforeſaid put in View, and in the Plaint aforeſaid ſpecified. And of this, &c. And the three others pleaded the ſame Plea by Attorney. And the Plaintiffs, as to the Plea pleaded in Abatement of the Plaint, demurred in Law: and as to the other Plea, they prayed the Aſſize. And whether the Writ ſhould abate, inaſmuch as it was either always falſe or not, a Day was given for it to be argued, and it was argued and debated at Guildhall the laſt Saturday of Hillary Term in the ſeventh Year of the Reign of King Edward the Sixth, where it was argued for the Plaintiffs by their Councel, that Aſſizes of freſh Force purſue the Nature of Aſſizes at Common Law, ſo that the Argument in the one is the Argument of the other. And Aſſizes are the moſt ſpeedy [a] Suits in the Law, for the Jury ſhall, by the Words of the Writ, have the View before their Appearance, and altho' Warranties are favoured in Law, [b] yet in an Aſſize a Man ſhall not vouch any one, unleſs he be preſent, and this is for the Plaintiffs Expedition: [c] and a Protection will not defend the Party againſt an Aſſize, but Aſſizes are excepted by the Words of Protections, which Caſes prove how much Aſſizes are favoured in the Law. And all Things and Pleas, which are dilatory or in Abatement of Aſſizes, are eſteemed odious, and therefore ſuch Exceptions as will abate other Writs, will not abate Aſſizes, if ſo be there is a Diſſeizor and Tenant, for that is the Subſtance of the Suit, and Pleas or Exceptions, which don't diſprove that, are of little Force in Aſſizes, altho' in other Suits they are available.

In Aſſize againſt many, the Plea of nul tiel in rerum natura as one of thoſe named, does not abate the Plaint as to all the Defendants, but only as to that particular one, and it ſhall ſtand good againſt the reſt.

available. And therefore Misnomer of one of the Defendants shall not abate the Assize, if there is another Disseizor and Tenant, as it is adjudged in many Places in the Book of Assizes, and yet the Writ was always false [a] And so in Assize, if the Tenant pleads Jointenancy of Parcel with a Stranger not named, altho' the Plaintiff confess it, yet it shall not abate his Assize except for that Part only, but for the rest the Writ and Plaint shall stand in Force, as it is adjudged in divers Places in the Book of Assizes, and yet there the Plaint was always false. And the Writ, altho' it is general, shall be intended to be brought of all that is contained in the Plaint, and so the whole shall be intended false ab initio; but if there is a Disseizor and Tenant for any Part, then that is sufficient, and the Law requires no other Truth in the Writ or Plaint. And to say, that one named in the Writ was dead before the Writ purchased, or to say, that there never was such an one in in rerum naturâ, is all one, and of the same Effect, for in both Cases the Writ was always false; and in the first Case, viz. that one named in the Writ of Assize was dead before the Writ purchased, it is adjudged no Plea in Abatement of the Writ, but if there is another Disseizor and Tenant the Writ shall be good against them. And to prove that the Law is so in that Case, these Books were cited to be adjudged in Point, viz. 12. Ass. pl. [b] 14. 23. Ass. pl. [c] 10. 26. Ass. pl. 63. 29. Ass. [d] pl. 62. et [e] 70. And also that in the said Case of 12. Ass. pl. 14. our principal Case is adjudged, viz. ne unques tiel in rerum natura is no Plea in Abatement of the Writ, if there be another Disseizor and Tenant. So that the Case of one dead before the Writ purchased, and our principal Case are both adjudged in the said Plea. Also a Case in T. 44. Ed. 3. 18. Fitz. Brief. 578. was cited, which Case, it was said, is abridged by Fitzherbert more fully for the Purpose here, than the Book at large in Print is. And it was likewise said, that the Action, which might be most fitly resembled to an Assize, is a Quare Impedit, which in Respect of the Danger of Lapse may well be compared to an Assize for the Expedition of it. And it was alledged, that it appears in [f] M. 7. H. 4. 34. pl. 23. that the Prior of Walton brought a Quare Impedit against the Bishop of Carliel and many others, where it was pleaded in Abatement of the Writ, that one of the Defendants was dead the Day of the Writ purchased, and he demanded Judgment of the Writ for all, et non allocatur; which Case may be resembled to an Assize causâ qua supra. And so the Writ in the principal Case shall be good. And it was said that our Case cannot be resembled to a Writ of Trespass, for that in the said Case of 29. Ass. pl. 62. it is adjudged, [g] that in Trespass if one of the Defendants was dead before the Writ purchased, the Writ should abate: and so is it touched by the Way in many other Books and Cases since that Time. But yet it was said, that in the Case of Robert Passelow in [h] M. 47. Ed. 3. 18. pl. 35. and in the Case of Michel and Gilbert in [i] T. 44. Ed. 3. 18. pl. 10. the contrary was adjudged, viz. in the first Case, that in Trespass the Writ shall not abate, where one named in the Writ was dead the Day of the Writ purchased; and in the other Case it was adjudged, that the Writ shall not abate, where it was pleaded that one named in the Writ [k] was not in rerum naturâ the Day of the Writ purchased, for that he was dead before; and it was said that there are more Books adjudged this Way than the other. But it was argued, that altho' the Writ of Trespass should abate in such Case, yet it might not be resembled to the principal Case. For the Law favours the Assize, and the Expedition in it, more than in Trespass: And also in Trespass, the Person is the chief and original Cause of the Action, and the Plaintiff shall punish the Person of the Defendant in Trespass, and then if any of the Defendants be dead before the Writ purchased, it stands with some Reason to abate the Writ: but in the principal Case the Land is the chief and original Cause of the Action, and then if the Land and the Estate remains, and there is a Disseizor and Tenant, it is sufficient for the Plaintiff. And therefore for these Causes it was prayed for the Plaintiffs, that the Writ might stand, and that this Plea might not be enquired, and that the Assize might be taken upon the Plea of nul tort, &c.

E contra for the Defendants.

On the contrary it was argued for the Defendants, that the Plaint ought to abate because this Assize of fresh Force shall pursue the Order and Pleading of Assizes at Common Law. And in Assizes at the Common Law the Plea pleaded here shall abate the Writ, because it proves that it was not well purchased. [l] And it was alledged, that it is holden in 27. H. 8. in a Quare Impedit, that if it be pleaded for one of the Defendants that there is nul tiel in rerum naturâ as one named in the Writ, this shall go in Abatement of the whole Writ, otherwise in Case of [m] Misnomer of one. And so shall it be in an Assize, which has been resembled to a Quare Impedit. And it was said, that the common Opinion amongst Men learned in the Law has always been, that dead before the Writ purchased, or, nul tiel in rerum naturâ, shall abate the Writ against all, in Actions as well several as joint, and in all Actions in general. And so it was prayed that the Plaint here might abate. And hereupon the Court would be advised: and they gave Day further. And in the mean time Southcote of the Middle Temple one of the Deputies of the Sheriff of London, and Judge in the Cause, consulted with divers of the Justices, and prayed their Advise in the Case, and all the Cases before alledged by the Councel were written in a Paper, and delivered to Hales one of the Justices of the Common Bench, and he perused all the Books where the Cases were alledged, and read the Books cited, and found them according as they were cited, and afterwards said to Southcote, that no Man learned in the Law could shew any Book adjudged contrary to the Books cited. And because there were here many Books the one Way, and none the other Way, he advised him to follow the Judgments before given. And this he also said to me myself. And at another Day afterwards in the Guildhall aforesaid the Court said, we take the Law to be, that the Plea does not go in Abatement of the Plaint against all, but only against the said Agnes. Wherefore we award the Plaint good against the others, and also do award the Assize.

[n] Afterwards the Plaintiffs Councel, having well considered the Matter, perceived that the Case was argued argued prematurely, and before the proper Time; for the Aſſize ought to have enquired the whole Matter, and if they had found the Exception, viz. that there was no ſuch Perſon in rerum naturâ, as the Defendants had alledged, and had alſo found a Diſſeizor and Tenant, then the Matter ought to come in Queſtion, and that would have been the proper Time to diſpute the Point of Law ariſing thereupon, and not before. For the Plea pleaded, ut ſupra, was not anſwerable; for if a Man pleads in Aſſize in Abatement of the Writ, Jointenancy on the Part of the Plaintiff, or Jointenancy without Deed on the Part of the Tenant, or pleads that the Tenements are in another Town, or that the Plaintiff or Tenant is miſnamed, or the like Pleas, and pleads over, viz. et ſi trove ne ſoit, nul tort, &c. as he ought to do in ſuch Caſes, the Plaintiff ſhall not reply to the Pleas in Abatement of the Writ, nor are they anſwerable: for when the Defendant pleads in Abatement of the Writ, and pleads over, et ſi trove ne ſoit, nul tort, his Concluſion is, et de hoc ponit ſe ſuper Aſſizam, and the Entry ſhall be, et Querens ſimiliter. And ſo the Plaintiff ſhall ſay nothing elſe but ſimiliter, and ſhall not † anſwer ſpecially to the Plea pleaded before nul tort. But if the Tenant in Aſſize pleads Jointenancy by Deed with a Stranger, there the Demandant ought to anſwer it: for there he that pleads the Jointenancy ſhall not plead over to the Aſſize, but ſhall ſtay upon that only, and ſhall pray Proceſs upon the Statute, and therefore the Plea is anſwerable; but in the other Caſes the Plaintiff ſhall not anſwer to the Matter pleaded in Abatement of the Writ; neither ſhall he in our Caſe, and then if it is not anſwerable, by the ſame Reaſon the Plaintiffs might not demur upon it, for a Man may not demur upon that which does not require an Anſwer. And therefore the Matter ought to be enquired by the Aſſize, as it was done in the ſaid Caſes of 23. Aſs. pl 10. and 26. Aſs. pl. 63. For which Reaſon the Councel for the Plaintiff, taking the Law to be as is ſaid before, prayed the Court that, when the Aſſize was ſworn, they might firſt enquire of the Matter pleaded in Abatement of the Plaint, viz. if there ever was any ſuch Agnes in rerum natura. And the Court, at the Prayer of the Plaintiffs, charged the Aſſize to enquire of this firſt, who found, that there never was any ſuch Agnes Wife of the ſaid Ralf Foxley in rerum natura, as the Defendants had alledged. And further they found, that ſome of the Defendants only diſſeized the Plaintiffs of Part of the Tenements, and ſhewed the Certainty thereof, and of this they acquitted the reſt of the Defendants: And others diſſeized the Plaintiffs of another Part, and of that they acquitted the reſt of the Defendants, and ſo of a third, and of a fourth Part, and thus they found four ſeveral Diſſeizins at four ſeveral Times, and by the Defendants ſeverally, and aſſeſſed ſeveral Damages, viz. for every Diſſeizin a Penny againſt all the Diſſeizors of each Part, and 6 l. 13. s. 3 d. for the Coſts of Suit entirely againſt all together, and this was done at the Requeſt of the Plaintiff's Councel, to avoid the Danger of an Attaint, if the Jurors had not found a Diſſeizin by all jointly. Wherefore upon this Verdict, on the third Saturday in Lent in the ſeventh Year of the Reign of King Edward the Sixth, the Court awarded that the Plaintiffs ſhould recover Seizin of the Land, and their ſeveral Damages, as the Verdict aſſeſſed them, and the Coſts of Suit entirely againſt them all together, and 26 s. 8 d. beſides, for the Coſts encreaſed by the Court.

Judgment.

In the ſame Court another Aſſize of freſh Force was brought by Thomas Panel Parſon of the Church of Honeylane in London, againſt Thomas Moor and the Corporation of Mercers of London, upon a Diſſeizin done to the Plaintiff of a Cellar under the ſame Church; and Moor appeared in proper Perſon, and the Corporation by Bailiff, and his Warrant was demanded, and he had no Warrant, and the Aſſize was prayed againſt the Corporation, becauſe by Law they cannot appear by Bailiff without his having a Warrant in Writing, ſo that upon the Matter they had made Default. And the other Party ſaid, that it ſhould be done in this Writ as in Aſſizes at Common Law, and the Writ of Aſſize ſaith, Put by Sureties and ſafe Pledges the aforeſaid (Defendant) or his Bailiff, if he cannot be found, &c. and ſo the Writ warrants the Appearance of the Bailiff. And to prove that a Bailiff may be to a Corporation without Deed, the Caſe of Treſpaſs brought by the Dean and Chapter of Paul's in [a] 12. H. 7. was cited. Againſt which on the other Side was cited the Caſe in [b] 4. H. 7. of Debt brought by the Dean of Paul's. And alſo on this Side it was ſaid, that altho' the Writ ſpeaks, vel Ballivum ſuum, as is ſhewn before, yet this ſhall be intended ſuch a Bailiff as the Law allows, viz. if the Defendant is a natural Body, then his Bailiff without Deed, and if a Body corporate, then their Bailiff by Deed. And it was ſaid, [c] altho' the Law was that one might juſtify in Treſpaſs as Bailiff to a Corporation without Deed, yet it is not like to a Bailiff in Aſſize; for there he ſhall plead touching the Right of the Freehold, and therefore he is in a higher Degree than a Bailiff of a Manor, who takes the Profits, and who juſtifies in ſuch a baſe Capacity. And it was ſaid, that a Bailiff of a Manor ſhall not have an Action of Debt for his Salary, without Deed, againſt any Corporation. And they had ſpoke to the Matter divers Days, and afterwards Cholmley and Southcote Deputies of the Sheriffs of London, and Judges in the Cauſe, enquired the Opinion of the Lord Mountague, and of Saunders Serjeant, and of R. Brook Serjeant Recorder of London, all of whom agreed in Opinion that the Bailiff might not appear without Warrant. Wherefore the ſaid third Saturday in Lent the Court ſaid, we have conſulted with ſome of the Judges, and with ſeveral learned in the Law, and it ſeems to them and to us alſo, that the Corporation cannot appear by Bailiff without Warrant in Writing. Wherefore we award that their Appearance be holden for none, becauſe the Bailiff had not any Warrant. And afterwards the Corporation appeared by Attorney, and they and Moor pleaded to the Aſſize. And this Matter depended by divers Continuances until a certain Day, at which the ſaid Moor (relicta verificatione ſua) pleaded in Abatement of the Aſſize, that the Plaintiff had entered into the ſaid Cellar after after the laſt Continuance, and thereof was ſeized in Fee in Right of his Church. And the Plaintiff e contra. And upon this the Jury gave a ſpecial Verdict, that is, they found the Matter at large, and prayed the Diſcretion of the Juſtices. And becauſe the Verdict was not full and perfect, the Plaintiff ſued a [a] Certificate of Aſſize to make the Jurors come again to be more fully examined: who came again, and made their Verdict more certain. And the Effect of both their Verdicts was, that the Plaintiff had a Subpæna delivered to him to be examined upon certain Interrogatories concerning the Title of the Cellar, and after the laſt Continuance the ſaid Moor deſired him to dine with him at his Houſe in Honey-lane, and being there with Anthony Skinner Examiner, he was required by the ſaid Thomas Moor to go into the ſaid Cellar to ſee the Antiquity of the ſame. At whoſe Requeſt the Plaintiff and the ſaid Examiner went into the Cellar, and the Wife of the ſaid Moor brought them two Candles to ſhew them the ſaid Cellar. And when they had ſeen it, they came up and went out of it. And afterwards the ſaid Examiner examined the ſaid Plaintiff in the Houſe of the ſaid Moor upon the Interrogatories. And hereupon the Aſſize pray the Diſcretion of the Juſtices, whether the ſaid Entry be ſuch an Entry, as that the Plaintiff ſhall be thereby ſeized of the ſame Cellar in Fee in Right of his Church, as the ſaid Moor by his Plea hath ſuppoſed. And they found the Seizin and Diſſeizin by Moor, and that the Corporation did not diſſeize the Plaintiff, and upon this Verdict the Plaintiff prayed his Judgment. And two Queſtions were moved upon this Verdict, which hung long in Abate. The firſt was, inaſmuch as the Iſſue was joined upon a certain Point, viz. upon the Entry, whether the Jurors might give a ſpecial Verdict finding the Matter at large, or if they ought to have given a preciſe Verdict, viz. that he entered, or that he did not enter. [b] For it was ſaid that the Jurors may not give a Verdict at large, except in Aſſize, and a Writ of Treſpaſs, or ſuch like, where the general Iſſue is pleaded. The other Queſtion was, if the Matter found be in Law ſuch an Entry as ſhall abate the Writ, or not. And theſe Matters were debated in Guildhall divers Times, and hung until Trinity Term in the ſecond and third Years of the Reign of King Philip and Queen Mary, and then it it was alſo debated. And it was ſaid on Behalf of the Plaintiff, that the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 30. which ordains, that the Juſtices aſſigned to take Aſſizes ſhall not compel the Jurors to ſay preciſely whether it be a Diſſeizin or not, ſo that they do ſhew the Truth of the Fact, and require Aid of the Juſtices, ſhall be extended by Equity to other Caſes beſides Aſſizes, for there is as great Doubt in other Verdicts, as there is in Aſſizes: and the Statute was made to relieve the Ignorance of Jurors, and therefore there is the ſame Reaſon in other Caſes as in Aſſizes. And for this Cauſe they may give a ſpecial Verdict, and find the Matter at large in any Iſſue in the Word, ſo that the Matter found at large does but tend to the Iſſue joined, and contain the certain Truth thereof. [c] And hereupon the Caſe in 41. Ed. 3. was alledged, where in a Writ of Account for 10 l. the Defendant traverſed the Receit, and the Jurors gave a Verdict at large, viz. that the Plaintiff delivered the Money to the Defendant, upon Condition that if the Defendant made him an Aſſurance of certain Land, he ſhould have the 10 l. and if he did not make him an Aſſurance at ſuch a Day, that he ſhould re-deliver the Money to the Plaintiff, and they ſaid he did not make him an Aſſurance of the Land at the Day, &c. and foraſmuch as, upon this Matter found at large, the Law ſaith that the Defendant is accountable, he was adjudged to account. Ex quo a Man may ſee, that a ſpecial Verdict finding Matter amounting to the Point in Iſſue is good, and that Judgment ſhall be given upon it. [d] And the Caſe in 26. H. 8. was alledged, where two as Church-wardens brought an Action, and the Defendant ſaid that the Day of the Writ purchaſed they were not Church-wardens, and upon this they were at Iſſue, and the Jury gave their Verdict, that the one was Warden the Day &c. and the other not: And there it is moved, whether or no this Verdict ſhould be received, inaſmuch as it is not preciſely found whether they were Wardens or not, but there, by the Rule of the Court, the Verdict was ſo recived and entered, for if the one was not a Warden, then they were not Wardens, and the Court, which hath Knowledge of the Law, may ſo adjudge upon the Verdict; ſo that foraſmuch as it amounted to a direct Proof of the Iſſue, the Verdict was there held good. [e] And the Caſe in 47. Ed. 3. was alledged, wherein a Præcipe quod reddat upon the Default of the Tenant one came and ſhewed that the Tenant, who made Default, held the Tenements for Term of Life of his Leaſe, the Reverſion to him, and prayed to be received, and the Demandant ſaid that the Tenant had a Fee, and upon this they were at Iſſue, and it was found by Niſi prius that the Tenant never had any Thing in the Land, and alſo he who prayed to be received never had any Thing in the Reverſion, and upon this Verdict found the Court were adviſed that it was receivable, for it was confeſſed both on the one Part and on the other, that the Tenant had an Eſtate for Term of Life, and the Inqueſt was not charged concerning that which the Party had confeſſed, and then when the Verdict finds that he had nothing, it follows from thence that he had not a Fee, and ſo the finding amounts to the Point of the Iſſue, tho' it has not preciſe Words. And many other Caſes were put on this Point. From which, it was ſaid, it appears that as well in general, as in ſpecial Iſſues, and as well in other Actions as in Aſſize or Treſpaſs, the Jurors may give a ſpecial Verdict, finding the Matter at large pertinent to the the Point in Iſſue. And ſo is it here.

And as to the other Point, it was ſaid, that this could not be adjudged in Law an Entry; for the Plaintiff came into the Cellar at the Requeſt of the Diſſeizor, and to ſee the Antiquity of it, and for no other Purpoſe. And the Diſſeizor could not puniſh him for this in Treſpaſs, if he were a meer Stranger: and then it ſhall not be an Entry in him. But if he had done any Act, ſo that the Diſſeizor might have had an Action again him, if he were a Stranger, there the Law ſaith, that rather than he ſhall be puniſhed, it ſhall be an Entry and Remitter to him.

But

But here he went at the Requeſt of the Diſſeizor, in which Caſe he was not puniſhable if he had been a Stranger, and he went for another Purpoſe than to make an Entry, and therefore it ſhall not be adjudged an Entry to abate his Writ. [a] For if the Diſſeizor will aſk the Diſſeizee to come to the Houſe whereof the Diſſeizin was made, to his Daughter's Wedding, or to dine with him, or the like, it ſhall not be an Entry into the Houſe, cauſâ qua ſupra. [b] And the Caſe in Longo 5. Ed. 4. was alledged, where Babington brought an Aſſize of the Houſe of the Fleet, and pending the Aſſize, Babington with his Councel went into the Houſe to the Jury when they had the View, to ſhew Evidence upon the View, and the Plaintiff's being upon the Land in ſuch Manner, and claiming nothing, was holden no Entry nor Poſſeſſion in the Plaintiff, nor was the Writ abated by it, for he did not go there with an Intent to make any Claim or Entry into the Land. [c] And alſo the Caſe in 26. Aſs. pl. 42. was alledged, where in an Aſſize it was found that the Plaintiff was diſſeized, and afterwards came upon the Land, and put his Foot on it, but he took nothing of the Profits, and the other ouſted him, and by Award he recovered his Damages for the firſt Diſſeizin, notwithſtanding he was of full Age. And ſo every coming upon the Land is not an Entry. For it was ſaid, that Littleton in his Book held the Law to be, [d] that continual Claim ought to be made upon the Land, if he dare come there. And in ſuch Caſe if he comes upon the Land, and makes Claim, and departs preſently, this ſhall not be adjudged an Entry to his [e] Diſadvantage: for he ſhall have an Aſſize of the firſt Diſſeizin, and ſhall recover Damages from the firſt Day until the Day of the Aſſize. For his Intent was to make Claim, and not to take any of the Profits, nor to drive the Tenant out, and keep the Poſſeſſion. And ſo the Intent of the coming upon the Land is to be reſpected. And here the Intent of the Plaintiff was not to make an actual Entry, and to expel the Diſſeizor, wherefore he ought to have Judgment upon this Verdict.

Afterwards Southcote and Fuller Under-ſheriffs and Judges in the Court held it good to have the Opinions of the Juſtices of the Common Bench in theſe two Points, and therefore the Plaintiff retained Dyer Serjeant to move it, who moved it to the Juſtices in the ſaid Trinity Term, in the Preſence of the ſaid Under-ſheriffs. And as to the firſt Point (as it was immediately told me by the ſaid Under-ſheriffs, and many others, for I was not preſent when it was moved) the Court held that the Jurors might give a ſpecial Verdict finding the Matter at large. [f] And ſo they may upon any Iſſue, if their finding of the Matter at large tend to the Point of the Iſſue, and not elſe. And as to the other Matter, the Court held it no Entry to abate the Writ. And Brook Chief Juſtice then ſaid, (as it was immediately reported to me) [g] that in a Formedon pending before them there, the Tenant had pleaded in Abatement of the Writ, that the Demandant had entered after the laſt Continuance, and upon the Evidence it appeared that many were cutting down Trees upon the Land, and the Demandant came upon the Land to them, and admoniſhed them, upon their Peril, not to do any more than they could do by Law, and he and his Companions took this to be no Entry. So in the Caſe here. Wherefore afterwards, viz. the 27th Day of June, 2 & 3. Philip and Mary Judgment was given upon the ſaid Verdict at Guildhall, that the ſaid Thomas Panel ſhould recover againſt the ſaid Moor.

Where an Encroachment is of a Thing of the same Nature with the Tenure, as Tenure by 12 d. and 2 s. is encroached, there the Tenant shall traverse the Seizin in Avowry; but if the Encroachment be of a Thing of another Nature from the Tenure, as a Hawk for a Horse, or e contra, there the Tenure shall be traversed, and not the Seizin. Note, (Reader) IT appears in the Records of the King's Bench, of Hillary Term 4 & 5. Edw. 6. Rot. 38. that the said Plaintiff had sued a Replevin against the said Defendants for taking two Cows in the County of Kent, in a Place called the Lesse. And the said Walter Mantel avowed, and the said William Redsole as his Bailiff confessed the taking in the Place &c. And they said that the Place where, &c. contained four Acres and a half in Horton, and that one John Godden was seized in Fee of one Messuage and fifteen Acres of Land in Horton, whereof the four Acres and a half were parcel, and held them of the Prior of Horton as of his Manor of Horton by Fealty and Rent of 5 s. and by the Rent of 5 Capons, and by Suit of Court every three Weeks, and by the Service to render, as well after the Death of every Tenant dying seized thereof in his Demesn as of Fee, as after every Alienation made thereof in Fee Simple, 5 s. in the Name of ‡ Relief, and also by the Service to render, after the Death of every Tenant of the said Tenants dying seized, the best Beast that such Tenant had at the Time of his Death, for and in the Name of a Heriot, and they alledged † Seizin in the said Prior by the Hands of the said Godden: And afterwards they conveyed the Manor by the Dissolution of Monasteries to King Henry the Eighth, and from him to Richard Tate for 21 Years, and from him to the said Walter Mantel. And John Woodland having the Estate of the said Godden in the said four Acres and a half, and being thereof seized in Fee, and being possessed of a young Ox called a Steer of the Price * of 25 s. then being his best Beast, died. And because the said Steer was detained and eloigned, the said Mantel avowed, and the said Redsole as his Bailiff confessed the taking of the Cows in the said Place, in which, &c. for the said Steer, and within his Fee, &c. And the Plaintiff said, that true it is the said Godden held the said Messuage and 15 Acres of Land of the said Prior, as of the said Manor, by Fealty and 5 s. Rent, and 5 Capons, and Suit of Court, and Relief of 5 s. in Manner and Form as in the Avowry is alledged. And further said, that within the said Manor there is such a Custom, that if any Person holds any Lands or Tenements by several Services of the said Manor, and dies seized of the same Lands, then the Lord of the said Manor for the Time being shall seize the best Beast of the said Tenant, so dying seized, for a Heriot, as Heriot Custom for all the Lands and Tenements so holden of the same Lord, as of the said Manor, and the same should have to his own Use. And further said, that the said John Woodland being seized of the said four Acres and a half, and of divers other Lands, and being also seized of divers other Lands and Tenements holden of the said Walter, as of the said Manor, thereof died seized, then being possessed of the said Steer, and of one other Ox then being his best Beast, wherefore the Defendants seized the said other Ox, to the Use of the said Walter, for Heriot-custom due after the Death of the said John Woodland, for all the Lands and Tenements so holden of the said Manor, according to the Custom of the said Manor, without that, that the said Godden held the said Messuage and 15 Acres of the said Prior, as of the said Manor, by the Services to render, after the Death of every Tenant of the said Tenants dying seized, the best Beast which the same Tenant had at the Time of his Death, to the Lord of the said Manor, for and in the Name of a Heriot, in Manner and Form as in the Avowry was alledged. And upon this Bar to the Avowry two Things were moved. The first was, whether the Plaintiff ought to traverse the Tenure, or the Seizin. The second was, admitting he might traverse the Tenure, then how the Traverse ought to be. As to the first Point, it was alledged by the Councel for the Plaintiff, that he might traverse the Tenure well enough. And therefore, it was said, there is a Diversity in the Law when to traverse the Tenure, and when the Seizin. For if the Tenant holds of the Lord by Fealty only, and the Lord encroaches Rent, there altho' both make but Socage, yet the Tenant in Avowry shall traverse the Tenure, and shall not answer to the Seizin, because the Encroachment is of a different Thing from what the Tenure is. So if the Tenant holds by Fealty and a Hawk, and the Lord encroaches a Horse, there if the Lord afterwards avows for the Horse, the Tenant may traverse the Tenure, and make no Answer to the Seizin, because that which is encroached is another Thing, and of another Nature from that by which the Tenure is, And therefore that which is encroached may not be parcel of the Tenure. And so if the Tenant holds by Socage, and the Lord encroaches Knight's Service, the Tenant may traverse this in Avowry. But if the Tenant holds by Fealty and 2 s. Rent, and the Lord encroaches 4 s. or if the Tenant holds by one Horse, and the Lord enroaches two Horses, or if the Tenant holds by Suit of Court once a-Year, and the Lord encroaches Suit every Month, in all these Cases the Tenant cannot avoid this in Avowry. And therefore where the Lord charges him in Avowry with such Encroachment, the Tenant ought to traverse the Seizin, if he can do it truly, and not the Tenure, for the Encroachment is of the same Thing with the Tenure, and therefore he cannot traverse the Tenure. For true it is that he holds by the same Tenure, but not by so much, and the Quantity of the Thing is not traversable in Avowry, but the Quality only. And to avoid the Quantity encroached, he is driven to a Writ of Ne injuste vexes, or Contra formam feoffamenti. So that if he cannot truly traverse the Seizin alledged in Avowry of such Quantity, he is of Necessity driven to such Writs. And so the Nature or Quality of the Tenure or Thing is traversable in Avowry, but not the Quantity. And it was alledged that this Diversity appears in the Years of Edward 4. viz. in [a] Anno 7. and also in the Case of the Prior

And note alſo (as I apprehend) after the Encroachment, if the very Tenant makes Reſcous to the very Lord, and he brings Aſſize, he may not make Title to himſelf by Encroachment. So that the Seizin of many Services is only an Eſtoppel in Replevin.*

† S. P. 8. Co. 65. a. 10. Co. 108. a. Vin. Abr. tit. Incroachment C. pl. 9.

Further it was moved, as to the ſecond Point, that altho' the Tenure be traverſable in Avowry, yet the Traverſe here taken in the manner it is, was not good. For the Tenure is alledged by the Avowant to be of divers Things, viz. by Fealty, by 5 s. Rent, by Capons, by Suit of Court, by Relief, and by Heriot, and the Plaintiff has confeſſed the Tenure of all the Things but the Heriot, and has traverſed the Tenure of the Heriot, which is not good. For the Tenure is alledged entire, and then to traverſe abſque hoc that he holds by Heriot cannot be. For no Tenure is alledged by Heriot only, but by Heriot and other Services entirely, which ought to be entirely traverſed, as it is alledged in the Avowry, and not by Parcels. [d] As if an Action of Debt be brought upon an Obligation, the Defendant ſaith, that it was indorſed upon Condition to ſtand to the Arbitrement of J. S. who made an Arbitrement of three Things to be performed by him, which he has performed, and ſhews how, and the Plaintiff ſaith, that true it is he made an Arbitrement of the three Things, and alſo of one other Thing, which the Defendant has not performed, for the Non-performance whereof he brought his Action, there if the Defendant ſaith, that he made his Arbitrement of the three Things only, abſque hoc that he made an Arbitrement of the fourth Thing, this is no good Traverſe, but he ought to traverſe abſque hoc that he made an Arbitrement of the four Things. For an Arbitrement is a Thing entire, which ought to be entirely traverſed, for an Arbitrement of three Things is not the ſame Arbitrement as is made of four Things, but is another Arbitrement. So in the principal Caſe the Tenure is entire: and the Tenure whereof the Avowant ſpeaks is not to be intended the ſame Tenure of which the Plaintiff ſpeaks; and foraſmuch as the Heriot and the other Services are but one entire Tenure, he ought to traverſe the whole that is alledged, and not one Part only. And it was ſaid, that the Traverſe was accordingly ſo taken in [e] 5. H. 7. in the like Caſe.

2 Point. For the Defendants.

[d] 1. Saund. 307. Vin. Abr. tit. Arbitrement G. a. pl. 5.

On the contrary it was ſaid by Anthony Wood, that the Traverſe ought to be as it is now contained in the Record. For the Defendant has alledged that the Tenure was by ſix Things, and the Plaintiff has confeſſed the Tenure to be by five of them, and then if he ought to traverſe, abſque hoc that he holds by the ſix Things, his Traverſe would be repugnant to his own Confeſſion, for by ſuch Traverſe he would deny that, which he had before confeſſed, viz. that he holds by the five Things; for inaſmuch as the five Things are Part of the ſix Things, and he has confeſſed the Tenure by the five Things, and ſuch Traverſe would be a Denial thereof, ergo there would be a Repugnancy in the Confeſſion and the Traverſe, which the Law will not ſuffer. And as the Traverſe is here taken, there is no Contrariety: for altho' the Tenure be entire, yet it is as well denied this Way as the other, and the Matter appears as well this Way, and is as fully denied without Contradiction, as it is the other Way with Contradiction, and therefore the Traverſe as it is here is the better Way.

[e] P. 5. H. 7. 23. E contra for the Plaintiff.

Upon this Matter the Juſtices were of different Opinions, and each of them, at a Day appointed for it, declared their Opinions openly, but could not then agree, and the Record of the ſaid Caſe in 5. H. 7. was ſearched and viewed by ſome of the Juſtices, (as I heard), and at laſt Wood ſaid to the Councel for the other Party, that the Juſtices had agreed that the Traverſe ought to be as Wood ſaid, viz. [f] of the Heriot only, as above, for the Reaſon before given, and the Councel for the Plaintiff believing him took the Traverſe accordingly, for before they had taken it the other Way. But Bromley ſaid afterwards that the Court had not ſo agreed. And upon this the Parties were at Iſſue. And now, viz. in Trinity Term 7. Edw. 6. the Jury was charged, and Evidence was given to them on both Sides. And amongſt other Things the Defendant ſhewed divers Court Rolls, and ſeveral of them were, that ſuch particular Perſons died ſeized of certain Lands holden of the Manor of Horton, after whoſe Deaths the Lord had ſeized a Heriot. And the Councel for the Plaintiff ſaid, that theſe Court Rolls prove for the Plaintiff, viz. that it was a Heriot Cuſtom. For there is a Difference in Law between Heriot Cuſtom and Heriot-Service. For a Man may ſeize Heriot-Cuſtom, and take it as his own Chattle, and as that wherein he hath Property, but Heriot-Service is parcel of the Tenure, and lies in [g] render, ſo that if the Tenant will not render it to the Lord, he has his Remedy for it, as he hath for Rent or other Things, viz. Diſtreſs. [h] For he may come to the Land, and diſtrain whatever Beaſts he ſhall find there, and may put them in Pound until he be ſatisfied for the Heriot, as it it appears in [i] 27. Aſs. where in Treſpaſs for Cattle taken and carried away, the Defendant ſhewed that he was Lord, and that two Heriots were due to him by Reaſon of the Tenure for two Deſcents, and becauſe the Heriots were eloigned, he took the Beaſts found upon the Land holden of him, for the Heriots eloigned, as it was lawful for him to do, and this was adjudged a good Anſwer; and there it is ſaid, that whatever Beaſts are manuring the Land within my Fee, I may avow the taking for Heriot, if they be eloigned. By which Book it appears, that for Heriot-Service the Lord may and ought always to diſtrain, and for Heriot-Cuſtom, ſeize. And then

then the Court Rolls, which prove a Seizure of a Heriot by the Lord, prove here that it is Heriot-cuſtom. And hereupon it was ſaid for the Plaintiff to the Jurors, that they ought to find for him.—And Chomley and Gerard, who were of Councel for the Defendants, ſaid that well and true it is the Lord may diſtrain for Heriot-ſervice, but they ſaid, the Lord may alſo ſeize Heriot-ſervice, ſo that he has two Means to come at it. And that the Law is ſo, that the Lord may ſeize Heriot-ſervice, they ſaid, it appears by the Book of [a] M. 6. Ed. 3. 36. pl. 3. which Book they had brought to the Bar, apprehending that the other Party would take the Exception ut ſupra, and there they ſhewed the Caſe in the Book openly. And the Caſe there is as follows, viz. In Replevin brought againſt an Abbot for a Horſe wrongfully taken, the Abbot ſhewed that W. the Father of the Plaintiff, whoſe Heir he is, held certain Tenements of him by certain Tenure, and after the Death of the Tenant to have the beſt Beaſt in Name of a Heriot, and alledged Seizin in his Predeceſſor, and becauſe this Horſe was the beſt Beaſt at the Time of his Death, he took it as his own Beaſt in Name of a Heriot; and the Plaintiff ſaid that the Place where the taking was is out of his Fee, and there it was ſaid to be no Plea, becauſe he avowed the taking as for his own Beaſt. [b] For he may avow the taking of his own Beaſt wherever he can find it, as well out of his Fee, as in it; wherefore the Plaintiff relinquiſhed his Plea, and traverſed the Seizin of the Heriot; Priſt, &c. And upon this Iſſue was joined. And this they apprehended was a Proof that the Lord might well enough ſeize the beſt Beaſt, for there the Abbot juſtified the taking of the Beaſt, and did not avow at all, which he could not have done, if he had not a Propriety in it; and there out of his Fee was no Plea, which would have been a good Plea if he had avowed, and had not claimed the Beaſt as his own. And Bromley and Portman Juſtices took the ſaid Caſe as a good Proof, that the Lord might ſeize Heriot-ſervice. And Portman ſaid, it appears alſo by [c] 16. Ed. 3. that the Law is ſo.—And the Councel for the Plaintiff ſaid, that the common Opinion amongſt Men learned in the Law is, that he may not ſeize Heriot-ſervice, but Heriot-cuſtom he may, and for Heriot-ſervice diſtrain. And this Diverſity is held good Law in [d] 8. H. 7. and in other Books and Years of Henry 7. Bromley ſaid, this Diverſity that you put is moved by the Way in the Years of Henry 7. but there is no principal Caſe adjudged upon it. Then the Councel for the Plaintiff ſaid, if there be Lord and Tenant, and the Tenant holds by a Capon, or an Egg, or 12 d. Rent, it is not lawful for the Lord to come to the Land, and take the Capon or the Egg, or the 12 d. being in Arrear, altho' he find it there, but his Remedy is only to diſtrain for it. And then what Difference is there between a Capon parcel of the Tenure, and an Ox parcel of the Tenure? To which it was ſaid, there is a great Difference between the Caſes put and the principal Caſe. [e] For in the Caſes put, if the Tenant has 20 Capons, or 20 Eggs, or 20 s. of Money, he may give what Capon, what Egg, or what 12 d. he pleaſes: So that the Election is given to the Tenant who ſhall pay the Thing, and the Lord ſhall not have which he pleaſes. [f] But in the Caſe of a Heriot, the Tenant ſhall not have any Election, nor the Lord alſo, for the Lord ſhall have the beſt Beaſt, and ſuch is the Tenure, ſo that the Thing is certain, in which Caſe it is reaſonable that the Lord ſhould ſeize the Thing. Therefore in the one Caſe there is an Election given to the Tenant, and in the other not, and in the one Caſe the Lord knows the Certainty, and in the other not; and ſo is the Diverſity. And afterwards Portman recited the Evidence to the Jury, and ſaid, You Jurors, the Councel for both Parties have prayed us the Judges to tell you what the Law is in this Point, viz. whether the Lord may ſeize Heriot-ſervice or not. And we have adviſed together, and are agreed, and take the Law to be, that the Lord may ſeize [g] Heriot-ſervice well enough. And therefore take the Law ſo by Rule of the Court. Quod nota. And afterwards the Jury found for the Plaintiff upon other Matter given in Evidence.

DIVERS Perſons of the County of Montgomery were indicted for killing Oliver ap David ap Hoel Vaughan at Berew in the ſaid County of Montgomery of Malice prepenſe, viz. ſome for giving the Wounds whereof he died, and Griffith ap David ap John and others for that they were preſent, aiding, comforting, and abetting the others to commit the ſaid Murder. And they, who gave the Wounds to the ſaid Oliver, and killed him, had fled and eſcaped, and Griffith ap David ap John and the reſt were brought to the Bar. And whether they ſhould be arraigned or no, was a Doubt, and was moved to the other Juſtices by Bromley; for he ſaid to them, that although they, who were preſent and abbetting, were Principals as well as they, who ſtruck the Man and killed him, yet they are Principals in the ſecond Degree, viz. in reſpect that the others, who ſtruck the ſaid Oliver and killed him, are Principals in the firſt Degree by reaſon of the Act of killing him, and theſe others, who abetted them and were preſent, are alſo Principals, but that in the ſecond Degree only, and in reſpect of the firſt Act; for if the others did not kill the Man, then if the ſaid Griffith and the reſt, who were Abettors and preſent, ſhould be now arraigned, and it ſhould happen that they ſhould be found guilty, and afterwards the others, who are indicted for giving the Stroke and killing the ſaid Oliver, ſhould be taken and arraigned, and it ſhould happen that they were acquitted, as it might be, then I would know your Opinions what ſhould be done. [a] For if A. is indicted for the Rape of a Woman, and B. is indicted for that he was preſent and abetting A. to do it, now they are both Principals by Law, and if B. is arraigned, and found guilty by Inqueſt, and afterwards A. is arraigned, and by another Inqueſt acquitted, now Judgment ſhall not be given againſt B. becauſe he could not be guilty but in reſpect that A. was guilty: And inaſmuch as it is found that A. did not do the Fact, then it cannot ſtand together that B. was preſent when A. did the Fact, for he could not be preſent at the doing of a Thing, which was never done, and therefore Judgment ſhall never be given againſt B. but he ſhall be acquitted by the other Verdict. For if Judgment ſhould be given againſt him, an Inconvenience would follow, for it appears to the Judges that both the Verdicts were not true, but one of them was falſe, and the Court ought rather to believe the Verdict which found A. not guilty, than the other, for the Inqueſt which acquitted A. was charged upon the principal Act, viz. whether A. committed the Rape or not, and the Inqueſt charged upon B. was not ſo fully charged upon the principal Point, viz. upon the Rape done by A. but was charged if B. was guilty of the Felony whereof he was impeached, that is, if he was preſent abetting A. And ſo the doing of the Act by A. is not expreſsly, but incluſivè et obliquè given in Charge to the Inqueſt charged upon B. and then the Verdict, which finds that which is not given in Charge to them expreſsly, but by Incluſion and Implication, ſhall not be ſo much believed by the Court in this Point, as the other Verdict that is charged upon that Point only. And therefore Judgment ſhall not be given againſt A. [b] And he that procures another to ſue to the Court of Rome ſhall forfeit as much as he who ſues, and is a Principal as well as the other, and they are in equal Degree of Præmunire, but if both of them were indicted, viz. the one of the Act, and the other of the Procurement, and he, who was indicted of the Procurement, was found guilty, and the other by another Inqueſt was found not guilty, Judgment ſhould never be given againſt him that procured, becauſe he could not be an Offender but in reſpect of the Offence of the other, and he was a Principal in the ſecond Degree only, (as is ſaid before,) and inaſmuch as he, who was a Principal in the firſt Degree, was acquitted by Inqueſt charged upon that Point only, he who is in the ſecond Degree, and puniſhable in reſpect of the firſt Act, ſhall be alſo acquitted thereby. And therefore conſider our preſent Caſe, for the Priſoners now at the Bar are Offenders and Principals in reſpect that the others are Offenders, and more heinous Offenders and Principals. And as it ſeems theſe are Principals in Law, and the others who gave the Wounds whereof Oliver died are Principals in Deed, and then if afterwards the Principals in deed, being the chief Offenders, are acquitted by another Inqueſt, which finds that they did not ſtrike Oliver nor kill him, how can the Priſoners now at the Bar be abetting and preſent to that which was never done? And therefore if it ſhould ſo happen that we ſhould arraign the Priſoners at the Bar, who were abetting and preſent, and that they ſhould be found guilty, and afterwards the other Principals ſhould be acquitted, (and we ought to believe the Inqueſt which acquits the others to be true) conſider ye what is to be done. For if we ſhould give Judgment that the Priſoners at the Bar (if it ſhould ſo happen that they were arraigned, and found guilty) ſhould be hanged, and afterwards they ſhould be executed, and then the others, viz. the Principals in Deed, who are indicted of killing the Man, ſhould be acquitted, I would aſk you whether we ſhould not have done a great Injury to the Priſoners now at the Bar. And therefore it would be well to weigh and conſider this Matter thoroughly. And the ancient [c] Law of the Realm was, that they, who were preſent and abetting Thoſe who are preſent and abetting a Murderer are Principals, as well as the Murderer himſelf, and ſhall be arraigned, although he that did the Murder is not attainted. S. P. 1. H. H. P. C. 437.

ting others to do the Act were Acceſſaries, and not Principals, and it was grounded upon the Reaſon I have ſhewn before, as I apprehend. And therefore you will conſider the Matter. And all the other Juſtices abovementioned, after adviſing thereof for two Days, held clearly enough that they might proceed with the Priſoners now at the Bar, without any Inconvenience ariſing from it. For they ſaid, [a] that when many come to do an Act, and one only does it, and the others are preſent abetting him, or ready to aid him in the Fact, they are Principals to all Intents as much as he that does the Fact: for the Preſence of the others is a [b] Terror to him that is aſſaulted, ſo that he dare not defend himſelf, for if a Man ſees his Enemy and 20 of his Servants coming to aſſault him, and they all draw their Swords and ſurround him, and one only ſtrikes him, ſo that he dies thereof, now the others ſhall with good Reaſon be adjudged as great Offenders as he that ſtruck him, for if they had not been preſent, he might probably have defended himſelf, and ſo have eſcaped: but the Number of the others being preſent and ready to ſtrike him alſo, ſhall be adjudged a great Terror to him, ſo as to make him loſe his Courage, and deſpair of defending himſelf, and by this Means they are the Occaſion of his Death. So that their Preſence is the Cauſe of Terror, and Terror is the Reaſon that he receives the Wounds, and the Wounds are the Cauſe of his Death. And then inaſmuch as both together, viz. the Wounds and the Preſence of the others, who gave no Wounds at all, are adjudged the Cauſe of his Death, it follows that all of them, viz. thoſe that ſtrike, and the reſt that are preſent, are in equal Degree, and each partakes of the Deed of the other. And the Fact, as to him that is dead, and as to the Puniſhment of it, (although it conſiſts of two Parts) yet in Law it is without Diviſion: And notwithſtanding there is but one Wound given by one only, yet it ſhall be adjudged in Law the [c] Wound of every one, that is, it ſhall be looked upon as given by him who gave it, by himſelf, and given by the reſt by him as their Miniſter and Inſtrument. And it is as much the Deed of the others, as if they had all jointly holden with their Hands the Club or other Inſtrument with which the Wound was given, and as if they had all together ſtruck the Perſon that was killed. So that it cannot be well termed that they, who gave the Wound, are Principals in Deed, and the other Principals in Law, but they are all Principals in Deed, and in one ſame Degree. And if we ſhould arraign the Priſoners now at the Bar, and the Jurors ſhould give a ſpecial Verdict, viz. that Oliver was ſtruck and killed by another named in the Indictment, and not by thoſe that are expreſſed in the Indictment to have given the Wounds, and ſhould alſo find that all the others named in the Indictment were preſent, abetting and comforting him, whom they now found gave the Stroke, to do the ſame, ſhould not this Verdict be good? Yes certainly; and the Priſoners now at the Bar ſhould upon this Verdict be adjudged to be hanged, [d] for the Jury have agreed in that which the Law ſaith is the Effect of the Indictment, that is, they have found them all Principals, and as the Law ſaith, in one ſame Degree; and ſo the Variance in the Circumſtances of the Indictment is not material. And if it ſhould happen that they, who by the Indictment are found to give the Wounds ſhould die before they are arraigned, it is clear enough that Griffith and the others now at the Bar ſhould be arraigned, which is a Proof that they, who are now at the Bar, are accounted in Law as much Principals as the others, and in the ſame Degree, and not in a ſecond Degree, for if it was in the ſecond Degree, then would it be hard to arraign them, when he in the firſt Degree could not be arraigned, but is diſcharged by Death. For which Reaſons it ſeemed to them that the Priſoners now preſent might be arraigned. And afterwards Bromley and all the Court agreed to it. And therefore they were arraigned, and pleaded, not guilty.

And Note that one Morris Gittin was indicted by the ſame Indictment as Acceſſary to them all, viz. to the Principals who were abſent, and to the Principals now preſent at the Bar, and he was brought to the Bar to be arraigned, and Bromley ſaid to the other Juſtices. You ſee that he is indicted as Acceſſary to all, but ſome of the Principals are preſent, and ſome are abſent, who are not attainted, and it is not good to arraign him with the Principals now preſent, as Acceſſary to them only, and we cannot arraign him as acceſſary to the others that are abſent, becauſe they are not attainted nor preſent to be arraigned with him. Therefore if he muſt be arraigned at all, he muſt be arraigned as acceſſary only to thoſe that are now preſent at the Bar. And then it may happen that the Principals now preſent ſhall be acquitted, or it may be found that the ſaid Morris was not Acceſſary to them that are now preſent, but perhaps he was Acceſſary only to thoſe that are abſent, and then it is not good to arraign him until he may be arraigned as Acceſſary to them all, and ſo it was done in the Book of Aſſizes. And he ſent immediately to his Houſe in Salop for the ſaid Book, which was brought to him ſitting on the Bench. And he read the Caſe, which was in [e] 40. Aſſ. pl. 25. as follows, viz. a Woman ſued an Appeal in the King's Bench of the Death of her Huſband againſt ſixteen, viz. againſt R. W. and three others as Principals, and againſt the reſt, of Preſence, Force, and Aid. And one of them, viz. the firſt Principal was outlawed, and two others who were appealed as Principals came and pleaded, not guilty. And they who were appealed of Force and Aid, viz. the twelve, came by Exigent to anſwer, and were not arraigned at all, becauſe ſaith Knivet, although one Principal was attainted, it may be that they were not Abettors, nor of Aid to him, but to the others who are not attainted, for which Reaſon until they are attainted they ſhall not be arraigned, &c. and they were let to Mainprize. And all this appears in the ſaid Book of Aſſizes. And Bromley alſo ſaid, that it was in like manner held for Law in Hill. 7. H. 4. coram Rege, for he had noted it in the Margent of his Book of Aſſizes.

And Note in the ſaid Term of Hill. 7. H. 4. there are two Caſes touching this Matter, fo. 31. of the old Print, and fo. 107. of the new Print. [f] The firſt is, that in an Appeal brought by a Woman of the Death of her Huſband, three were appealed as Principals, and one of them was before that arraigned at the Suit of the King, and attainted, and after died before the Writ of Appeal purchaſed,

But it was ſaid if the Acceſſaries had been preſent, they ſhould be put to anſwer, and ſhould be arraigned with the Principal that appeared, and one Inqueſt ſhould paſs upon them both, for if the Inqueſt ſhould find the Principal, that was preſent, not guilty, yet the ſame Inqueſt ſhould enquire if the Acceſſaries be guilty as Acceſſaries to him that is outlawed; and afterwards the Parties agreed. And all this appears in the ſaid Book of* 7. Wherefore upon the ſaid Book of 40. Aſſ. being read, as aforeſaid, and upon the ſaid Book of 7. H. 4. cited, it was now ſaid that it is good to follow the ſame Books. And it was ſaid, that the Inconvenience which might poſſibly happen, if the Court ſhould now arraign Morris Gittin, would be in this Point, viz. if he ſhould be now arraigned as Acceſſary to the Principals now preſent, and it ſhould be found by the Inqueſt that he was not Acceſſary to them, and ſo ſhould be now acquitted, then although he was in rei veritate Acceſſary to the Principals now abſent, yet he cannot be arraigned hereafter as Acceſſary to them, if they ſhould be afterwards taken, arraigned, and attainted, becauſe his Life was put in Danger before for the Death of the ſaid Oliver; and although the being Acceſſary to one is not being Acceſſary to another, but is ſeveral Facts, yet it was ſaid that the Death of Oliver is but one, and not ſeveral Facts, and then the Life of Morris Gittin ſhall not be put in Danger for the Death of Oliver, or for the Dependances upon it, more than once. And therefore it was ſaid, that if the Court ſhould now arraign Morris, and would not prevent the Miſchief, it might happen by this Means that he would be abſolutely acquitted, where he deſerves Death, and therefore it would be the better Way to arraign him when he may be oppoſed, and ought to anſwer if he was Acceſſary to all the Principals, or to any of them. But the other Juſtices did not agree to this Cauſe of ſtaying the Arraignment, for they ſaid, that although he be now arraigned as Acceſſary to the Principals now preſent, and ſhould be thereof acquitted, [e] he might by Law be well arraigned afterwards as Acceſſary to the other Principals. And ſo the Bench diſagreed as to this Cauſe. But the Reaſon why the Acceſſary ſhall not be arraigned as acceſſary to one Principal, until the other Principals be attainted, ſeems by the ſaid Book of 7. H. 4. (as I apprehend by the Reaſons given in the ſaid laſt Caſe thereof) to be, becauſe there is greater Reaſon to take one [f] Inqueſt to try if he be Acceſſary to both, or to ſome of them, than two Inqueſts, where one might make an End of the whole, therefore according to this Reaſon, notwithſtanding the Acquittal by one Inqueſt of being Acceſſary to one, he may be arraigned as Acceſſary to another, ſo that becauſe it is the leaſt Trouble to the Country, and as ſuch the better Way to take one Inqueſt, than two, this ſeems to be the Reaſon that he ſhall not be arraigned until he ſhould be arraigned as Acceſſary to all together. From whence it ſeems, that the Cauſe of reſpiting the Arraignment until he may be arraigned as Acceſſary to all the Principals together, is more out of good [g] Diſcretion than out of Neceſſity. However it now ſeemed to the Court the beſt Way to purſue the ſame Courſe that the Sages before have uſed. And therefore by the Advice of the whole Court, the ſaid Morris Gittin was reſpited from Arraignment, until he might be arraigned as Acceſſary to all the Principals at once.

And Note (Reader) that the ſaid Caſe in [h] 40. But of late Time the Law has been held contrary in this Point, for now they are taken to be* [a] Principals by all the Sages of the Law. [b] For in Mich. 4. H. 7. 18. pl. 10. it appears that Huſſey put this Queſtion, whether he, that is preſent at the Death of a Man, and encourages another to ſtrike and kill the Perſon, is a Principal; and it was holden by all the Juſtices of both Benches, that he is a Principal, though he doth not ſtrike him, and notwithſtanding that the [c] Count in every Appeal is, that every Principal wounded him and ſtruck him mortally, for theſe are but Words of Form, and the Blow of him that ſtruck is the Blow of him that commanded him, inaſmuch as he was preſent; and all this appears there. And in the Years of [d] Henry 4. the Reader may ſee the Law often adjudged accordingly, viz. that thoſe who are preſent and abetting to do the Act are Principals, as well as he that does it. [e] And it ſeems the Law was ſo changed in the Time of the ſaid King Henry 4. where the former Courſe was reproved and corrected in this Point. So Note, that at this Day thoſe who are preſent and abetting or ready to do the Act, are Principals as well as he that does it, and may be arraigned notwithſtanding the other Principals are abſent and not attainted.

Alſo at the ſame Seſſions George Saliſbury, John Vane Saliſbury, Richard Saliſbury, one called Pigot, and another called Knowſley, were arraigned upon an Indictment of Murder, for killing one in the County of Denbigh, who was Servant to Doctor Ellis. And they all pleaded, not guilty, and one Inqueſt was charged upon them all, and they challenged divers peremptorily, and all agreed in the Challenge, and becauſe there were not Jurors enough left in the Inqueſt to paſs upon them, a Tales * was awarded returnable immediately, after which Return the Priſoners challenged peremptorily, and did not agree in the Challenge, for ſome challenged ſome of the Jurors peremptorily, and the others prayed that they might be ſworn, and it was debated by the Bench what ſhould be done, viz. if he that is challenged ſhall be drawn againſt all. And afterwards they held, that although the five were arraigned together, and although in Judgment of Law it was not a joint Arraignment, but ſeveral Arraignments, becauſe their Offences are ſeveral, yet inaſmuch as one Venire Facias was awarded for all, the Juror challenged by one ſhall be drawn againſt all. And one of the Bench ſhewed the others an Abridgment, which he had then ready, of an Appeal againſt Beauchamp in Trin. 9. Ed. 4. which was as follows, viz. [f] In an Appeal againſt many, who pleaded, not guilty, and one Venire Facias was awarded againſt all, and one of the Defendants challenged a Juror peremptorily, and by the Advice of all the Juſtices of the one Bench and of the other it was holden, that inaſmuch as the Venire Facias is joint, the Challenge of him is good for all, for he may not be drawn againſt one, and taken for the reſt. Wherefore now by Award of the Court, thoſe challenged by one were drawn againſt the others, and ſo divers were drawn. And the Court perceived that the Priſoners were minded to ſever in the Challenge of the whole Panel, ſubtily and craftily to ſtay the Trial for that Time, for by that Means each of the Priſoners would challenge peremptorily as many as they might without Danger, viz. [g] 20. and then at the Challenge of one of them only, 20. with them that were before challenged jointly by all ſhould be drawn againſt every one. For although at the Challenge of one only the Juror ſhall be drawn againſt all, yet it ſhall not be accounted the Challenge of any other, if he does not agree to it, for each of them ſhall have his entire Number of 20. So that one ſhall not be excluded of his Number by the Challenge of the other, but ſhall take Advantage, and not Damage by it. And there was but a ſmall Number of Perſons then in the Town of ſufficiency to be ſworn, ſo that by this ſubtile Invention (if a Remedy was not found out) the Trial would be now ſtaid. And therefore it was debated on the Bench, whether the Panel might be ſevered, that is, if the ſame Panel might be made between the Queen and each of the Priſoners by himſelf only, ſo that the ſame Men might ſerve for five ſeveral Inqueſts, and whether it might be done, conſidering that the Tales being a judicial Writ which iſſued out, was founded upon the Inqueſt, which was joint for all the five Priſoners. And it was ſhewn to the Court what was written in the ſaid Caſe of 9. Ed. 4. concerning the ſame Matter, for there it is contained as follows, viz. It was ſaid, that at the Goal Delivery if one Inqueſt be demanded to paſs upon two or three, and one challenges peremptorily, then the Clerk ſhall ſever the Felons each by himſelf. And afterwards the whole Court agreed, that the firſt Panel and the Tales alſo might be divided and made ſeveral for each of the Priſoners, and that they would do ſo upon the Requeſt of the Queen's Attorney. Wherefore the Court ſaid to the Priſoners, we perceive your Subtlety well enough, which merits but ſmall Favour from the Court, and therefore tell us if you will agree in your Challenges, for if you will not, the Clerk ſhall ſever the Panel. And afterwards all the Priſoners agreed in their Challenges, and the Inqueſt was full, and Evidence was given. And at the End of the Evidence, the Inqueſt demanded of the Court this Queſtion, viz. if ſo be in Truth, John Vane Saliſbury was in the Company of them, who of their Malice prepenſe killed him that is dead, and when he ſaw them combating together, took Part with them ſuddenly, and had not Malice prepenſe, and ſtruck, with the others, him that is dead, whether this be Murder or Manſlaughter in John Vane Saliſbury.

The Court anſwered, if John Vane Saliſbury, had not Malice prepenſe, but ſuddenly took part with them who had Malice prepenſe, this is Manſlaughter in him, and not Murder, becauſe he had not Malice prepenſe. Quod nota bene (Lector) for I have heard this greatly doubted, * Note, it has been held that a Tales is not grantable by Juſtices of Goal Delivery, State Tri. Vol 4. fo. 179 to 182. But in Kelw. 176. pl. 10. it was awarded in an Appeal before ſuch Juſtices. See 2. Hawk. P. C. 409. § 19.

viz. if the Maſter lies in Wait in the High Way to kill a Man, and his Servants attend upon him, and the Maſter does not make his Servants privy to his Intent, and afterwards he, for whom the Maſter lies in Wait, comes, and the Maſter attacks him, and his Servants, ſeeing their Maſter fighting, take his Part, and all of them kill the Man, whether or no this ſhould be Murder in the Servants, as it ſhall be in the Maſter, becauſe they, without Malice prepenſe, took Part with him that had Malice prepenſe. But this is by the above Rule of the Court put out of Doubt, viz. that it ſhall only be [a] Manſlaughter in the Servants. And Note that the Court ſaid thus to the Jury; you, Jurors, have heard the Evidence which has been given to prove the Priſoners guilty of the Murder whereof they are impeached, which Evidence proves that the Conſpiracy was to kill Doctor Ellis, and the Malice prepenſe was againſt him, and not particularly againſt his Servant who is killed, and therefore perhaps you will imagine that the Evidence does not maintain the Indictment, becauſe no Malice was againſt the Servant, whom the Priſoners perhaps did not know, nor ever heard of him before; and we think it proper to tell you what the Law is in this Point, to the Intent that you may not err in it. And, Sirs, we take the Law to be, that the killing of him is Murder in the Priſoners, if they killed him upon the Malice which they had againſt the Maſter, ſo that if you ſhall find that they had Malice againſt the Doctor, that Malice does in the Eye of the Law make the killing of him that was killed, who was the Doctor's Servant, and in his Company, to be Murder. And therefore you muſt take the Law ſo: quod nota bene Lector. And the Reaſon whereupon this Judgment was founded was this, viz. when a Man has Malice againſt another, and intends to kill him, and endeavours to put his Purpoſe in Execution, and kills one that reſiſts his Purpoſe, it cannot be otherwiſe conſtrued but that by Neceſſity of Reaſon he has Malice againſt all thoſe who would defeat his Deſign, and that he would offer Violence to them that would defend the Perſon againſt whom his Malice is directed, rather than deſiſt from his Purpoſe, and therefore if he kills them to whom he had before-hand intended to offer ſuch Violence, this cannot be any Thing elſe than Murder; and ſo the Act declares his Intent before, and the Malice againſt the Principal begets in himſelf another Malice againſt thoſe whom he preſumes will reſiſt his Purpoſe, which Malices are combined one to the other inſeparably. And afterwards the Jurors found Richard Saliſbury, Pigot, and Knowſley guilty, who were afterwards executed at Denbigh, where the Man was killed. And they found, that George Saliſbury was not guilty. And they found alſo, that John Vane Saliſbury killed the Man, but not of Malice prepenſe, and ſo they acquitted him of the Murder, and found him guilty of Manſlaughter. And whether John Vane Saliſbury ſhould be utterly acquitted by this Verdict, inaſmuch as he was arraigned for Murder, and is thereof acquitted, or whether the Court ſhould give Judgment upon him that he ſhould be hanged for the Manſlaughter, or whether this Verdict ſhould ſerve only againſt him for an Indictment of Manſlaughter, and be of no other Effect, or what elſe ſhould be done with him, was privately conſidered and debated by the Bench among themſelves. And the Opinion of the whole Court was in a manner clearly, that they might give Judgment upon him to be hanged for the Manſlaughter. For they held, that the Jury might give a Verdict at large, and find the whole Matter. * As if one is arraigned for the Death of a Man, and he pleads, not guilty, the Jury may find that he killed him in his own Defence. And then here when he was arraigned for killing a Man upon Malice prepenſe, the Subſtance of the Matter was, whether he killed him or not, and the Malice prepenſe is but Matter of Form or the Circumſtance of killing. And altho' the Malice prepenſe makes the Fact more odious, and for this Cauſe the Offender ſhall loſe divers Advantages, which he ſhould otherwiſe have, as Sanctuary, Clergy, and the like, yet it is nothing more than the Manner of the Fact, and not the Subſtance of the Fact, for the Subſtance of the Fact is the killing him, † and then when the Subſtance of the Fact, and the Manner of the Fact are put in Iſſue together, if the Jurors find the Subſtance and not the Manner, yet Judgment ſhall be given according to the Subſtance. As if a Man arraign an Aſſize for a Diſſeizin with Force, and the Defendant pleads the general Iſſue, and the Jurors find the Diſſeizin, but not with Force, yet the Plaintiff ſhall have his Judgment, for the tortious Expulſion was the Subſtance, and the Force the Manner, and then when the Subſtance is found, he ſhall have Judgment for it, and ſhall be acquitted of the Force. So the killing the Man was the Subſtance, and the Malice prepenſe the Manner, and then when the Subſtance is found, viz. the killing the Man, Judgment ſhall be given upon it. But altho' the Court held in a manner clearly, that they might give Judgment upon him for the Manſlaughter, yet they thought it good, and it was agreed, to reprieve the Priſoner, until the Opinions of the other Sages of the Law were known. And therefore they did reprieve him.

And where a Leaſe made within a Year next before the Statute of 31. H. 8. to one who had another Leaſe at the time of the making of it, was good and for what time. S. C. Dyer 102. pl. 1.

THE Plaintiff declares of his Cloſe broken at Elveden in the ſaid County, in the third Year of the Reign of King Edward the Sixth. The Defendant ſaith, that the Place where &c. was 100 Acres of Paſture in Elveden parcel of the Manor of Elveden, which Manor George Wyndham, Maſter of the College of Ruſhworth in the County of Norfolk, and his Fellows, the 20th Day of December in the 30th Year of King Henry the Eighth, by their Deed leaſed to the Defendant, to have from the Invention of the Croſs then laſt paſt for 50 Years then next to come, and by Virtue hereof he juſtifies, and gives Colour to the Plaintiff. The Plaintiff by the Replication ſaith, that a long Time before the ſaid Leaſe, &c. one John Purpet, then Maſter of the ſaid College, and his Fellows, were ſeized of the ſaid Manor, whereof the 100 Acres are, and at the ſame Time when, &c. and for Time immemorial were parcel, in their Demeſn as of Fee; who in the eleventh Year of the Reign of King Henry the Eighth leaſed to Edward Beſteny the ſame Manor whereof, &c. by the Name of their Manor of Elveden, and of all their Lands, &c. appertaining to the ſaid Manor, together with the Lands and Paſtures at Deadmans-grave, except the Tenements late Largients, to have from the Invention of the Croſs in the Year of our Lord 1524, until the End of 60 Years then next coming. And ſhews further, that the ſaid Beſteny in 20. H. 8. granted over his Eſtate to the Defendant, and afterwards the ſaid Purpet died, and the ſaid Wyndham was choſen Maſter, &c. and he and his Fellows made the Leaſe to the Defendant in the ſame Manner as in the Bar is alledged, the ſame Defendant then being poſſeſſed of the other Term. And alledges further that Part of the Act of Parliament made in 31. H. 8. which gives the Colleges and Houſes of Religion then ſtanding, and which ſhould afterwards come to the King's Hands, to him, in the ſame Eſtate and Condition as they then were; and alledges alſo that Part of the Act, which makes Leaſes then made of the Poſſeſſions of Colleges and other Houſes, which ſhould afterwards come to the King, to be void, if another Leaſe for Years at the making thereof was in Being, and then not determined, &c. And ſhews alſo that the ſaid Wyndham and his Fellows ſurrendered the College to King Henry the Eighth in the 33 Year of his Reign, by Deed enrolled in the Chancery, by Virtue of which Grant and Act the King was ſeized of the ſaid Manor whereof, &c. in his Demeſn as of Fee, in Right of his Crown. And the ſame King being ſo ſeized granted the ſaid Manor whereof, &c. to the Earl of Surry in Fee, who conveyed it to the Plaintiff in Fee, by Virtue whereof he entered and was ſeized, until the Defendant did the Treſpaſs, &c. And further he avers, that the firſt Leaſe was in Being at the Time when the ſecond Leaſe was made, and that the ſecond Leaſe was void by the Statute. The Defendant by the Rejoinder ſhews the Proviſo and Ordinance in the Statute, viz. where a Leaſe for Years is made to one, who then holds the ſame Tenements to Farm for a Term of Years then not expired, that then the ſame Perſon ſhall have them for 21 Years only from the Time of the making of the Leaſe, &c. ſo that the ancient Rent be thereupon reſerved, and ſo that the ſame Leaſe or Leaſes do not exceed 21 Years. And ſaith further, that by Virtue of the ſaid Proviſo and Act, the ſaid Leaſe by him pleaded in Bar was good, ſufficient, and available in him for 21 Years at leaſt from the Time of the making of it, which 21 Years were not then paſſed. And upon this Rejoinder the Plaintiff demurred in Law.

Exception 1.

And it was argued this Term by many Apprentices, and by all the Serjeants at the Bar. And divers Exceptions were taken to the Replication and to the Rejoinder. And it was argued that the Replication is not good, becauſe it is there ſaid, that a long Time before the making of the Leaſe mentioned in the Bar, one John Purpet, then Maſter of the ſaid College, and his Fellows were ſeized of the ſaid Manor whereof, &c. in their Demeſn as of Fee, and it is not ſaid, in Right of the College, and it might be that they were ſeized in Fee in their own proper Capacity. For the Maſter and Fellows of a College have two Capacities, viz. to them and their Heirs, and to them and their Succeſſors, for they are a Body not conſiſting of dead Perſons, as Friars, Monks, or Nuns, but conſiſting of ſuch Perſons as have each by himſelf Capacity to take to him and his Heirs; and then the Replication ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt him that pleads it, and that is, the Plaintiff, and ſo it ſhall be taken that the Maſter and his Fellows were ſeized to them and to their Heirs. But if it had been pleaded, that an Abbot or Prior were ſeized in Fee, this has but one Intendment, viz. in Right of the Houſe, for an Abbot or Prior have but one Capacity, and that is, to the Uſe, and in Right of the Houſe: And they have not Capacity to them and their Heirs, and therefore it ſhall be good without ſhewing how they were ſeized, and it ſhall be taken in jure domus. But Maſter and Fellows, and Dean and Chapter, and ſuch like, have two Capacities, as is ſaid before, and therefore it ought to be expreſſed in what Right they were ſeized, or elſe it ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt him that pleads it, and that ſhall be, to them and their Heirs, and if it ſhould be ſo taken, the Sequel of the Matter makes againſt the Plaintiff; for which Reaſon the Replication is not good.

And as to this Exception, all the Court held, that the Exception was not good. For the Juſtices ſaid, when it is pleaded that John Purpet, Maſter of the College, and his Fellows were ſeized in Fee, this has but one Intendment, and that is, in Right [a] of the College. [b] For a Corporation

poration cannot be intended to be ſeized to any other's Uſe. But if he had recited their ſeveral Names, and had called them Maſter and Fellows, then it might be intended that they were ſeized to them and to their Heirs; but when the proper Name of the Maſter is not recited, but he calls him Maſter, and ſaith alſo, his Fellows, this is the uſual Recital of a Corporation, and then when he ſaith, the Corporation was ſeized, none can intend that thoſe who compoſe the Corporation were ſeized in their own proper Capacities, for thence it would follow that the Corporation was not ſeized, where he has alledged in Fact that the Corporation was ſeized. But if it was pleaded, that J. S. Dean of ſuch a Place, or Parſon of ſuch a Church, or Prebendary of ſuch a Prebend was ſeized in Fee, this has two Intendments, viz. it might be in his own proper Capacity, (for when they purchaſe to their own proper Uſe they are often named by ſuch Names) or it might be that they were ſeized as Dean, Parſon, or Prebendary. But it cannot be ſo intended in the Caſe of a Corporation, for they ſhall be intended ſeized in that Capacity by which they are named. [a] And it was ſaid, if the Huſband and Wife are vouched, it is a good Counterplea to ſay, that the Wife or her Anceſtors never had any Thing, whereof they might make a Feoffment, &c. for it ſhall be intended that they are vouched in Right of the Wife. And it was alſo ſaid, that a Corporation cannot be ſeized to another's Uſe. And all the Juſtices agreed that the ſaid Exception was of no Weight, and they diſallowed it.

[a] 22. Aſs. pl. 30. Fitz. Counterplea de Vouch. 26. Bro. 42. M. 18. Edw. 3. 53. pl. 68.

Another Exception was taken to the Replication, viz. that the Plaintiff by the Replication has ſhewn the Leaſe made in 11. H. 8. of the Manor, &c. ut ſupra, except the Tenements late Largients, and has not averred that the 100 Acres of Paſture were not parcel of the Exception; and if they were parcel of the Exception, then they did not paſs by the ſame Leaſe made in 11. H. 8. and if they did not paſs by that Leaſe, then they did not paſs from Beſteny to the Defendant, and from thence it follows, that the Defendant was not poſſeſſed of the 100 Acres at the Time of the new Leaſe taken in 30. H. 8. and if he was not poſſeſſed of the 100 Acres at the Time of the new Leaſe, then the new Leaſe is good. For the Plaintiff intends to avoid the new Leaſe by the Statute, becauſe at the Time of the making of it the Defendant had a former Leaſe in the ſame Thing, and if he had not, then the Leaſe alledged in Bar is not anſwered nor avoided, and therefore it belongs to the Plaintiff to convey to the Defendant a former Leaſe in the ſame Thing, whereof he was poſſeſſed at the Time of taking the new Leaſe. And if it ſhall be taken parcel of the Exception, then it did not paſs by the firſt Leaſe; and it ſhall be intended parcel of the Exception, inaſmuch as the contrary is not ſhewn. [b] As in 8. Ed. 4. where there was a general Pardon granted to all, except thoſe who were adherent to M. and his Son, there it was agreed by the Juſtices, that he who would plead a general Pardon ought to ſurmiſe in his Plea, that he was not adherent to M. for there it is ſaid, that he ought to prove himſelf ſuch a Perſon as may enjoy the Benefit of the Pardon. So here, where there is a Leaſe with an Exception, and the Plaintiff would take Advantage of the Leaſe in conveying it to the Defendant, and thereby to avoid the new Leaſe, he ought to ſhew that he is fully able to do it, which he is not if he does not ſhew that the 100 Acres were not parcel of the Tenements late Largients. [c] For Pleas and eſpecially Replications ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt him that pleads them; and therefore the 100 Acres ſhall be taken parcel of the Exception, inaſmuch as the contrary is not averred.

[c] See Ante 46. (a) and the Books there cited.

To this Exception it was anſwered at the Bar by Gawdy Serjeant and others, that the Exception in the Leaſe may not be taken to extend to the ſaid 100 Acres, becauſe by the Bar it is alledged that the 100 Acres are, and at the Time of the Treſpaſs ſuppoſed were, parcel of the ſaid Manor, and this is confeſſed by the Replication, and further it is confeſſed that they have always been parcel of the ſaid Manor. And then the Exception does not go to reſtrain the Leaſe of any Part of it, for that comes under the per nomen, for it is ſaid that they leaſed the Manor whereof, &c. per nomen of their Manor of, &c. and of all their Lands, &c. except the Tenements late Largients. So that it is averred that the whole Manor whereof, &c. was leaſed by the per nomen, with the Exception, &c. wherefore the Exception is parcel of the per nomen, and not of the Thing averred to be demiſed. And it was ſaid, that the Court (if it be not expreſly ſhewn to the contrary) ought to take it ſo, becauſe it is a common Learning, [d] that every Grant, Demiſe, or Leaſe ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt him that makes it, and ſhall be conſtrued to paſs the moſt to the Grantee or Leſſee, and here if the Court ought to take the Exception to extend to the 100 Acres, then it would follow from thence that they would take the Leaſe recited moſt ſtrongly againſt the Leſſee, inaſmuch as leſs would paſs to him; and therefore it was ſaid, that the Court ought to adjudge of the Recital now in taking it moſt ſtrongly againſt the Leſſor, as they ought to do with Regard to the firſt Demiſe, and ſo the Court ought to take it that the 100 Acres paſſed, and that they were not parcel of the Exception. And therefore the Replication is good enough, notwithſtanding this Exception, and the 100 Acres are well enough conveyed to the Defendant from the firſt Leſſee. Alſo it was anſwered, that this Exception is not effectual for another Cauſe. For if the Exception extended to the 100 Acres, then the 100 Acres, during the Leaſe, were ſevered from the Manor, and not parcel of it, for the 100 Acres being in Poſſeſſion cannot be parcel of that which is a Reverſion. [e] As if one makes a Leaſe for Life of a Manor, except 20 Acres of it, theſe 20 Acres may not be parcel of the Reverſion. For if the Reverſion of the Manor is granted, the Acres in Poſſeſſion ſhall not paſs, for they are not parcel of the Manor, but are ſever'd for the Time. [f] But if a Leaſe is made of 20 Acres parcel of a Manor, yet the Reverſion of them is parcel of the Manor, [g] for a Reverſion may be parcel of a Thing in Poſſeſſion, or appendant to a Thing in Poſſeſſion, but Poſſeſſion may not be parcel of, or appendant to a Reverſion: And ſo is the Diverſity, which (it was ſaid) appears in the Quare Imped't

Impedit brought by the King againſt the Abbeſs of Sion in [a] 38. H. 6. And if the 100 Acres are by the Exception diſmembered for the Time from the Manor by the Leaſe made in 11. H. 8. then they might not paſs by the Leaſe made in 30. H. 8. for the firſt Leaſe had then Continuance, and therefore the 100 Acres were disjointed from the Manor, which might not paſs by the Leaſe of the Manor, and ſo the Replication deſtroys the Leaſe contained in the Bar; wherefore the Exception (if it extends to the 100 Acres) makes for the Plaintiff, and againſt the Defendant, and ſo the Objection againſt the Replication is of no Weight.

[a] T. 38. H. 6. 38. a. per Priſot. Bro. Compriſe 28, Grants 69.

And it was argued by divers of the Juſtices, that the Exception (altho' it comes under the per nomen) goes to the Thing before demiſed, and reſtrains the Demiſe in Part, for the per nomen is but demonſtrative, altho' they were the Words of the firſt Demiſe, and if the Exception in the per nomen will not ſuffer all the Things ſpecified in the per nomen before to paſs, but reſtrains Part thereof, then it cannot be averred that more paſſed than the per nomen with the Exception than the Exception will permit, and ſo ſince the Exception is before the habendum, it is now to be argued as if it was upon the Words of the firſt Demiſe only. And the Caſe being ſuch, then ſince it ſtands indifferent whether the 100 Acres are parcel of the Tenements late Largients or not, it ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt him that pleads it, and that ſhall be, that the Acres are parcel of the Exception. [b] As if a Man is bound to pay J. S. 20 l. before the Feaſt of our Lord's Nativity, it is no Plea to ſay, that he has paid it, but he ought to ſhew when, or elſe it ſhall be intended that he paid it after the Feaſt, and before the Suit. So in a Dum fuit infra ætatem, if the Tenant pleads a Releaſe of the Demandant, it is no Plea if he does not ſay, that the Releaſe was made by him being of full Age, for elſe his Plea ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt him that pleads it, and that is, that it was made by him within Age. So here it ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt him that pleads it, and that is, that the Acres, where the Treſpaſs is ſuppoſed to be done, are parcel of the Exception. And afterwards all the Juſtices agreed, that the 100 Acres ſhall be taken Part of the Exception. But as to the Conſequences ariſing thereupon they did not agree in the ſame Opinion. [c] For Portman Juſtice ſaid, notwithſtanding the 100 Acres be excepted out of the former Leaſe, yet they ſhall paſs well enough by the ſecond Leaſe, viz. the Leaſe pleaded in Bar; for the Acres excepted during the Term only are not diſmembered nor disjointed from the Manor, but remain parcel of the Manor afterwards; for if one has a Right of Action for the Manor, and ſues his Writ, he ſhall not make any Exception hereof in his Precipe, for it is always parcel of the Freehold. And ſo if the Lord of a Manor has the Wardſhip of a Tenant, who holds of a Manor, now the Chattle which he hath in the Land ſuſpends the Poſſeſſion of the Seigniory, yet the Seigniory remains parcel of the Manor, notwithſtanding the Poſſeſſion is ſuſpended, and ſhall paſs by a Feoffment of the Manor. And ſo the Exception, which is but for a Term, does not make it to be no Parcel of the Manor, but it may be Parcel of the Manor which is in Reverſion. As if a Leaſe is made for Life of an Acre parcel of a Manor, yet the Reverſion thereof remains parcel of the Manor, ſo e contra this Exception which is in Poſſeſſion may be parcel of the Manor in Reverſion. And then by the ſecond Leaſe viz. by the making of the Leaſe pleaded in Bar, that which was excepted in the firſt Leaſe paſſes as parcel of the Manor; from whence it conſequently follows, that the Statute does not avoid the Leaſe of the 100 Acres made in 30. H. 8. becauſe the Acres were not in the Hands of the Defendant at the Time of taking the new Leaſe. And ſo upon the Matter of the Exception in the Leaſe it appears that the Bar is not anſwered by the Replication, and therefore the Plaintiff ſhall be barred. But Bromley Chief Juſtice was of a contrary Opinion, for he ſaid, the Exception and the Conſequent ariſing from it makes for the Plaintiff. For the 100 Acres being excepted out of the firſt Leaſe made in 11. H. 8. may not paſs to the Defendant by the ſecond Leaſe. For the Exception makes them to be no Parcel of the Manor for the Time the firſt Leaſe endured. And therefore (he ſaid) the Diverſity in the ſaid Caſe cited in 38. H. 6. is good Law, for there it is put, [d] that if a Man makes a Leaſe for Life, or Years, of an Acre parcel of a Manor, yet the Reverſion continues parcel of the Manor, ſo that a Fine of the Manor ſhall make the Reverſion to paſs, for the whole Eſtate of the Acre was parcel of the Manor before, and altho' the Freehold is ſevered, yet the Fee-ſimple remains parcel of the Manor: [e] But if a Man leaſes his Manor for Life, or Years, except his Villains, now they are in groſs, and not regardant; [f] for nothing that is in Poſſeſſion may be parcel, appendant, or regardant of or to a Reverſion, for it is repugnant in itſelf. For if a Man makes a Leaſe of a Manor for Life, except the Services of J. S. who holds of the Manor, now the Services, nor any Part of the Eſtate therein, are not parcel of the Reverſion during the Leaſe. For if a Man had Cauſe to have a Writ of Right againſt J. S. for the Land which before that was holden of the Manor, he ſhall not maintain it in the Court of the Manor during the ſaid Leaſe, becauſe during that Time the Land is not holden of the Lord as of the Manor, but as of a Seigniory in groſs. So in the principal Caſe, by the Exception the 100 Acres are become in groſs, and not parcel of the Manor. And then when the laſt Leaſe of the Manor, which is pleaded in Bar, was made, the 100 Acres did not paſs by the Leaſe of the Manor, becauſe they were not parcel of the Manor. And ſo the Matter of the Replication anſwers the Bar, for the Effect of the Bar is, that the 100 Acres were parcel of the Manor leaſed, and by the Replication it is ſhewn that then they were not parcel of the Manor, and conſequently were not leaſed, and ſo the Matter of the Replication is a Traverſe to the Bar, but it is only [g] argumentive, and not fully anſwered without a Traverſe in deed. As if a Man pleads in Bar of an Acre a Feoffment made by J. S. of the Manor, whereof the Acre was parcel, it is no Plea for the other ſay, that before the ſaid Feoffment J. S. enfeoffed him of the Acre, except he takes an expreſs Traverſe that it was not parcel of the Manor at the Time of the Feoffment.

So

So it is in the Caſe here, the Subſtance of the Matter of the Replication makes for the Plaintiff, but it wants a Traverſe. Wherefore the two Judges did not agree in the Conſequence ariſing upon the Exception of the ſaid 100 Acres.

Another Exception was taken to the Replication, viz. that the Plaintiff has recited part of the Act of 31. H. 8. and has not recited the whole. For it was ſaid, it is an entire Act, and ought to be entirely recited, as other Matters of Record. But the whole Court agreed, that the Replication was good, notwithſtanding this Exception. [a] For it is the common Courſe in all Courts to recite only that Part of the Statute which makes for him who recites it, as the Statutes of Non-reſidence, of Maintenance, of giving of Liveries, and the like. Exception 3.

[a] See ante 65 (f) and the Books there cited. 4. Bac. Abr. 656. Vin. Abr. tit. ſtatutes E. 3. pl. 16.

Another Exception was taken to the Replication, viz. that the Manner of the Enrollment of the Surrender is not ſhewn. For it was ſaid, he ought to ſay that the Deed was acknowledged before ſuch a Man then being a Maſter of the Chancery, or Maſter of the Rolls, or Lord Chancellor, to which the other Party might have an Anſwer. [b] But Whiddon and Portman Juſtices held that the Exception was of no Weight, [c] for the King cannot take the Surrender without Matter of Record, and the Enrollment only makes it of Record, which ſhall be [d] intended by the Pleading to be duly made, without any Circumſtance being ſhewn, and if ſuch Circumſtance ſhould fail to make it an Enrollment, then the Party might traverſe the Enrollment, and it ſhould be tried by the Record. And it was ſaid, if a Man pleads a Fine levied by Huſband and Wife, he ſhall not ſhew how the Wife was examined, nor before what Juſtice it was acknowledged, nor ſuch other Circumſtances, but he ſhall ſay generally that a Fine was levied. And ſo here the Plaintiff ſhall ſay generally, that it was enrolled. Bromley did not touch this Point in his Argument. Exception 4.

[b] Dy. 103. pl. 7.

[c] See 1. Keb. 720. Keeling ſaid it had been adjudged that a ſurrender of a Copy-holder to the King Lord of a Manor, was good without matter of Record.

[d] L. P. Co. Litt. 303. b. 1. Leon. 184.

Another Exception was taken to the Replication, viz. that it is contained therein, that the King by Force of the ſaid Deed enrolled was ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee in Right of his Crown, whereas he was not ſeized in Right of his Crown, for in the Act of 31. H. 8. it is recited that divers Abbots, &c. had ſurrendered their Houſes to the King before that, &c. and it is ordained and enacted, that the King ſhall have them and all other religious and eccleſiaſtical Hereditaments, which ſhould fall after the ſaid Act, to him his Heirs and Succeſſors for ever, and does not ſay, as Parcel of his Crown; but the firſt Act, viz. that made in 27. H. 8. ordains that the King ſhall have all the Poſſeſſions given to him thereby, that is, thoſe under the annual Value of 300 Marks, as Parcel of his Crown; but this Act has no ſuch Words, and therefore it is but a Purchaſe, in which Caſe it ſhall not be Parcel of the Crown, &c. But the whole Court diſallowed the Exception, for the Statute ſaith, that the King ſhall have them to him his Heirs and Succeſſors, which Word (ſucceſſors) declares that they are annexed to the Crown, and ſhall go in Succeſſion, and that he ſhall have them as King. Exception 5.

Another Exception was taken to the Replication, viz. that in the End of it it is averred, that the ſecond Leaſe was void by the Statute, and the Averment ought to have been, that it was void in the Hands of the King by the Statute. For the ſecond Leaſe was not void againſt the Abbot, but it was good until the Tenements came to the King, and when the Inheritance was in his Hands the Leaſe was void, and ſo it ought to be averred, and that the King granted the Land as Land in Poſſeſſion to the Earl of Surry, &c. and not to aver it, as it is averred, for this Averment may be taken to intend that it was void at firſt, or that it was void after the Grant of the Manor made to the Plaintiff; Wherefore, &c. But the Juſtices in their Arguments did not give any Anſwer to this Exception. Exception 6.

As to the Rejoinder, all the Juſtices held that the Defendant by the Rejoinder had departed from his Bar. [e] For in the Bar he pleads a Leaſe for 50 Years, and in the Rejoinder he concludes upon a Leaſe for 21 Years. And although the 21 Years ſhall be accounted Parcel of the 50 Years, yet it ſhall be a Departure; for now the End of the Leaſe is ſhorter than the Leaſe pleaded in Bar, for the Leaſe in Bar was a full and entire Leaſe ending at ſuch a Day, and now it is ſhewn to end ſooner, and therefore it varies from the Leaſe intended in the Bar. And the Defendant might have ſhewn the Statute, and the whole Matter at firſt, wherefore he ſhall not be aided now by the ſaid Branch of the Statute. [f] And if a Man will ſhew that J. S. was ſeized in Fee, and granted to him a Rent Charge, and avows for it, the Plaintiff ſaith, that J. S. had nothing in the Land at the Time of the Grant, the Defendant by the Rejoinder ſhews that J. S. was then Ceſtuy que Uſe in Fee, and ſo the Grant good, this is a Departure, for by the Avowry J. S. ſhall be intended ſeized in Fee, and that the Grant was good by the common Law, and now by the Rejoinder the Defendant does not maintain it, but will enable himſelf by the Statute of Uſes, and ſo will aid himſelf by * Statute Law. So here the Leaſe pleaded in Bar ſhall be intended a full Leaſe by the common Law, and now by the Rejoinder he will rely upon a Leaſe for a ſhorter Time made good by Statute Law, and this Matter comes after the firſt Leaſe, and under it, and not before it, and therefore it is not purſuant to the Bar. [g] As if a man pleads in Bar a Feoffment of J. S. the Plaintiff ſhews that J. S. diſſeized him, and after enfeoffed the Defendant, upon whom he re-entered, &c. the Defendant by Rejoinder ſhews that the Plaintiff after the Diſſeizin confirmed the Eſtate of J. S. and afterwards J. S. infeoffed him, this is a good Plea, and no Departure, becauſe the Confirmation was made before the Feoffment, and ſo it fortifies the Bar: But if he had pleaded by the Rejoinder a Confirmation made by the Plaintiff to himſelf, ſuch Rejoinder had been a Departure, becauſe it came after the Feoffment pleaded in Bar. So here the Act of Parliament came after the Leaſe, which he might have pleaded in Bar. And therefore it is a Departure by the Opinion of the whole Court.

Exception 7. Another Exception was taken to the Rejoinder, viz. that it is not ſhewn therein, nor by the Bar, that any Rent was reſerved upon the ſecond Leaſe, and the Proviſo in the Act recited in the Rejoinder is conditional, viz. it makes the Leaſe good for 21 Years, ſo that the ancient Rent be reſerved thereupon, or elſe not, and it is not ſhewn that any Rent was reſerved upon the ſecond Leaſe, for which Reaſon the Rejoinder is bad, for the Defendant ought to have ſhewn that ſuch Rent was reſerved, and ought to have averred that it was the ancient Rent, and ſince he has not ſhewn it, he has not ſhewn himſelf to be within the Purview of the Proviſo. To which the whole Court agreed.

And as to the principal Matter, viz. admitting it had been alledged that the ancient Rent was reſerved, and that the Pleading had been good, it was well debated whether the ſecond Leaſe ſhould be good for all the Years limited in it, or whether it ſhould be utterly void by the Statute, or if it ſhould be good for 21 Years only. And all the Juſtices agreed unanimouſly, that the ſecond Leaſe ſhould be good for 21 Years only, to be accounted from the Time of the making ſuch ſecond Leaſe. But Portman and Bromley did not agree in the Reaſon thereof. For Portman ſaid, we ought to conſider two Branches of the Statute. The firſt is the Branch which makes void Leaſes made within a Year before the Statute of ſuch Poſſeſſions as after the Statute ſhould come to the Hands of King Henry the Eighth, becauſe the ſame Thing was in Leaſe before. The ſecond Branch is the Proviſo and Part of the Statute recited in the Rejoinder. And as it ſeems to me, if the ſaid ſecond Branch had not been made, both the Leaſes had been void, * for the taking of the ſecond Leaſe by the Defendant is a Surrender of the firſt Leaſe which he had at that Time by the Courſe of the common Law. And it ſeems to me alſo, that by the ſaid firſt Branch the ſecond Leaſe had been utterly void, if the ſaid laſt Branch of the Statute had not been made. For the Words of the ſaid firſt Branch concerning Leaſes then made are, if any eccleſiaſtical Governor of any eccleſiaſtical Houſe or Place, which after the Statute ſhall come to the King, within one Year before the firſt Day of the Parliament hath made any Leaſe, under his common Seal, for Years of any Hereditaments, whereof and in which any Eſtate or Intereſt for Life Year or Years, at the Time of the making of ſuch Grant or Leaſe, then had its Being or Continuance, and then was not determined, finiſhed, or expired, that then every ſuch Leaſe ſhall be utterly void, and of no Effect, which Words would avoid the ſecond Leaſe in our Caſe, for it was made by an eccleſiaſtical Governor, viz. the Maſter and Fellows of a College, and under their common Seal, and within a Year before the firſt Day of the Parliament, and of Hereditaments which afterwards came to the Hands of King Henry the Eighth, and in which an Eſtate for Years, at the Time of the making ſuch new Leaſe, then had its Being or Continuance, and then was not determined, finiſhed, or expired. For (as I apprehend) this Clauſe (then had its Being or Continuance, and then was not determined, finiſhed, or expired,) is one ſame Sentence ſpoken and put two different Ways, and each Part of the Sentence taken by itſelf alone contains in itſelf as much as both the Parts. For that Leaſe, which hath its Being, is not finiſhed, and if it is not finiſhed, it hath its Being, and if it has its Continuance, ergo it is not expired, and if it is expired, ergo it has not Continuance. And ſo, as I ſaid, it is one Subſtance of Matter expreſſed by Words two Ways, each Way containing in itſelf the contrary, which Contrariety is proved mutually by the other Words, and ſo each of the Phraſes of Speech contains one ſame Sentence and Subſtance, and not divers. And then, I ſay, that at the Time of making the new Leaſe, the ancient Leaſe had its Being and Continuance, and then was not determined, finiſhed, or expired. For theſe Words, (at the Time of the making of ſuch Leaſe) have the ſame Meaning with the Words (when the Leaſe was made) and then I ſay, that when the new Leaſe was made, the firſt Leaſe had its Being, and was not determined, for it was determined by the making of the new Leaſe, in which Caſe it may be ſaid, that at the Time of the making the new Leaſe, the ancient Leaſe had its Being, or was in Force. For if the Tenant enfeoffs the Lord in Fee, hereby the Seigniory is extinct, yet it may well be ſaid that at the Time of the Feoffment the Seigniory was in eſſe, and it is the uſual Phraſe in that Caſe. And therefore (as it ſeems to me) the Thing, which is determined by any Act, may be ſaid to be in eſſe at the Time of that Act done. So here this firſt Clauſe of the Statute, which makes void Leaſes of Things in which any Eſtate or Intereſt for Years at the Time of the making of them had its Being or Continuance, and then was not determined, or finiſhed, would have determined the new Leaſe, if the ſecond Clauſe had not been added to it; and for Remedy thereof was the ſecond Branch made, which does not come properly under a Proviſo, but is a new Act, which ordains, that if any Governor aforeſaid, within one Year next before the firſt Day of the Parliament, hath made any Demiſe, Leaſe, or Grant to any Perſon for Years of any Tenements, which Perſon, at the Time of the ſaid Demiſe, Leaſe, or Grant, had and held the ſame Tenements to Farm for Years then not expired, that then the ſame Perſon, to whom any ſuch Demiſe, Leaſe, or Grant has been made, ſhall have and hold the ſame Tenements for the Term of 21 Years only from the Time of the making of the ſaid Demiſe, Leaſe, or Grant, if ſo many Years be ſpecified, limited, and expreſſed in the ſame Demiſe, Leaſe, or Grant, or for ſo many Years as are expreſſed in ſuch Demiſe, Leaſe, or Grant, ſo that the ancient Rent be thereupon reſerved, and ſo that the ſame Leaſe or Leaſes do not exceed 21 Years. Which Branch is very obſcure by Reaſon of theſe Words therein, viz. ſo that the ſame Leaſe or Leaſes do not exceed 21 Years. And how theſe Words ſhall be taken in our Caſe, inaſmuch as the new Leaſe was made for 50 Years, we are to conſider. And herein it is to be ſeen whether the ſaid Words are conditional or not, as the Words of the Reſervation of the ancient Rent are, and whether they ſhall be referred only to the laſt Part of the Disjunctive, that is, to theſe Words (or for ſo many Years, &c.) or if they ſhall be referred to both the Parts of the Disjunctive. And (as it ſeems to me) this Branch of the Statute will make the Leaſes good for 21 Years, which

which the firſt Branch would have utterly avoided. And therefore it is to be obſerved, that our Caſe is within all the Words of the ſaid Branch, (except only the ſaid Words concerning the ancient Rent, and the Extent of the Leaſe above the Number of 21 Years) for it was made by ſuch a Governor as is mentioned in the ſaid Branch, and within one Year next before the firſt Day of the Parliament, and to ſuch Perſon as at the Time of the Demiſe held the ſame Tenements to Farm for Years then not expired. And what Impediment then is there to the contrary, but that the Leaſe ſhall be good for 21 Years from the Time of the making? None certainly, unleſs the Clauſe concerning the Reſervation of the ancient Rent, and the Number of Years exceeding 21, be an Obſtacle thereto. And as to the ancient Rent not being reſerved, I have ſhewn before that the Pleading is not good upon that Account, and ſo my Opinion appears before in this Point. And as to theſe Words, viz. ſo that the ſame Leaſe or Leaſes do not exceed 21 Years, [a] they are referred only to thoſe Words which are the laſt Part of the Disjunctive, viz. or for ſo many Years as are expreſſed in ſuch Demiſe, Leaſe, or Grant, for they cannot be intended to refer to the firſt Branch, viz. that it ſhall be good for 21 Years. For the Intent of the Makers may not by any Means be taken to make Leaſes for 21 Years to be good for 21 Years, and no other Leaſes exceeding 21 Years, for there were not many ſuch Leaſes made, for when Men ſaw that all Abbies were likely to be ſuppreſſed, they took new Leaſes for a very long Time, and the Abbots and other Governors were content to enlarge the Leaſes of their Farmors, who were their Friends, and of their Acquaintance, for a very long Time. And to make ſuch Leaſes good for a reaſonable Time, viz. for 21 Years only, was the Intent of the two Branches of the Statute, and not only to make good the Leaſes made for 21 Years, for if the Statute ſhould be ſo taken, it would affect but a ſmall Number of Leaſes, but the Intent of the Makers was, as I have ſaid above. And then the ſaid Clauſe, viz. and ſo that the ſame Leaſe or Leaſes do not exceed 21 Years, has Relation only to the laſt Part of the Disjunctive, viz. or for ſo many Years as in ſuch Demiſe, Leaſe, or Grant are expreſſed. And the ſaid Clauſes added together ſtand thus, viz. or for ſo many Years as in ſuch Demiſe, Leaſe, or Grant are expreſſed, ſo that the ſame Leaſe or Leaſes do not exceed 21 Years, and this is the proper Relation of the ſaid Clauſe. As if I would ſay, you ſhall have my Land for 21 Years, or for ſo many Years as J. S. ſhall appoint, ſo that it does not exceed 21 Years, there the (ſo that) has Relation to the laſt Part of the Disjunctive only, viz. to the Number appointed by J. S. and not to the Number appointed by me. So in our principal Caſe, the (ſo that) ſhall have Relation to the ſaid laſt Part of the ſaid Disjunctive. And if the (ſo that) be thus referred, then it is not a Condition, for it cannot reſtrain unto 21 Years the Term that is ſhorter than 21 Years, and therefore it is not a Condition, but is a full Demonſtration of the ſaid laſt Part of the Disjunctive, which in Effect is but ſuperfluous and ſuperabundant. And in this Manner the Branch ſhall be conſtrued, as it ſeems to me. And ſo (as I have ſaid before) this laſt Branch makes good that, which the firſt Branch would otherwiſe have taken away, and revives that, which the other Branch (if it had been made at another Time) would have extinguiſhed. And therefore the Leaſe ſhall be good only for 21 Years, unleſs it be hindered by reaſon of the ancient Rent not being reſerved.

[a] Wing. Max. reg. 10. pl. 3.

Bromley argued the ſame Day that the others argued. And alſo at another Day afterwards the Judges ſpoke to the Matter. And the Effect of Bromley's Argument both Times, as to the Point of the Statute, was as follows. It ſeems to me, that the firſt Leaſe is ſurrendered by the taking of the ſecond Leaſe, as hath been ſaid, [b] for both the Eſtates could not be in one ſame Perſon at one ſame time, [c] and therefore when the Defendant being poſſeſſed of the firſt Term took a new Leaſe of the ſame Tenements to commence preſently, this by the Courſe of the common Law is a Surrender of the firſt Leaſe. And as to that which has been objected at the Bar to the contrary, viz. that it ſhall not be a Surrender, becauſe the Statute makes the ſecond Leaſe void, for the Cauſe why it ſhould be a Surrender is the taking of the ſecond Eſtate, and if the Statute makes the taking of the ſecond Eſtate to be meerly void, then the Operation of the common Law, as to the Surrender, is thereby taken away; Sir, as to this I ſay, that it is Part of the Matter in Diſpute, whether the ſecond Leaſe be void by the Statute, or not. But notwithſtanding I grant it to be ſo, yet the Statute which ſaith it ſhall be void may not be conſtrued to make it void ab initio, and as if it had never been made, but it ſhall be expounded to make it void as to the King, and after the ſame Lands are come to the Hands of the King, and not otherwiſe, for at the Time of the making the ſecond Leaſe the Maſter and Fellows were lawfully ſeized in Fee, and had then good Power to make a new Leaſe; and ſo the Words of the Statute ſhall not be intended to make it void ab initio, and therefore it does not avoid the Operation of the common Law in the Surrender. [d] For if a Man makes a Leaſe for 40 Years, the Leſſee afterwards takes a new Leaſe for 20 Years, upon Condition that if he does not ſuch an Act, the Leaſe ſhall be void, and after he breaks the Condition, ſo that thereby the ſecond Leaſe is void, yet it is not ſo void, nor with ſuch Relation as to take away the Surrender of the 40 Years, for the Surrender, by the taking the new Leaſe for 20 Years, was executed abſolutely at that Time, and it is not defeated although the Condition makes the ſecond Leaſe void ab initio for divers Purpoſes. And if a Recovery is had of Land, which is afterwards reverſed by Error, which avoids the Recovery, yet it does not ſo avoid it that the Recoveror ſhall be puniſhed by Treſpaſs for taking the Iſſues in the mean time. So if the Feoffor enters upon the Feoffee for Condition broken, yet he has not ſo avoided the Feoffment as to puniſh the Feoffee for the mean Profits received. Therefore where Things are made void by the common Law, or by ſtatute Law, it is to be conſidered how, and that ſhall be ruled by common Reaſon. And ſo the Statute here (admitting it makes void the ſecond Leaſe, as in rei veritate it makes ſome Leaſes void) ſhall not ſo make void the ſecond Leaſe, as if it had never been made. And the firſt Leaſe (as I have ſaid before) is ſurrendered by the taking of the ſecond Leaſe. And this Surrender (although the Statute ſhould make the ſecond void) is not defeated. And as to the ſecond Leaſe, it ſeems to me that the ſaid firſt Branch of the Statute will not defeat it, but it would have been good for the whole 50 Years if the ſaid ſecond Branch had not been made, and the Senſe of the Words of the ſaid firſt Branch, being rightly diſcuſſed and known, will make this manifeſt. For the Words of the ſaid Branch are as have been recited. And the Doubt lies in theſe Words, viz. in which an Eſtate for Years, at the Time of the making ſuch new Leaſe, then had its Being or Continuance, and then was not determined, finiſhed, or expired. And, (as it ſeems to me) this Clauſe is not one Sentence put and expreſſed two different Ways, ſo that each Part of the Sentence, taken by itſelf alone, contains in itſelf as much as both the Parts together, as it was laſt ſaid, but it is two ſeveral Sentences, between which the Copulative (and) is interpoſed, which makes it that no Leaſe ſhall be avoided thereby, except both the Parts of the Copulative are firſt performed. And that there are here two Sentences, and two Things to be performed, whereof one may be performed, and the other not, is eaſily proved. For the Words are, which then had its Being, and then was not determined. And, Sir, ſome Things at one ſame Time may be in eſſe, and not determined, and ſome Things at one ſame Time may be in eſſe, and be determined. As if a Man hath Land charged with a Rent Charge to J. D. and he makes a Feoffment thereof to J. S. there the Rent at the Time of the Feoffment was in eſſe, and not determined, for the Rent was in eſſe before the Feoffment, and at the Time of the Feoffment, and after the Feoffment, and therefore it may be well ſaid, that at the Time of the Feoffment the Rent had its Being, and then was not determined. But if he had made a Feoffment of the ſame Land to J. D. who had the Rent out of it, there at the Time of the Feoffment the Rent had its Being, and then was determined, for it was determined by the Feoffment. And ſo you ſee there that theſe Words (which had its Being) and the Words (and was not then determined) are not of one ſame Effect, but are ſeveral Clauſes joined together by the Copulative, and which have ſeveral Senſes and ſeveral Effects, the one contrary to the other. And ſo in our Caſe, the Statute having theſe Clauſes joined together by the Copulative (and) makes void no Leaſe but ſuch wherein both the Parts of the Copulative are firſt performed; which are not in the ſecond Leaſe in our Caſe, but one Part only is performed, which is, that at the Time of the making of it an Eſtate for Years had its Being and Continuance; and if the Clauſe had ſtopped there, I would confeſs the ſecond Leaſe had been void. But the ſecond Part of the Clauſe is not performed, which is, (and then was not determined, finiſhed, or expired;) for here the firſt Leaſe, at the Time of the making of the ſecond, was determined and finiſhed. And ſo no Leaſe is made void of any Hereditament but only of ſuch wherein an Eſtate for Years, at the Time of the making the Leaſe, had its Being, and was determined; and in our Caſe an Eſtate for Years, at the Time of the making the Leaſe, had its Being, and was determined; wherefore it is out of the annulling Words of the Statute. For theſe Words (at the Time of the making) mean (the ſame Inſtant of the making) for they do not contain the Time before, nor the Time after, but the very Inſtant of the making, which the Statute intends to be the End of one Time, and the Beginning of another, for it ſaith, at the Time of the making had its Being, and was not determined, which Words imply that at that Time ſome Things may have their Being, and alſo be determined (to which the Statute does not extend), and ſome Things may have their Being, and be not determined, which laſt are intended by the Statute. And ſo there is an Inſtant intended by the Statute, which contains a Being and a Determination, to which the Statute does not extend, but it extends only to Things then in Being and not determined. And our Caſe is, that it was in being and determined at one ſame Inſtant, and ſo the ſecond Leaſe is out of the Danger of this Branch. And therefore it ſhould be good for the whole 50 Years, notwithſtanding the ſame Branch. And, Sir, it has been objected at the Bar by my Brother Gawdy to the contrary, viz. that theſe Words (at the Time of the making) ſhall be intended the Time before the Act done, and that the firſt Leaſe was not determined until the ſecond Leaſe was made, and this Word (making) is the Time before; and hereupon he put an Example, as if a Man is bound in 20 l. to give him Meat and Drink to one for the Time he is in making his Houſe, or his Account, there he is bound to give him Meat and Drink while he is in making the Houſe, or the Account, and when the Houſe or the Account is made, then he is diſcharged from giving him Meat and Drink: and therefore (making) ſhall be there intended the Time before the Act done. So here (as he ſaid) the Statute makes void Leaſes of Things, in which an Eſtate for Years, at the Time of the making of them, had its Being, which Word (making) as he apprehended, ought to be taken for the Time in which the neceſſary Circumſtances preceding the Delivery, as writing or ſealing, were in doing. Sir, as to this I anſwer, that the Caſe of making a Houſe, or Account is good Law, for the common Phraſe of Speech, and the Matter itſelf ſhews that the Word (making) extends there only to the Time which is before the Act finiſhed. But here in our principal Caſe, this Word (making) contains in itſelf the Time of the Conſummation of the Act. As in an Action of Debt upon an Obligation the Defendant pleads that tempore confectionis ſcripti (which is at the Time of the making the Deed,) he was within Age, if Iſſue be joined upon it, the Plaintiff may give in Evidence, that at the Time of the Delivery of the Deed the Defendant was of full Age, and that is ſufficient, although the Defendant gives in Evidence that at the Time of the writing and ſealing of the Deed he was within Age, for there theſe Words (at the Time of the making the Deed) * mean the Time in which all the Circumſtances that contribute to the making of it were accompliſhed and conſummated. And ſo in our Caſe, the Words (at the Time of the making the Leaſe) mean the

* 5. Co. 1. a. Per Cur. Ld. Raym. 480. Per Holt, C. J. the time of the making commences by the delivery.

the Time when the Leaſe takes effect, and is conſummated. Wherefore it ſeems to me, that notwithſtanding this Objection or any other Matter in the ſaid firſt Branch of the Statute, the new Leaſe ſhould be good for the whole 50 Years. And in order to abbreviate ſuch long Leaſes as were not touched by the ſaid firſt Branch, the ſecond Branch was made, which is properly a Proviſo, and not a new Act; the Words of which are as have been recited, and the Doubt lies in theſe Words, viz. and ſo that the ſame Leaſe or Leaſes do not exceed 21 Years. And it ſeems to me, that theſe Words are not conditional, nor are to be referred to the Number of Years contained in the Writing of the new Leaſe, but they are to be referred to the Number of Years appointed and limited in the ſame Branch, viz. to the Number of 21 Years, to which Number the long Terms are abridged. And that they ſhall be ſo referred, is proved by the Words of the ſame Branch. For the Words thereof are, that then the ſaid Perſon, to whom ſuch Demiſe, Leaſe, or Grant hath been ſo made, ſhall have and hold the ſame Lands for the Term of 21 Years only from the Time of the making of ſuch Demiſe, Leaſe, or Grant, &c. which Word (only) proves that the Words (ſo that the ſame Leaſe or Leaſes do not exceed 21 Years) ſhall not be referred to the Number of Years contained in the Writing of the new Leaſe. For if they ſhould be ſo referred, then the Word (only) has no Senſe or Meaning at all; nor has it any apt Signification to ſerve ſuch Conſtruction, for if it had been put by Words at large, viz. that the ſame new Leaſe ſhall be good for 21 Years only, if 21 Years or a leſſer Number are contained in ſuch new Leaſe, what Sort of Phraſe would this have been? And to what Purpoſe had the Word (only there ſerved? Certainly to no Manner of Purpoſe, but it would have been abſurdly put there; for the Word (only) is a Word of Abbreviation, and the Words (that he ſhall hold for 21 Years only) is as much as to ſay, he ſhall hold for 21 Years and no more, which is not a proper Expreſſion if there were only 21 Years in all limited in the Leaſe, for then it cannot abridge that which is not, for an Abridgment is to reduce a Thing leſs from greater, and a Term may not be abridged unto 21 Years, if it does not exceed the Number of 21 Years. And ſo (as I ſaid) the word (only) will not permit the Words (ſo that the ſame Leaſe or Leaſes do not exceed 21 Years) to be referred to the Number of Years limited in the new Demiſe, but they refer to an Abbreviation of a greater Term than 21 Years to 21 Years. Wherefore the ſaid Words are not conditional, but are in Nature of a double Repetition, and it is all one as if the Words (ſhall be good for) had been put inſtead of the Words (ſhall not exceed) and then the Sentence had been thus, viz. ſo that the ſame Leaſe or Leaſes ſhall be good for 21 Years; and thus it is as a double Repetition of one ſame Thing. And therefore, (as I ſaid) the Word (ſo that) is not a Condition, as it ſhall not be in many other Caſes put by my Brother Dyer at the Bar, viz. in Writs which go to Sheriffs to ſeize Goods for the King, the Words are, Ita quod nullus ad ea manum apponat: and in the Statute de donis conditionalibus, ita quod non habeat poteſtatem alienandi, which don't make a Condition, but are a full Declaration of the Thing before ſpoken. And ſo ſhall they be here, and thus according to my Expoſition every Word has its apt Signification and Relation, and the Leaſe ſhall be good for 21 Years. And, Sir, if this Word (only) had not been in the Branch, yet the Clauſe (ſo that it does not exceed 21 Years) might not reaſonably be referred to the Number of Years contained in the new Leaſe, nor be conſtrued a Condition, or to make totally void all Leaſes limited for more than 21 Years, for it cannot be reaſonably taken that ſuch was the Intent of the Makers of the Statute, for it would be againſt all Reaſon and Equity utterly to avoid Leaſes newly made, and to leave their former Leaſes void alſo, for although it might be preſumed that the new Leaſes were made by the Governors of Houſes for this Reaſon only that they ſaw they muſt quit their Poſſeſſions, yet it could not be intended but that their former Leaſes were made without that Deſign, and foraſmuch as the new Leaſes were good and lawful by Law when they were made, it would not be equitable to make them totally void, and leave no Eſtate at all in them; and therefore it is moſt reaſonable to [a] expound the Words, which ſeem contrary to Reaſon, according to good Reaſon and Equity. [b] And ſo the Judges, who were our Predeceſſors, have ſometimes expounded the Words quite contrary to the Text, and ſometimes have taken Things by Equity contrary to the Text, in order to make them agree with Reaſon and Equity. Thus the Statute of 25. Ed. 3. cap. 16. ſaith, that by Exception of Nontenure of Part no Writ ſhall abate, but for the Quantity of the Nontenure which is alledged; [c] yet in a Præcipe quod reddat of a Manor, if the Tenant pleads Nontenure of Parcel, the whole Writ ſhall abate; and ſo it has been adjudged ſince the Statute, becauſe the Manor is a Thing entire, in which Caſe the Demandant ought to have an Exception in the Writ; and therefore the Judges have taken it to be againſt Reaſon that by his Demand of the whole Manor he ſhould recover againſt him that is but Tenant of Parcel of the Manor, for which Cauſe they have expounded the Statute to extend only to Writs where the Things demanded are ſeveral, as Acres are, and not where the Things are entire; which Expoſition is quite contrary to the Text, for the Text is, that no Writ ſhall abate, and they have expounded it that ſome Writs ſhall abate, and ſo their Expoſition excludes the Generality of the Statute, and makes it particular; and therefore they have conſtrued it contrary to the Text, in order to make it agree with Reaſon. And in the ſame Manner they have expounded the Statute de Prerogativa Regis, cap. 3. which ſaith, that the King ſhall have primer Seizin after the Death of ſuch as hold of him in chief, of all Lands whereof they were ſeized in their Demeſn as of Fee, &c. which Statute is general, yet it has been expounded, [d] that if a Man holds of the King by Socage in chief only, the King ſhall not have primer Seizin of all his other Lands. And ſo the Judges have expounded the Text which is general to be but particular, which Expoſition is contrary to the Text, becauſe the Text is contrary to Reaſon, that for ſo ſmall a

Tenure[a] 4.

Tenure a Man ſhould pay ſo great a Charge, and therefore they took it that the Intent of the Makers of the Statute could not be according to the letter. And the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 22. of Ceſſavit ſaith, Writs of Entry ſhall be made for the Heir of the Demandant againſt the Heir of the Tenant, and againſt them to whom ſuch Land ſhall be aliened, [a] yet if the Demandant in a Ceſſavit dies, the Heir ſhall not have a Ceſſavit, becauſe he ſhall not have the Arrearages; and ſo the Statute has been expounded and taken, which Expoſition is quite contrary to the Text to all Intents and Purpoſes, becauſe the Text is contrary to all Reaſon, to give an Action to the Heir for one Thing, in Conſideration of another Thing which is not due to him. And the Statute of Glouceſter cap. 3. ordains, that upon the Alienation of Tenant by the Curteſy if Warranty be pleaded againſt the Heir, he ſhall be barred if he hath Aſſets by Deſcent; but if Aſſets be not then deſcended to him, but in Time afterwards be deſcended by the ſame Father, then ſhall the Tenant recover againſt him of the Seizin of his Mother by a judicial Writ that ſhall iſſue out of the Rolls of the Juſtices before whom the Plea was pleaded, &c. [b] And by the Equity of the ſame Statute it is taken, that if the Warranty of Tenant in Tail with Aſſets be pleaded in Bar, where he has no Aſſets at all, but afterwards Aſſets deſcend to the Iſſue, there the Tenant ſhall have a ſcire facias to have the Aſſets, and not the Land entailed, for if he ſhould have the Land entailed, then it was conſidered that if he had aliened the Aſſets, the Iſſues inheritable to the Tail ſhould afterwards have a Formedon, and ſhould recover the Land entailed, and therefore in order to make a perpetual Bar to the Iſſue touching that which the Feoffee with Warranty ſhould have, it was taken more reaſonable to give the Aſſets, than the Land entailed to the Tenant, and for this Reaſon he ſhall have a ſcire facias for the Aſſets, and not for the Land entailed. And ſo there the Thing taken by Equity of the Statute is in a different Order and Degree from the principal Thing given by the Statute, for the Statute ordains that the Tenant ſhall have the Land aliened, and that the Iſſue ſhall retain the Aſſets, and by the Equity of the Statute it is taken that the Tenant ſhall have the Aſſets, and that the Iſſue ſhall retain the Land aliened, and ſo Reaſon ſhall guide the Expoſition of the Words of Statutes, and the Equity of them. And if the Words of Statutes ſhall be conſtrued contrary to the Text, and Things ſhall be taken by the Equity of Statutes in other Manner than the principal Proviſion of the Statute is, and all this in order to make them agreeable with Reaſon, then I ſay, that in our principal Caſe the ſaid Words (ſo that ſuch Leaſe or Leaſes ſhall not exceed 21 Years) admitting that there had not been another Expoſition of them in the ſame Branch, may not be conditional, nor defeat the whole Eſtate, but ſhall be taken by Reaſon to abridge the Eſtate unto 21 Years. But, (as I ſaid) the ſaid Word (only) declares and explains the other Words. And therefore it ſeems to me, that the new Leaſe in our Caſe ſhall be good for 21 Years. And ſo Note, all the Juſtices agreed that the Leaſe ſhould be good for 21 Years in the principal Caſe, notwithſtanding it was made for 50 Years.

And Note that Dyer Serjeant in his Argument ſaid, if one having a Leaſe for 10 Years takes a new Leaſe, within a Year of the making of the Statute, for 40 Years, to commence after the other Leaſe ended, that the Leſſee ſhall hold the Land until 21 Years only, to be accounted from the Time of the making the laſt Leaſe; for he ſaid, that ſuch was the Intent of the laſt Branch of the Statute, which ſaith, ſo that the ſame Leaſe or Leaſes do not exceed 21 Years, which Word (Leaſes) being in the plural Number warrants his ſaying, as he held. But there the firſt Branch would avoid the ſecond Leaſe, and then the ſaid ſecond Branch of the Statute would revive that in Part, which the firſt Branch (if it had been made at another Time) would extinguiſh. But Quære in the ſaid Caſe put by Dyer, if the firſt Leaſe had been for 40 Years, and the laſt alſo for 40 Years, whether the ſaid laſt Branch of the Statute would abridge the firſt 40 Years unto 21 Years only. And Note at the ſaid other Day after the Argument of the Juſtices, when they ſpoke of the Matter of the Inſtant, Portman ſaid, we have Need of a Philoſopher to explain it. And one who then ſtood at the Bar ſaid, that an Inſtant was thus defined in Logic, viz. * Inſtans eſt unum indiviſibile in tempore, quod non eſt tempus, nec pars temporis, ad quod tamen partes temporis copulantur.

* Co. Litt. 185. b. Vin. Abr. tit. Inſtant. A. pl. 1.

A brief Report of a Caſe argued in the Court of Wards and Liveries before Sir Francis Englefield Knight, Maſter of the ſame Court, and the Council thereof, and Portman and Saunders Juſtices then being preſent at the ſame Cauſe, in the Term of St. Michael in the firſt and ſecond Years of the Reign of King Philip and Queen Mary, upon an Office found in the County of Suffolk, after the Death of Amy Townſend, late Wife of Roger Townſend, returned into the Chancery, and from thence certified in the ſaid Court.

BY an Office taken at Beccles the 25th Day of March, in the ſeventh Year of the Reign of King Edward the Sixth, by virtue of a Writ of Mandamus, after the Death of the ſaid Amy, directed to the Eſcheator of the ſaid County, it was found, that the ſaid Amy was ſeized in Tail of the Manor of Akenham, and other Lands in the ſaid County, and being ſo ſeized took to Huſband the ſaid Roger Townſend, who the 28th Day of July, in the 29th Year of the Reign of King Henry the Eighth, made thereof a Feoffment in Fee to divers Perſons, to the Uſe of him and his ſaid Wife for Term of their Lives, and for the Life of ſuch of them as ſhould longeſt live, and after their Deceaſe to the Uſe of John Townſend their Son and Heir apparent for Term of his Life, and after his Deceaſe to the Uſe of Richard Townſend Son and Heir apparent of the ſame John, and Catharine the Wife of the ſame Richard, and the Heirs of the Body of the ſaid Richard begotten, and for Default of ſuch Iſſues, to divers other Uſes contained in the ſaid Office. By virtue of which Feoffment, it was found, that the ſaid Roger and Amy were ſeized of the Premiſſes in their Demeſn as of Fee Tail, as in Right of the ſaid Amy, and the ſaid Amy as in her Remitter and better Right. And that afterwards, viz. in the Time of King Edward the Sixth, they made a Leaſe for 21 Years of Part of the Premiſſes, which was found by the ſaid Office to be made according to the Statute of 32. H. 8. cap. 28. in all Points, which Leaſe was come to the Hands of one Thomas Townſend, as Executor of the firſt Leſſee. And it was alſo found, that the ſaid John was dead. And alſo it was found, that the ſaid Richard had Iſſue Roger Townſend, and died alſo, and that after their Deaths the ſaid Amy died, and that afterwards the ſaid Roger Huſband of Amy died. And that the ſaid Roger Son of Richard was within Age, and that the Premiſſes were held of the King by Knight's-Service. And now this preſent Term of St. Michael aforeſaid it was argued by the Councel of Peter Seintgill who had married the ſaid Catharine, that the King was not entitled by the ſaid Office, and that the ſaid Leaſe was not good, but that the Remainder to Catharine is good, and continues: For upon the Matter the Feoffment made by the Huſband was a Diſcontinuance, and by the Eſtate which came by the Limitation of the Uſe Amy was not remitted, but was in only as a Purchaſer of the Poſſeſſion executed by virtue of the Statute of 27. H. 8. cap. 10. which makes no Remitter in the Wife. And this, as the principal Point and Matter, was debated among other Points ariſing in the ſaid Office. And it was argued on Behalf of the ſaid Thomas Townſend, and of the King and Queen, by Gilbert Walpole, Serjeant Catline, and Serjeant Dyer, that ſhe was remitted. For the Diſcontinuance made by the Feoffment diveſted the Poſſeſſion once out of the Wife, and was a Wrong to her; and when the Poſſeſſion came again to the Wife during the Coverture, without Wrong to be aſſigned in the Wife, then by the Rules of the common Law the Wife was preſently in her Remitter, and that as well when the poſſeſſion, after the Wrong done to her, came to her again by the Limitation of the Uſe, and the Conjunction of the Poſſeſſion thereto by the Statute, as if it had come to her again by a new Feoffment; for Poſſeſſion attained by a new Feoffment, and by the Execution of the Uſe by the Statute are of one ſame Effect, for each of them is a new Purchaſe to the Wife, without Wrong or Folly in her, for in both Caſes the Poſſeſſion is executed in her during the Coverture againſt her Will, for the Agreement of the Huſband is an Agreement for him and his Wife during the Coverture, and when the Coverture is diſſolved by the Death of the Huſband, the Poſſeſſion is adjudged to be in the Wife, whether ſhe will or no, and ſhe ſhall be Tenant to the Præcipe of every Stranger, until ſhe has diſclaimed or done ſome other Act to the contrary; and beſides there is not any Perſon againſt whom ſhe may bring her Action of Cui in vita to purge the firſt Wrong, from whence it follows that ſhe is remitted. And the Statute of 27. H. 8. is no Hindrance hereto, for in the Statute are two Clauſes touching the Execution of the Uſe. The firſt is, that where any Perſon or Perſons ſtand or be ſeized, or that at any time afterwards ſhall happen to be ſeized of any Tenements to the Uſe, Confidence, or Truſt of any Perſon or Perſons, &c. that in every ſuch Caſe every Perſon or Perſons, who have or afterwards ſhall have any ſuch Uſe, Confidence, or Truſt in Fee Simple, Fee Tail, for Term of Life or Years, or otherwiſe, ſhall from thenceforwards ſtand and be ſeized, deemed, and adjudged in lawful Seizin, Eſtate, and Poſſeſſion of and in ſuch Tenements, &c. to all Intents, Conſtructions, and Purpoſes in the Law, of and in ſuch like Eſtates as they had or ſhall have in Uſe, Truſt, or Confidence of or in the ſame. And the Effect of this Branch is no other than to diveſt the Poſſeſſion out of the Feoffees, and to put it in the Ceſtuy que Uſe, and to give him the ſame Quantity of Eſtate in the Land as he had before in the Uſe. The ſecond Clauſe is, that the Eſtate, Title, Right, and Poſſeſſion, which was in ſuch Perſon or Perſons, who were or afterwards ſhall be ſeized of any Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments, to the Uſe, Confidence, or Truſt of any ſuch Perſon or Perſons, or of any body politic, ſhall be from thenceforth clearly deemed and adjudged to be in him or them, who have or afterwards ſhall have ſuch Uſe, confidence, or Truſt, according to the ſame Quality, Manner, Form, and Condition, as they had before in or to the Uſe, Confidence, or Truſt which was in them. The Effect of which Branch

Where a Man, ſeized of Lands in Right of his Wife, makes a Feoffment to the Uſe of himſelf and his Wife for Life, the Poſſeſſion whichcomes back again to the Wife by the Execution of it to the Uſe by Force of the Statute of 27. H. 8. c. 10. does not work a Remitter in her. S. C. Dyer 106 pl. 19. Vide Dy. 23. pl. 148. Moor 151. 171. 3. Leon. 22. 93. 2. Bulſt. 31. Hob. 235. 298. 3. Keb. 411. 1. Lev. 49

Branch is to put the Poſſeſſion in him that had the Uſe, in ſuch Quality, Form, and Condition as the Uſe was. So that the firſt Branch ſerves to veſt the Land in the Ceſtuy que Uſe according to the Quantity of the Eſtate, and the ſecond veſts it in him according to the Quality of the Eſtate. And none of the Branches is any Impediment to the Remitter, for notwithſtanding the Statute puts the Poſſeſſion of the Land in Amy according to the Quantity and Quality of the Uſe, yet when it is come to the Wife, the Poſſeſſion is afterwards changed and altered by Reaſon of her former Right. For although the Statute gives the Poſſeſſion from the Feoffees to the Ceſtuy que Uſe according to the Eſtate, Quality, and Form of the Uſe, yet it does not ſay that it ſhall continue ſo, for the Statute reaches to the firſt Conveyance of the Poſſeſſion, and not to the Continuance of it afterwards. And if Amy had been enfeoffed by Feoffment, the Poſſeſſion would have paſſed by the Feoffment, and the Remitter have come afterwards; ſo here the Poſſeſſion is given by the Statute to the Perſon who then had the Right of the Tail, and afterwards the Remitter came, ſo that the Remitter takes place ſecondly in Point of Time. Wherefore the Statute which conveys the Poſſeſſion according to the Quantity and Quality of the Uſe ſhall not hinder the Remitter which came after the Poſſeſſion given and veſted by the Statute, but will ſtand with the Remitter very well; and eſpecially ſince there is in the Statute a Saving to every Perſon and Perſons, (other than thoſe who were ſeized to Uſe) all ſuch Right, Title, Entry, Intereſt, Poſſeſſion, Rents, and Actions, as they had before the making of the Statute; in which Branch the Right of Ceſtuy que Uſe, to whom the Poſſeſſion is conveyed by the Statute, is ſaved, and if it be ſaved by the Statute, and the Poſſeſſion is conveyed to him by the ſame Statute, then it cannot be ſaid but that the Statute contains and implies a Remitter in them to whom the poſſeſſion is conveyed by Force of the Statute, and who had a Right before, or elſe the Right ſaved by the Statute ſhould not avail him to whom it is ſaved, for if it be ſaved by the Words of the Act, and he ſhould not take Advantage of it any Way, then is it no Saving at all, and there was no Way for Amy to take Advantage of it, except it be by Remitter, and therefore ſhe ought to be remitted. And if ſhe might not be remitted as well where the Poſſeſſion came to her by Execution of it to the Uſe, as by a Feoffment to her, then the Huſband might charge the Land with a Rent-Charge to the Value of it, or be bound in a Statute-Merchant, or make other Incumbrances, and afterwards make a Feoffment to the Uſe of the Wife, and thereby bind the Land of the Wife after his Death. Wherefore if ſhe ſhould not be remitted great Inconvenience would enſue from hence, to avoid which Reaſon requires that ſhe ſhould be remitted. And it was alſo ſaid on this Part, that the Words of the Statute are in the affirmative, viz. " the Eſtate of the Feoffees ſhall be adjudged in them that had the " Uſe," which Words affirmatively [a] ſpoken are not properly put to exclude the Operation of the common Law in the Remitter, but to do that they ſhould be in the negative; as the Statute of Marlbridge which ſaith, non ideo puniatur Dominus per redemptionem; and the Statute of Magna Charta, nullus capiatur aut impriſonetur propter appellum fœminæ de morte alterius quàm viri ſui, and the like. But the Words being ſpoken affirmatively here may not obſtruct the common Law in its Operation, eſpecially ſo as to bind Femes Covert, who are many Times exempted out of the Penalty of general Statutes which do not except them ſpecially, and that by the Judgment of the common Law upon the Statutes. For which Reaſons it was here ſaid that Amy was remitted. And it was ſaid by ſome of them before mentioned, that altho' ſhe was not remitted in Deed, yet it is found by the Office that by virtue of the Feoffment the Huſband and Wife were ſeized in Tail, viz. the ſaid Amy in her Remitter and better Right, which Words are ſpoken preciſely, ſo that if the Matter before found will not prove it, yet they ſhall ſtand as the Effect and Subſtance of the Matter, which ſhall put the Party to traverſe it, if it is not true. And Caſes were put hereupon, where Juries give a Verdict at large in Actions, and alſo conclude to the Point of the Iſſue, that the Concluſion ſhall be effectual, and the Matter at large being contrary to it is thereby avoided. So in the Caſe here; for which Cauſes it was ſaid, that the Office is ſufficient to entitle the King to the Wardſhip of the Land not leaſed, and of the Reverſion, and to the Rent of the Land leaſed, and that the Leaſe was good.

[a] Affirmative Statutes don't alter the common Law, Dy. 50. pl. 3. 2. Inſt. 200. 313. 448. 472. 6. Co. 19. b. Hob. 173. Palm. 495. 542. Hardr. 27. Jenk. 212. pl. 49. 1. Rol. R. 91. Cro. C. 172. Show. P. C. 64. 3. Keb. 403. 4. Bac. Abr. 641. Vin. Abr. tit. Statutes E. 6. pl. 1. Poſt 113.

E contra. On the other Side it was argued by one of the Middle-Temple, and by Gerard, Prideaux, and Serjeant Daliſon; and they ſaid, it is to be conſidered that the Feoffment made by the Huſband in July 29. Hen. 8. was a Diſcontinuance to the Wife, for the purging whereof ſhe was driven to her cui in vita, and could not avoid it by Entry, as ſhe may ſince the Statute of 32. H. 8. cap. 28. And then when ſhe has an Action given her to recontinue the Poſſeſſion, and ſhe does not uſe it, but comes to the Poſſeſſion by other Means, ſhe ought to take it in ſuch Order and with ſuch Appendances as the Law limits to that Means, and not otherwiſe, and here the Means whereby the Wife came to the Poſſeſſion, which the Huſband had taken from her by the Feoffment, is the ſaid Statute of 27. H. 8. And in what Manner ſoever the Statute appoints and limits the Poſſeſſion to her, in that Manner we ought to adjudge her in Poſſeſſion, and not otherwiſe, although ſhe be a Feme-Covert; for Coverture or Infancy is not material here, not being excepted by the Statute. And then the Statute is to be conſidered. And the ſaid firſt Branch of the Statute ſaith, that every Perſon, who afterwards ſhall have any Uſe, Confidence, or Truſt in any Tenements, &c. ſhall be thenceforth adjudged in lawful ſeizin, Eſtate, and Poſſeſſion of and in ſuch Tenements, to all Intents, Conſtructions, and Purpoſes in the Law, of and in ſuch like Eſtates as they had in the Uſe, Truſt, or Confidence of or in the ſame. And the ſecond Branch ſaith, that the Eſtate of the Tenant who had the Land to Uſe ſhall be adjudged in the Ceſtuy que Uſe, according to ſuch Quality, Manner, Form, and Condition as they had before in or to the Uſe, which was in them.

And then the Eſtate limited in Uſe to the Wife is to be conſidered, which was but an Eſtate for Life jointly with her Huſband, and if the Eſtate in Uſe limited to the Wife was an Eſtate for Life, which is but a Freehold, and the Statute ſaith that the Ceſtuy que uſe ſhall be adjudged in lawful Seizin, Eſtate, and Poſſeſſion of the Land, of and in the like Eſtate as he had in the Uſe, from thence it follows that the Wife ſhall be adjudged in Seizin and Poſſeſſion of the Land, of an Eſtate of Freehold jointly with her Huſband, and of no other Eſtate; and therefore ſhe may not be ſeized in Tail. And the Clauſe which ſaith, that the Eſtate and Poſſeſſion of the Land ſhall be adjudged in the Ceſtuy que uſe, according to ſuch Quality, Manner, Form, and Condition as he before had in the Uſe, will not ſuffer the Wife to be remitted, for ſhe had the Uſe as a new Purchaſe, and the Statute makes her to have the Land in the like Manner, ergo ſhe has the Land as a Purchaſer, and the Eſtate Tail ſhe had perhaps by Deſcent, and if ſhe ſhould be adjudged in her Remitter, ſhe ſhould be adjudged in the Land by Deſcent, whereas the Statute ſays, that ſhe ſhall have the Land thereby as a new Purchaſe, and the other Party ſays that ſhe ſhall have it by Deſcent, which is meerly contrary to the Statute. [a] For, it was ſaid, altho' the Statute is in the affirmative (as it has been recited) yet in Senſe and Subſtance it contains in itſelf a Negative, and theſe Words (that the Eſtate and Poſſeſſion, which was in the Tenant of the Land, ſhall be adjudged in the Ceſtuy que uſe, according to ſuch Quality, Manner, Form and Condition as he had before in the Uſe) contain in themſelves a Negative, viz. in no other Quality, Manner, Form, and Condition, which is as ſtrongly contained in the affirmative Words, as if it had been put in expreſs Words. [b] And ſo do all other Statutes, which in affirmative Words appoint or limit an Order or Form in Things which were not at the Common Law. As the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 4. which ordains that in a Quod ei deforceat if the Tenant pleads a Recovery, and maintains the Title thereof, the Demandants ſhall vouch to Warranty, as if they were Tenants, [c] there if the former Action was ſuch wherein he might not vouch, as a Scire Facias, the Demandant ſhall not vouch at all, becauſe it is a new Ordinance concerning a Thing which was not at the Common Law, and the Word (as if) is an Adverb ſimilitudinary, which has the Senſe of (in the ſame Manner as if, &c.) And altho' theſe Words are ſpoken affirmatively, yet they contain in themſelves a Negative, viz. and in no other Manner, ſo that theſe Words (ſhall vouch to Warranty as if they were Tenants) have the ſame Effect of all theſe Words, viz. ſhall vouch to Warranty as if they were Tenants, and in no other Manner. And the Statute of 11. H. 7. cap. 20. ordains, that if a Woman, who hath a Jointure made by her Huſband (in ſuch Form as the Statute limits) after the Death of her Huſband diſcontinue or alien with Warranty, or by Covin ſuffer a Recovery, &c. that it ſhall be lawful for him to whom the Inheritance of the Tenements, after the Death of the Woman, ſhall belong, to enter into the ſame Tenements, and them to poſſeſs and enjoy in Manner and Form as he ſhould have done, if no ſuch Diſcontinuance, Warranty, or Recovery had been had or made, there if the Woman makes a Diſcontinuance with Warranty, or ſuffers a Recovery contrary to the Intent of the Statute, and the Daughter and Heir in Tail of the Huſband inheritable to the Land enters, where the Wife is then enſeint of a Son begotten by the Huſband, and afterwards the Son is born, he may enter and ouſt the Daughter, (as it was ſaid by the Opinion of Mountague, then Chief Juſtice of the Common Bench, in his Argument in Wimbiſh's [d] Caſe, which Opinion (it was ſaid) is good Law; for the Statute ſaith that it ſhall be lawful for the Perſon, to whom the Inheritance of the Tenements, after the Death of the Woman, ſhall belong, to enter into the ſame Tenements, and them to poſſeſs and enjoy in manner and Form as he ſhould have done, if no Diſcontinuance, &c. had been made. Which Words making a new Ordinance, (altho' they are ſpoken affirmatively) contain in themſelves a Negative alſo, and have the ſame Meaning as if it had been thus expreſſed, viz. it ſhall be lawful for the Perſon, to whom the Inheritance, after the Death of the Woman, ſhall belong, to enter into the ſame Tenements, and them to poſſeſs and enjoy in Manner and Form as he ſhould do, if no Diſcontinuance, &c. had been made, and in no other Manner and Form. In which Caſe if the negative Words had been ſo expreſſed, the Son ſhould enter, and ſo he ſhall in the other Caſe, for the affirmative Words containing the Manner of a new Ordinance are of the ſame Effect as Words ſpoken affirmatively and negatively alſo. [e] But if a Thing is at the Common Law, a Statute cannot reſtrain it unleſs it be in negative Words, as in the Caſes of the Statute of Marlbridge, non ideo puniatur Dominus per redemptionem, and the Statute of Magna Charta, nullus capiatur aut impriſonetur propter appellum fœminæ, &c. And ſo if a Statute was made, that it ſhould be lawful for Tenant in Fee Simple to make a Leaſe for 21 Years, and that ſuch Leaſe ſhould be good, the Statute ſo made in the affirmative might not reſtrain him from making a Leaſe for 60 Years, but a Leaſe made for more than 21 Years ſhould be good, becauſe it was good by the Common Law, and therefore if the Statute would reſtrain him, it ought to have negative Words, as, that it ſhall not be lawful for him to make a Leaſe for more than 21 Years, or that a Leaſe made for a longer Time ſhall not be good. And ſo is the Diverſity, where a Statute makes an Ordinance by affirmative Words, touching a Thing which was before at the Common Law, and which was not before at the Common Law. But in our principal Caſe, the Words of the Act which give the Eſtate in the Land to the Ceſtuy que Uſe, in the ſame Quality, Manner, Form, and Condition as he had before in the Uſe, ordains and appoints the Manner of a Thing which was not before at the Common Law: And therefore altho' the Words of the Act are in the Affirmative, [f] yet they contain a Negative, viz. and in no other Quality, Manner, Form, or Condition. And then if the Wife here ſhall have it in no other Manner or Form, ſhe muſt of Neceſſity have it as a new Purchaſer, in which Capacity ſhe had the Uſe, and alſo ſhe muſt have it in the ſame Eſtate, viz.

viz. a Freehold jointly with her Huſband for their Lives, and not in Tail by the Remitter, for that would be contrary to the Words of the Act, and the Senſe of the Words, as it is ſaid before. And if the Poſſeſſion is given to her in ſuch Quality and Order, then it cannot afterwards change in her, for if the firſt Poſſeſſion does not work a Remitter, it ſhall never after work a Remitter, where the Entry of the Party is taken away. [a] But if the Diſſeizor makes a Feoffment in Fee to the Uſe of the Diſſeizee, and afterwards the Diſſeizee enters, there he ſhall be remitted by his Entry, but before his Entry he ſhall not be remitted, but ſhall be adjudged in Poſſeſſion by virtue of the Statute, cauſâ qua ſupra; but when he enters, his Entry ſhall not be adjudged in reſpect of the Eſtate before executed by the Limitation of the Uſe, but in Reſpect of the firſt Diſſeizin, and therefore he ſhall be adjudged to be remitted. But in our principal Caſe the Entry was taken away by the Diſcontinuance; in which Caſe if the firſt Eſtate does not remit the Wife, her Entry or Continuance afterwards cannot remit her. And when the Statute of Uſes was made, there were many that were Ceſtuy que Uſe in Fee, who had a Right of Eſtate Tail to the Land, and had a Title of Formedon by Reaſon that their Anceſtors, being Tenants in Tail of the Land, made Feoffments to their own Uſes in Fee, and when the Statute was made, the Poſſeſſion of the Land was thereby conveyed to them; [b] and yet it has been held by the Opinion of all the Judges that they were not remitted, becauſe the Statute gives the Poſſeſſion to them in ſuch Form as they had the Uſe; and the Name of the Perſon, in whoſe Caſe (as it was ſaid) the Judges were of that Opinion, was mentioned. Therefore in our Caſe the Remitter cannot happen after the firſt Eſtate any more than in that Caſe. And if ſhe ſhould be remitted, then the Remainders here would be void, for the Act ſaith, that he who hath any Uſe in Remainder, or Reverter, ſhall be adjudged in lawful Seizin, Eſtate, and Poſſeſſion of the Lands, Tenements, Remainders, Reverſions, &c. of the like Eſtate as he had in the Uſe, and ſo if the Remitter was here granted, from thence it would follow that it happened ſo ſoon that the Remainder could not veſt, but it would deſtroy the Remainder, which being granted deſtroys the Text of the Statute, which ordains, that they ſhall have the Remainders of the Land as they had the Uſe, for which Reaſons the Remitter cannot ſtand with the Words of the Act. And as to the Inconvenience which it is ſaid would follow if ſhe ſhould not be remitted, viz. that ſhe ſhould hold the Land charged with the Incumbrances made by the Huſband, this is no Inconvenience at all, [c] for ſhe might after the Death of her Huſband diſagree to the Uſe and Poſſeſſion conveyed by Means thereof; and bring her Action of Cui in vita againſt him who is in the next [d] Remainder, for the bringing of her Action againſt him is a Diſagreement in the Wife, and then the Poſſeſſion veſts [e] in the next in Remainder as if the Wife had not been named, or as if ſhe had been named, and had been a dead Perſon in Law. As if the Uſe had been appointed to the Wife in Fee, then the Wife might bring her Action of Cui in vita againſt the Feoffor, or his Heir, and they ſhould be Tenants to her Action. For when a Feoffment is made to the Uſe of one in Fee, who refuſes, it is as if it had been appointed to the Uſe of a Friar or Monk, or to the Uſe of an inanimate Thing, as Paul's Steeple, and then the Feoffment is without Conſideration, and ſhall be to the Uſe of the Feoffor. And ſo the Wife has a Tenant for her Cui in vita, and by the bringing of it ſhe might purge and avoid all Incumbrances. And it was alſo argued, that the Wife here, as the Matter has now happened, might not be remitted by the Common Law, if a Re-feoffment had been been made to her and her Huſband, becauſe the Huſband has ſurvived the Wife. [f] And in Proof thereof, the Caſe in T. 21. Ed. 3. was alledged, which is, that the Huſband made a Feoffment, the Feoffee re-infeoffed the Huſband and Wife, the Wife died, the Heir of the Wife entered, and the Huſband brought an Aſſize, and becauſe the Huſband ſurvived the Wife, ſo that the Heir of the Wife had one againſt whom he might bring his Action, it was awarded that the Aſſize by the Huſband was maintainable. [g] So here inaſmuch as the Huſband hath ſurvived, it might not be adjudged a Remitter in the Wife, if the Eſtate had been made by an immediate Feoffment according to the Courſe of the Common Law. [h] And as to what has been ſaid, that the preciſe finding that the Wife was remitted ſhall ſtand in Force until it be traverſed, altho' the Matter before does not prove it, this is not ſo. [i] For the Office of 12 Men is no other than to enquire of Matters of Fact, and not to adjudge what the Law is, for that is the Office of the Court, and not of the Jury, and if they find the Matter of Fact at large, and further ſay that thereupon the Law is ſo, where in Truth the Law is not ſo, the Judges ſhall adjudge according to the Matter of Fact, and not according to the Concluſion of the Jury; and ſo here the finding [k] of the Remitter is void, if the Matter before does not prove it, which Dyer being on the other Side conceſſit, and diſcharged the two, who laſt argued, from this Point. Wherefore upon the whole Matter the Wife was not remitted, but the Remainder to Catherine is good, and continues, and then ſhe and the ſaid Peter Seintgil her Huſband ought to have the Land; and thereupon it was prayed that ſo they might without being impeached by the Court, and whereas an Order was before made by the Court that the ſaid Peter Seintgil ſhould pay to the King the Iſſues and Profits of the Land not leaſed, if it was adjudged that the King was entitled, it was prayed that he might be diſcharged from thence. And upon this the Court, after the Arguments were had, adviſed upon the Matter, and afterwards all the Court and the ſaid Juſtices agreed that the Wife was not remitted. And the Decree recited that the Wife was not remitted by Force of the Uſe, and the Execution of the Poſſeſſion by the Statute.

† Note, the ſaid ſaving in the Statute extends to Rights, Titles, and Actions which were before the Statute of 27. H. 8. and not to Rights, Titles, or Actions given ſince the Statute.

† Hob. 256.

The Decree containing the Judgment and the Cauſe thereof.

Where by Inquiſition taken at Beccles in the County of Suffolk, the 25th Day of March in in the ſeventh Year of the Reign of our late Sovereign Lord King Edward the Sixth, before John Spencer Eſquire then Eſcheator of the ſaid County, by virtue of the King's Writ of Mandamus to the ſame Eſcheator directed, after the Death of Amy Townſend late Wife of Sir Roger Townſend Knight, it was found that the ſaid Amy long before her Death being ſeized in her Demeſn as of Fee Tail, to her and to the Heirs of her Body lawfully begotten, of and in the Manor of Akenham with the Appurtenances in the ſaid County, and of and in twenty Meſſuages, four hundred Acres of Land, one hundred Acres of Meadow, one hundred Acres of Paſture, two hundred Acres of Wood, and 10 l. Rent, with the Appurtenances in Akenham, Cleydon, and Hemingſton in the ſaid County of Suffolk, and of and in the Advowſons of the Churches of Akenham, Cleydon, and Hemingſton aforeſaid, took to her Huſband the ſaid Sir Roger Townſend. By Force whereof the ſaid Sir Roger Townſend and Amy were ſeized of and in the Premiſſes in their Demeſn as of Fee Tail, as in the Right of the ſaid Amy. And ſo ſeized, the ſaid Sir Roger Townſend, the 28th Day of July, in the 29 Year of the Reign of the late King Henry the Eighth, infeoffed Sir John Shelton Knight, and divers others and their Heirs and Aſſigns of and in all the Premiſſes, to the Uſe of the ſame Sir Roger and Amy his Wife for the Term of their Lives, and the longer Liver of them, and after to the Uſe of John Townſend Son and Heir Apparent to the ſame Sir Roger for Term of Life of the ſame John, and after his Deceaſe to the Uſe of Richard Townſend Son and Heir Apparent of the ſame John, and to the Uſe of Catherine Wife of the ſame Richard, and the Heirs of the Body of the ſame Richard lawfully begotten; and for lack of ſuch Iſſue, to other Uſes expreſſed in the ſame Office. And further it was found by the ſame Office, that the ſame Sir Roger and Amy, by Virtue of the ſaid Feoffment, and of the Statute lately made for the Execution of the Poſſeſſion of Lands to ſuch Perſon as had any Uſe of or in the ſame, were ſeized in their Demeſn as of Fee Tail in the Right of the ſame Amy, and the ſame Amy in her Remitter and better Right. And that they ſo being thereof ſeized did by their Writing indented, dated the 26 Day of October in the 4 Year of the Reign of the ſaid King Edward the Sixth, demiſe and let the Site of the ſaid Manor of Akenham with divers Parcels of the ſame Manor recited in the ſaid Office according to the ſaid Indenture, unto the ſaid Richard Townſend for Term of 21 Years, by virtue of which Leaſe the ſaid Richard Townſend being poſſeſſed of the ſaid Eſtate in the ſaid Manor and other the Premiſſes for Term of the ſaid 21 Years made his laſt Will and Teſtament, and by the ſame Will did conſtitute and ordain his Executor Thomas Townſend, and after the ſaid Richard died, by and after the Death of which ſaid Richard Townſend, the ſaid Thomas as Executor of the ſaid Richard, by virtue of the ſaid Leaſe for Term of Years grown to his Hand by the ſaid laſt Will and Teſtament, did enter upon the ſaid Site of the ſaid Manor and other the Premiſſes contained in the ſaid Leaſe; before which Time, that is to ſay, in the 35 Year of the Reign of the ſaid King Henry the Eighth, the ſaid John Townſend was deceaſed, and after the ſaid Amy, and likewiſe the ſaid Sir Roger Townſend died. By and after whoſe Deaths, the ſaid Manor and other the Premiſſes, being holden of the ſaid King Edward the Sixth by the Moiety of one Knights-Fee, did deſcend and come to Roger Townſend Couſin and Heir of the Body of the ſaid Amy lawfully begotten, that is to ſay, Son and Heir of the ſaid Richard Townſend, Son and Heir of the ſaid John Townſend, Son and Heir of the ſaid Amy, which ſaid Roger Townſend was of the Age of eight Years at the taking of the ſaid Inquiſition, as by the ſame Inquiſition returned into the Chancery, and there of Record remaining more plainly may appear. Whereupon ſince the Return of the ſaid Office, as well the Rents and Profits of the ſaid Manor and other the Premiſſes hath been demanded by the Maſter and Counſel of the King's and Queen's Majeſties Court of Wards and Liveries to their Highneſs's Uſe, as alſo the ſaid Thomas Townſend hath enjoyed the ſaid Leaſe of 21 Years before mentioned until in Eaſter laſt paſt, that Peter Seintgil Gentleman and Catherine his Wife before Wife of the ſaid Richard Townſend, claiming the Poſſeſſion of the ſaid Manor and other the Premiſſes with the Rents and Profits thereof from the Death of the ſaid Richard Townſend, alledged that the ſame did to them juſtly appertain and belong in the Right of the ſaid Catherine during her Life, being next in Remainder to the ſaid Manor and other the Premiſſes by virtue of the ſaid Feoffment thereof conveyed by the ſaid Sir Roger Townſend, as is aforeſaid. For the Proof whereof, and to avoid the Title of the Queen's Majeſty the ſaid Peter Seintgil had further Day until the quindena of the holy Trinity then next following, at which Day the ſame Peter Seintgil with his learned Counſel, and likewiſe the ſaid Thomas Townſend appeared in the ſaid Court, perſiſting in their ſundry Titles before ſet forth, which was had and debated at ſeveral Days given in the ſame Trinity Term. And for the Order of the ſaid Parties for that Time it was decreed by the Counſel of the ſaid Court, that either Parties with the Advice of their learned Counſel ſhould reduce their ſaid Matters into brief Caſes to be delivered to the ſaid Counſel of this Court, to be adviſed therein until the quindecim of St. Michael then next following. And for the Order in the ſaid Manors and other the Premiſſes in the mean time, the ſaid Peter Seintgil was admitted and licenſed by the Maſter and Counſel of the ſaid Court to receive the Rents of the Free Tenants and Copyholders of the ſaid Manors, and became bound in 100 l. to repay the ſame as the ſaid Maſter and Counſel in the ſaid Michaelmas Term ſhould award and determine. And likewiſe it was ordered that the ſaid Thomas Townſend ſhould before the Feaſt of All Saints then next following bring and deliver into this Court as well the Rents reſerved upon the ſaid Leaſe with the Arrearages thereof, and the Arrearages of the Increaſe and Improvement of the ſame Rent, to be repaid over to them to whom the Right thereof ſhould appertain by the Judgment of the ſaid Maſter and Counſel. And ſince, this preſent Michaelmas in the firſt and Second Years of the King's and Queen's Majeſties Reign, upon the Sight of the Caſes delivered to the ſaid Maſter and Counſel by both the ſaid Parties, it hath been argued by the Counſel on both Sides three ſeveral Days for that Matter appointed, in the Preſence as well of two of the King's Juſtices at the Law, as of the ſaid Maſter and Counſel, whether the ſaid Amy were remitted to the Eſtate newly to her executed by the aforeſaid Statute, as is before recited, and whether the ſaid Office were ſufficient to entitle the King's and Queen's Highneſs to the Wardſhip of the ſaid Manor and other the Premiſſes during the Nonage of the ſaid Roger Townſend the younger, or not. And foraſmuch as upon thorough debating and arguing thereof it ſeemeth to this Court, and to the ſaid Juſtices, that the ſaid Amy by the ſaid Eſtate conveyed to her of the ſaid Lands, by Force of the ſaid Uſe, and the Execution of the Poſſeſſion thereof to her by the ſaid Statute, was not remitted to the ſaid Eſtate Tail, but that the ſame remained diſcontinued, and by Reaſon thereof the Remainder limited to the ſaid Catherine is good, and continueth in her, until the ſaid Eſtate Tail be recontinued, and by Means thereof the ſaid Peter and Catherine ought to have and enjoy the Poſſeſſion of the ſaid Manor and all and ſingular the Premiſſes, and that the ſaid Matter compriſed in the ſaid Office is not ſufficient in the Law to entitle the King's and Queen's Highneſs to any the Premiſſes, it is therefore ordered and decreed by the ſaid Maſter and Counſel of this Court, the 26 Day of November in the firſt and ſecond Years of the Reigns of our Lord and Lady, that the ſaid Peter Seintgil and Catherine his Wife, in the Right of the ſame Catherine, ſhall, notwithſtanding the ſaid Title found by the ſaid Office, as is aforeſaid, from henceforth have, hold, and enjoy the ſame Manor and other the Premiſſes, with the Rents and Profits thereof from the Death of the ſaid Richard Townſend, during the Minority of the ſaid Heir, (if the ſaid Catherine do ſo long live) without lett of this Court, or any other on the Behalf of this Court. And that likewiſe without lett of the ſame Court the ſaid Peter Seintgil and Catharine and either of them ſhall have and take their Remedy, as by their learned Counſel ſhall be thought good, by the Common Law or otherwiſe againſt the ſaid Thomas Townſend his Executors or Aſſigns, as well for the Poſſeſſion of the ſaid Demeſns, and other the Premiſſes contained in the ſaid Leaſe, as for Payment of the Arrearages of the Rents, and of the Increaſe and Improvements thereof ſince the Death of the ſaid Richard Townſend. And it is further ordered and decreed by the ſaid Maſter and Counſel, that the Auditor General of the ſaid Court ſhall defalk and allow the Arrearages of the Rent of the ſaid Manor and other the Premiſſes, and this Decree ſhall be his ſufficient Warrant for the Accompliſhment thereof, and to engroſs the Account thereof accordingly. Provided always that if at any Time hereafter any other ſufficient Matter ſhall appear to the ſaid Maſter and Counſel for the King and Queen's Majeſty's Title, their Heirs or Succeſſors, of and in the ſaid Manor and other the Premiſſes during the Minority of the ſaid Heir, that then this preſent Decree to be void.

A Report of a Challenge taken in the Common Bench in the Term of St. Michael in the firſt and ſecond Years of the Reign of King Philip and Queen Mary, by the Earl of Derby, in an Aſſize brought before the Juſtices of the ſame Bench by John Newdigate Plaintiff againſt him and John Anſell for Lands in the County of Middleſex. The Parties were at Iſſue, and the Aſſize was awarded, and the Jury appeared, and the Challenge was taken as hereafter follows. And it appears in the Rolls of the ſaid Term, viz. Rot. 1454.

AND thereupon the aforeſaid Earl challenges the Array of the Panel of the Aſſize aforeſaid, becauſe he ſays, that he the aforeſaid Earl is, and on the Day of obtaining the Writ of aſſize aforeſaid, and before, was one of the Nobility and Peers of this Kingdom, having a Place and Voice in every Parliament of the ſame Kingdom; and becauſe the Array of the Panel of the Aſſize aforeſaid was arrayed by Thomas Offley and William Hewet late Sheriffs of the aforeſaid County of Middleſex, no Knight being named and returned in the ſame Panel of that Array, as there ought to be according to the Law of this Realm, and this he is ready to verify; wherefore the ſame Earl prays Judgment, and that the Panel may be quaſhed.

Mich. 1. & 2. P. & M. A good challenge that no Knight is returned, when a Peer of the Realm is Party. S. C. Dyer 107. pl. 37. Vin. Abr. tit. Trial G. c. pl. 4. L. C. Dy. 108. pl. 18. But Note, the Law is now altered in the Point of this Caſe by the Statute of 24. Geo. 2. cap. 18.

And the aforeſaid John Newdigate ſays, that the aforeſaid Challenge of the aforeſaid Earl to the Array of the Panel of the Aſſize aforeſaid by the ſaid Earl above alledged, is inſufficient in Law to quaſh the Array of the ſaid Panel, and that he has no Neceſſity, nor is by the Law of the Land bound to anſwer that Challenge in Manner and Form aforeſaid above alledged, and this he is ready to verify, wherefore he prays Judgment, and that the Array of the ſaid Panel may be affirmed.

And the aforeſaid Earl, for that he has above alledged ſufficient Challenge to quaſh the Array of the Panel aforeſaid, which he is ready to verify, which ſaid Challenge the aforeſaid John Newdigate does not deny, nor thereunto in any wiſe anſwer, but altogether refuſes to admit the Averment thereof, prays Judgment, and that the Array of the Panel of the Aſſize aforeſaid may be quaſhed.

Upon this Demurrer the Court took good Advice, for the Caſe was a rare Caſe, and none of the Juſtices or Serjeants could remember it to have been ever put in Practice in their time, but that it was deviſed and determined to be put in Practice in the Aſſize brought by Wimbiſh againſt the Lord Willoughby, but it did not go forwards. And no Book or Caſe was found except one, which was in Mich. 13. Ed. 3. * where the Caſe appears to be as follows, viz. "In "a Quare impedit againſt the Biſhop of Exeter and others, upon the Plea of the Biſhop the In- "queſt was taken at the Bar. ¶ Stouff. You ſee how that the Writ requires that he ſhould cauſe "Knights and other good Men to come, and he has not returned a Knight, for which Reaſon "we apprehend you will not take this Inqueſt, eſpecially ſeeing a Peer of the Realm is Party. "¶ Gein. The Words of every venire facias are ſo, and yet a Man ſhall take the Inqueſt although "no Knight be returned. ¶ Stone. We have great Regard to their coming the firſt Day, and "alſo when a Peer of the Realm is Party the Law is otherwiſe than between other Perſons, "wherefore ſince no Knight is returned, we award that the whole Inqueſt go without Day."— Theſe are the Words of the Caſe, but in ſome Books the Caſe is differently expreſſed, though the Subſtance and effect of it is the ſame in all the Books that I have ſeen. And the Juſtices conſidered well the ſaid Book, and the uſual Words in the Writ of venire facias, which is, we command you that you cauſe to come before &c. 12 as well Knights, as other free and lawful Men, &c. which Words viz. (as well Knights) were not (as it was ſaid) firſt put in the Writ to no Purpoſe. And they thought it well to take good Deliberation upon the Matter, it being a rare Caſe, leſt they ſhould otherwiſe give Judgment contrary to Law, or ſhould deny the Peers of the Realm that Privilege which the common Law gives them. And afterwards they agreed and gave Judgment as follows.

* Fitz Challenge 115. Enqueſt 43. Bro. 99. Juron 48 Panel 14. Trials 142. B. N. C. § 465. Dy. 107. pl. 27.

And becauſe the Juſtices here will adviſe of and upon the Challenge before they give Judgment thereon, Day is given as well to the aforeſaid John Newdigate as to the aforeſaid Earl, and likewiſe to the aforeſaid John Anſell, and alſo to the Recognitors aforeſaid now here appearing, until Thurſday next after the Octave of St. Martin next coming, to hear their Judgment thereupon. At which Thurſday here came as well the aforeſaid John Newdigate, as the aforeſaid Earl and John Anſell by their Attornies aforeſaid, and the aforeſaid Recognitors being called in like Manner came. And thereupon the aforeſaid Challenge of the aforeſaid Earl to the Array of the Panel of the Aſſize aforeſaid being ſeen, and by the Juſtices here more fully underſtood, it ſeems to the ſame Juſtices here, that the Array of the Panel of the ſaid Aſſize, in Manner and Form aforeſaid by the aforeſaid late Sheriff of Middleſex arrayed and returned, is inſufficient and of no Force or Effect in the Law. Therefore it is conſidered, that the ſaid Panel be quaſhed, and wholly holden for none.

* Note the Writ of Debt here brought againſt the Sheriff without touching any Statute in the Writ, but in the Count. Theol. Dig. lib. 10. cap. 28. § 15.

RICE Thomas of Lanvayr in the County of Caernarvon Eſquire, Sheriff of the County of Angleſea, was ſummoned to anſwer Richard Buckley Knight of a Plea that he render to him 100*l.* which he owes him and unjuſtly detains, &c. And whereupon the ſame Richard by Robert Bedingfield his Attorney ſays, that whereas in a * Statute made in the Parliament of the Lord Henry the Sixth late King of England, holden in the twenty-third Year of his Reign, amongſt other Things it is contained, whereas by Authority of a Parliament holden at Weſtminſter in the firſt Year of the Reign of the Lord Henry late King of England the fifth from the Conqueſt, amongſt other Things it was ordained, that Citizens and Burgeſſes of Cities and Boroughs coming to the Parliament ſhould be choſen Men, Citizens and Burgeſſes reſident, abiding, and free in the ſame Cities and Boroughs, and none other, as in the ſame Statute of the aforeſaid firſt Year of King Henry the fifth more fully appears. Which ſaid Citizens and Burgeſſes have always in Cities and Boroughs been choſen by Citizens and Burgeſſes, and no other, and to the Sheriff of the County returned, and upon their Returns received and accepted by the Parliament before then holden. And alſo whereas by Authority of a Parliament holden at Weſtminſter the eighth Year of the Reign of the ſame late King Henry the Sixth, it was ordained in what Manner and Form the Knights of the Shires coming to the Parliaments from thenceforth to be holden ſhould be choſen, and how the Sheriffs of the ſame Counties thereupon ſhould make their Returns, as in the ſame Statute more fully appears: By Force of which Statute Elections of Knights to come to the Parliaments ſometimes have been duly made, and lawfully returned, until then of late Time that divers Sheriffs of the Counties of the Realm of England, for their ſingular Avail and Lucre, have not made due Elections of the Knights, nor in convenient Time, nor good Men and true returned, and ſometimes no Return of the Knights, Citizens, and Burgeſſes lawfully choſen to come to the Parliaments, but ſuch Knights, Citizens, and Burgeſſes have been returned which were never duly choſen, and other Citizens and Burgeſſes than thoſe which by the Mayors and Bailiffs were to the ſaid Sheriffs returned; and ſometimes the Sheriffs have not returned the Writs which they had to make Election of Knights to come to Parliament, but the ſaid Writs have embeziled, and moreover made no Precept to the Mayor and Bailiff, or to the Bailiffs or Bailiff, where no Mayor is of Cities and Boroughs, for the Election of Citizens and Burgeſſes to come to Parliament, by Colour of theſe Words contained in the ſame Writs, viz. that in your full County you cauſe two Knights to be elected for your County, and for every City in your County two Citizens, and for every Borough in your County two Burgeſſes. And alſo becauſe ſufficient Penalty and convenient Remedy for the Party in ſuch Caſe grieved was not ordained in the ſaid Statutes againſt the Sheriffs, Mayors, and Bailiffs, which do contrary to the Form of the ſaid Statutes, the ſame late King Henry the Sixth, conſidering the Premiſſes, by the aforeſaid Authority of the ſaid Parliament holden the ſaid twenty-third Year of his Reign ordained, that the ſaid Statutes ſhould be duly kept and obſerved in all Points: and moreover, that every Sheriff, after the Delivery of any ſuch Writ to him made, ſhould make and deliver without Fraud a ſufficient Precept under his Seal to every Mayor and Bailiffs, or to Bailiffs or Bailiff, where no Mayor is of the Cities and Boroughs within his County, reciting the ſaid Writ, commanding them by the ſame Precept, if it be a City, to chuſe by Citizens of the ſame City, Citizens, and in the ſame Manner and Form if it be a Borough, by the Burgeſſes of the ſame to chuſe Burgeſſes to come to the Parliament. And that the ſame Mayor and Bailiffs, or Bailiffs or Bailiff where no Mayor is, ſhould return lawfully the Precept to the ſame Sheriffs, by Indentures betwixt the ſame Sheriffs and them to be made of the ſaid Elections, and of the Names of the ſaid Citizens and Burgeſſes by them ſo choſen, and thereupon that every Sheriff ſhould make a good and rightful Return of every ſuch Writ, and of every Return by the Mayors and Bailiffs, or Bailiffs or Bailiff where no Mayor is, to him made. And that every Sheriff at every Time that he doth contrary to that Statute, or any other Statute for the Election of Knights, Citizens, and Burgeſſes to come to the Parliament before that time made, ſhould incur the Pain contained in the ſaid Statute made the ſaid eighth Year, and moreover ſhould forfeit and pay to every Perſon thereafter choſen Knight, Citizen, or Burgeſs in his County to come to any Parliament, and not duly returned, or to any other Perſon, which in Default of ſuch Knight, Citizen, or Burgeſs will ſue, one hundred Pounds, whereof every Knight, Citizen, and Burgeſs ſo grieved, ſeverally, or any other Perſon which in their Default will ſue, ſhould have his Action of Debt againſt the ſaid Sheriff, or his Executors or Adminiſtrators, to demand and have the ſaid hundred Pounds, with his Coſts ſpent in that Caſe. And that in ſuch Action taken by virtue of the ſame Statute made in the aforeſaid twenty-third Year, the Defendant ſhould not wage his Law of the Demand aforeſaid in any wiſe; and that no Defendant in ſuch Action ſhould have any Eſſoign, as in the ſame Statute made the ſaid twenty-third Year amongſt other Things more fully appears. And alſo whereas in a Statute made in a Parliament of the Lord Henry the Eighth from the Conqueſt, late King of England, holden at Weſtminſter upon Prorogation there the fourth Day of February in the 27th Year of the ſaid late King, among other Things it is enacted and eſtabliſhed by the Authority of the ſame Parliament, that the Country or Dominion of Wales ſhall for ever from thenceforth be, ſtand, and continue incorporated, united, and annexed to and with this Realm of England, and that every Perſon and Perſons born and to be born in the ſaid Country or Dominion of Wales ſhall have, enjoy, and inherit all and ſingular Freedoms, Liberties, Rights, Privileges, and Laws within this Realm, and other the King's Dominions, as

as other the King's Subjects naturally born within the ſame have, enjoy, and inherit. And further then and there it was enacted and eſtabliſhed amongſt other Things, that for the ſame Parliament holden the ſame twenty-ſeventh Year, and all other Parliaments thenceforth to be held and kept for this Realm of England, one Knight ſhould be elected to the ſame Parliaments for every of the Shires of Brecknock, Radnor, Montgomery, and Denbigh, and for every other Shire within the ſaid Country or Dominion of Wales, and the Election to be in like Manner and Form as Knights of Parliament be elected in other Counties of this Realm, as in the ſame Statute made the ſame twenty-ſeventh Year amongſt other Things more fully appears. And alſo whereas in a Statute made in the Parliament of the ſaid late King Henry the Eighth holden at Weſtminſter upon Prorogation the 22d Day of January in the 34th Year of his Reign, and afterwards continued to and until the 12th Day of May in the 35th Year of the Reign of the ſame late King, and on the ſame 12th Day of May in the 35th Year aboveſaid there holden, amongſt other Things it is enacted by the royal Highneſs, and the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and the Commons in the ſame Parliament then aſſembled, by Authority of the ſame Parliament, that all the King's Subjects and Reſiants in Wales ſhall find at all Parliaments thereafter to be holden in England Knights for the Shires, and Citizens and Burgeſſes for Cities and Towns, to be named and choſen by Authority of the King's Writ under the great Seal of England, according to the Act in that Caſe provided, as in the ſame Statute made the ſaid 34th and 35th Years amongſt other Things more fully appears. And whereas the Lady Mary now Queen of England, the 14th Day of Auguſt in the firſt Year of her Reign, by her Writ bearing Date the ſame 14th Day of Auguſt, iſſuing out of her Chancery then being at Weſtminſter in the County of Middleſex under her great Seal of England, directed to the then Sheriff of her County of Angleſea, reciting by the ſame Writ, Whereas the ſame Lady the Queen now, by the Advice and Aſſent of her Council, for certain urgent and important Buſineſs concerning the ſame Lady the Queen now, the State and Defence of her Kingdom of England, and of the Church of England, hath appointed and ordained a certain Parliament of the ſaid Lady the Queen now to be held at Weſtminſter in the County of Middleſex the fifth Day of October then next to come, and there to have Conference with the Prelates and Nobility of her ſaid Realm, commanded the ſame Sheriff of Angleſea by the ſame Writ firmly enjoining him, that having made Proclamation of the Day and Place aforeſaid in his next County to be holden after the Receipt of the ſame Writ, he ſhould cauſe one Knight wearing a Sword, the moſt fit and diſcreet of his County, and one Burgeſs of the moſt diſcreet and ſufficient Men of the Borough called Shiretown in the ſame County, to be freely and indifferently elected by thoſe that ſhould be intereſted in ſuch Proclamation, according to the Form of the Statute and Ordinances thereof made and provided, and the Names of the ſame Knight and Burgeſs ſo elected to be inſerted in certain Indentures thereof to be made between him the ſaid then Sheriff and thoſe who ſhould be intereſted in ſuch Election, although ſuch Knight and Burgeſs elected were preſent or abſent, and that he ſhould make them to come at the ſaid Day and Place; ſo that the ſame Knight for himſelf and the Commons of that County, and the ſaid Burgeſs for himſelf and the Commons of the Borough aforeſaid, ſeverally of themſelves ſhould have full and ſufficient Power to do and conſent to thoſe Things, which (by the Favour of God) might then there happen to be ordained, touching the Buſineſs aforeſaid, by the common Council of the Realm of the ſaid Lady Queen of England: to the End that her ſaid Buſineſs might not in any wiſe remain unfiniſhed by Reaſon of the Defect of ſuch Power, or of the haſty and imperfect Election of the Knight and Burgeſs aforeſaid. Alſo the ſame Lady the Queen now enjoined that neither the then Sheriff, nor any other Sheriff of her ſaid Realm of England ſhould be in any wiſe elected. And that the ſame Sheriff of the Lady the Queen ſhould without Delay diſtinctly and plainly under his Seal and the Seals of them who ſhould be preſent at that Election certify into her Chancery, at the ſaid Day and Place, the ſaid Election made in his full County, remitting to the ſame Lady the Queen the other Part of the Indentures aforeſaid annexed to the ſame Writ, together with the Writ itſelf, as in the ſame Writ is more fully contained. Which ſaid Writ the tenth Day of September, in the firſt Year of the Reign of the ſaid Lady the Queen now, at Beaumaris in the aforeſaid County of Angleſea was delivered to the aforeſaid Rice (the ſame Rice then being Sheriff of the aforeſaid County of Angleſea) by the Hands of one William Banion; and that the aforeſaid Rice, at his next County, within the ſame County of Angleſea, after the Receipt of the ſaid Writ, and by virtue of the ſame, viz. the 14th Day of September in the aforeſaid firſt Year of the Reign of the ſaid Lady the Queen now, in his full County then holden at Beaumaris in the aforeſaid County of Angleſea, in the Shire-houſe there, before the ſame Rice then Sheriff of the ſame County of Angleſea, cauſed the ſame Writ to be read, and alſo public Proclamation to be made of the ſaid Day and Place of the Parliament aforeſaid afterwards to be held, and of the chuſing according to the Form and Purport of the ſame Writ, one Knight, wearing a Sword, the moſt fit and diſcreet of the County aforeſaid, and one Burgeſs of the moſt diſcreet and ſufficient Men of the aforeſaid Borough called Shiretown in the ſame County, to come to the ſame Parliament, as he was commanded to do by the ſaid Writ, and according to the Form thereof, viz. between the Hours of eight and nine of the ſame 14th Day, whereupon they proceeded then there in that full County to the Election of one Knight for the ſame County of Angleſea, by the Men reſident in the ſaid County, and preſent at the ſaid Proclamation. And although the ſame Richard Buckley, who then and long before was a Knight wearing a Sword, abiding and dwelling at Beaumaris in the aforeſaid County of Angleſea in Wales, and born in the ſame County, was, in the ſame full County, the ſaid 14th Day between the Hours of eight and nine, then and there duly elected and nominated to be a Knight of the ſaid County for the ſaid Parliament, to come for the ſame County to the ſaid Parliament, by the * greater Number of Men then reſident within the ſaid County of Angleſea, and there preſent at the ſaid Time of the

Defendant demurs.

And the aforeſaid Rice by Thomas Carpenter his Attorney comes and defends the Force and Injury when, &c. And ſays that the aforeſaid Matter in the Declaration aforeſaid above ſpecified is inſufficient in Law for the aforeſaid Richard to have and maintain his Action aforeſaid againſt the ſaid Rice, and that he has no Neceſſity nor is by the Law of the Land bound to anſwer the ſaid Matter in Manner and Form aforeſaid declared; and this he is ready to verify, wherefore for Want of ſufficient Matter in the ſaid Declaration ſpecified the ſame Rice prays Judgment, and that the aforeſaid Richard may be precluded from having his action aforeſaid againſt him, &c.

Joinder in Demurrer.

And the aforeſaid Richard, for that he has above declared ſufficient Matter in Law in his Declaration aforeſaid to maintain his Action aforeſaid, which he is ready to verify, which ſaid Matter the aforeſaid Rice does not deny, nor thereunto in any wiſe anſwer, but the ſaid Averment wholly refuſes to admit, prays Judgment, and his Debt aforeſaid together with his Damages, &c. to be adjudged to him, &c. And becauſe the Juſtices here will adviſe of and upon the Premiſſes before they give Judgment thereon, Day is given to the Parties aforeſaid here until the Octave of St. Hillary, to hear their Judgment thereon, becauſe the Juſtices here not yet, &c. At which Day here came as well the aforeſaid Richard as the aforeſaid Rice by their Attornies aforeſaid. And becauſe the Juſtices here will further adviſe of and upon the Premiſſes before they give Judgment thereon, Day is therefore given to the Parties here until from the Day of Eaſter in fifteen Days to hear their Judgment thereon, becauſe the Juſtices here thereof not yet, &c. At which Day here came as well the aforeſaid Richard as the aforeſaid Rice by their Attornies aforeſaid. And becauſe the Juſtices here will further adviſe of and upon the Premiſſes before they give Judgment thereon, Day is therefore given to the Parties aforeſaid here until on the Morrow of the Holy Trinity, to hear their Judgment thereon, becauſe the Juſtices here thereof not yet, &c.

The CASE. Trin. 1 & 2. P. & M. Debt upon the Statute of 23. H. 6. cap. 15. for not returning him a Knight of the County of Angleſea in Wales to the Parliament of England, and adjudged (1.) Count that licet he was elected, is a full and ſufficient Averment; (2) Count that he was elected per majorem numerum, &c. generally, without ſhewing the certain Number, is good. (3) that the Statute of 27. H. 8. cap. 27. which annexes Wales to England, enables a Perſon born in Wales to take Benefit of the Statute of 23. H. 6. cap. 15.

The Caſe was recited briefly as follows. Sir Richard Buckley Knight has brought an Action of Debt for 100 l. againſt Rice Thomas, and in his Declaration has recited a great Part of the Statute made in [a] 23. H. 6. concerning the Elections of Burgeſſes and Knights to come to Parliament, whereby (amongſt other Things) it is ordained, that every Sheriff, at every Time that he doth contrary to the ſame Statute, or any other Statute then before made for the Election of Knights, Citizens, and Burgeſſes to come to Parliament, ſhould incur the Penalty contained in the Statute of [b] 8. H. 6. and further ſhould forfeit and pay to every Perſon thence afterwards choſen Knight, Citizen, or Burgeſs in his County to come to any Parliament, and not duly returned, or to any other Perſon that in Default of ſuch Knight, Citizen, or Burgeſs will ſue, 100 l. and that every Knight, Citizen or Burgeſs ſo grieved, ſeverally, or any other Perſon that in their Default will ſue, ſhall have his Action of Debt againſt the ſaid Sheriff, or his Executors or Adminiſtrators, to demand and have the ſaid 100 l. with his Coſts expended in ſuch Caſe. And alſo in his Declaration has recited, that by the Statute of [c] 27. H. 8. it was enacted and eſtabliſhed, that the Country or Dominion of Wales ſhould be, ſtand, and continue from thenceforth for ever incorporated, united, and annexed to and with this Realm of England; and that every Perſon born, or thence afterwards to be born in the ſaid Country or Dominion of Wales, ſhould have and inherit all and every Liberties, Franchiſes, Rights, Privileges, and Laws within this Realm, and other the King's Dominions, as other the King's Subjects naturally born within the ſame have and inherit. And that it was then ordained, that for the ſame Parliament of 27. H. 8. and all other Parliaments thenceforth to be held for this Realm of England, one Knight ſhould be choſen

for the ſame Parliaments for every of the Counties within the Country and Dominion of Wales, and the Election to be in ſuch Manner and Form as Knights of Parliament are elected in other Counties of this Realm. And alſo in his Declaration he has recited, that in the Act made in the 34 and 35 H. 8. (which was made concerning certain Ordinances in Wales) it is enacted, that all the King's Subjects and Reſiants in Wales ſhould find at all Parliaments thence afterwards to be holden in England, Knights for the Counties, and Citizens and Burgeſſes for Cities and Towns, to be named and choſen by Authority of the King's Writ under the Great Seal of England, according to the Act in ſuch Caſe provided. And he recites further in the ſaid Declaration, that the Queen the 14 Day of Auguſt, in the firſt Year of her Reign, had ſent her Writ to the Sheriff of Angleſea, to cauſe one Knight of the ſame County to be choſen to come to Parliament to be holden the fifth Day of October then next to come. And he ſhews by the ſame Declaration, that according to the Form and Purport of the ſame Writ the ſaid Sheriff in his full County proceeded to the Election of a Knight for the ſame County: and that the Plaintiff himſelf was choſen and nominated a Knight of the ſame County to come to Parliament for the ſame County, by the greater Number of Men then reſiant within the ſame County of Angleſea, proteſting that the ſaid Rice made no Indenture between him and the Electors concerned in the ſaid Election, yet the ſame Plaintiff ſays in Fact, that the ſaid Rice did not return the ſaid Plaintiff to be a Knight of the ſaid County, according to the Form and Effect of the ſaid Election and Statute, but returned the ſaid Writ, and an Indenture annexed to it, containing that one William Lewis was choſen Knight to come to Parliament for the ſame County, by which an Action has accrued to the Plaintiff to demand of the Defendant the ſaid 100 l. And further the Plaintiff avers that the ſaid County of Angleſea is, and at the Time of the making the ſaid Act of 27. H. 8. and long before was one of the Counties of the ſaid Country or Dominion of Wales. And upon this Declaration the Defendant has demurred in Judgment.

And three Exceptions were taken to the Declaration, and argued at the Bar. The firſt was, that it was not declared preciſely that the Plaintiff was choſen Knight for the County, but it is alledged that altho' he was choſen Knight, &c. and the Word in the Record is (licet) he was choſen, which (it is ſaid) is not an Allegation in Fact that he was choſen, but is only an argumentative Allegation, which is not ſufficient for the other Party to traverſe, or to take Iſſue upon, and therefore it was ſaid the Declaration is not good. Exception 1.

The ſecond Exception was, in that the Plaintiff ſaith, altho' he was choſen by the greater Number of Men then reſiant within the ſame County, yet the Defendant returned another, &c. which Allegation (it was ſaid) is not good, inaſmuch as he does not ſhew the Certainty of the Number, as to ſay, that he was choſen by 200, which was the greater Number, and thereupon a certain Iſſue might ariſe whether he was elected by ſo many or not; but as it is alledged (it was ſaid) there is no Certainty at all, for he ſhews the Election by a confuſed Multitude, the Number of which, if Iſſue ſhould be joined, the Jurors ought to take Notice of, which would be unreaſonable, and it is more fit to be ſhewn by the Plaintiff himſelf, ſince it lies in his Conuzance. For (it was ſaid) by his affirming that he was choſen by the greater Number, thereby he takes Conuſance of the Number; for he cannot take Notice of the greater without taking Notice of the leſs, for the greater is in reſpect of the leſs; wherefore in that he affirms his Knowledge of the greater Number, therein he affirms his Knowledge of the leſſer Number, and conſequently of the whole Number, and becauſe he has not ſhewn the certain Number in the Count, therefore (it was ſaid) the Count is not good. Exception 2.

The third Exception was to the Matter. For it was ſaid, that Wales, altho' it was a long Time under the Government of the Kings of England, yet it was not parcel of the Realm of England, nor were the People of it bound or ruled by the Laws of England, nor did they come to the Parliaments of England until the Statute of 27. H. 8. by which it was ordained that one Knight for every Welſh County ſhall come to the Parliament of England; and the Election of them is appointed to be in the ſame Manner, Form, and Order as Knights of Parliament are elected in other Counties of this Realm; and that they ſhall have like Dignity, Preheminence, and Privilege, and ſhall have ſuch Fees as other Knights of Parliament have and are allowed, and the Fees of the Knights to be levied of the Commons of the County where they are elected. But the Statute does not make Mention of the Return of the Sheriff, nor of the Penalty againſt the Sheriff for a falſe Return, but this (it was ſaid) remains as it was before the Statute of 23. H. 8. in which Caſe the Penalty of the Statute of 23. H. 6. does not extend to Officers of Wales, becauſe Wales was not then parcel of the Realm, as it is ſaid before. And for this Cauſe (it was ſaid) the Action of Debt for the 100 l. is not maintainable againſt the Defendant. And theſe Matters were argued at the Bar firſt by Gawdy and after by Dalſon Serjeants being of Counſel with the Defendant: And on the other Side firſt by Dyer, and afterwards by Catline, Serjeants. But I have omitted their Arguments, becauſe I did not hear the whole of them. And now on Saturday the 22 Day of June, in this preſent Trinity Term, it was argued by all the Juſtices, as follows. Exception 3.

Staunford puiſn Juſtice. It ſeems to me that the Plaintiff ſhall be barred. As to the firſt Exception, it appears to me that the Allegation of the Election, which comes under this Word (* licet) is not well nor effectually alledged. † For there is a Ground in Law, that in Declarations certainty Staunford J. * See the contrary reſolved, that the Word licet is a direct affirmative, Yelv. 21. Cro. E. 75. Hardr. 3. 48. N. Bendl. 297. Comyns 633. Heath's Max. 164. 165. † See Ante 84. (e) and the Books there cited.

tainty ought to be alledged by apt Words of Affirmation, and if it is not, the Declaration is not good. And therefore if a Man will bring an Action of Debt upon an Obligation, and declare in this Form, viz. it appears by the Obligation that the Defendant ſtood bound to the Plaintiff in 20 l. which he has not paid the Plaintiff, this Declaration is not good, becauſe it is not alledged by Matter in Fact that he was bound to him in the 20 l. but the Bond is alledged by way of Recital only. And in 11. H. 6. a Man brought an Action of Debt againſt a Goaler who had let one at large that was in Execution in his Cuſtody for the Sum in Demand, and declared that he had let him at large, by which Means the Plaintiff excluſus fuit de debito ſuo, and this Declaration was held not good, becauſe he did not ſay expreſly that he was not ſatisfied when he let him go at large, for that was the Reaſon why he ſhould not maintain the Action againſt the Goaler, which he did not alledge but by Implication, and by Implication it was alledged, for if the Goaler let him go at large, by which the Plaintiff was barred of his Debt againſt the Priſoner, thereby it is implied that his Debt was then unpaid; but the Count was holden not good, becauſe it was not affirmed preciſely as it is ſaid before. [a] And in 38. H. 6. where in an Action of Debt the Plaintiff counted that the Defendant retained him in his Service by the Space of eight Years to ſerve him in all Occupations, paying him 20 s. yearly, and counted further that he ſerved him for the Time, and ſo an Action accrued for 8 l. being in Arrear for his Salary; and the Defendant waged his Law, and notwithſtanding that he ſhould not have had his Law if he had retained him in Huſbandry, and notwithſtanding that the Service of Huſbandry is contained in theſe Words (all Occupations), yet it is there adjudged that the Defendant ſhould be received to his Law, becauſe it was not fully expreſſed, but implicatively only, that he was retained in Huſbandry, which Implication is not ſufficient. And ſo in Counts if the effectual Point of them is not fully alledged by Words in the affirmative, they are not good, altho' it is contained by way of Recital or Implication. Then it is to be ſeen how the Plaintiff has here alledged that he was choſen a Knight to come to Parliament. And it ſeems to me that he has not alledged it by a full Affirmation; and thereupon the Meaning of this Word (licet) ought to be weighed and diſcuſſed. And in order to underſtand it truly, being a Latin Word, we ought to follow the Steps of our Predeceſſors Judges of the Law, who when they were in Doubt about the Meaning of any Latin Words enquired how thoſe that were ſkilled in the Study thereof took them, and purſued their Conſtruction. [b] As in 9. H. 6. where the Defendant in Replevin avowed for Damage feaſant in Land let to him by an Abbot and Convent, and the Plaintiff made Title to Common in the Land by Grant; the Defendant pleaded in Bar a Deed indented, wherein it was contained that the Father of the Plaintiff, by whom he claims Common, renunciavit toti Communiæ, quam habere conſuevit averiorum ſuorum cum averiis of the Tenant of the Land, and Exception was taken to the Deed, becauſe the Words had no Meaning, et non allocatur, for that this Word and Verb renunciavit requires a dative Caſe, and not an Accuſative after it, wherefore it is there held that it had a ſufficient Meaning. And ſo it appears there that they purſued the Senſe of the Grammar in the Conſtruction of the ſaid Word, being a Latin Word. [c] So in 7. H. 6. where an Indictment was found for a Treſpaſs done die Jovis proximo poſt diem Pentecoſtes, and there Error was aſſigned for the Incertainty of the Day, becauſe dies Pentecoſtes is every Day of the Week, and the Pentecoſt is thus defined, viz. Pentecoſte, dicitur a penta, (quod eſt quinque), et coſte, (quod eſt decem), et hoc eſt quinquies decem dies poſt Paſcha, and that is, dies Dominicus. And therefore we may ſee that our Predeceſſors have enquired and followed the Senſe of the Latiniſts in Latin Words. [d] And ſo in 11. H. 6. in Forgery of falſe Deeds the Writ was, quod falſa conſpiratione habita imaginavit, &c. and Exception was taken to the Writ, becauſe there is no ſuch Latin Word: for it is not imagino, -as, but it is imaginor, -aris, and therefore the Writ ſhould be imaginatus fuit: and there foraſmuch as by the Grammar the Latin was not good, the Writ was holden bad, and therefore it was amended. [e] So in 9. H. 7. it appears that one was bound in an Obligation upon this Condition, that if he paid 5 l. of fine Gold, that then, &c. and the Obligation was puri auri, and there the Judges were in Doubt what was Latin for fine Gold, and (as it appears by the Book) the Maſters of Grammar were put to give their Opinion what was Latin for fine, and they could not tell. So that our Predeceſſors have always conſulted about the Meaning of Latin Words with Grammarians and others that beſt underſtand them, and ſuch Senſe as the Grammar warrants and allows they have admitted; wherefore I apprehend that the Grammar is the moſt proper Judge of the Meaning of this Word (licet), being a Latin Word. And as I take it, licet by the Rules of Grammar is a Conjunction adverſative, and it is rarely uſed but where there are two Matters alledged together, and neither of them is a perfect Sentence by itſelf without the other: and the firſt Matter comes under the Word (licet), and the laſt under this Word (tamen), for the tamen is the Relative, and the licet is its Antecedent; and the licet is ſeldom put in the firſt Part, but where the tamen is in the laſt Part, for it is ſubſequent to the licet. And the Cauſe why it is called a Conjunction adverſative is, becauſe that which is contained in the firſt Part is contrary to that which is contained in the ſecond Part, or in other Words, that which comes under the licet is contrary to that which comes under the tamen, and therefore it is called adverſative, quià quod contrariatur, adverſatur. And that which is preciſely affirmed is the laſt Part, viz. that which comes under the tamen, for that is the Allegation in Fact. And the firſt Part is not a preciſe Affirmation in Fact, but is an Affirmation contained by Implication under der the licet, and is alſo an Affirmation in Anſwer to the Adverſative, that is, the tamen, which has after it the Negation, viz. that he did not return the Plaintiff, &c. which Affirmations are only argumentative Affirmations, and therefore the Defendant may not traverſe it. And for another Cauſe alſo he may not traverſe it, for if he ſhould traverſe it, then would he traverſe an imperfect Sentence; for, as I have ſaid, altho' that which comes under the licet is one Matter, and that which comes under the tamen, another Matter, yet neither of them by themſelves is a perfect Sentence, but both of them make the Sentence, and it is not compleat until both the Parts are put, and if he ſhould traverſe the firſt Part, then ſhould he traverſe half the Sentence, and join Iſſue upon it, which would be inconvenient. * But if it was the uſual Form to alledge it by licet, then I would hold with it. As in Debt upon Obligations the Form is to recite the ſame by this Word (cum) viz. Cum Johannes Stile per ſcriptum ſuum &c. conceſſit ſe teneri, &c. as may be ſeen by all the Records of Debt remaining in this Court, and therefore the Recital of it by cum is there good. [a] And ſo the Book is in Forger of falſe Deeds brought againſt one only, the Writ was quòd falſa conſpiratione habita, &c. and Judgment was demanded of the Writ, becauſe he could not conſpire with himſelf, but for that the Writ was according to the Statute, (which ſaith, if any conſpire to make any falſe Deed), and according to the uſual Form, the Writ was holden good. Wherefore we ought to keep to the uſual Form. But in this Caſe it is not the uſual Form to alledge the Election under the Word (licet) as you may ſee in the Book of Entries. And then ſince he was not tied down to any uſual Form, but was at Liberty to take ſuch Words as were proper for the Matter, and he has not done ſo, we ought not to hold with the Words more than they will warrant. And they will not prove an Election in Fact, as I have ſaid before. Therefore it ſeems to me that the Election is not preciſely alledged ſo as it may be traverſed, and alſo it cannot be traverſed, becauſe it is but half a Sentence. For which Reaſons the Declaration is not good.

As to the ſecond Point, it ſeems to me that he ſhall not be compelled to ſhew the certain [b] Number of the Electors. [c] For ſince he cannot be intended to have certain Knowledge thereof, he ſhall not therefore be compelled to ſhew the Certainty. And perhaps he was elected by Voices, or by holding up of Hands, and not by the Number of Perſons in certain, in which Caſe it is eaſy to determine who hath the Majority of Voices or Hands by hearing or ſeeing, and yet very difficult to know the certain Number or the Names of them. And by the Indenture he could not know the Number, for the Sheriff made no Indenture between him and the Electors of the Plaintiff, but he made the Indenture between him and the Electors of the ſaid William Lewis. And ſo the Plaintiff could not have Knowledge of the Number of the Electors by the Indenture, nor by any other Means, according to common Intendment, and ſince he may not be intended to have Knowledge of the Certainty, he ſhall not be compelled to ſhew it. [d] As in Debt againſt an Executor, if he ſays that he never was Executor, nor ever adminiſtred as Executor, the Plaintiff ſhall ſay that he adminiſtred at ſuch a Place, and he needs not ſhew what Things he adminiſtred, becauſe he cannot have Knowledge of the Things, nor of the Number of them which the other has adminiſtred, whereunto he is not privy. And ſo it is in Things that are of an infinite Number, [e] as if a Man is bound to diſcharge the Sheriff of all Things touching his Office, he ſhall ſay generally that he has diſcharged him, without ſhewing the Things in particular, becauſe they are of ſuch an infinite Number that he cannot be intended to remember or know the Certainty of them. And ſo it is held in one Book, that if a Man is bound to ſheer annually the Sheep of the Obligee going in ſuch a Paſture, he ſhall ſay that he has ſhorn them annually, without mentioning the Number, for perhaps ſome Years there are more, and ſome leſs, and ſo he can not be intended to remember the certain Number annually. So here the Plaintiff could not come at the Knowledge of the Number of the Electors, for which Reaſon he ſhall ſay generally that he was elected by the greater Number, and therefore the Count is good enough notwithſtanding this Exception.

And as to the principal Matter, it ſeems to me that the Sheriff, who is now Defendant, is not within the Penalty of the Statute of 23. H. 6. [f] For it is to be obſerved, that Wales was not parcel of the Realm of England until the Statute of 27. H. 8. was made, by which Statute it is united and annexed to the Realm of England, and made parcel of it. And altho' by that Statute it is made parcel of this Realm, yet (if the Statute had ſtop'd there) it does not follow that Knights or Burgeſſes ſhould by virtue thereof come out of Wales to Parliament; for the County of Cheſter was always parcel of the Realm of England, and yet by the Common Law [g] Burgeſſes or Knights ſhould not come from thence to Parliament, nor ſhould the Laws made concerning the Election or Return of Knights to Parliament take Effect there by the Common Law. So in our Caſe, altho' the Statute makes Wales parcel of this Realm, if it had not gone further it would not have followed thereby that Burgeſſes or Knights ſhould come from thence to Parliament, nor that the Laws made before Time touching Burgeſſes or Knights of Parliament ſhould extend to them of Wales. And therefore the Makers of the Statute perceiving this ordained further, that one Knight ſhould be choſen for every County of Wales, and appointed the Manner of Election of ſuch Knight, and his Dignity, Preheminence, and Privilege, and that his Fees ſhould be levied and collected as they are in this Realm of England, but the Statute ſays nothing of the Return of the Sheriff, nor of any Penalty concerning the ſame. And the Election is one Thing, and the Return and Penalty another Thing. And the Statute of 23. H. 6. makes them ſeveral, wherefore ſince they are ſeveral, and the Statute of 27. H. 8. does not ſpeak of the Return nor of [f] See 1. Freem. 147.

[g] But now by the Statute of 34. & 35. H. 8. cap. 13. Knights and Burgeſſes have Seats in Parliament for the County Palatine of Cheſter.

any Penalty thereupon, then (as I apprehend) it ſtands as it was before the Statute of 27. H. 8. for the Words of the Statute which concern only the Election, Dignity, and the Fees of Knights of Wales for the Parliament ſhall not be extended further. For it is a new Ordinance touching certain Points, beyond which the Words ſhall not extend, and eſpecially to the Pain or Puniſhment of others. [a] As the Statute which inflicts a Penalty malefactoribus in parcis ſhall not extend malefactoribus in foreſtis. [b] And the Statute which makes it penal for the Sheriff to leaſe out his County ſhall not extend to him if he leaſes but a Hundred parcel of his County. In like Manner the Statute of 8. H. 6. which upon a forcible Entry gives treble Damages to the Party that ſues an Aſſize, or Action of Treſpaſs, ſhall not be extended to give treble Damages in a Writ of Entry in nature of an Aſſize. And ſo penal Laws ſhall not be extended beyond the Words. Thus in the Caſe here the Statute of 27. H. 8. concerning the Election, Dignity, and Fees of the Knights of Wales, ſhall not extend to a falſe Return after the Election, for that is another Thing, and not mentioned in the Statute. For when the Statute of 7. H. 4. was made, which limits the Order of the Election of Knights to Parliament, yet it did not extend to the falſe Return of the Sheriff, until the Statute of 11. H. 4. was made. And then what Reaſon is there that the Statute of 27. H. 8. which limits the Order of Election of Knights to Parliament, ſhould be extended to a falſe Return, any more than the Statute of 7. H. 4.? none certainly, for the Caſes are alike. But it may be objected againſt me, that now ſince Wales is annexed and united to England, and become Part of it, the Statutes which have been made for England ſhall extend to Wales, being now a Member of it; ſo that the Statute of 8. H. 6. which ſays, that the Electors of Knights for the Parliament ſhall diſpend 40 s. a Year, and that every Sheriff of England ſhall have Power to examine upon the Evangeliſts every Elector how much Land he may diſpend by the Year, ſhall now extend to the Sheriffs of Wales, becauſe Wales is Part of England, and ſo the Sheriffs of Wales are included in the Name of the Sheriffs of England. Sir, as to this I anſwer, that altho' England is now enlarged, yet the Statutes don't extend beyond that which was England at the Time ſuch Statute was made. [c] As in 7. H. 6. it is ſaid, that London was ancient Demeſn, and had a Privilege that every Villain who tarried there a Year and a Day ſhould be privileged, ſo that the Lord might not ſeize him afterwards: And there it is ſaid, that London was enlarged further than it was in ancient Time, and became more extenſive than it was when it was firſt ancient Demeſn, and it appears there that the ancient Privilege aforeſaid ſhould not extend to the new Enlargement. So here, the ancient Statutes of England ſhall not extend to the Land newly added to England. And the Clauſe of 27. H. 8. recited in the Pleading, viz. every Perſon or Perſons born in the Country or Dominion of Wales ſhall have and inherit all and every Laws within this Realm, and other the King's Dominions, as other the King's Subjects naturally born within the ſame have and inherit, ſhall not aid the Plaintiff, nor make for him. For the Clauſe ſaith, (ſhall inherit all Laws) and does not ſhew any Law in particular, and therefore it reſts in the Conſtruction of the Law, what Laws the Words will enable them to have and inherit. And it ſeems to me that the Laws which this Clauſe enables them to have and inherit are ſuch as were in being before the Statute of 27. H. 8. and not thoſe which were made by that Statute. For ſince the Statute makes them as it were Purchaſers of thoſe Laws, it behoveth that the Laws, whereof they were Purchaſers, be in being at the Time. So that the ſaid Clauſe has Relation to ſuch Laws as were in being before the Statute, and not to ſuch as were made by the Statute. For thoſe which were made by the Statute were not Laws at the Time of making the Statute, but they were Laws after the Statute, made by the Statute. And then foraſmuch as this Clauſe reaches only to Laws in being before the Statute, it cannot be of any Service to the Plaintiff here, for before the Statute there was not any Law in England that Knights ſhould come from Wales to the Parliament of England; but that is ordained by the Statute of 27. H. 8. as is ſhewn before, for which Reaſon the ſaid Clauſe will not extend to charge the Sheriff of a Welſh County with a Penalty. But yet there is a Caſe where it is taken, that the general Words of a Statute ſhall extend to another Thing made at the ſame Parliament: As the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 12. ordains, that in an Appeal of Homicide and other Felonies, if the Defendant be acquitted, it ſhall be inquired who were the Abettors, if the Plaintiff be not ſufficient; before which Statute Rape was not Felony, but is made Felony by the ſame Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 34. [d] and yet if the Defendant in an Appeal of Rape be acquitted, the Abettors ſhall be inquired of if the Plaintiff is not ſufficient to render Damages; which is ſomewhat ſtrange, for when the Statute ſaith procure falſe Appeals to be made of Homicides and other Felonies, &c. it ſeems to be intended of Felonies before made, and not of Felonies made by the ſame Statute; however it is taken as I have ſaid before. But I have not ſeen the like Conſtruction of Words in any other Caſe, and eſpecially where it is penal. Wherefore it ſeems to me, that for the Cauſes before ſhewn the Plaintiff ſhall be barred.

Saunders Juſtice. I am of a contrary Opinion. And firſt I grant that if Matters ariſe in our Law which concern other Sciences or Faculties, we commonly apply for the Aid of that Science or Faculty which it concerns. Which is an honourable and commendable Thing in our Law. For thereby it appears that we don't deſpiſe all other Sciences but our own, but we approve of them and encourage them as Things worthy of Commendation. [e] And therefore in 7. H. 6. in a Caſe that came before the Judges, which was determinable in our Law, and alſo touched upon the Civil Law, they were well content to hear Huls, who was a Batchelor of both Laws, argue and diſcourſe diſcourſe upon Logic, and upon the Difference between compulſione præciſa et cauſativa, as Men that were not above being inſtructed and made wiſer by him. [a] And in an Appeal of Maihem the Judges of our Law have uſed to be informed by Surjeons whether it be a Maihem or not, becauſe their Knowledge and Skill can beſt diſcern it. [b] And in a Caſe where Excommengement was pleaded againſt one, and the Party ſaid that he ought not to be diſabled thereby, becauſe there was an Appeal pending thereof, there the Judges enquired of them that were well verſed in the Canon Law touching the Force thereof. [c] And ſo they did in Caſes which concern Grammar, as appears in the ſaid Caſe in 9. H. 7. as is ſaid before. And foraſmuch a licet is a Latin Word, and the Senſe of it is to be tried by the Grammar, I admit that we ought to enquire of the Grammar for the meaning of it, and purſue the ſame. And, Sir, by the Grammar it is taken to be a Conjunction adverſative, as hath been ſaid, but it is not always ſo. For it is alſo an Adverb affirmative, and put antecedently, and it has its Relatives tamen et attamen. And where it and its Relatives are put, there are two Matters, as hath been ſaid, the one coming under the licet, and the other under the tamen. And altho' there is no perfect Sentence until both the Matters are put, yet when they are both put, there are two full Sentences, both of which are Affirmatives, and preciſe Allegations. For the Election here under the licet is preciſely affirmed, whereof the one or the other may well be traverſed, for all that comes under the Adverb affirmative (as licet is put by way of an Adverb affirmative) is an Affirmation; and it may be here well tranſlated into Engliſh, viz. that he was elected, and that the Defendant did not return him. And therefore by the Rule of the Grammar the Senſe of licet is a full Affirmation, as I have ſaid. And ſo it is uſed by all the good Writers in the Latin Tongue. [d] And therefore Polidore Virgil, who wrote the Hiſtory of this Kingdom, making mention of the Wars of Edward the third againſt the French, and ſpeaking of Robert de Artois ſaith of him, that he finds amongſt the Engliſh Chronicles, that he ruſhed upon the French with great Violence, and at laſt put them to Flight, and made great Slaughter of them, licet beneficio noctis Francis fugiendi ſpatium datum fuiſſet, by which Words he affirms preciſely that the Night was come, for elſe it had been to no Purpoſe to have ſpoken of the Night. [e] And Forteſcue in his Book de laudibus legum Angliæ, ſpeaking to the Prince concerning the Law of England with Regard to the Iſſue begotten by a Villain upon a free Woman, ſays, et licet jura illa judicent eum ſervum, quem ſervus in conjugio ex libera procreavit, non tamen per hoc jura illa rigida crudeliave ſentiri poterunt; by which Sentence Forteſcue affirms preciſely the Law of England to be, that ſuch Iſſue is a Villain, as every one who hears the Sentence will ſay. [f] So in another Place, where after that Forteſcue and the Prince had debated the Matter, whether the Trial by 12 Men according to the Law of England be better than the Trial by Witneſſes in the Civil Law, the Prince ſaith, ſed licet non infime (Cancellarie) nos delectet forma qua leges Angliæ in contentionibus revelant veritatem, tamen an modus ille ſacræ repugnet ſcripturæ, vel non, paululum agitamur; in which Speech the Prince declares preciſely and fully that he had taken Delight in the Method of Trial after the Laws of England in Matters of Diſpute. But why need we alledge theſe to find out the Meaning of licet, ſince our Calapine, that is, the Regiſter is a ſufficient Proof hereof. [g] For in the Writ of Cautione admittenda, where the Biſhop refuſes to take ſufficient Surety or Caution of him who is taken by Writ of Excommunicato capiendo to obey the Ordinances of holy Church, the Words are thus, viz. licet idem A. vobis frequenter obtulerit idoneam cautionem de parendo mandatis Eccleſiæ in forma juris, ut per hoc abſolutionis beneficium conſequi poſſet, vos nihilominus cautionem hujuſmodi ab eo admittere hactenus recuſatis, &c. which Offer of Caution alledged under the licet is preciſely affirmed there, for without Caution firſt offered the Writ does not lie: So that that is the Effect for which the Writ is awarded, which Effect ought to be fully recited by the Writ; and ſince it is recited under the licet, it is thereby proved that licet is a Word of full Affirmation, which draws after it Matter of Subſtance and Effect. [h] And ſo it appears in the Regiſter, that where one holds four Oxgangs of Land of the King by the Rent of 13 s. to be paid to the King by the Hands of the Sheriff, and theſe Oxgangs come afterwards to divers Hands by Purchaſe, and the Sheriff diſtrains two or three of them for the whole Rent, omitting another who holds Part of it, there the Writ de deonerando pro rata portione, which lies for them in ſuch Caſe, has theſe Words, viz. licet they who ſue the Writ duas bovatas terræ inde tantummodo teneant, tu tamen prædictos 13 s. annuos a præfatis, viz. thoſe that ſue the Writ, omiſſo præfato T. qui dictas duas bovatas terræ reſiduas tenet, exigis, &c. [i] And ſo where four Hides of Land are held to repair a Bridge, and one purchaſes 20 Acres of them, and it is preſented before Juſtices aſſigned that he has all the four Hides, the Writ de deonerando pro rata portione, which lies for him in ſuch Caſe, has the like Words as the other Writ has, viz. licet ipſi niſi tantum viginti acras terræ de dictis quatuor hidis terræ, et quidam alii totum reſiduum earundem quatuor hidarum teneant, vos tamen occaſione præſentationis prædictæ ſeptem libras, ad quas dictæ quatuor hidæ terræ pro reparatione pontis prædictæ apportionatæ ſunt, de eodem, viz. him that ſues the Writ, &c. omiſſis aliis tenementis prædictis, levari nitimini, &c. in both which Writs the licet and that which comes under it is the Ground and Cauſe of the Writ, which may not be ſaid to be argumentatively alledged in the Writ, but effectually and preciſely, it being the Cauſe for which the Writ is awarded. [k] And the Words of the Writ de Idemptitate nominis are, Ac jam ex parte J. de R. de London Baker intellexi-mus, quod licet ipſe non ſit idem J. de R. qui ad ſectam de, &c. viz. the Plaintiff, utlagatus fuit, that the Sheriff intends to trouble him, &c. which Word (licet) is there a preciſe Affirmation that he is not the ſame Perſon who was outlawed, or elſe he ſhould not have the Writ. † From all which Books it appears, that by the Rule of Grammar, and by the Uſage of thoſe that are acquainted with the Latin Tongue, and by the Regiſter, this Word (licet) is a Word of preciſe Affirmation mation, and that the Sentence coming after it as an Allegation in Fact. And ſo it is uſed in the Civil Law, for I got the Queſtion to be propoſed to the Doctors of the Arches at their Table, and it was agreed by them all to be a full Affirmation, and that they frequently uſe it in the Civil Law in ſuch Senſe, and that the Matter which comes after the licet is as fully and preciſely alledged as it could be by any other Words. And therefore it ſeems to me that the Election of the Plaintiff under the Word (licet) is ſufficiently alledged in Fact, and may be well enough traverſed. [a] And it is not like the Caſe in 21. Ed. 4. where an Abbot was appointed Collector of a Tithe granted to the King, and in Diſcharge thereof the Abbot pleaded in the Exchequer, that inter recorda de termino P. &c. continetur, that King Richard 2. had granted to the Predeceſſors of the Abbot, that neither he nor his Succeſſors ſhould be Collectors when any Tithe ſhould be granted, &c. for that was not well pleaded: [b] No more is it, if in a Præcipe quod reddat he ſays, quod inter recorda continetur that he recovered, for it may be contained amongſt the Records, and yet not be a Record: and therefore he ought to ſay preciſely that the King granted that he ſhould be diſcharged, or that he recovered, &c. and the Allegation by way of Recital is not ſufficient. But in our Caſe it is alledged in Fact, for that which comes after the licet is a preciſe Allegation. So it ſeems to me that the Count is good enough notwithſtanding the ſaid Exception.

As to the ſecond Exception, it ſeems to me [c] that the Plaintiff ſhall not be forced to ſhew the certain Number of the Electors; for perhaps he was elected by Voices or Hands, as hath been ſaid, in which Caſe he could have no certain Knowledge of the Number, altho' by ſeeing the Hands or hearing the Voices it might be eaſily told who had the Majority. But if the Caſe was of an Election of an Abbot or Biſhop, there the certain Number may be known well enough, for the Monks who chuſe the Abbot, or the Chapter that chuſes the Biſhop are ſeverally numbered. As in Parliament the Majority of Voices in the Upper Houſe may be eaſily known, becauſe they are demanded ſeverally, and the [d] Clerk of the Houſe reckons them; but in the lower Houſe of Parliament it is otherwiſe, for there the Aſſent is tried by the Voices ſounding all at one Time, and therefore if the Aſſent there was iſſuable, the Party ſhould ſay generally by the greater Number. And ſo it ſhall be in the Election of a Coroner, who is choſen by Voices or Hands, as is ſhewn before: and ſo likewiſe in the Caſe here. [e] And for the greater Proof hereof there is a Caſe in the Book of Entries, where Richard Corbet ſued an Action of Debt againſt Sir Gilbert Talbot Knight for 100 l. and declared that the Defendant, being Sheriff of Salop, returned Richard Ludlow and Thomas Leighton Knights for the Parliament of King Henry the Seventh holden the firſt Year of his Reign, whereas the ſaid Corbet was elected and named to be one Knight, and the ſaid Thomas Leighton the other, per majorem numerum Gentium tunc reſidentium infra dictum comitatum Salop, and there it appears that the Defendant ſaid, quod idem Richardus non fuit electus et nominatus per majorem numerum Gentium &c. reſidentium infra dictum comitatum Salop; and thereupon Iſſue was joined. Which Iſſue being accepted, and appearing in manner and form aforeſaid proves that the Declaration here is good notwithſtanding the ſecond Exception. And ſo it ſeems to me that as to this Point the Declaration is ſufficient.

As to the Matter in Law, it ſeems that the Action lies well for the Plaintiff againſt the Defendant being a Welſh Sheriff. And firſt [f] the Dominion of Wales of ancient Time has belonged to the Crown of England, [g] and Eſcuage was firſt invented by them and by the Scots, againſt whom the Kings of England made War as againſt Rebels, and not as againſt Enemies, becauſe they were ſubject to England. [h] And King Henry 3. made Edward 1. his eldeſt Son Prince of Wales, and gave him the Dominion and Dignity thereof; and the eldeſt Sons of the Kings of England have ever ſince been Princes of Wales. Which Act of Henry 3. was the firſt Alteration of Wales that had been made for a long Time, for thereby Wales, which before was under the Order and Government of the King of England, became ſubject to the Order and Government of the Prince of England. And the ſaid King Edward the firſt made the Statute of Snowden, by which it appears that he conſidered and peruſed all the Laws of Wales, and ſome of them he utterly repealed, ſome he permitted to ſtand, ſome he corrected, and ſome he made anew, and to others he made Additions, as he well might, for thoſe under whom the Government of Wales was had always Authority to make Laws among them, whether he were Prince or King. Which Statute was the ſecond Alteration of Wales. The third was the Statute of 27. H. 8. which ordains, that the Country or Dominion of Wales ſhall from thenceforth for ever be and continue incorporated, united, and annexed to and with this Realm of England: and further ordains that the People of Wales ſhall have, enjoy, and inherit all and ſingular Rights, Privileges, and Laws within this Realm, as other the King's Subjects naturally born within the ſame have and inherit; and from thence it follows that the Plaintiff ſhall take Benefit of the Statute of 23. H. 6. for a Man born in England ſhall take Advantage of it. And ſo ſhall every Man born in Wales, by the Words of the Statute, for the general Words thereof briefly ſpoken do make all the Laws of England, as well Common as Statute Laws, to take Place and Effect in Wales, and that a Welſhman ſhall have like Benefit of the Engliſh Laws in Things done in Wales, as an Engliſhman ſhall have in Things done in England. And by their Quod ei deforceat the Welſhmen ſhall take Advantage of all Actions real given as well by the Common Law as by the Statutes of this Realm. And this is by Reaſon of the Words of the ſaid Statute of 27. H. 8. which Statute extends to enable the Plaintiff to an Action for the Penalty given by the Statute of 23. H. 6. for not returning him Knight of a Welſh County, altho' the ſame Statute of 23. H. 6. did not extend to Wales when it was made. And whereas it has been laſt argued, that if the Statute of 27. H. 8. had not expreſsly ordained that one Knight ſhould be choſen for every Welſh County, the other Words of the Statute would not have extended tended to it, Sir, it is quite the contrary, for the ſaid former Words (if the ſaid laſt Branch had not been made) had been ſufficient to make two Knights to be choſen for every County of Wales. For (as I have ſaid) they were ſufficient to make all Laws as well Statute as Common Laws to take Effect in Wales, and if all Laws ſhould take Effect there, then this Law concerning the Election of two Knights ſhould have taken Effect there. And therefore as the Makers of the Act intended that there ſhould be only one Knight there, for that Reaſon they made the ſaid Clauſe, which was not ſo neceſſary to be made that without it one Knight of every Welſh County could not come to Parliament, for the former Words in the Statute were ſufficient to do that, as it has been ſaid before, and therefore the ſaid Clauſe is no more than an Affirmation of the firſt Words. As it is commonly uſed to put a Clauſe of Diſtreſs for Rent reſerved; and as the Statute of Merton cap. 2. which provides that all Widows may from henceforth bequeath the Corn of their Land, as well of their Dowers, as of their other Lands and Tenements &c. is but an Explanation [a] of the Common Law. But there was a Neceſſity to lay a Reſtraint that there ſhould be only one Knight for every County; ſo that it had been ſufficient if the Statute had ſaid, Provided that there ſhall be but one Knight for every County; and to ſuch Purpoſe only the ſaid Clauſe ſerves, for thereby the Minds of the Makers of the Statute are known. And therefore it enures as a Reſtraint, that there ſhall come no more than one Knight for every County, as I have ſaid before. And as to that which was laſt ſaid, that a Statute made touching a certain Thing cannot extend to another Thing in the ſame Degree, and made at the ſame Parliament; Sir, [b] a lineal Warranty ſhall not be a Bar to the Iſſue in Tail without Aſſets, by Equity of the Statute of † Glouceſter made a long Time before. And ſo the Statute of Acton Burnel cap. 2. ordains, that if the Appraizers of the Goods of him that is bound in a Statute Merchant appraize them too high in Favour of the Debtor, and to the Damage of the Creditor, the Thing appraized ſhall be delivered to them at the Price they put upon it, and they ſhall preſently anſwer the Creditor his Debt; at which Time the Conuſees ſhould not have Execution of the Land of the Conuſor, but that was ordained by a Statute afterwards, viz. Statutum de Mercatoribus, which ordains, that the Lands of the Conuſor ſhall be delivered to the Merchant by reaſonable Extent, and does not ſay that if they be extended too high, they ſhall be delivered to the Extenders, [c] yet it is taken by Equity of the Statute of Acton Burnel, notwithſtanding it is a penal Statute, that they ſhall be delivered to the Extenders, if they extend them too high. Whereupon I ſay, that if it is taken that the Intent of thoſe who made the Statute of Glouceſter, and of thoſe that made the Statute of Acton Burnel, was to aid Things in like Degree, which were not in Being at that Time, but were made ſeveral Years after, as Eſtates Tail were, and as the Execution of the Land to the Creditors was; then a fortiore may it may be taken in our Caſe, that the Intent of the Makers of the Statute of 27. H. 8. which ordains that the People of Wales ſhall have and enjoy the Laws of England, was that they ſhould have that Benefit which the Law of England gives for the falſe Return of a Knight to Parliament, who is ordained to be elected by a Statute made not a long Time after, but at the ſame Seſſion, not by another Bill, but by the ſame Bill and Chapter. And ſo if I ſhould admit that the general Words were not ſufficient to make Knights come out of Wales to Parliament, but that it was ordained by the Clauſe after, yet it cannot be otherwiſe intended but that the Intent of the Makers of the Statute was, that the Penalty of the Law before that Time ſhould extend to a Sheriff who makes a falſe Return upon the Election of a Knight choſen for a Welſh County purſuant to the Ordinance of that Statute. But, as I ſaid before, the firſt Words are ſufficient to cauſe ſuch Knights to come to Parliament, and to make the Penalty alſo extend to a falſe Return of them. Therefore it ſeems to me that the Plaintiff ſhall recover.

Brown Juſtice to the ſame Purpoſe. And he ſaid, in Things concerning Grammar their Predeceſſors had conſulted with Grammarians, and had followed their Rules, as it appears in our Books where the Judges ſay, [d] proximo antecedenti fiat relatio, which Sentence they took out of Grammar. And he argued that licet was a full Affirmative, and that the Matter which is contained under the licet is affirmed with greater Vehemency than it could be without the licet, and that the licet encreaſes the Affirmation. As licet I gave him 20 Oaks, tamen he cut down 100. And licet I required him not to do the Thing, tamen he has done it. And licet tangat regem, &c. And he argued further, that the Plaintiff need not ſhew the certain Number of the Electors. And further he argued, that the general Words of the Statute of 27. H. 8. enabled the Plaintiff to take Benefit of the Penalty. And he argued to the ſame Effect with Saunders.

Brook Chief Juſtice. I am of the ſame Opinion. And as to the firſt Point, Declarations ought to contain a certain Affirmation in the material Part. And therefore I agree, that in the ſaid Caſe of Debt upon an Obligation if the Plaintiff declare in this Form, viz. it appears by the Obligation that the Defendant was bound, &c. the Count is not good, becauſe it is not actually alledged that he was bound, for the ſaying that it appears is but a putting in Mind of a Thing apparent, for which Reaſon the Count is not good, becauſe he does not affirm that he was bound. But in our Caſe it ſeems to me that the Matter coming after the licet is fully and preciſely affirmed. And this Word (licet) of itſelf without more Matter is neither an Affirmative nor a Negative, but the Matter governs it, and it does not govern the Matter. As licet he be, is an Affirmative, and licet he be not is a Negative. And ſo it is a Negative or an Affirmative according as the Matter which comes after it is. But nevertheleſs the Matter which follows the licet, whether the ſame be affirmatively or negatively put, is preciſely alledged to be or not to be; which is the Point we are now to conſider. And as a preciſe Allegation or Affirmation of a Thing to be or not to be, it is uſed by Writers. And the Sentence having the licet and the tamen is more eloquent than

than two ſingle Affirmatives without them, which is the Reaſon that they are ſo much uſed. And Sir, our Law does not neceſſarily require Things to be alledged by one only preciſe Order of Words of Affirmation, but there are Inſtances where the Law allows Sentences to be preciſe and affirmative, which come under other Words as ſtrange as licet is, and not unlike licet, as this Word († cum). [a] And therefore it appears in the Book of Entries, viz. Quod cum the Defendant had aſſumed upon himſelf to carry the Tithes of the Plaintiff to his Parſonage, he did not carry them, &c. which Matter coming under the Word (cum) is there preciſely alledged; and it may well be traverſed, for it is the Subſtance of the Declaration. [b] And there is a Writ in the Regiſter as follows, viz. Cum the Plaintiff had Waif and Eſtrays within his Manor, the Defendant took two Horſes being eſtrayed: which Matter there following the Cum may be traverſed. And the Writ of Eſcheat is, "tanquam eſchaeta ſua reverti debet, which Word (tanquam) is there a Word of Affirmation in fact. And ſo where one is vouched as Heir, he ſhall enter into the Warranty tanquam he that has nothing by Deſcent; this is there effectually alledged as a full Denial that he has nothing by Deſcent." [c] And ſo the Formedon in Deſcender is, "which to the "Plaintiff deſcendere debet ut filio et hæredi, &c." which is an Affirmation in Deed. And in like Manner are tam and quam uſed as effectual Affirmations. And if the Words cum, tanquam, ut, and tam, are Words of Effect, and traverſable, having after them Matter of Subſtance, what Reaſon is there why licet [d] ſhould not be judged as full an Affirmation here, and that the Matter after it is as preciſely alledged as after the ſaid other Words? none certainly, but we may adjudge it ſo well enough, and the Nature and Uſe of the Word will warrant it. And to quit Examples of Words of the like Nature, I ſhall prove it by the Word itſelf. And there is a Writ in the Regiſter as follows, "licet the Defendant aſſumed upon himſelf to cure the Plaintiff of his Diſorder, yet he has not cured him," &c. there the Subſtance of the Matter, viz. the Aſſumption, which is traverſable, comes under the licet. [e] Alſo there is in the Regiſter an Action upon the Caſe, wherein cum and licet are as follows, viz. "Cum the Plaintiff had pledged certain Goods to "the Defendant for a certain Sum, the ſame Defendant, licet the Plaintiff eidem, viz. the De- "fendant, de prediƈtæ pecuniæ ſummis ſe ſepius obtulerit ſatisfacere, ſatisfaƈtionem tamen hujuſmodi ab "eodem, viz. the Plaintiff, recipere, et bona prædiƈta ei reddere contradicit, &c." there the Matter coming after the cum, and the Matter coming under the licet are both traverſable and iſſuable. [f] And there is alſo another Writ in the Regiſter thus, "Whereas the Plaintiff and Defendant ſub- "mitted themſelves to ſtand to the Award of ſuch Arbitrators, licet they awarded that the De- "fendant ſhould pay the Plaintiff 10 l. at ſuch a Day not yet come, tamen the Plaintiff hath ſued "him for the 10 l." in which Caſe none can deny but the Award is traverſable. [g] Alſo it appears in the Book of Entries, that one who was robbed at New-Market, and had levied Hue and Cry according to the Statute of Wincheſter, brought an Action upon the Statute of Wincheſter againſt the Inhabitants of the Hundred of Chiveley for the Recovery of 50 l. whereof he was robbed, within which Hundred the ſaid Town of New-Market was: And there after ſhewing the Robbery he declared that licet the Plaintiff immediately after the Robbery committed at New-Market aforeſaid levied Hue and Cry, and gave Notice there and elſewhere through the whole Hundred to the then Inhabitants, &c. tamen the Inhabitants have not yet made him amends for the ſaid Robbery, nor have anſwered for the Body of the Felon, &c. which Declaration ſo made, and being in the ſaid Book as a good Precedent ſettled by learned Counſel, proves that the Matter after the licet is of Subſtance and Effect, for it is traverſable and iſſuable. And ſo in this Caſe, and in all the other Caſes before, the Matter following the licet is preciſely alledged, and is traverſable as Matter of Subſtance. [h] But in Debt the Reaſon why the licet ſepius requiſitus is not traverſable, is not becauſe it is not preciſely alledged, but becauſe it is not the Effect nor Subſtance of the Matter, nor is it traverſable altho' it were preciſely alledged by other Words of preciſe Allegation, for there the Defendant ought to anſwer to the debet, and not to the Requeſt, which is alledged only in order to have Recompence for the Damages; but here the licet and the Sequel of it is Matter of Subſtance and Effect, which (as it ſeems to me) is well enough ſhewn in the Declaration. Wherefore the Declaration is good notwithſtanding the ſaid Exception.

As to the ſecond Exception, it ſeems to me that the Declaration is good enough without ſhewing the [i] Number of the Electors. For the Election might be made by Voices, or by Hands, or ſuch other Way, wherein it is eaſy to tell who has the Majority, and yet very difficult to know the certain Number of them. And in ſuch Manner there are divers Elections in London. And I myſelf was elected in London by holding up of Hands, but I could not tell how many there were that held up their Hands. And ſo if the Election was in any ſuch Manner (as we have no Reaſon to take it otherwiſe) the Plaintiff could not poſſibly be intended to know the certain Number of them. [k] And to put him to declare a Certainty where he cannot by any Poſſibility be preſumed to know or remember the Certainty, is not reaſonable nor requiſite in our Law. [l] And therefore in 2. Ed. 4. in falſe Impriſonment the Plaintiff declared that the Defendant impriſoned him until he made an Obligation by dures to the Defendant et aliis ignotis, and notwithſtanding he alledged the making of the Obligation in order to recover Damages in Proportion to the Sum thereof, yet the Declaration was good without ſhewing the Names of the others, becauſe it might be that he could not know their Names, in which Caſe the Law will not force him to ſhew that which he cannot, and therefore the Declaration ſeems by the Book to be good in this Point. [m] And in 10. Ed. 4. in Debt upon an Obligation which was endorſed upon Condition that one J. P. ſhould ſerve the Plaintiff for a Year, and ſo for ſeven Years following in all his lawful Commands, &c. the Defendant ſaid that the ſaid J. P. ſerved the Plaintiff lawfully lawfully until ſuch a Day, on which he was diſcharged, and there the Plea is admitted good without ſhewing what Service he did, or in what Commands he obeyed him, for no Servant can remember every Thing he did, or that his Maſter required him to do, and therefore the Law will not compel him to ſhew the Certainty of that which he cannot certainly know or remember. [a] And ſo in 12. H. 7. in Debt upon an Obligation endorſed upon Condition that if he found J. S. Meat and Drink and ſufficient Apparel until he arrived at the Age of 21 Years, that then the Obligation ſhould be void, and the Defendant ſaid that he had found him ſufficient Meat and Drink and Apparel all the Time aforeſaid; and the Plea was held good, notwithſtanding he did not alledge what Bread, Meat, Drink, and Apparel he found him, for to ſay particularly what Bread, what Meat, and what Drink he gave him ſuch and ſuch a Day, and ſo from Time to Time, would be too much for any one to remember, and for this Reaſon the Law will not compel him to ſhew the Certainty where he cannot be preſumed to know it. [b] And the Writ of Monſtraverunt is monſtraverunt nobis homines, &c. without ſhewing their Names, becauſe there are a great Number of them, and if the Manor be large and extenſive, it would be a difficult Matter to reckon them. [c] And in the Regiſter there is an Action upon the Caſe for him who is robbed againſt the Hoſtler out of whoſe Inn his Goods were taken, and the Words of the Writ are, quidam Malefactores took and carried away the Goods, without naming their Names, becauſe he cannot poſſibly be intended to know them. [d] And ſo an Indictment for ſtealing the Goods cujuſdam ignoti, or for killing quendam ignotum, is good enough, cauſa qua ſupra. And ſo in the Caſe here it ſeems to me, that ſince the Plaintiff cannot be intended to have any certain Knowledge of the Number, he ſhall not be forced to ſhew the Certainty of it. [e] And for Proof hereof, ſee the Book of Entries before cited, where Richard Corbet, in the Time of King Henry 7th, brought an Action of Debt upon the ſaid Statute of 23. H. 6. againſt Sir Gilbert Talbot Knight, who was Sheriff of the County of Salop, becauſe he was elected Knight to Parliament, and notwithſtanding this the ſaid Sheriff had returned Richard Ludlow as elected, and there the Plaintiff declared as the Plaintiff here has done, viz. that he was elected per majorem numerum, &c. and the Defendant ſaid that he was not elected per majorem numerum, &c. and upon this Iſſue was joined. Which Caſe I take to be worthy of particular Obſervation. For the Perſons concerned in it were ſuch Sort of Men (for I was born in the ſame Country, and have heard of their Tempers) that if there had been any Defect in the Pleadings on one Side or other, they would not have paſſed it over to ſave any Expence, as every one that knew the Parties would affirm, and at that Time there were very good Lawyers; and therefore the Iſſue being taken as it is in that Caſe, it is greatly to be regarded, and is a great Proof that the Declaration here is good notwithſtanding the ſaid ſecond Exception.

As to the Matter in Law, firſt of all it is to be obſerved, that [f] Wales was not Parcel of the Body of England until the Statute of 27. H. 8. made it ſo, nor was it governed by the Laws of England; for (as it is contained in the Annals of this Realm) Brute the firſt King of England had Iſſue three Sons, and held this Realm, Wales, and Scotland, as one entire Realm undivided, being one main Land encompaſſed by the Sea. And after the Death of Brute, the three Sons made Partition of the Realm amongſt them, and after their Deaths the Law of dividing the Inheritance deſcended was introduced amongſt the Britons, as it appears by the Annals that Bellinus and Brennus his Brother did, for they divided the Realm between them, and ſo did Ferrex and Porrex being brothers, as did alſo the other Britons who were Subjects. But afterwards the Saxons came into this Realm and conquered the Britons, and ſuch of the latter as were not killed fled into Wales. And becauſe it was a mountainous country, the Saxons having got the Heart of the Land did not purſue them there, nor conquer them whilſt they were there, but permitted them to ſettle there peaceably. And amongſt the Saxons the Law was that the eldeſt only ſhould inherit, which Law they obſerved afterwards, and it continued from that Time until this Day amongſt us their Deſcendants. But in Wales the Law amongſt the Britons continued otherwiſe, for Gavelkind remained amongſt them until the Time of King Henry 8. From whence it appears that England and Wales were ſeveral, and poſſeſſed by ſeveral People, and had ſeveral Laws. But afterwards the Welſhmen became ſubject to the Kings of England, who had the Sovereignty and Government of them. [g] And becauſe they were often rebellious, Eſcuage was invented when the King made a Voyage Royal againſt them, as it was when he made a Voyage Royal againſt the Scots. For being within the Sea they were accounted as Rebels. And ſo the People of Wales were ſubject to the King of England, although Wales was not Parcel of the Body of the Realm of England; and an Action lay here in the Common Pleas for any Thing in Wales, but the Proceſs ſhould not be directed into Wales. [h] And therefore in 35. H. 6. it appears that for an Advowſon in Wales a Man ſhall have a Quare impedit in the Common Pleas here, but the Writ ſhall not be directed to the Officers of Wales, but to the Sheriff of the adjoining County. And foraſmuch as Wales was ſevered from the Body of England, and the Welſhmen were ruled by different Laws from the Engliſh, although the Statute unites Wales to England, [i] yet the Laws uſed in England before ſhall not extend to Wales which is newly added to it. For Rights or Privileges within a certain Precinct or Dominion ſhall not be extended further, although the Precinct or Dominion itſelf is enlarged. [k] And therefore it is holden in one Book, that where the Biſhop of Durham had many Lands between the Rivers of Tine and Teſe, and many Liberties were were granted to him in the ſame, and afterwards he purchaſed other Lands between the ſame Tine and Teſe, it is there held that he ſhould not have the Liberties in the Lands newly purchaſed, for the Uſage or the Grant of Liberties ſhall not go beyond what the Uſage has been, or further than the Grant extended at the Time it was made. And ſo it is held in 21. H. 6. that if a Warren is granted to one in all his Lands in Dale, if he purchaſes Lands in Dale afterwards, he ſhall not have a Warren in them, cauſa qua ſupra. So if Conuſance of Pleas is granted to one of every Parcel of the Manor of Dale, there if a Tenancy afterwards eſcheats he ſhall not have Conuſance thereof, becauſe the Grant extended but to his precinct and Circuit at the Time of the making of it, which was not beyond that which was then Parcel of the Manor, at which Time Services were Parcel of the Manor, and not the Demeſn now eſcheated. And there is a Book, that where Wreck of the Sea was granted to a Man in all his Lands, this Grant ſhall not extend to the Land whereof he was then diſſeized, and into which he afterwards re-enters, becauſe at the Time of the Grant he had only a Right in the Land, and the Grant at the Time of the making of it could not extend to the Land which then was not his own but another's, viz. the Diſſeizor's. And ſo although England is now enlarged by the Addition and Union of Wales thereunto, yet the Laws, Cuſtoms, and Statutes uſed therein ſhould not extend to Wales which is newly annexed to it, if there was no other Matter to effect it. But the ſaid Words of the Statute of 27. H. 8. (which are alſo recited in the Record) will put the Matter out of Doubt, and will make the Statute of 23. H. 6. to extend to Wales, the Words being that every Perſon or Perſons born in Wales ſhall have and inherit all and every Liberties, Freedoms, Rights, Privileges, and Laws within this Realm, and other the King's Dominions, as other the King's Subjects naturally born within the ſame have and inherit. Each of which Words will ſerve the Plaintiff, for to be a Knight to come from Wales to the Parliament of England, and to have the Penalty for the undue Execution of it, may be ſaid to be a Liberty, and a Freedom, and a Right, and a Privilege, and alſo a Law. So that every Word would ſerve very fitly (as it ſeems to me) tho' the reſt were omitted, if it was uſed in England. For theſe Words, viz. (as other the King's Subjects naturally born within the ſame have and inherit) are Words to which all the reſt are referred. So that when they are acquainted and appriſed what thoſe Liberties are, they may uſe and enjoy the ſame. And ſo always where one Thing is referred to another, it ſhall be as the Thing whereunto it is referred. [a] As if one makes a Leaſe for ſo many Years as J. S. hath in the Manor of Dale, there he ſhall have as many Years as J. S. hath, and ſhall aver that J. S. has ſo many. And ſo if one grants to another tale corrodium quale J. S. nuper habuit, he ſhall aver that J. S. had a Corody of ſuch Things, and he ſhall have the ſame. [b] And it appears in 11. H. 4. where the King granted to one ſuch an Office, taking in the ſame Office the like that R. S. (who occupied the ſame Office before) took, there the Grant is good, with an Averment that R. S. had ſuch Things in Certainty, which by Force of the Grant with the Averment he ſhall have. [c] And in 20. Ed. 3. it appears that the King had granted to the Bailiff and Commonalty of L. all the Franchiſes which the Burgeſſes of N. had, and there it ſeems that if they ſhould aver that the Burgeſſes of N. had ſuch particular Franchiſes, the Charter and the Averment would enable them to uſe the ſame. And when the Court of Augmentation ſtood, it was the common Courſe of Letters-Patent by the King to grant [d] tot, tanta, talia, hujuſmodi & conſimilia privilegia, libertates, &c. quanta, qualia, & quæ ultimus Prior, aut Abbas, aut aliquis alius Predeceſſorum ſuorum, in jure dicti Prioratus aut Abbathiæ, unquam habuit, tenuit, vel gaviſus fuit, &c. which Grant was good with an Averment that they had or uſed ſuch particular Liberties, and ſuch the Patentees might uſe. [e] And in 9. Ed. 4. in the Aſſize of Swirenden and Bagot it appears that where the King made one a Denizen by his Letters-Patent (as there he had made Bagot) the Words were, quod ille in omnibus tractetur, reputetur, habeatur, teneatur, & gubernetur tanquam ligius noſter infra dictum regnum noſtrum Angliæ oriundus, & non aliter, nec alio modo; which Words of Grant, that he ſhall be treated as a Liege of the King, are, by Relation of the Grantee to a Liege Subject of the King, effectual to make him as a Liege of the King; and whereas before he might not take Benefit of the Laws of England in England, now this incorporates him, and makes him able to take Benefit of them in England. So in the principal Caſe, the Statute of 27. H. 8. which ordains, that every Perſon born in Wales ſhall have and inherit all Liberties and Laws within this Realm, as other the King's Subjects naturally born within the ſame have and inherit, by Relation of thoſe born in Wales to them that are born in England, makes the People of Wales to be as the People of England, and incorporates them therewith, and enables them to have and inherit in Wales the Laws uſed in England, in which Caſe they ſhall take Benefit of the Penalty of the ſaid Statute of 23. H. 6. as a Law in England. Wherefore it ſeems to me, that although the uniting and annexing of Wales to England does not make the Laws of England to extend to Wales, yet the ſaid other Words ſhall enable the People of Wales to take Benefit in Wales of the Laws of England. And ſo I am of Opinion that the Action is maintainable.

A Report of a Caſe adjudged in the King's Bench by the Judges thereof in Michaelmas Term in the ſecond and third Years of the Reign of King Philip and Queen Mary, between John Browning Plaintiff and William Beſton Defendant, in a Bill of Treſpaſs ſued by the ſaid Plaintiff againſt the ſaid Defendant; which was argued many Times before.

IT appears amongſt the Records of the King's Bench of Eaſter Term 6. Edw. 6. Rot. 66. that John Browning ſued a Bill of Treſpaſs in the King's Bench againſt William Beſton, for entring into his Cloſes and Houſes at Southwark in Barmſey-Street and Horſingdown-Lane in the County of Surry the 3d Day of July in the firſt Year of the Reign of the ſaid King Edward 6. &c. The Defendant ſaith, that the Place where, &c. was one Garden and thirteen Meſſuages in Barmſey-Street aforeſaid, of which, long before the Time of the Treſpaſs ſuppoſed, Owen Ogletborp Preſident of the College of St. Mary Magdalen in the Univerſity of Oxford, and the Scholars of the ſame College, were ſeized in their Demeſn as of Fee: And being ſo ſeized, leaſed the ſame, the 24th Day of July in the 38th Year of the Reign of King Henry 8. by Deed bearing the ſame Date, to one John Burges for the Term of 20 Years next following the Feaſt of the Annunciation of our Lady then laſt paſt, by Force whereof he entered, and died; and ſhews that Catharine the Wife of the ſaid John Burges and his Executrix took to Huſband one John Maynard, who leaſed the Premiſſes to the Defendant for 18 of the Years, and gives Colour to the Plaintiff, and ſo juſtifies. The Plaintiff by his Replication ſaith, that long before the ſaid Leaſe one Thomas Knolls Preſident of the ſaid College, and Predeceſſor of the ſaid Ogletborp, and the then Scholars of the ſame College, viz. the 10th Day of September in the 24th Year of the Reign of King Henry 8. by Indenture bearing the ſame Date, leaſed the Premiſſes to the Plaintiff, to have and to hold from the Feaſt of St. Michael the Archangel then laſt paſt, for the Term of 20 Years then next to come, by Force whereof he entered and was poſſeſſed until the Defendant did the Treſpaſs, and confeſſes the ſaid Demiſe made by Ogletborp and the then Scholars, and all the reſt of the Bar. The Defendant by Rejoinder confeſſes the ſaid Demiſe made by Indenture to the Plaintiff in Manner and Form as the Plaintiff has alledged in the Replication. And further he ſaith, that the ſaid Plaintiff had covenanted and granted by the ſaid Indenture to render and pay for the ſaid Tenements every Year during the ſaid Term to the ſaid Preſident and Scholars and their Succeſſors or Aſſigns 37 l. 3 s. 4 d. Sterling, by equal Portions at the two Feaſts of the Year, viz. at the Feaſt of the Annunciation of our Lady the Virgin, or within two Months next after the ſaid Feaſt every Year, 18 l. 11 s. 8 d. at their Meſſuage in Chancery-Lane, and at the Feaſt of St. Michael, or within ſix Weeks next after the ſame Feaſt, 18 l. 11 s. 8 d. to be paid at Oxford, in the ſaid College of St. Mary Magdalen. And further in the ſaid Indenture made to the Plaintiff it is contained, that if it ſhould happen the ſaid annual Rent and Farm of 37 l. 3 s. 4 d. or any Part thereof be in Arrear and unpaid in Part or in Whole, according to

to the Times aforeſaid, that is to ſay, if the one Moiety of the ſaid annual Rent be unpaid after two Months next following the ſaid Feaſt of St. Mary the Virgin, and the other Moiety of the ſaid annual Rent be unpaid after ſix Weeks next following the ſaid Feaſt of St. Michael the Archangel, any Year within the ſaid Term, to the ſaid Preſident and Scholars and their Succeſſors, in Manner and Form aforeſaid, altho' it be not required or demanded at ſuch Time as it ought to be paid, as is aforeſaid, then the ſaid John Browning covenanted and granted for himſelf his Executors and Aſſigns, that the ſaid Demiſe ſhould be utterly extinct and void, and of no Effect, and that then and at all times afterwards it ſhould be lawful for the ſaid Preſident and Scholars and their Succeſſors again to enjoy and poſſeſs and have back the ſaid Tenements with the Appurtenances, and every Parcel thereof, as in their former Eſtate, the ſaid Indenture or Demiſe in any wiſe notwithſtanding. And he ſhews further that Knolls died, and that Oglethorp was made Preſident. And further ſays, that becauſe 18 l. 11 s. 8 d. of the Rent or Farm aforeſaid for the ſaid Tenements to the ſaid Owen and Scholars were in Arrear at the Feaſt of St. Michael, in the 37th Year of the Reign of the ſaid late King Henry 8. and by the Space of ſix Weeks next after the ſame Feaſt of St. Michael, and to the ſaid Owen and Scholars, according to the Form of the ſaid Indenture ſo made to the ſaid Plaintiff, unpaid, the Intereſt and Term of Years which the ſaid Plaintiff had by Reaſon of the ſaid Indenture became void, determined, and of no Effect in Law; by Means whereof the ſame Owen and the Scholars of the ſaid College afterwards and before the Time when, &c. of the Lands aforeſaid were ſeized in their Demeſn as of Fee, in Right of their College, according to the Purport of the Indenture; and they being ſo ſeized made the Leaſe to the ſaid John Burges, as in the Bar was alledged. Wherefore, &c. And upon this Rejoinder the Plaintiff demurred in Judgment. And in Trinity Term in the ſixth Year of the Reign of King Edward 6. this Demurrer was argued by Ramſey of Counſel with the Plaintiff: And then Staunford Serjeant argued againſt him for the Defendant. And in Michaelmas Term next following Ramſey argued again, and Walſh anſwered him. And the Subſtance of both the Arguments of Ramſey was as follows.

Trin. & Mich. Terms 6. Edw. 6.

For the Plaintiff. It ſeems to me that the Plaintiff ſhall recover. And firſt it is to be conſidered, when the Preſident and Scholars made the Leaſe to the Plaintiff by Indenture, and the Plaintiff covenanted and granted by the ſame Indenture to render and pay annually for the ſaid Tenements to the Leſſors 37 l. 3 s. 4 d. whether this ſhall be a Rent or Farm, or not. And ſecondly whether or no, when the Plaintiff covenanted and granted that for Nonpayment of the Rent the Leaſe ſhould be void, this be a good Condition: and if it be, then whether or no the new leaſe made to the Defendant be good before Entry by the Leſſors. And as to the firſt Point, it ſeems to me to be no Rent. For if it ſhould be a Rent, then it muſt be either a Rent-Charge, Rent-Seck, or Rent-Service. [a] For there are no more than three Sorts of Rents. And a Rent-Charge it is not, for there is no Clauſe of Diſtreſs, nor any Land charged with it: And a Rent-Seck it is not, for it is not iſſuing out of any Land: And a Rent-Service it is not for the ſame Cauſe, [b] for a Rent cannot be but where it iſſues out of Land. And here it is granted for the Land, and not out of the Land, and ſo this Word (for) implies the Cauſe or Conſideration of the Grant, and is not a proper Word to charge Land. And therefore foraſmuch as it does not iſſue out of Land, it cannot be called a Rent. And if it ſhould be any Rent at all, it muſt be a Rent-Service, which it cannot be for another Cauſe; for there can be no Rent-Service but ſuch as is reſerved by the Donor or Leſſor, and by apt Words for the ſame, as reddendo, reſervando, or tenendo, &c. But here there is not any Word ſpoken by the Leſſors, but by the Leſſee, [c] for the Leſſee covenanted and granted to pay ſuch a Sum annually for the Land, which Words can amount to no other Effect than to the Grant of a Sum in Groſs, which is not annexed to the Reverſion, nor ſhall it deſcend with the Reverſion. For if a Man has Land by Deſcent on the Part of his Mother, and he makes ſuch a Leaſe ut ſupra, and the Leſſee covenants and grants to pay to the Leſſor and his Heirs ſuch a Sum ut ſupra, if the Leſſor dies without Iſſue, the Reverſion ſhall deſcend to the Heir on the Part of the Mother, but the Sum ſhall be paid to the Heirs on the Part of the Father, becauſe it is not a Rent, nor conjoined or incident to the Reverſion, but a Sum in Groſs not iſſuing out of any Land, and therefore it is no Rent. And alſo it ſeems to me that it is not any Farm, for a Farm and Rent are all one in Effect; and that is proved by the Statute of Glouceſter cap. 4. which ſaith, that if a Man let his Land to farm, or to find Eſtovers in Meat, &c. and he that has the Land lets it lie freſh, &c. it is eſtabliſhed that after two Years paſſed the Leſſor ſhall have an Action to demand the Land, &c. ſo that by that Statute a Ceſſavit is given for the Farm unpaid, which Action ſhall not be given without a Tenure, and ſo if a Tenure is annexed to ſuch a Farm, ergo the Farm is a Rent, and therefore this Statute proves that a Rent and Farm are all one. And a Gift of Land before the Statute of quia emptores terrarum rendering 20 s. annual Rent, or 20 s. annual Farm, had been all one. So that in our Caſe it is neither a Rent nor a Farm for the Cauſes aforeſaid, wherefore when the Plaintiff covenanted and granted that if the ſaid annual Rent or Farm ſhould be behind, that then the Demiſe ſhould be void, this is a void Grant and Covenant, or a void Condition, (if it be a Condition), becauſe it is referred to a Rent and Farm, where there is not any Rent and Farm. As if a Feoffment is made upon Condition that the Feoffee ſhall make a Feoffment to the Mayor and Commonalty of S. where there is no ſuch Mayor and Commonalty, this is a void Condition, becauſe it is referred to a Thing which is not in Being. And therefore it is impoſſible to be per-performed, [a] and Conditions impoſſible or againſt Law are void. [b] As if the Condition be that I ſhall go to Paris within two Hours, [c] or that I ſhall enfeoff my Wife, the firſt of theſe Conditions is impoſſible, and the other againſt Law, and therefore they are void. And ſo it is in the principal Caſe. And then I ſay, that where an Eſtate is made, and ſuch Condition impoſſible or againſt Law is made in Defeaſance of it, the Eſtate ſhall ſtand good for ever, and ſhall never be defeated by ſuch Condition or Grant; for which Reaſon the Eſtate ſhall not be avoided, nor is the Entry lawful by Reaſon of this Condition, if it is a Condition. But as to this (being the ſecond Point) it ſeems to me that it is not a Condition; for as a Rent may not be reſerved without Words of the Leſſor or Donor, no more may a Condition, [d] for a Condition ought to be reſerved by the Words of him who parts with the Eſtate, and who ſhall take Advantage of it by Re-entry, if it be broken, which is the Leſſor here, and therefore it ought to be reſerved by his Words. [e] For which Reaſon if two make a Leaſe or Gift upon Condition that if the Leſſee or Donee does not ſuch an Act, that then the one of the Leſſors or Donors ſhall enter, there if the Condition is broken, he ſhall enter but into the one Moiety, becauſe he did not part with more than a Moiety, and the Words make a Condition to him only that ſpoke them, and he ſpoke the Words for a Moiety only, as the Law ſaith, and the other for the other Moiety, and his own ſpeaking cannot make his Companion to re-enter or avoid the Eſtate. So here the Words are ſpoken by the Leſſee who did not give the Eſtate, but took the Eſtate, which Words cannot make a Condition to another who did not ſpeak them, viz. the Leſſor, nor enable him to enter; for which Reaſon it ſeems to me that the Eſtate ſhall not ceaſe by Force of the Words. And alſo it is to be obſerved here, that the Words of the Covenant and Grant of the Leſſee, that if it ſhould happen the Rent be in Arrear the Leaſe ſhould be utterly extinct and void, come after the Leaſe made. For by the Demiſe and the habendum the Leaſe is made. And then theſe Words of the Leſſee are ſpoken after the Leaſe is made, and ſo altho' the Words are contained in one Indenture, yet in Conſideration of Law there are two different Times therein, that is to ſay, a firſt Time, viz. the Time of making the Leaſe, and a laſt Time, viz. the Time of ſpeaking the Words, which are ſpoken after the Leaſe. [f] And therefore it is held in divers Books, that an Eſtate firſt made ſhall not be defeated by a Defeaſance after the Eſtate. As in 5. Ed. 3. it is held that if a Feoffment is made, and afterwards the Feoffee at another Time makes a Defeaſance, viz. that if the Feoffor does ſuch an Act, that then the Livery and Seizin and his Eſtate ſhall be void, this ſhall not defeat the Eſtate firſt veſted. [g] And ſo in 42. Ed. 3. the Caſe is, that W. borrowed 40 l. of R. and in Surety of Payment he enfeoffed R. of his Land in Fee upon Condition that if he paid the ſaid Sum at a Day limited, the Feoffment ſhould loſe its Force, at the Day W. did not pay the Money, but afterwards died, and his Wife took to Huſband one B. who by Agreement between him and R. paid the Money to R. by Means whereof B. had the Land, and afterwards R. died, and his Wife brought a Writ of Dower; and it was adjudged that ſhe ſhould have Dower, becauſe the Eſtate of R. was not avoided and defeated by the Agreement made after the Condition broken. So that Agreements concerning the avoiding of Eſtates, made after the ſame Eſtates, are of no Effect in Law. Wherefore in our Caſe inaſmuch as the Eſtate was firſt made, and the Condition afterwards, and ſo they were made at divers Times in the Eye of the Law, it ſeems to me that for this Cauſe the Eſtate ſhall never be defeated or avoided. But admitting that the Leſſors might enter, yet the Leaſe made to Burges is not good [h] before Entry made by the Leſſors. For before Entry the firſt Leaſe is not made void, but a Title of avoiding it only is given to the Leſſors, for the Leaſe continues until Re-entry in Deed is made, and before Entry the Poſſeſſion continues in the Leſſee. [i] And for Proof hereof there is a Caſe in 22. Ed. 4. where a Man made a Leaſe for ſix Years, the Term expired, and the Leſſee kept himſelf in after the Term, and took the Profits, and the Leſſor before any Entry brought an Action of Treſpaſs for the Treſpaſs meſne done, viz. after the Term ended, and before the Action brought; and the Opinion of the Juſtices was that the Action of Treſpaſs did not lie, for altho' the Leſſor might enter, yet before Entry the Poſſeſſion was not in him. So in our Caſe, altho' the Leſſors might enter, yet before Entry the Poſſeſſion continues in the Leſſee, and his Term alſo continues. [k] For if the Leſſors had made an Acquittance to the Leſſee for Rent in Arrear after the Time when the Condition is ſuppoſed to be broken, they ſhould never have re-entered. [l] So in 14. Aſs. it is adjudged that if a Leaſe is made rendering Rent, with a Clauſe of Re-entry for Default of Payment, if the Rent is in Arrear, and a Title of Re-entry given, and afterwards he in the Reverſion diſtrains for it, there he ſhall not enter after, becauſe by the Diſtreſs he has affirmed the Continuance of the Term. So here, if the Leſſors had diſtrained for the Rent, they ſhould never have entered afterwards. From whence it ſeems to me, that if an Acquittance or Diſtreſs ſhall affirm the Leaſe, ergo it was not determined before. [m] And if a Reverſion be granted upon Condition, if the Condition be broken it ſhall not be in the Grantor before Claim, for when there cannot be an Entry, then a Claim ſhall ſerve. [n] But if I grant a Rent Charge out of my Land upon Condition, there if the Condition is broken the Rent ſhall be extinct in my Land without Claim, for there cannot be any Claim in that Caſe. [o] And theſe are Principles of Law, that if there may be an Entry into the Thing, then it ſhall not be in the Party before Entry; and if there cannot be any Entry, but a Claim, then it ſhall not be in him before Claim; and if neither Entry nor Claim may be had, then it ſhall be in him by Act of the Law without any Act done by the Party. But in the Caſe here an Entry might have been made, for which Reaſon it ſeems to me that before Entry the Leaſe and the Poſſeſſion continue in the Leſſee; and ſo the Leaſe made to Burges by the Preſident and Scholars before their Re-entry upon Browning is not good. Wherefore the Rejoinder is not good, and conſequently the Plaintiff ſhall recover.

E contra for the Defendant.

Staunford and Walſh argued to the contrary, as it is ſhewn before, and the Subſtance of both their Arguments was as follows. As to the firſt Point, it ſeems that the Covenant and Grant to render and pay the Sum ſhall be a Reſervation * of a Rent. For firſt it is to be conſidered that the Leaſe and alſo the Covenant and Grant to pay the Sum is made by Indenture, [a] and the Words in an Indenture are the Words of both Parties; and altho' they are ſpoken as the Words of one Party only, yet they are not his Words alone, for there is the Aſſent of the other Party to each others Words; and therefore when they are written they ſhall be taken in ſuch Manner as the Intent of the Parties may be ſuppoſed to be. And they ſhall not be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt one and beneficially for another, as the Words of a Deed Poll ſhall, [b] for there the Words ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt the Grantor, and moſt available to the Grantee. But it is not ſo in a Deed indented, becauſe the Law makes each Party privy to the Speech of the other: And therefore we ought not to make ſuch Conſtruction of Words in an Indenture as in a Deed Poll. But if an Indenture contains Matter of Subſtance, the Law will make ſuch Reference thereof as is moſt fit and reaſonable, and will ſay that the Words are ſpoken by him who could moſt properly ſpeak them; and therefore where the Plaintiff here has covenanted and granted to render and pay the ſaid Sum for the Lands, the Words are in fact the Words of the Leſſee, but in Conſtruction of Law they ſhall be taken the Words of Reſervation of the Leſſors, inaſmuch as they have the Senſe and Effect of a Reſervation. For Words of Covenant and Grant to render and pay ſuch a Sum for the Land have the Effect of reſerving or paying Rent for the Land; and ſo the Law will take them to be ſpoken by the Leſſors. [c] As if a Man makes a Feoffment in Fee by Deed indented rendring ſuch Rent, there it ought to be conſidered that it cannot be reſerved as a Rent may upon an Eſtate for Years, for Life, or in Tail, becauſe the Reverſion is not in the Feoffor, and yet the Feoffor ſhall have it as a Rent granted by the Feoffee. And by the ſame Reaſon that the Law there takes the Words of the Feoffor as the Words of the Feoffee, by the like Reaſon in our Caſe it will take the Words of the Leſſee as the Words of the Leſſor, for they ſerve moſt properly that Way. And if the Deed indented had ſpecified that the Plaintiff ſhould have the Land, and ſhould pay 20 s. yearly, that would be a Rent. For the Law refers the Words in any Writing indented to be ſpoken by him that can beſt ſpeak them, and that ſhould be the Leſſor there. And, Sir, it is frequently to be ſeen that one Word ſhall enure as another. [d] As if a Leaſe be made for Life, the Reverſion to J. S. in Fee, this ſhall enure as a Remainder, as it is held in our Books. And if one Word ſhall be taken in the Senſe of another, by like Reaſon it ſeems that the Words ſpoken by one ſhall be taken in Law to be ſpoken by another, eſpecially where it is in a Deed indented. And therefore in the Caſe here it ſhall be a Reſervation of a Rent. And as to what has been ſaid, viz. that it cannot be a Rent, becauſe he hath covenanted and granted to render and pay the ſaid Sum for the Lands, and it is not covenanted nor granted to be paid out of the Lands, and no Rent may be but what is iſſuing out of Land; as to this it ſeems clearly that the Law ſhall take and conſtrue it to be iſſuing out of the Land as ſtrongly as if it had been expreſſed in plain Terms. For it is to be obſerved that the Sum is to be paid for the Land as it is expreſſed, and that is agreed at the Time of the Demiſe of the Land. And ſo the one, viz. the Rent, comes for the other, viz. the Land, and at one ſame Time, and by one ſame Contract, and the one is executory for the other. [e] For if the Land is recovered upon eign Title he ſhall be diſcharged of Payment, becauſe he cannot have the Thing for which he is to pay the Money. [f] As in the Caſe in 15. Ed. 4. where it is ſaid, if A. grants to B. all the ancient Pale, and in Return for the ſame B. grants that he would make a new Pale to the aforeſaid A. there if B. cannot have the ancient Pale he ſhall be excuſed from making the new Pale, becauſe he cannot have the one Thing for which he is to do the other. [g] And if one grants to another an Annuity pro conſilio impendendo, if he will not give Counſel the other may detain the Annuity, becauſe he cannot have the Thing for which he granted the Annuity. So in the principal Caſe, if the Land was recovered he ſhould be diſcharged of Payment. Wherefore inaſmuch as the one is executory for the other, and the one comes in Return for the other at one ſame Time, and by one ſame Contract, the Law adjudges that it is iſſuing out of the Land as ſtrongly as if it had been reſerved by expreſs Words. [h] And therefore in 29. Aſs. pl. 23. there is this Caſe, viz. the Tenor of a Purparty made in the Chancery between three Coparceners of an Inheritance, two of whom were Covert-Barons, was brought into the King's Bench, and by the Record it was ſuppoſed that one Huſband and his Wife had more in Purparty than they ought to have, and it was ſuppoſed by the ſame Record that the Huſband and his Wife pro prædicto reſiduo had granted to the other Parceners 100 s. Rent, and by the Purparty it was not ſuppoſed that this Rent was to be taken out of any certain Land, but that the two Coparceners had bound themſelves and their Heirs in the ſaid Rent, and thereupon a Scire Facias iſſued againſt the ſaid Huſband and Wife who had the moſt in Purparty, and they came and demanded Judgment of the Writ, becauſe this Suit was brought againſt them as Ter-tenants, and by the Writ it was not ſuppoſed that any Land was charged with the Rent, but only the Perſon that granted it, and his Heirs, but yet the Writ was awarded good, and the Defendants put to anſwer over: For ſince the Rent was granted for the Land, and was executory for the Land, the Law adjudges it to iſſue out of the Land; and ſo the Law has Reſpect to the Ground of the Matter, and to the Conſideration upon which Things are done. [i] For upon Partition between Coparceners, if the one grants a Rent to the other, this ſhall deſcend to the Heirs of the Grantee, altho' it was not granted to her and her Heirs, becauſe it came to her in reſpect of the Land which ſhould deſcend to the Heir. And therefore when the Ground of a Thing appears, the Law ſupplies the Deficiency in the Words. So in our Caſe inaſmuch as the Cauſe of the Payment of the Sum appears to be

be for the Land, and it is to be paid annually, it ſhall be adjudged in Law a Rent, and to iſſue out of the Land. And then when it is ſaid in the Indenture, if it ſhall happen the ſaid annual Rent or Farm be in Arrear, that then the Demiſe ſhall be extinct and void, the Words are proper enough, and ſhall make the Leaſe to ceaſe. But admitting it is neither a Rent nor Farm, but a Sum in groſs, yet the Leaſe ſhall be determined. For when it is ſaid, if it ſhould happen the ſaid Rent be in Arrear, and the Sum is recited certainly, it is of the ſame Subſtance and Effect in Law as if it was ſaid, if it ſhould happen the ſaid Sum in groſs be in Arrear. [a] And that the Law is ſo it is proved by Littleton in his Book in the Chapter of Eſtates upon Condition: For there he ſays, "If a Man enfeoffs another in Fee upon Condition that he and his Heirs ſhall render to a Stranger and his Heirs an annual Rent of 20 s. and if he or his Heirs fail of Payment thereof, that then it ſhall be lawful for the Feoffor and his Heirs to enter, this is a good Condition, and yet in this Caſe altho' ſuch annual Payment is called in the Indenture an annual Rent, it is not properly a Rent, for if it was a Rent it muſt be either a Rent-ſervice, or a Rent-charge, or a Rent-ſeck, and it is not any of them. For if the Stranger was ſeized thereof, and afterwards it was denied him, he ſhould never have an Aſſize for it, becauſe it is not iſſuing out of any Tenements, and ſo the Stranger has no Remedy if ſuch Annual rent be in Arrear in this Caſe, but the Feoffor or his Heirs may enter. And yet if the Feoffor or his Heirs enter for Default of Payment, then ſuch Rent is gone for ever. And ſo ſuch Rent is but as a Pain ſet upon the Tenant and his Heirs, that if he will not pay it according to the Form of the Indenture, then they ſhall loſe their Land by Entry of the Feoffor or his Heirs for Default of Payment." These are the Words of Littleton in his ſaid Book, which prove that the calling a Sum in groſs a Rent is of the ſame Effect as if it had been called a Sum in groſs. So that miſnaming Words in Indentures is no great Matter if ſo be there are Words of Subſtance put for them, as it is in our Caſe. And therefore it ſeems that if it be a Sum in groſs, yet the calling it a Rent and reciting the Sum in certain ſhall be as available to the Leſſors here as it ſhould be to the Feoffor in Littleton's Caſe. Wherefore it ſeems clearly, whether this be a Rent or a Sum in groſs, that yet the Eſtate for Years ſhall be determined, notwithſtanding this Exception, if ſo be the other Words are effectual to determine it. And as to that, the Words ſeem to be effectual enough to make the Leaſe void. For it is not requiſite that the Leſſor ſhould ſpeak the Words which ſhall defeat the Eſtate, but if it be by Indenture, and the Words bear an Intendment to avoid or determine the Leaſe, it is ſufficient. As if the Words were, proviſo that the Leſſee do ſuch an Act, or ſi contingat that he does not ſuch an Act, that then, &c. there the Words proviſo or ſi contingat are not ſpoken by one more than the other, but they are put indifferently, and the Law conſtrues them in the beſt Senſe, and therefore the Words ſhall be taken as a mutual Agreement of the Parties that the Leaſe ſhould be void, for which Reaſon the Leſſor may enter, inaſmuch as ſuch Agreement was at the Time of the making the Eſtate. [b] So in 10. Aſs. pl. 15. a Leaſe was made by Deed for eleven Years, and in Surety of his Term the Leſſor made him a Charter upon Condition that if he was diſturbed of his Term, he ſhould hold the Tenements in Fee for ever, and Livery and Seizin was made upon the one Charter and upon the other, and afterwards the Leſſee was diſturbed, and there it is adjudged that he ſhould have the Fee; for the Charters were delivered at one ſame Time, and ſo the Agreement had between them at the Time of the firſt Eſtate made ſhall make the Eſtate conditional, ſo that the Fee ſhall paſs afterwards. And by the ſame Reaſon an Agreement between the Parties at the Time of the Eſtate made ſhall be ſufficient to defeat the Eſtate. [c] And in 9. H. 6. a Man made a Leaſe abſque impetitione vaſti, proviſo quod non proſterneret domus voluntariè, and the Leſſor brought an Action of Waſt for Waſt done in Houſes, and the Leſſee ſaid quod non proſtravit domus voluntariè, and Exception was taken to it, and it was ſaid that an Action of Waſt would not lie for voluntary Waſt in Houſes, for the Clauſe abſque impetitione vaſti ſhall be abſolute, and upon the Proviſo the Leſſor ſhall be put to his Writ of Covenant, which was denied, for that it was all by one Deed, and the Clauſe was [d] conditional, ſo that he ought to take the Clauſe in ſuch Form as it was made, and yet there the Proviſo was not ſpoken by the Leſſor more than by the Leſſee, but as it is put it ſhall be taken as an Agreement of both Parties. So in our Caſe, when the Leaſe was made by Indenture with the ſaid Clauſe contained in it, then the Leaſe paſſed in ſuch Form, and it was parcel of the Contract, and made with the Aſſent of both the Parties, and at one ſame Time, ſo that whatever Way it be taken, whether a Condition, or a Limitation of the Eſtate, or a Grant on the Part of the Leſſee, it is ſuch a Thing as will determine the Leaſe without Queſtion. And as to what has been ſaid, that in Intendment of Law the ſaid Clauſe ſhall be taken to be made after the Leaſe, and ſo, as it were, at a different Time, Sir, this cannot be, ſince the whole is made by one Deed indented, ſo that no Word of it takes Effect before the Delivery of the Deed, and the Deed is delivered all at one Inſtant, and therefore all the Words ſhall take Effect at one ſame Inſtant, and there is no Diſtinction of Time therein. And this is proved by the ſaid Caſes of 10. Aſs. pl. 15. and 9 H. 6. For in the one it was by ſeveral Deeds, but delivered at one ſame Time, and in the other Caſe it was all by one ſame Deed, and there it is taken to be in Law at one ſame Inſtant without any meſne Time; and ſo in the Caſe here. Wherefore it ſeems clearly that notwithſtanding any of the Exceptions, the Clauſe will determine the Leaſe. Then as to the laſt Matter, viz. whether or no the Leaſe ſhall be determined and void before Entry; it ſeems that it ſhall, for the Leaſe commenced by Contract, that is, by Words without other Circumſtance, and was a good Leaſe by the Words before Entry, and that which commences by Words and without Entry may be determined by Words without Entry. [e] But if the Leaſe had been for Life, then ſuch Clauſe ut ſupra might not determine it before Entry, for a Leaſe for Life

Life cannot commence by Words without other Circumſtance, viz. Livery and Seizin, and therefore it ſhall not be determined by ſuch Clauſe ut ſupra without Entry. For the Livery and Seizin which gives Perfection to the Eſtate and Entry ought to be avoided by Entry. [a] But a Leaſe for Years commences by Words without Entry, and may be determined by Words without Entry. And ſo is the Diverſity. And as to the Caſes put, viz. in [b] 14. Aſs. where a Leaſe is made for Years reſerving Rent, or a Re-entry for Default of Payment, if the Rent be behind, and a Title of Re-entry given, and afterwards he in the Reverſion diſtrains for it, that he ſhall never enter, or if he makes an Acquittance for it, that he ſhall never enter afterwards, Sir, theſe Caſes are not like our Caſe here. For when a Man makes a Leaſe rendring Rent, and if the Rent is behind that he ſhall enter, there he has expreſſed how the Leaſe ſhall be avoided, viz. by Entry. So that if he will not enter, or if he does ſuch an Act as excludes him from his Entry, there the Leaſe is good for ever, becauſe it continues good until an Entry be made. [c] But in our Caſe the Words are, that the ſaid Leaſe ſhall be utterly extinct, void, and of no Effect, which Words diſſolve the Leaſe without Entry or other Circumſtance, and then if it be utterly void it cannot be made good by any Matter ex poſt facto; and ſo is the Difference between the ſaid Caſes and our own Caſe here. And altho' in the Caſe here it goes beyond the ſaid Words, and ſaith that it ſhall be lawful for the Preſident and Scholars again to enjoy, poſſeſs, and have the ſaid Tenements, &c. yet theſe don't take away the Effect of the firſt Words, but the latter Words are Surpluſage, for if the Leaſe was determined by the firſt Words, then was it in vain to put the latter Words. And as to the Caſe put in [d] 22. Ed. 4. it is good Law, for when the Leaſe was ended the Leſſee then became Tenant at Sufferance to the Leſſor, and the Leſſor could not puniſh him by Writ of Treſpaſs, inaſmuch as his firſt Entry was with his Aſſent, and afterwards he was Tenant by his Sufferance and Aſſent, as the Law ſaith, and then he cannot impeach him for a Thing whereunto he has firſt aſſented; but in the ſaid Caſe the Leſſor might there make a Leaſe for Years to another, and that Leaſe ſhould be good, for thereby he had determined his Will and Pleaſure. Wherefore the ſaid Caſe does not prove any Thing againſt the ſecond Leaſe here, and ſo the Rejoinder is good notwithſtanding any of the ſaid Exceptions to the contrary; and conſequently the Plaintiff ſhall be barred.

E Contra for the Plaintiff.

Gawdy Serjeant to the contrary. It ſeems to me that it ſhall not be a Rent, becauſe it is not reſerved by the Words of the Leſſors. And it is utterly againſt Reaſon to take the Words of one Perſon as the Words of another, for the Law will not make ſuch Conſtruction, nor will it refer what is ſpoken by one Man to that which is ſpoken by another, or take them to be of the like Effect. [e] And therefore in 35 H. 6. the Caſe is, that John Croke was ſeized of the Manor of B. in Fee, and a Deed indented was made between the ſaid Croke and the Prior of B. as follows, Cum Johannes Croke teneat de nobis, ut de jure Eccleſiæ noſtræ prædictæ, manerium de B. per homagium, fidelitatem, ſcutagium, et redditum quatuordecim librarum ad Feſtum, &c. Noveritis nos Priorem et Conventum ratificaſſe et confirmaſſe dicto Johanni ſtatum ſuum, &c. ſalvo ſemper nobis et ſucceſſoribus noſtris noſtro antiquo dominio, ſimul cum reddit. et ſervic. de manerio, &c. In cujus rei, &c. uni parti ejuſdem indenturæ penes prædictum Johannem remanenti prædicti Prior et Conventus ſigillum ſuum commune appoſuerunt, alteri vero parti penes prædictos Priorem et Conventum remanenti prædictus Johannes ſigillum ſuum appoſuit, and the ſaid Croke had Iſſue H. who had Iſſue a Son and a Daughter by one Venter, and a Son by another Venter, and the Daughter as Heir of the whole Blood to her Brother had the Manor by Deſcent after the Death of the ſaid Croke, and of H. and of her Brother, and the Succeſſor of the Prior avowed upon her, and ſhe pleaded hors de ſon Fee; and the Opinion of the Court there was, that ſhe ſhould not be eſtopped by the Indenture, but that ſhe might well have the Plea for two Reaſons, one was, becauſe the Deed was no Eſtoppel, for that [f] all the Words in the Deed are the Words of the Prior and Convent, and not the Words of the ſaid John Croke; the other Reaſon was, for that if it was an Eſtoppel, [g] yet the Daughter is not Heir to it, but the youngeſt Son. And therefore if one Reaſon there was, becauſe all the words were the Words of the Prior and Convent, and were ſo accounted in Law notwithſtanding it was by Deed indented, from thence we may ſee that the Words of one Perſon in an Indenture ſhall not be taken as the Words of another, nor ſhall the other be eſtopped thereby, notwithſtanding he is Party to the ſame Indenture. And ſo a fortiore in our Caſe the Law ſhall not ſay that they are the Words of the Leſſors, nor conſtrue them to amount to a Reſervation of Rent, inaſmuch as they may otherwiſe have a reaſonable Conſtruction and Effect. And as to what has been ſaid, that the Leſſors are Parties to the Words, and agreed to them, it being by Indenture, Sir, true it is that they agreed to have the Sum, but it was not agreed to have it as a Rent. So that the Effect of the Agreement is to have it, but how they ſhall have it, viz. as a Rent or not, is not Part of their Agreement. Wherefore it ſeems to me that ſince the Words are ſpoken by the Leſſee it may not be a Rent, as I have ſaid before. And alſo (as it has been ſaid) it may not be a Rent, becauſe it is not iſſuing out of any Land. And as to what is ſaid, that by the Intent and Agreement of the Parties the Law ſhall adjudge it to be iſſuing out of the Land, Sir, it cannot poſſibly be ſo taken without expreſs Words. [h] And this will be proved by the Caſe of the Prior of Martin and the Prior of Bingham in 22. Ed. 4. for there the Caſe is that a Fine was levied between the Prior of Martin Complainant, and the Prior of Bingham Deforceant, de quinque Marcis et quinque ſolidis redditus cum pertinentiis in S. et K. unde placitum conventionis ſumm. fuit inter eos, and the Fine was, Hæc eſt finalis concordia, &c. inter Priorem de Martin querentem, et Priorem de Bingham deforc. de quinque Marcis, et quinque ſolidis redditus cum pertinentiis in S. et K. unde placitum conventionis ſumm. fuit inter eos; ſcilicet, quod Prior de Bingham recognovit et conceſſit pro ſe et ſucceſſoribus ſuis, quod ipſi de cætero reddant ſingulis annis prædicto Priori de Martin et ſucceſſoribus ſuis, pro tenementis quæ de eodem Priore tenet, tenet, et quæ tenementa W. de W. de eodem Priore de Martin aliquando tenuit in prædictis villis &c. quinque marcas et quinque ſolidos ad duos anni terminos pro omnibus ſervitiis, ſectis, &c. Et pro hac conceſſione &c. idem Prior de Martin conceſſit pro ſe et ſucceſſoribus ſuis quod ipſi warrantizabunt præ dictis Priori de B. et ſucceſſoribus ſuis prædicta tenementa contra omnes Gentes. And afterwards the Succeſſor of the Prior of Martin brought a Scire Facias againſt the Succeſſor of the ſaid Prior of Bingham, to have Execution of the Arrears for 14 Years, and there it was ſaid that the Scire Facias was not maintainable, for the Fine proves the Rent granted to the Predeceſſor of the Plaintiff to be a Rent-Service, or other Rent iſſuing out of Land, and not an Annuity, where- Vide B. N. C. § 28. fore inaſmuch as he has acknowledged it to be executed, he ought to have had an Aſſize or Diſtreſs, and not this Writ which is in Nature of a Writ of Annuity; but yet the Scire Facias was adjudged maintainable, and that he ſhould have Execution, becauſe the Fine was levied of a different Thing from the Original: For the Original, that is to ſay, the Writ of Covenant, was of a Rent, which ſhall be intended a Rent-Service, and the Fine does not ſay, prædictum redditum, but it was de quinque Marcis et quinque ſolidis, which is of a Thing that was not in eſſe before the Fine, viz. of an Annuity, for the Prior of Bingham was Tenant of the Land, who could not grant the Seigniory to another, wherefore it is but an Annuity, and no Rent. And then, I ſay, if this is there holden an Annuity, and not a Rent iſſuing out of Land, by the ſame Reaſon in our Caſe it is a Sum in groſs, and not a Rent iſſuing out of the Land; for in the Fine it was granted to be paid for the Land, and ſo in our Caſe it is granted to be paid for the Land, which Land is nothing more than a Conſideration in the one Caſe and in the other, and is not charged with the Payment, and every Word in the Fine is as ſtrongly the Word of both the Parties, as the Words in an Indenture are, et ubi eadem eſt ratio, ibi idem jus. And therefore it is not a Rent in our Caſe, but a Sum in groſs, and then the Grant that the Leaſe ſhall be void for the Nonpayment of the Rent and Farm is void, becauſe there is no ſuch Rent or Farm. As if a Man makes a Leaſe of Land, upon Condition that if the Leſſee does Waſt in the Houſes upon the Land leaſed, that then the Leaſe ſhall be void, where in Fact there is no Houſe at all on the Land leaſed, this is a void Condition, becauſe it is referred to a Thing which is not in being. And if it was a Rent and no Farm, then alſo the Term ſhould not be void, for it is in the Copulative, viz. if the Rent and Farm be behind, but it is neither the one nor the other, for which Reaſon it ſeems to me that the Clauſe is not ſufficient to make the Leaſe void. Further, it ſeems that inaſmuch as it is but the Grant of the other Party, the Leaſe ſhall not be void becauſe it was executed. [a] But an Obligation, Recognizance, or Warranty, or ſuch Things as are executory may be defeated by a Defeazance, but not Things executed. And here it is to be conſidered that the Grant of Defeazance came after the Leaſe, for if the Leſſee firſt deliver his Part to the Leſſor, then is the Defeazance void, for at that Inſtant he was not Leſſee, and therefore we ought to take it according to Order, and as it may ſtand together, and that is, that the Leſſors firſt delivered their Part of the Indenture, whereby the Leaſe was executed, and that afterwards the Leſſee delivered his Part of the Indenture, and ſo there is a meſne Time, and the Leaſe was firſt executed, and the Defeazance came after, which may not defeat Things executed. [b] And therefore in 43. Aſſ. a Releaſe of Right made by the Diſſeizee to the Tenant of the Land may not be defeated by a Defeazance afterwards, becauſe the Right was extinct before, and the Releaſe executed. And ſo was the Leaſe here, which may not be defeated by the Defeazance after. Further, admitting the Defeazance good, it ſeems that although the Words are, that the Leaſe ſhall be utterly extinct, void, and of no Effect, yet the Law will make an Expoſition hereof in what Manner it ſhall be void. [c] As the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 1. which ſays, that if a Fine be levied, ipſo jure ſit nullus, yet the Law makes an Expoſition thereof, viz. that it ſhall be void as to binding the Right, but yet that it is a Diſcontinuance. [d] And ſo the Statute of 8. H. 6. cap. 10. which makes Outlawries void upon Indictments or Appeals, if a Capias is not awarded againſt the Party in the County wherein by the Indictment or Appeal he is expreſſed to be dwelling, is expounded by the common Law, viz. that it ſhall be void by Writ of Error. So here the Words which grant that the Leaſe ſhall be void ſhall be expounded to be void by Entry, and not otherwiſe. [e] And if a Man makes a Leaſe for Years of his Wife's Land, and dies, the Leaſe is not void before Entry made by the Wife, for Poſſeſſion ought to be avoided by Poſſeſſion, and ſuch Poſſeſſion ought to be gained by Entry. [f] But if my Father dies, and his Land deſcends to me, a Leaſe for Years made by me before my Entry is good, becauſe I had Poſſeſſion in Law, and none had Poſſeſſion in Deed. But if a Stranger abates, a Leaſe made by me after is void, for the Stranger had the Poſſeſſion in Deed before my Entry. So here the Poſſeſſion in Deed is in the firſt Leſſee until Entry be made; and then the ſecond Leaſe is void, for he has not pleaded an Entry in Deed made by the Leſſors, which ſhall not be intended without it be ſhewn. And therefore upon the whole Matter it ſeems to me that the Plaintiff ſhall recover.

And afterwards in Eaſter Term 7. Ed. 6. Ramſey argued again. And becauſe his Argument was much to the ſame Effect with his former Arguments, I have here omitted the Report of it. And Morgan Serjeant then anſwered him. And he argued that it was a Rent. For, he ſaid, it is not only to be conſidered, who ſpeaks the Words of Reſervation of the Rent, but the chief Matter to be conſidered is the Aſſent of the Parties, viz. the Leſſor and the Leſſee. And therefore in the common Words of Reſervation, viz. tenendo by ſuch a Rent, or ſolvendo, or reddendo ſuch a Rent, although the Words are taken to be ſpoken by the Leſſors, yet they are not ſuffici-

ent to make a Rent, without having the Aſſent of the Leſſee thereunto. For the Leſſor ſhall not have an Action of Debt for Rent reſerved by ſuch Words, except it be adjudged a Contract in Law, and a Contract cannot be without an Aſſent between two or more, wherefore the Aſſent of both Parties is the Perfection of the Contract, and then the Law ſaith, that although the Words come out of the Mouth of the one only, yet they are the Words of both in Effect and Operation of Law. And by the ſame Reaſon that the ſaid Words, viz. reddendo, ſolvendo, and the like, ſhall be taken to come out of the Mouth of the Leſſor, and ſhall be in Effect the Words of the Leſſee and of the Leſſor alſo, ſo in our Caſe the Words which ſhall be taken to come out of the Mouth of the Leſſee ſhall in Effect be the Words of the Leſſors and the Leſſee. And ſo inaſmuch as the Subſtance of the Matter is, that the Leſſors ſhall have ſo much Money annually for the Land, the Law will ſay that the Words are properly ſpoken for the Purpoſe, and that they will make it a Rent. And if it was not a Rent, but a Sum in groſs, yet the Words which call it a Rent may and ſhall be taken for a Sum in groſs, inaſmuch as it is to continue, and to be paid yearly. And further, the Covenant and Grant that the Demiſe ſhall be void ſhall determine the Leaſe. For it cannot enure to any other Effect, for the Leſſors might not have an Action of Covenant upon this Covenant and Grant, for ſuch Action does not lie but where the Thing, for which the Covenant is made, is to be done at a Time to come by the Perſon of ſome one. And here the Covenant and Grant refers to a Thing which is not to be done by the Perſon of any one, but to a Thing which is to be executed in itſelf. And if the Words ſhould not enure to a Determination of the Leaſe, they would be utterly void, for they cannot enure to any other Effect, and to make them void would be too difficult a Matter to be proved; and therefore the Leaſe was diſſolved ipſo facto when the Rent was in Arrear. And he argued further, [a] that although the Leſſors might not have an Action of Treſpaſs before Entry here made after the Rent was in Arrear, yet they might well enough make a Leaſe, foraſmuch as the firſt Leaſe was diſſolved preſently by the Rent being in Arrear, and the firſt Leſſee became Tenant at Sufferance, in which Caſe the Leaſe is good, and therefore the Plaintiff ſhall be barred. And further he ſaid, that there was a Defect in the Pleading which could not be cured, and that is, the Plaintiff hath alledged the Treſpaſs at Southwark in two Places, viz. in Barmſey-Street, and in Horſingdown-Lane, and the Defendant ſaith that the Place where &c. was one Garden, and thirteen Meſſuages at Barmſey-Street, and as to that juſtifies, and ſays nothing as to the other Place, for which Reaſon it ſeemed to him that the Defendant's Bar was bad upon that Account, but that the Rejoinder was good, as it is ſaid before &c. And afterwards for this Fault in the Pleading it was held bad, and therefore the Parties * repleaded. And the Pleading was altered in ſeveral Points (as appears in the new Roll thereof made, which is to be ſeen in Mich. 1. Mary Rot. 158.) viz. in theſe Points, whereas the Treſpaſs in the firſt Pleading was aſſigned the third Day of July in the firſt Year of the Reign of King Edward 6. and the detaining the Plaintiff out of Poſſeſſion until the 17th Day of November in the ſecond Year of the Reign of King Edward 6. now the Treſpaſs was aſſigned the ſaid third Day of July, and the detaining the Plaintiff out of Poſſeſſion was alledged until the ſecond Day of June in the ſeventh Year of the ſame King. And alſo the Defendant pleaded the Plea in Bar to both the Places aſſigned, and juſtified in both Places; and whereas in the firſt Pleading the Defendant in the Rejoinder had ſhewn that the Cauſe why the Leaſe became void was for the Rent in Arrear at one Day, viz. at the Feaſt of St. Michael the Archangel in the 37th Year of the Reign of King Henry 8. and by the Space of ſix Weeks thence next following, now in the new Pleading he ſhewed that the Rent was behind at two days, that is to ſay, 18*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.* was in Arrear at the Feaſt of the Annunciation of our Lady anno 36. H. 8. and by the Space of two Months next following the ſame Feaſt, and other 18*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.* was in Arrear at the ſaid Feaſt of St. Michael in the ſaid 37th Year of King Henry 8. and by the Space of ſix Weeks next following the ſame Feaſt, by which Means the Leaſe became void: And whereas in the firſt Record the Matter of the Rent being in Arrear was alledged by the Words (for that) viz. for that the Rent was in Arrear, the Leaſe became void, now in the new Record it was pleaded that the Rent was in Arrear, and ſo it was alledged in Fact to be in Arrear ut ſupra. And the new Record varies from the old one in few or none other material Points except theſe.

Trin. Term 1. Mary. E contra for the Plaintiff.

And afterwards in Trinity Term 1. Mary. Robert Brook Serjeant Recorder of London recited the Caſe, as it was in the new Record, and as it is ſhewn above, and ſaid, it ſeems to me that the Plaintiff ſhall recover. Four Queſtions ariſe upon the Rejoinder; firſt, whether there is a Condition here or not: ſecondly, whether there is a Rent or not; thirdly, if there is neither a Condition nor Rent, whether the Covenant will make the Leaſe void without Entry or not; fourthly, whether or no the Rejoinder be double. And as to the firſt Point, there is not any Condition here, [b] for no Condition can be made but by him that parts with the Eſtate, and by his Words. And here if there ſhould be a Condition, it would be made by him that takes the Eſtate, and by his Words, which is contrary to the Nature of a Condition. And beſides the Words here are not conditional, nor equivalent to Words conditional, for conditional Words are reſtrictive, as ita quod, or if the Leſſee do ſuch an Act, or ſi contingat, or proviſo ſemper, theſe are conditional Words, and reſtrain or compel the Perſon to do or not to do ſuch a Thing, on Pain of Forfeiture of the Eſtate or Thing given. And yet proviſo ſemper does not always make a Condition, as in Dockray's Caſe in [c] 27. H. 8. where a Leaſe was made by the Prior of St. John's to Dockray by Indenture, in which it was contained, proviſo that if the Prior or any of his Brethren thren will inhabit thereupon, that then the ſaid Dockray and his Aſſigns bound themſelves by the ſame Indenture upon one Year's Warning to remove and give Place to the ſaid Prior, there the Caſe is not adjudged, but as I take it, it is not a Condition, for the Words after the proviſo are not proper to make a Condition, for they don't force the Party to do or not to do any Thing, but the Leſſee without compulſatory Words of the Leſſor covenants and grants that he will remove. So in our Caſe, neither in the Premiſſes of the Clauſe, nor in the Words following are there any Words conditional, or equivalent to ſuch, but ſimply a Grant or Covenant made by the Leſſee, which does not contain any Condition of the Leſſors; for which Reaſon it ſeems to me that the Words are not conditional, nor ſufficient to determine the Leaſe. Further, admitting the Words to be conditional, yet they are referred to a Determination of the Leaſe for Rent in Arrear, where there is no ſuch Rent. For in the ſame Manner as a Condition ought to be made by the Words of the Leſſor, ſo ought Rent to be reſerved by Words of the Leſſor, or be granted out of the Land by the other Party; and here there is no Rent reſerved by the Leſſor, for the Words of Reſervation are, reddendo, ſolvendo, or the like, but here there is not any ſuch Word, or Words of the like Senſe, but only a Covenant and Grant to pay ſuch a Sum, and he does not charge the Land with it, for which Reaſon there cannot be a Rent reſerved, nor a Rent granted, becauſe it is not granted out of the Land, and no Rent may be but what is granted out of Land. [a] And therefore the Caſe in 10. Aſſ. pl. 4. may be well agreed, which is, that in an Aſſize of Rent a Specialty was ſhewn forth, which proved that the Rent was not granted to be taken of the Tenements, but certain Tenements were bound to Diſtreſs, and out of theſe Tenements was the Rent iſſuing, as it was there adjudged; and I will readily agree that it is a Rent, becauſe the Party may diſtrain in Land for it, and ſo the Land is charged. But here no Land is charged with it, and therefore it cannot be a Rent, and then the Covenant and Grant that if the Rent be in Arrear the Leaſe ſhall be extinct, is utterly void, for it is referred to a Thing where there is none ſuch, and it is as if the Leſſee had granted that if his Homage ſhould be in Arrear to the Leſſor by the Space of a Month, the Leaſe ſhould be void, which Clauſe had been of no Effect, becauſe the Leſſee ſhall not do Homage to the Leſſor, and therefore the Clauſe had been void; and ſo ſhall it be in our Caſe. But admitting it to be a Rent and a Condition, yet the Leaſe continues until Entry is made. For when a Man has an Eſtate, or is in Poſſeſſion, he ſhall be ſaid in Law to have the Eſtate, or to be in Poſſeſſion until another has taken the Eſtate or Poſſeſſion from him. And ſuch Eſtate or Poſſeſſion ought to be taken away by Entry. As if a Man makes a Feoffment in Fee, and the Feoffee at the ſame Time makes a Defeazance, which is afterwards performed, yet the Feoffee remains Tenant in Fee-Simple until Entry is made upon him; and ſo ſhall it be of a particular Eſtate in Tail, for Life, or for Years, for the Caſes are all one, and are founded upon the ſame Reaſon. [b] And therefore in 18. Ed. 4. where a Formedon was brought againſt Tenant pur auter vie, and pending the Writ ceſtuy que vie died, and the Tenant continued in Poſſeſſion, and he in the Reverſion prayed to be received, yet there the better Opinion is, that the Writ is not abated until the Leſſor hath entered, nor is the Intereſt of the Tenant pur auter vie determined by the Death of ceſtuy que vie; which proves that until Entry is made [c] neither the Eſtate nor the Poſſeſſion is taken away. [d] And in Wheeler's Caſe in 14. H. 8. in ſecond Deliverance, where Wheeler Leſſee for Years granted his Eſtate to the Plaintiff, upon Condition that he could obtain the Favour and good will of the firſt Leſſor, and the firſt Leſſor afterwards told the Defendant that he would rather caſt away the Tiles of the Houſe than that the Defendant ſhould have the Leaſe, there it is held, that upon this Diſagreement the Intereſt of the Plaintiff was not void, for it appears there that the Plaintiff granted it to the Defendant, and the grant to the Defendant was there holden void, becauſe the firſt Eſtate was not void before Entry. [e] And, Sir, in the Regiſter there is a Writ called a Writ of Entry ad terminum qui præteriit, which lies in Caſe where the Termor holds over his Term, and this proves that the Poſſeſſion and Intereſt remains in him until an Entry is made, for if he had no Eſtate in the Land but at Will or at Sufferance, then the Writ would not lie againſt him. Which Caſes argue ſtrongly that in our Caſe although the Covenant and Grant had been ſufficient to give Title of Re-entry to the Leſſors, yet until Entry in Deed is made the Term is not avoided or determined, and conſequently the ſecond Leaſe made during the firſt Leaſe is void. Further, as to the Form of the Pleading, it ſeems that the Rejoinder is double, for in the Rejoinder it is ſhewn that the Rent was in Arrear at two Days, viz. at the Feaſt of the Annunciation of our Lady, and at the Feaſt of St. Michael, and it would have been ſufficient to have ſhewn that it was in Arrear at one of the Days only, for that avoids the Leaſe as well as if it was in Arrear at two Days, and then the ſhewing it to be in Arrear at two Days makes it double, for each of the Days is iſſuable; for if we ſhould ſay that it was not in Arrear at the Feaſt of St. Michael, then he may demand Judgment, becauſe we don't anſwer to the Rent in Arrear at the Feaſt of the Annunciation, for that makes the Term void, and if we ſhould anſwer to both, then we ſhould join two Iſſues, one of which might be found for us, and the other againſt us, in which Caſe the Court would be greatly inveigled and at a Loſs what to do; wherefore ſince he has offered us two [f] Iſſues, one whereof had been ſufficient, the Rejoinder in this Point is double. [g] As in 3. H. 6. where in a Writ of Ward brought by the Lord, a Feoffment of the Anceſtor of the Infant was pleaded in Bar, and the Lord (being Plaintiff) averred it to be upon Condition that whereas the Wife of the Tenant was enſeint, if ſhe was delivered of an Iſſue Male, that then he ſhould enfeoff him, and afterwards ſhe was delivered of an Iſſue Male, the Wardſhip of whom is now demanded; and by the Opinion of the whole Court the Plea was double, for the Feoffment upon Condition was Colluſion apparent, and was one Matter, and the Averment ment of the Colluſion was another Matter, and then the ſhewing of both (both being effectual and anſwerable) makes the Plea double. [a] So in 20. H. 6. in Avowry, the Avowant alledged one Seizin of the Services in his Grandfather, and another Seizin in himſelf, and that is there clearly held to be double, becauſe each of them is traverſable, and one only would have been ſufficient. [b] So in 22. H. 6. a Man alledged two continual Claims to avoid a Deſcent viz. that his Predeceſſor and himſelf made continual Claim, and that is there held to be double, becauſe his own continual Claim would have been ſufficient to avoid the Deſcent, if the dying ſeized was in his own Time, and then the other was unneceſſary. [c] So if one will plead in Bar two Deſcents in Fee, this makes the Plea double, cauſâ qua ſupra: But to alledge two Deſcents in Tail does not make the Plea double, for one Anſwer, viz. ne dona pas, makes an End of the whole, ſo that the Deſcents there are not the moſt [d] ſubſtantial Part of the Matter, but the Gift, and in ſhewing of the Gift he muſt ſhew how it came to the laſt Iſſue, [e] and foraſmuch as he is neceſſarily compelled to do that, it is not double. [f] And ſo in Debt againſt an Executor, to plead fully adminiſtered, and ſo nothing in his Hands, does not make the Plea double although they are two Things, for the one is purſuant to the other, and the laſt is but a Concluſion from the firſt, and one Anſwer, viz. Aſſets in his Hands, makes an End of the whole, and foraſmuch as the Law compels him to take that Concluſion, it ſhall not be double. But here he is not compelled to ſhew that the Rents were behind at both Days, but the ſame Advantage is given for the Rent behind at one Day as for the Rent behind at both Days, and then the ſhewing that the Rent was behind at two Days makes the Plea double, inaſmuch as each of them is anſwerable, as it is ſaid before. For which Reaſon it ſeems to me that the Plaintiff ſhall recover.

Catline Serjeant. It ſeems to me to the contrary. And firſt, as I take it in our Caſe, there is a good Reſervation of a Rent. For although there are not here the uſual Words of Reſervation, yet there are Words equivalent in Law thereunto. [g] For in our Law if any Perſons are agreed upon a Thing, and Words are expreſſed or written to make the Agreement, although they are not apt and uſual Words, yet if they have Subſtance in them tending to the Effect propoſed, the Law will take them to be of the ſame Effect as uſual Words; for the Law always regards the Intention of the Parties, and will apply the Words to that which in common Preſumption may be taken to be their Intent. And ſuch Laws are very commendable. For if the Law ſhould be ſo preciſe as always to inſiſt upon a peculiar Form and Order of Words in Agreements, and would not regard the Intention of the Parties when it was expreſſed in other Words of Subſtance, but would rather apply the Intention of the Parties to the Order and Form of Words, than the Words to the Intention of the Parties, ſuch Law would be more full of Form than of Subſtance. But our Law, which is the moſt reaſonable Law upon Earth, regards the Effect and Subſtance of Words more than the Form of them, and takes the Subſtance of Words to imply the Form thereof, rather than that the Intent of the Parties ſhould be void. And the Law takes Words of Subſtance that are rarely uſed to be equivalent to Words of Subſtance that are uſual. [h] And therefore if Tenant for Life and his Leſſor make a Feoffment in Fee by Deed, this is the Feoffment of the Tenant for Life, and the Confirmation of the Leſſor, although there is no Word of Confirmation in the Deed, and this is wrought by the reaſonable Conſtruction of the Law which inclines the Words to the Intention of the Parties, as it may beſt ſtand with Reaſon. Wherefore the Words having Subſtance in them ſhall be there taken to enure as a Confirmation of the Leſſor. And ſo if Tenant for Years and the Leſſor make a Feoffment in Fee, this ſhall be taken for the Livery and Feoffment of the Leſſor, and the Surrender of the Leſſee, and yet there is no Word of a Surrender, but it ſhall be ſo taken in Judgment of Law for the Reaſon above given. [i] So if two Tenants in common grant a Rent-Charge of 20*s.* to a Man out of their Land, this ſhall enure as ſeveral Grants of 20*s.* viz. as a Grant of 20*s.* by each of them, ſo that the Grantee ſhall have 40*s.* and yet the Words of the Grant were joint and not ſeveral, but becauſe the Rent iſſues out of their Eſtate which is ſeveral, it ſhall enure accordingly cauſâ qua ſupra. So that always where there are Words of Subſtance, the Law appoints how they ſhall enure. [k] And in 9. H. 6. it is held, that if a Commoner makes a Deed to the Tenant of the Land, by which he renounces his Common to him, this ſhall enure as a Releaſe of the Common, and ſo there is a Releaſe without Words of Releaſe, but becauſe the Words are equivalent in Subſtance to Words of Releaſe, therefore the Law takes them as a Releaſe. And ſo in our Caſe here, there are Words of Subſtance of Reſervation of a Rent; for the Land is leaſed by Indenture, and at the ſame time and by the ſame Indenture the Leſſee covenants and grants to render and pay for the Tenements ſuch a Sum, which Words have the Effect and Subſtance of a Reſervation of Rent. For what is the Effect of a Reſervation of Rent upon a Term of Years? As I apprehend it is nothing more than an Agreement between the Leſſor and the Leſſee that the Leſſor ſhall have an annual Sum for the Land, and that the Leſſee ſhall pay it during the Term for the Land. And that is the Effect and Subſtance of a Reſervation, and alſo the Intent of the Parties, and there is no other Effect or Subſtance in the Reſervation; and then if that be the Subſtance of the Matter, what Difference is there when the Leſſor ſaith, "I will have 20*s.* yearly for the Land," and the Leſſee agrees to it, and when the Leſſee ſays, "I will give you 20*s.* yearly for the Land," and the Leſſor agrees to it? Certainly there is no Difference at all. For in Contracts it is not material which of the Parties ſpeaks the Words, if the other agrees to them, for the Agreement of the minds of the Parties is the only Thing the Law

Law reſpects in Contracts, and ſuch Words as expreſs the Aſſent of the Parties, and have Subſtance in them, are ſufficient. [a] And therefore in 21. H. 6. a Man was bound in an Obligation, which was endorſed that the Obligee vult et concedit quod ſi infra obligatus ſteterit arbitrio, ordinationi, et judicio A. et B. that then the Obligation ſhould be void, and there Exception was taken to the Condition, becauſe the Words are the Words of the Obligee and not of the Obligor, but it is there held by the better Opinion to be a good Condition, for there is the Subſtance of a Condition, and the Intent of the Parties appears; and yet the Words there are not the uſual Words of Conditions, for the Words of Conditions are the Words of the Obligor. From whence it appears that Words ſpoken by one ſhall enure as if ſpoken by another, and that one Sort of Expreſſion ſhall enure for another. [b] So a Grant of an Annuity to one pro conſilio impendendo is a Grant conditional, for if the Grantee will not give Counſel the Annuity ſhall ceaſe; and altho' there is not any Word of Condition in that Caſe, yet it is all one as if the Grant of the Annuity had been upon Condition that he ſhould give him Counſel. [c] So is the Caſe in 9. Ed. 4. where there was a Debate about Tithes between a Prior and another, and a Compoſition was made between them that the Prior ſhould have the Tithes without Challenge or Contradiction of the other, and the Prior granted to the other 40 s. yearly, and there by the better Opinion this Grant ſhall enure conditionally, ſo that if the other diſturb the Prior in taking the Tithes, the 40 s. ſhall ceaſe for the Reaſon I have ſhewn before. And as in the Caſes recited Words of Covenant or Grant ſhall enure as Words of Condition, ſo in our Caſe Words of Covenant and Grant may enure as a Reſervation, and eſpecially as they are made at one ſame Time, and by Deed indented. [d] And in one Book it is ſaid if a Man makes a Leaſe for Years by Deed, and by the ſame Deed covenants that the Leſſee ſhall not be impeached of Waſt, this Word (covenant) made at the ſame Time amounts to as much as if he had ſaid, habendum for Years without Impeachment of Waſt. [e] And it ſeems by the Book of 17. Ed. 3. that if a Guardian by Deed indented aſſigns to a Woman that is dowable, and to her ſecond Huſband Land of greater Value than the Dower amounts to, and if the Deed recites the ſame, and in reſpect thereof the Huſband and Wife by the ſame Deed grant an annual Sum to the Value of the Overplus to the Guardian with Clauſe of Diſtreſs, there the Wife after the Death of the Huſband ſhall be bound by it, becauſe the Grant to pay the Rent for the Overplus of the Land, being made at the ſame Time that the Dower is aſſigned, ſhall be a good Reſervation of Rent, for otherwiſe the Wife ſhould not be bound by it after the Death of her Huſband. So by like Reaſon in our Caſe the Covenant and Grant to pay the Sum yearly, being made at the Time of the Leaſe, ſhall be a Reſervation of Rent. But in the ſaid Caſe of 17. Ed. 3. before alledged, the Deed was that the Guardian aſſigned the ſaid Land to the ſaid Huſband and Wife as the reaſonable Dower of the Wife, and did not make Mention that the Land was of greater Value than the Dower, and for this Reaſon it is there adjudged that the ſaid Grant ſhall not bind the Wife, becauſe the Grant is a collateral Thing not granted upon any Conſideration, for the Deed expreſſed that the Land was aſſigned as the reaſonable Dower, and therefore the Grant is there collateral; and ſo ſhould it be in our Caſe if the Sum was to be paid to a Stranger, or if it was to be paid for another Thing than for the Land. Wherefore there ſeems to me to be a good Diverſity between Words enuring upon Acts between the Parties concerning the principal Matter, and concerning a Matter collateral. And ſo (as I ſaid) the Clauſe of the Covenant and Grant of the Leſſee to pay the Sum for the Land contains in itſelf the Subſtance of a Reſervation, and being by Indenture between the ſame Parties, and at the ſame Time with the Leaſe itſelf, it ſhall be adjudged in Law a good Reſervation of Rent, and to iſſue out of the Land, and then it ſhall be a good Condition. But admitting it is not a Rent but a Sum in groſs, yet the Condition ſhall be good, for theſe Words, viz. if it ſhall happen the ſaid annual Rent and Farm of 37 l. 3. s. 4 d. be in Arrear &c. ſhall be taken in Judgment of Law to be of the ſame Effect as if it had been ſaid, if the ſaid annual Sum of 37 l. 3 s. 4. d. be in Arrear, for the Certainty of the Sum is expreſſed, and then to call a Sum certainly recited a Rent, when it is no Rent but a Sum in groſs, ſhall not make the Matter bad in itſelf, but this Word (Rent) ſhall be taken according as it was intended, and that is a Sum, for if the Words (Rent and Farm) had been omitted, and the reſt of the Sentence had ſtood, viz. if it ſhall happen the ſaid 37 l. 3 s. 4 d. be in Arrear, that then, &c. this Clauſe would have been good and perfect. And then when the Certainty itſelf is expreſſed, and it is called a Rent where it is none in Fact, the Law will adjudge the Word (Rent) to be void, rather than the Certainty expreſſed ſhould be void, or it will conſtrue the Word (Rent) to be intended for (the ſaid Sum), and ſo will have Regard to the Intent of the Parties, and adjudge according to it. [f] And therefore in 4. Ed. 4. J. S. bound himſelf to the Obligee in 20 l. and the Obligation was thus, Noverint univerſi per præſentes me J. S. teneri et obligari W. B. in 20 l. ſolvendum eidem J. &c. yet the Obligation was there taken to be good, and the Court held that the Plaintiff ſhould declare on a ſolvendum to himſelf; for the Intent of the Parties appears, and the Certainty of the Bond before ſhall not be taken away by the ſolvendum after. [g] So if one has a Remainder of Land in him, and he grants it to another by the Name of a Reverſion, this ſhall be a good Grant, for there the Certainty of the Land appears, and then notwithſtanding the Miſnomer of the Thing, the Law regards the Intent of the Parties, and adjudges according to it. [h] So if I am bound to pay you 20 s. at the Feaſt of St. Michael which ſhall be in the Year of our Lord 1755, and at the ſame Feaſt of St. Michael next following following other 20 s. there the Law will adjudge the ſame Feaſt to be intended the like Feaſt, for it cannot be the ſame Feaſt if it comes afterwards, but it ſhall be taken for the like Feaſt. Wherefore the Law will take one Word for another to ſupply the Intent of the Parties. And ſo in our Caſe where the Words are, if it ſhall happen that the ſaid annual Rent and Farm of 37 l. 3 s. 4 d. be in Arrear, it ſhall be taken for the ſaid Sum of 37 l. 3 s. 4 d. if it is not a Rent in Fact.

[a] Littlet. § 345. Ante 135 (a).

[a] And ſo Littleton ſays, as it is before cited; which Caſe and our Caſe are all one in Effect. And it cannot be taken in any other Manner, for the Certainty of the Sum is expreſſed, and then if it be not a Rent in Deed, either the Clauſe muſt of Neceſſity be void, or the one Word ſhall enure for the other; and to make it void would be unreaſonable where there is ſuch a Certainty of every Penny of the Sum. But where the Words are ſpoken generally, and don't particularly ſpecify the Matter, the Law will enure otherwiſe. As in the Caſe before put where one has a Remainder of Land in him, and he grants to another the Reverſions of all his Lands, there the Remainder ſhall not paſs, becauſe the Grant is in general Terms, and therefore it cannot be taken that it was his Intent to grant the Remainder of the Land, and alſo there the Grant may take Effect otherwiſe, viz. as to the Remainder only, and therefore it ſhall not make the Remainder to paſs. And ſo in our Caſe if it had been contained in the Deed thus, viz. if it ſhall happen that all or any of the Rents which the Leſſee ought to pay to the Leſſor be in Arrear at the Day of Payment, that then the Leaſe ſhall be void, there (admitting it is not a Rent in Fact) I would agree that the Clauſe might not enure to make the Leaſe void for the Sum in groſs, for there is not any Specialty or Certainty, but all or any of the Rents. But here the Words are, if it ſhall happen that the ſaid annual Rent and Farm of 37 l. 3 s. 4 d. be in Arrear, &c. ſo that it expreſſes the Certainty of the Sum, and therefore of Neceſſity it ought to enure as if it had been ſaid, if it ſhall happen that the ſaid Sum of 37 l. 3 s. 4 d. be in Arrear, and in no other Manner can it enure. Wherefore there ſeems to me to be a good Diverſity between general Words which comprehend no Sort of Certainty, and Words that recite the Specialty and Certainty of the Matter. And ſo in our Caſe the Clauſe being ſpecial and containing Certainty is good, and makes the Leaſe void notwithſtanding the ſaid Exception.

[b] Vide 1. Leon. 246. S. P. cited per Haughton J. to be a Condition.

[b] Further, it ſeems to me to be a Condition here, notwithſtanding it is not made by the Words of the Leſſors. For (as I have ſaid before) the Words ſhall be conſtrued according to the Intention of the Parties, where it is directed to a ſpecial Purpoſe. And ſuch Words as intimate and imply the Intent of the Parties to be conditional are ſufficient to make a Condition as well as the uſual Words.

[c] Litt. R. 136. 1. Finch 43. 2. Finch 60.

[c] And therefore if a Man makes a Feoffment ad ſolvendum 20 s. at ſuch a Time, this is a Condition, for the Matter ſhews that the Intent of the Feoffor was to have the 20 s. for the Land.

[d] Litt. R. 136. 1. Finch. 43. 2. Finch. 60.

[d] So if a Man makes a Feoffment in Fee to one ad erudiendum his Son in ſuch an Art, this is a Condition, becauſe the Words purport ſuch Intent, and therefore they are conditional altho' they are not the uſual Words. So a Proviſo that the Leſſee or Feoffee do ſuch an Act is a Condition, and yet it is not ſpoken by the Leſſor or Feoffor any more than by the Leſſee or Feoffee; but becauſe the Word purports the Intent of the Parties to be ſo, it ſhall enure as a Condition. So in our Caſe the Covenant and Grant by the Leſſee that the Demiſe ſhall be void being made by the Leſſee, to which the Leſſors agreed, ſhall enure by Law as a Condition, or in what Manner ſoever it be termed it ſhall enure as a Determination of the Leaſe, inaſmuch as it was made at the ſame Time when the Leaſe commenced. Further, it ſeems to me that the Leaſe is void without Entry.

[e] Ante 136 (a).

[e] For a Leaſe for Years may be made by Parol without other Circumſtance, and by the ſame Reaſon it may be diſſolved by Parol without Entry or other Circumſtance.

[f] See Ante 135. (e) and the Books there cited.

[f] But if it had been an Eſtate that requires Livery and Seizin, then an Entry ſhould be requiſite, becauſe an Eſtate of Freehold cannot commence by Parol without other Circumſtance, and therefore ſhall not be defeated by Parol without other Circumſtance, viz. Entry. But here in our Caſe the Leaſe made by Parol is defeated by the ſaid Agreement preſently without Entry.

[g] S. P. 1. Finch 309, 310. Ante 138. (a)

[g] But yet without Entry the Leſſors ſhall not have an Action of Treſpaſs; however this does not prove but that they may make a Leaſe before Entry.

[h] Vin. Abr. tit. Entry G. 4. pl. 1. Ante 137 (f)

[h] For if Land deſcends to the Heir, before his Entry he may make a Leaſe; and yet he ſhall not have [i] an Action of Treſpaſs before Entry. And if a Man makes a Leaſe to another to commence at the Feaſt of St. Michael, before the ſaid Feaſt the Leſſee may grant [k] the Leaſe over, and yet he ſhall not have an [l] Action of Treſpaſs before Entry. Therefore a Man may grant or leaſe Land in ſuch Caſes where he may not have an Action of Treſpaſs before his Entry. So ſhall it be in our Caſe, that is to ſay, the ſecond Leaſe made before Entry ſhall be good, altho' the Leſſors ſhould not have an Action of Treſpaſs. And as to the Form of the Rejoinder, Sir, it is not double. For the Record is, if it ſhall happen the ſaid annual Rent and Farm of 37 l. 3 s. 4 d. or any Part thereof be in Arrear and unpaid in Part or in all according to the Times aforeſaid, that is to ſay, if the Moiety of the ſaid annual Rent be in Arrear and unpaid by the Space of two Months next following the Feaſt of Mary the Virgin, and the other Moiety of the ſaid Rent be in Arrear and unpaid by the Space of ſix Weeks next following the Feaſt of St. Michael, that then, &c. So that if the Clauſe be well conſidered it will appear that the Leaſe ſhall not be void for the Rent behind at one Day, as Mr. Recorder recited the Caſe to be, but if the Rent be behind at both the Days it ſhall be void, or elſe not. And therefore it is incumbent upon us to ſhew that the Rent was behind at both the Days in order to avoid the Leaſe. As if one grants to me that if I pay him 20 s. at Michaelmas, and 20 s. at Chriſtmas, then an Obligation made by me to him ſhall be void, there if I would avoid the Obligation I ought to ſhew that I have paid 20 s. at each of the Days, and it ſhall not be double. No more

ſhall

ſhall it in the principal Caſe. And ſo the Caſe is not as Mr. Recorder recited it to be, nor is it like any of the Caſes put by him. Wherefore the Plea is ſingle enough. But it ſeems to me that there is a Fault in the Plaintiff's Declaration. For the Treſpaſs is aſſigned to be done the third Day of July anno 1. Edw. 6. and the detaining the Plaintiff out of Poſſeſſion is aſſigned until the ſecond Day of June, Anno 7. Edw. 6. and it appears by the Plaintiff's own ſhewing in his Replication that his Leaſe was ended at Michaelmas Anno 5. Edw. 6. For he has ſhewn that the Leaſe was made for 20 Years to be accounted from the Feaſt of St. Michael Anno 23. H. 8. then next following; which Leaſe ended Anno 5. Edw. 6. and then to alledge the Continuance of the Treſpaſs until the ſecond Day of June Anno 7. Edw. 6, cannot be good, for his Eſtate by his own ſhewing was ended before. Wherefore it ſeems to me that the Rejoinder is good, and the Declaration bad.

Afterwards in Michaelmas Term 1 & 2. Philip and Mary, Ramſey argued again, and Catline Serjeant anſwered him. And in Hillary Term next following Ramſey argued again, and Catline then anſwered him again; but becauſe their Arguments were much to the ſame Effect with their former Arguments before reported, for this Reaſon as well as to avoid tiring the Reader's Patience with the Length of the Arguments, I have omitted the Report of them here. And after this laſt Argument, Bromley Chief Juſtice in the ſame Hillary Term ſaid that there were two Faults in the Rejoinder, which were not moved by the Counſel, and which he ſaid were incurable, and ſo ſaid the other Juſtices. The firſt was, in that the Subſtance of the Rejoinder is to ſhew the firſt Leaſe to be void and determined; and the Matter to prove it is in the Clauſe by which it is covenanted and granted that if the Rent was behind, ut ſupra, the Leaſe ſhould be void; which Clauſe is not recited in Fact to be a Covenant or Grant, but it is ſhewn only by way of Recital. [a] For it is ſhewn in this Manner, viz. in the ſaid Indenture made to the Plaintiff it is contained, that if it ſhall happen the ſaid Rent be in Arrear, &c. the ſaid Browning covenanted and granted that the ſaid Demiſe ſhould be extinct, &c. which ſaying that it is contained in the ſaid Indenture is only pleaded by way of Recital. For it is not a preciſe Allegation or Affirmation that the ſaid Browning did covenant and grant that if the Rent was in Arrear the Leaſe ſhould be void, but it is an Affirmation that the Indenture ſays ſo, and the Party himſelf ought to ſay that it is ſo, and not ſay that the Indenture ſays ſo, or that it is contained in the Indenture that it is ſo, for ſuch Allegation is but a Report of the ſaying of another, viz. that the Indenture ſays ſo. And it might juſtly be ſaid to him, "You ſay that the Indenture ſays ſo, but what ſay you?" for to ſay, it is contained in the Indenture that it is covenanted and granted, and to ſay, that it is covenanted and granted by the Indenture, are two Things. For the ſaying that it is contained in the Indenture is not an Affirmation of the Thing which is mentioned to be contained in the Indenture. [b] As in 21. Ed. 4. where the Abbot of Waltham was appointed Collector of a Tithe granted to the King, and in Diſcharge thereof he pleaded in the Exchequer, that inter recorda de termino Paſchæ anno 15. Ed. 4. inter alia continetur, that King Richard 2. granted to the Predeceſſor of the Abbot, that neither he nor any of his Succeſſors ſhould be Collectors of any Tithe afterwards to be granted, and there it is adjudged that this Plea pleaded by inter alia continetur was not ſufficient to diſcharge him for the Reaſon before ſhewn. So in the Caſe here. [c] But in our Caſe if the Indenture had been inrolled de verbo in verbum, then it would have been ſufficient to have ſaid ut ſupra, for by the Inrollment it would have appeared to the Juſtices judicially, and then the ſaying that it is contained in the Indenture is a putting them in mind of a Thing which appears to them of Record. But as it is alledged here it is no good Plea. The ſecond Fault was in this, viz. where the Clauſe is, that if the one Moiety of the Rent be in Arrear and unpaid after two Months next following the Feaſt of St. Mary, and the other Moiety be in Arrear and unpaid after ſix Weeks next following the Feaſt of St. Michael, &c. that then, &c. the Defendant in the Rejoinder (in order to make the Leaſe void) has pleaded that one Moiety of the Rent was in Arrear at the Feaſt of St. Mary, and by the Space of two Months next following the ſame, and that the other Moiety was in Arrear at the Feaſt of St. Michael, and by the Space of ſix Weeks next following; and ſo he has not directly affirmed the Rent to be in Arrear for the Time limited in the Indenture. For the Indenture is, if it be in Arrear after two Months, and he ſays that it was in Arrear by the Space of two Months, [d] which is not a direct Affirmation that it was in Arrear after two Months, but by Implication only, and ſo argumentatively, and not otherwiſe. For which Reaſon the Rejoinder is inſufficient.

And now this Michaelmas Term in the ſecond and third Years of the Reign of King Philip and Queen Mary, Ramſey argued for the Plaintiff, and Richard Catline Serjeant for the Defendant, as to theſe two laſt Exceptions only. And Catline ſaid that the Pleading of the Condition by the continetur here is well enough ſince the Indenture was recited by the Plaintiff in the Replication. But if the Defendant had pleaded by continetur in an Indenture whereof no mention was made before, it would not have been ſufficiently pleaded. As in the ſaid Caſe of 21. Ed. 4. And as to the other Exception he argued, that it is not poſſible for the Rent to be in Arrear by the Space of two Months, but therein it muſt be in Arrear after two Months: for it cannot poſſibly be paid between the laſt Part of the two Months, and before the Commencement of the Time afterwards, for the Times are connected together ſo cloſely that there is not Time enough between them them for the Payment of the Money, and then the ſaying that it was in Arrear by the Space of two Months proves in itſelf preciſely and without Implication that it was in Arrear after two Months, for there is no Poſſibility to the contrary. [a] And ſuch Pleas as don't anſwer the direct Words, but contain the Matter by neceſſary Conſequence are ſufficient in Law. [b] As in Debt upon Arrearages of Account it is a good Plea to ſay nul tiel Account, for if there was no ſuch Account, it neceſſarily follows that he does not owe him the Money thereupon. And he put ſeveral other Caſes on this Head. But Portman now Chief Juſtice, and the other Juſtices took the ſaid two Exceptions to be effectual for the Cauſes ſhewn before, and that the Rejoinder was vicious by Reaſon thereof. Wherefore they ſaid it was in vain for them to argue the other Matters in Law ariſing upon the Rejoinder, foraſmuch as the Rejoinder ſeemed clearly to them to be bad for the ſaid two laſt Reaſons. And therefore in regard of them only, without reſpect to the other Matters ariſing upon the Rejoinder and before debated, they gave Judgment as appears by the reſt of the Record hereunder written.

The reſt of the ſaid ſecond Record.

At which Day before the Lord the King and Lady the Queen at Weſtminſter came as well the aforeſaid John Browning as the aforeſaid William Beſton by their Attornies aforeſaid. Whereupon all and ſingular the Premiſſes being ſeen, and by the Court of the Lord the King and Lady the Queen here more fully underſtood, and mature Deliberation being thereupon had, it ſeems to the Court of the Lord the King and Lady the Queen here, that the Plea aforeſaid in Manner and Form aforeſaid pleaded is inſufficient in Law to preclude the aforeſaid John Browning from having his Action aforeſaid againſt the ſaid William Beſton, by Reaſon whereof the ſame John Browning ought to recover his Damages on Account of the Treſpaſs aforeſaid: But becauſe it is unknown to the Court of the Lord the King and Lady the Queen here what Damages the aforeſaid John Browning hath ſuſtained as well by Reaſon of the Treſpaſs aforeſaid as for his Coſts and Charges by him about his Suit in this Behalf laid out, it is commanded to the Sheriff that by the Oath of good and lawful Men of his Bailiwick he ſhould diligently inquire what Damages the aforeſaid John Browning hath ſuſtained as well by Reaſon of the Treſpaſs aforeſaid, as for his Coſts and Charges by him about his Suit in this Behalf laid out: And that Inquiſition ſo by him diſtinctly and plainly taken under his Seal, &c. and the Seals, &c. he ſhould return to the Lord the King at Weſtminſter on Monday the Morrow of the Purification of the bleſſed Mary, together with the King's Writ thereupon to him directed. The ſame Day is given to the aforeſaid John Browning there, &c. At which Day before the Lord the King and Lady the Queen at Weſtminſter came the Parties aforeſaid by their Attornies aforeſaid: And the Sheriff, viz. William Saunders Eſquire returned a certain Inquiſition taken before him by virtue of the Writ aforeſaid at Southwark the laſt Day of January in the ſecond and third Years of the Reign of the ſaid Lord the King and Lady the Queen now, by which it appears that the aforeſaid John Browning has ſuſtained Damages by Reaſon of the Treſpaſs aforeſaid, beſides his Coſts and Charges by him about his Suit in this Behalf laid out, to the Amount of 60 l. and for his Coſts and Charges 20 s. Therefore it is conſidered that the aforeſaid John Browning recover againſt the aforeſaid William Beſton his Damages aforeſaid by the Inquiſition aforeſaid found. And that the ſame William Beſton be taken, &c.

Mich. Term. 2 & 3. P. & M. Rot. 436. Glouceſt.

RICHARD Tracy Eſquire and William Nicholſon were attached by Writ of the Lady the Queen of ſecond Deliverance to anſwer John Throckmerton of a Plea, wherefore they took the Cattle of the ſaid John, and them unjuſtly detained againſt Gages and Pledges, &c. And whereupon the ſame John by William Underhill his Attorney complains that the aforeſaid Richard and William the 26th Day of March in the 7*th* Year of the Reign of Lord Edward late King of England, the ſixth from the Conqueſt, at Beckford, in a certain Place called Didcote, took the Cattle, viz. 400 Sheep of the ſaid John, and them unjuſtly detained againſt Gages and Pledges, until &c. wherefore he ſays that he is damnified and has Damage to the Value of 40*l.* And thereupon he produces the Suit, &c.

Declaration. Same Precedent Raſt. Entr. 572. a. pl. 6.

And the aforeſaid Richard and William by Richard Lone their Attorney come and defend the Force and Injury when, &c. And the ſame Richard in his own proper Right well avows, and the ſame William as Bailiff of the ſame Richard well acknowledges the taking of the Cattle aforeſaid in the aforeſaid Place where, &c. and juſtly, &c. becauſe they ſay that the ſame Place where the taking of the Cattle aforeſaid is ſuppoſed to be done contains, and at the Time aforeſaid when the taking of the ſaid Cattle is ſuppoſed to be done, did contain in itſelf 100 Acres of Land with the Appurtenances in Beckford aforeſaid, whereof long before the Time aforeſaid when, &c. and at the ſame time when, &c. the ſame Richard was ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee. And becauſe the Cattle aforeſaid at the ſame time when, &c. were in the aforeſaid Place where, &c. eating up the Graſs then growing there, and doing Damage there, the ſame Richard in his own proper Right well avows, and the aforeſaid William as Bailiff of the ſame Richard well acknowledges the taking of the Cattle aforeſaid in the Place aforeſaid where, &c. and juſtly, &c. for the Damage ſo done there, &c.

Avowry.

And the aforeſaid John ſays, that neither the aforeſaid Richard for the Reaſon before alledged ought to avow, nor the aforeſaid William for the ſame Reaſon, as Bailiff of the ſame Richard, ought to acknowledge as juſt the taking of the Cattle aforeſaid in the aforeſaid Place where, &c. becauſe he ſays, that long before the aforeſaid Richard had any Thing in the aforeſaid 100 Acres of Land, one Henry late Abbot of the late Monaſtery of the bleſſed Virgin Mary of Tewkſbury in the aforeſaid County of Glouceſter, was ſeized of one Meſſuage and of the aforeſaid 100 Acres of Land with the Appurtenances amongſt other Things in Beckford aforeſaid, in his Demeſn as of Fee, in Right of his late Monaſtery aforeſaid. And being ſo ſeized thereof, the ſame late Abbot, by the unanimous Aſſent and Conſent of the ſame late Monaſtery and Convent, before the aforeſaid Time of the taking the Cattle aforeſaid, by his Deed (ſealed with the common Seal of the ſaid late Abbot and Convent) demiſed the Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances amongſt other Things to one John George, Dorothy his Wife, and Joan the Daughter of the ſame John and Dorothy, to have to them for Term of their Lives, and of the longeſt Liver of them. By virtue of which Demiſe the ſame John George, Dorothy, and Joan were thereof ſeized in their Demeſn as of Freehold, the Reverſion of the ſame belonging to the aforeſaid late Abbot and his Succeſſors; and the ſaid John George, Dorothy, and Joan being ſo ſeized of the Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances amongſt other Things, and the ſame late Abbot of the Reverſion thereof as of Fee and Right in Form aforeſaid, the ſame late Abbot, by the Name of Henry Abbot of the Monaſtery of the bleſſed Virgin Mary of Tewkſbury, and the Convent of the ſame Place, by the unanimous Aſſent and Conſent of the ſame late Monaſtery and the then Convent, afterwards and before the aforeſaid Time when, &c. viz. the 20th Day of September in the 17th Year of the Reign of Lord Henry the Eighth late King of England, at Tewkſbury aforeſaid, by his certain Writing indented, (one Part whereof ſealed with the common Seal of the ſaid late Abbot and Convent, the ſame John Throckmerton brings here into Court, the Date whereof is the ſame Day and Year,) delivered, granted, and to Farm let to one John Smith Citizen and Clothier of London, and Margaret his Wife, the Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances amongſt other Things by the Name of the Reverſion of all and ſingular the Meſſuages, Lands, Tenements, Meadows, and Paſtures of the ſaid Abbot and Convent in Didcote in the County of Glouceſter, with all and ſingular their Appurtenances, together with the Chapel there being, (all which John George, Dorothy his Wife, and Joan their Daughter then held for Term of their Lives and of the longeſt Liver of them) to have and to hold the aforeſaid Meſſuages, Lands, Tenements, Meadows, and Paſtures, together with the Chapel, with their Appurtenances to the ſame John Smith and Margaret, and their Aſſigns, from the Feaſt of St. Michael the Archangel next coming after the Death, Surrender, or Forfeiture of the aforeſaid John George, Dorothy his Wife, and Joan their Daughter, or whenſoever by any other Means the Reverſion aforeſaid ſhould fall, until the End of the Term of 21 Years from thence next following, and fully to to be compleat. By Force whereof the ſame John Smith and Margaret were poſſeſſed of ſuch Intereſt and Term aforeſaid of and in the Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances, and the ſaid John Smith and Margaret being ſo thereof poſſeſſed, the aforeſaid Dorothy and Joan di-d, and the aforeſaid John George ſurvived them, and held himſelf in the Tenements aforeſaid, and was thereof ſole ſeized in his Demeſn as of Freehold by Right of Survivorſhip. wards the aforeſaid John Smith and Margaret being ſo poſſeſſed of the Intereſt and Term aforeſaid of and in the Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances aforeſaid amongſt other Things, the ſame John Smith, before the aforeſaid Time when, &c. viz. the 10th Day of October in the 29th Year of the Reign of the aforeſaid Lord Henry the Eighth late King of England, at Tewkſbury aforeſaid, granted amongſt other Things his whole Eſtate, Term, and Intereſt which he then had to come of and in the Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances to one William Cartwright the younger, and to Henry Cartwright. By Force whereof the ſame William and Henry were of the ſaid Intereſt and Term of and in the Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances poſſeſſed, and being ſo thereof poſſeſſed, and the ſaid John George being ſeized of the Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances amongſt other Things for Term of his Life, the Reverſion in Fee-ſimple thereof belonging to the aforeſaid late Abbot and his Succeſſors, the ſame late Abbot and the then Convent of the ſame Place, by their unanimous Aſſent and Conſent, afterwards and before the aforeſaid Time when, &c. viz. the 9th Day of January in the 31ſt Year of the Reign of the aforeſaid Lord Henry the Eighth late King of England, by their Writing ſealed with their common Seal, and inrolled of Record in the Court of Chancery of the ſame late King Henry the Eighth, gave, granted, and freely ſurrendered the aforeſaid Reverſion of the Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances amongſt other Things to the aforeſaid late King Henry the Eighth, to have and to hold to the ſame late King Henry the Eighth his Heirs and Succeſſors for ever. By reaſon of which ſaid Gift, Grant, and Surrender, the ſame late King Henry the Eighth was of the aforeſaid Reverſion in Fee ſimple of the Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances amongſt other Things ſeized as of Fee and Right. And afterwards and before the aforeſaid Time when, &c. viz. the 6th Day of June in the 34th Year of the Reign of the aforeſaid Lord Henry the Eighth late King of England, the aforeſaid John George at Tewkſbury aforeſaid in the County aforeſaid died; after whoſe Death, viz. on the Morrow of St. Michael the Archangel then next following, that is, the laſt Day of September in the aboveſaid 34th Year of the Reign of the ſaid Lord Henry the Eighth, the ſame William Cartwright and Henry into the Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances entered, and were thereof poſſeſſed for Term of the aforeſaid 21 Years to the aforeſaid John and Margaret in Form aforeſaid granted, the Reverſion thereof in Form aforeſaid belonging to the aforeſaid late King Henry the Eighth and his Heirs. And afterwards the ſame late King Henry the Eighth, being ſeized in Form aforeſaid of the Reverſion of the Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances, by his Letters-patent, the Date whereof is at Weſtminſter the 14th Day of October in the 36th Year of his Reign, gave and granted the aforeſaid Reverſion of the Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances to the aforeſaid Richard Tracy, to have to him and his Heirs for ever. By reaſon of which ſaid Letters-patent the ſame Richard was ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee of the aforeſaid Reverſion of the Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances, and the ſame Richard being ſo ſeized in Form aforeſaid of the Reverſion aforeſaid, and the aforeſaid William Cartwright and Henry being poſſeſſed in Form aforeſaid of the Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances amongſt other Things, the ſame William Cartwright and Henry afterwards and before the aforeſaid Time when, &c. viz. the 6th Day of May in the 6th Year of the Reign of Lord Edward the Sixth late King of England, at Coughton in the County of Warwick, granted all their Eſtate, Term, and Intereſt which they then had to come of and in the Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances amongſt other Things to the aforeſaid John Throckmerton. By virtue of which Grant the ſame John into the Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances before the aforeſaid Time when, &c. entered, and was thereof poſſeſſed, and being ſo thereof poſſeſſed, afterwards and before the aforeſaid Time when, &c. put his Cattle aforeſaid into the aforeſaid Place where, &c. to eat up the Graſs then growing there; and the Cattle aforeſaid the ſame Time when, &c. were in the aforeſaid Place called Didcote eating up the Graſs then growing there, until the aforeſaid Richard and William, the ſame Time when, &c. at Beckford aforeſaid, took the Cattle aforeſaid in the aforeſaid Place where, &c. and the ſame unjuſtly detained againſt Gages and Pledges until, &c. as the ſame John Throckmerton above complains againſt them. And this he is ready to verify, wherefore for that the ſame Richard and William have above confeſſed the taking of the Cattle aforeſaid in the aforeſaid Place where, &c. he prays Judgment, and his Damages by Reaſon of the taking and unjuſt Detention of the ſaid Cattle to be adjudged to him, &c.

Defendants pray Oyer.

And the aforeſaid Richard Tracy and William Nicholſon pray Oyer of the aforeſaid Writing indented by the aforeſaid late Abbot with the unanimous Aſſent and Conſent of the Convent of the ſame late Monaſtery to the aforeſaid John Smith and Margaret his Wife of the Tenements aforeſaid made. And it is read to them in theſe Words. " This Indenture made the 20th Day of the " Month of September, in the 17th Year of the Reign of King Henry the Eighth, between Henry " by divine Permiſſion Abbot of the Monaſtery of the bleſſed Virgin Mary of Tewkſbury, and " the Convent of the ſame Place of the one Part, and John Smith Citizen and Clothier of London, and Margaret his Wife of the other Part, witneſſeth, that the aforeſaid Abbot and Convent by their unanimous Aſſent and Conſent have delivered, granted, and to Farm-let to the " ſame John and Margaret the Reverſion of all and ſingular the Meſſuages, Lands, Tenements, " Meadows, and Paſtures of them the ſaid Abbot and Convent in Didcote in the County of " Glouceſter, with all and ſingular their Appurtenances, together with the Chapel there being, " all which John George, Dorothy his Wife, and Joan their Daughter now hold for Term of their " Lives, and of the longeſt Liver of them (the Goods and Chattels of Felons, Fugitives, Felons " of themſelves, and Perſons put in Exigent, condemned, outlawed, Waifs and Eſtrays, and all " other

" other Eſcheats whatſoever happening to the aforeſaid Abbot and Convent and their Succeſſors, " altogether excepted and reſerved) to have and to hold the aforeſaid Meſſuages, Lands, Te- " nements, Meadows, and Paſtures, together with the Chapel, with all their Appurtenances, " (except as before excepted) to the aforeſaid John Smith, Margaret his Wife, and their Aſſigns, " from the Feaſt of St. Michael the Archangel next to come after the Death, Surrender, or For- " feiture of the aforeſaid John George, Dorothy his Wife, and Joan their Daughter, or whenſo- " ever in any other Manner the Reverſion aforeſaid ſhall fall, unto the End of the Term of " 21 Years from thence next following, and fully to be compleat. Yielding therefore yearly to " the aforeſaid Abbot and Convent and their Succeſſors or Aſſigns ſeven Pounds Sterling, and " two Shillings for a Pittance of the Convent, to be paid at the uſual Terms there by equal Por- " tions, &c. In Witneſs whereof the Parties aforeſaid to theſe Preſents have interchangeably " put their Seals. Given in the Chapter-houſe of the Monaſtery aforeſaid the Day and Year above written." Which being read and heard, the ſame Richard Tracy and William Nicholſon ſay that the aforeſaid Plea of the aforeſaid John Throckmerton upon the aforeſaid Writing indented to the Avowry of the ſaid Richard, and Cognizance of the aforeſaid William, in Manner and Form aforeſaid above in Bar pleaded, is inſufficient in Law to preclude them the ſaid Richard and William from having their Avowry and Cognizance aforeſaid againſt the aforeſaid John Throckmerton, and that they have no Neceſſity, nor are by the Law of the Land bound to anſwer that Plea in Manner and form aforeſaid pleaded. And this they are ready to verify, wherefore for Want of a ſufficient Plea in Bar in this Behalf, the ſame Richard and William pray Judgment, and a Return of the Cattle aforeſaid together with Damages, &c. to be adjudged to them, &c.

Defendants demur.

And the aforeſaid John Throckmerton, for that he has above alledged ſufficient Matter in Law to preclude the aforeſaid Richard Tracy and William Nicholſon from having their Avowry and Cognizance aforeſaid againſt him, which he is ready to verify, which ſaid Matter the aforeſaid Richard and William do not deny, nor thereunto in any wiſe anſwer, but the ſaid Averment wholly refuſe to admit, as before prays Judgment, and his Damages by Reaſon of the taking and unjuſt Detention of the ſaid Cattle to be adjudged to him, &c. And becauſe the Juſtices here will adviſe of and upon the Premiſſes before they give Judgment thereon, Day is given to the Parties aforeſaid here until the Octave of St. Hillary to hear their Judgment thereon, becauſe the ſame Juſtices here thereof not yet, &c.

Joinder in Demurrer.

The Caſe was recited thus. John Throckmerton has ſued a Writ of ſecond Deliverance againſt Richard Tracy and William Nicholſon for taking his Cattle the 26th Day of March in the 7th Year of the Reign of King Edward 6. at Beckford in a certain Place called Didcote, &c. And the Defendants ſay, that the Place in which the taking was ſuppoſed to be, contains 100 Acres of Land with the Appurtenances in Beckford, whereof the ſaid Richard Tracy at the Time of the taking was ſeized in Fee. And he in his own Right avows, and the ſaid Nicholſon as his Bailiff acknowledges the taking of the Cattle therein for Damage feaſant, &c. And againſt this Throckmerton pleads in Bar to the Avowry, that long before the ſaid Tracy had any Thing in the ſaid Land, one Henry late Abbot of the late Monaſtery of St. Mary the Virgin of Tewkſbury in the ſaid County of Glouceſter, was ſeized of one Meſſuage and the ſaid 100 Acres of Land amongſt other Things in Beckford aforeſaid in his Demeſn as of Fee, in Right of his ſaid Monaſtery. And being ſo ſeized, he with the Aſſent of the Convent, before the Time when the taking is ſuppoſed to be, leaſed by Deed the ſaid Tenements to John George, Dorothy his Wife, and Joan their Daughter for Term of their Lives. And afterwards the ſaid Abbot with the Aſſent of the Convent, viz. the 20th Day of September in the 17th Year of the Reign of King Henry 8. at Tewkſbury aforeſaid by their Deed indented ſhewn forth, delivered, granted, and to Farm-let to one John Smith and Margaret his Wife the ſaid Tenements, amongſt other Things, by the Name of the Reverſion of all and ſingular the Meſſuages, Lands, Tenements, Meadows, and Paſtures of the ſaid Abbot and Convent in Didcote in the County of Glouceſter, with all and ſingular their Appurtenances, together with the Chapel there being, (all which John George, Dorothy his Wife, and Joan their Daughter then held for Term of their Lives, and of the longeſt Liver of them) to have and to hold the ſaid Meſſuages, Lands, Tenements, Meadows, and Paſtures, together with the Chapel, with the Appurtenances, to the ſaid John Smith and Margaret, and their Aſſigns, from the Feaſt of St. Michael the Archangel next following after the Death, Surrender, or Forfeiture of the ſaid John George, Dorothy his Wife, and Joan their Daughter, or whenſoever by any other Means the Reverſion aforeſaid ſhould fall, until the End of the Term of 21 Years thence next enſuing. By Force whereof the ſaid John Smith and Margaret were poſſeſſed of ſuch Intereſt and Term aforeſaid of and in the ſaid Tenements. And being ſo poſſeſſed, the ſaid Dorothy and Joan died, and the ſaid John George ſurvived them, and held himſelf in the ſaid Tenements, and was thereof ſole ſeized in his Demeſn as of Freehold by Right of Survivorſhip. And afterwards, viz. the 10th Day of October in the 29th Year of the Reign of King Henry 8. at Tewkſbury aforeſaid, John Smith granted his Eſtate and Term in the ſaid Tenements to one William Cartwright and Henry Cartwright. And then he ſhews that the Reverſion of the ſaid Tenements came to the ſaid King Henry 8. by Surrender. And afterwards, viz. the 6th Day of June in the 34th Year of the Reign of the ſaid King Henry 8. the ſaid John George died at Tewkſbury aforeſaid, after whoſe Death, viz. the next Day after the Feaſt of St. Michael then next following, the ſaid William Cartwright and Henry Cartwright entered into the Tenements. And he ſhews that afterwards the ſaid King Henry 8. granted the Reverſion of the ſaid Tenements to the ſaid Richard Tracy in Fee. And afterwards the ſaid William Cartwright and Henry granted their Eſtate and Term in

The CASE.
An Abbot leaſes Land for Life, and afterwards leaſes the Reverſion thereof, habendum the Land from Michaelmas next after the firſt Leaſe ended for 21 Years, this is a good Leaſe of the Land for ſo long, and the habendum and the Premiſſes ſtand well together. And therefore although the Tenant for Life dies before Attornment, yet the Grant is good, the habendum ſhewing that it was intended as a Leaſe of the Land, and not as a Grant of the Reverſion. S. in the ſaid Tenements to the Plaintiff, by Force whereof he entered into the ſaid Tenements, and was poſſeſſed. And being ſo poſſeſſed, he put his Cattle in the ſaid Place where, &c. which were there until the Defendants took them. And the Defendants demand Oyer of the ſaid Deed of Demiſe made to the aforeſaid Smith and his Wife, and it was read to them, and inrolled de verbo in verbum, and the Words were a Demiſe of the Reverſion, habendum the ſaid Meſſuages, Lands, and Tenements, &c. from the Feaſt of St. Michael next following after the Death, Surrender, or Forfeiture of the ſaid John George, Dorothy, and Joan, or whenſoever by any other Means the ſaid Reverſion ſhould fall, until the End of 21 Years thence next following, as appears before by the Record. And upon this the Defendants demur in Law.

And this Demurrer was argued by all the Serjeants at the Bar, viz. the new and ancient Serjeants hereunder mentioned. And Walpole, Ruſtal, Rookby, and Gawdy argued for the Defendants, and Prideaux, Bendloe, Robert Catline, Morgan, Richard Catline, Anthony Brown, and Dyer for the Plaintiff. And it was firſt argued in Michaelmas Term in the ſecond and third Years of the Reign of King Philip and Queen Mary; and it was alſo debated in Hillary and Eaſter Terms next following. And firſt of all I ſhall ſet down the Exceptions which were taken to the Pleading by the Counſel who argued for the Defendants, ſome of which were taken by one, and ſome by another of them; and afterwards I ſhall report the Matter in Law.

Mich. and Hill. Terms 2 & 3. P. & M.

Exceptions taken by the Defendants to the Pleading. 1.

One Exception taken was, for that the Plaintiff has conveyed to himſelf an Intereſt in a Leaſe made by an Abbot with the Aſſent of the Convent to one Smith and his Wife, which is made by the Name of a Reverſion, and to commence after a former Leaſe ended, viz. after the Leaſe made to George and his Wife and their Daughter, which Leaſe is alledged to be made by Deed indented, in which Caſe the Plaintiff ought to have ſhewn forth the Deed indented. For if there was no Deed thereof, there could be no Leaſe, and if there was no Leaſe, there could be no Reverſion; and alſo the ſecond Leaſe, which is to commence after the firſt Leaſe, has no certain Commencement ſhewn, nor can it be taken to continue until this Day, for if there was no former Leaſe, but the latter commenced preſently, then is it now expired. And ſo the Validity of the ſecond Leaſe depends upon the Validity of the firſt Leaſe, in which Caſe the Plaintiff, in order to make his ſecond Leaſe good, ought to ſhew the firſt Leaſe to be good, and in order to make that good, he ought to ſhew that it was by Deed; and alſo he ought to ſhew the Deed, becauſe it is a Means to make his own Leaſe, viz. the ſecond Leaſe, good, and therefore he ought to ſhew it, notwithſtanding the Deed was made to another, and alſo he ought to ſhew that the firſt Leaſe is determined. [a] And therefore it was ſaid, that in 13. Ed. 3. it appears that a Man brought a Quare impedit againſt the Abbot of Crowland, and counted of the Preſentment of his Anceſtor, and afterwards ſhewed that his Anceſtor granted to the Predeceſſor of the Abbot the next Avoidance, by Force whereof the Predeceſſor preſented to the next Avoidance, and the Preſentee died, and ſo it belonged to the Plaintiff to preſent, and there foraſmuch as he had confeſſed that the Predeceſſor of the Abbot preſented the laſt Incumbent, which put his Anceſtor out of Poſſeſſion (if it was not by Reaſon of the Grant by Deed, which he ought to ſhew) it was awarded that the Abbot ſhould have a Writ to the Biſhop. And ſo here he ought to ſhew the Deed of the Leaſe, for as it was made to another here, ſo was it in the other Caſe, and as the Eſtate here is ended, ſo was it in the other Caſe: And as the Grant in the ſaid Caſe made the Grantor to have the Reverſion, and to be as a Privy to the Preſentment, ſo in our Caſe the firſt Leaſe made the Leſſor to have the Reverſion, and was the Cauſe of the certain Commencement of the Plaintiff's Term according to the Limitation. And ſo the Plaintiff here ought to ſhew the Deed, as well as the Plaintiff in the other Caſe ought. And many other Caſes were put to enforce this Exception.

[b] In Anſwer to this it was ſaid, that it is not neceſſary to ſhew the Deed for three Cauſes. The firſt was, becauſe the Plaintiff here is not * Privy to the Deed, for it was made to a Stranger, and therefore the Plaintiff is a Stranger to it. [c] And as to this, the Caſe in 31. Ed. 3. was alledged, where in a Scire Facias for an Advowſon againſt the Patron and Incumbent, the Incumbent pleaded that the Queen had granted the Advowſon to the Earl of Arundel, whoſe Eſtate his Patron had, and he had his Plea by the clear Opinion of the Court, without ſhewing the Letters-patent, becauſe he was not Party to them, nor did they belong to him. [d] And alſo the Caſe in 7. H. 6. was cited, where a Parſon of a Church avowed for a Rent-Charge deviſed out of Tenements in London to his Predeceſſor and his Succeſſors, and the Plaintiff demanded Oyer of the Teſtament, and it was there clearly held that he ſhould not have it, becauſe it belongs to the Executors, and not to the Parſon. [e] And alſo the Caſe in 10. Ed. 3. was alledged, where one avowed upon a Prior for Fealty and Rent, and the Prior pleaded in Bar that the Avowant had granted by Deed the Services in Tail to another, and that his Predeceſſor attorned, and he had the Plea by Award without ſhewing the Deed, becauſe the Deed ought to tarry with him to whom it was made. [f] And alſo the Caſe in 22. H. 6. was cited, where the Servant of a Collector of Fifteenths juſtified the taking of Cattle for the Fifteenth, without ſhewing the Commiſſion of his Maſter, becauſe it belongs to his Maſter. [g] And the Caſe in 35. H. 6. was alſo alledged, where in Treſpaſs for Goods carried away the Defendant ſaid that he was Mayor of the Town of C. and that the King by his Letters-patent had granted to him being Mayor and to the Commonalty all the Goods of Outlaws, and ſaid that the Plaintiff was outlawed, and that he (the Defendant) then being Mayor took the Goods, and by the better Opinion he ſhall not be forced to ſhew the Letters-patent, becauſe they tarry with the Mayor and Commonalty, and now he is not Mayor, and therefore he ſhall not be forced to ſhew them. And ſeveral other good Caſes were put on this Head. And as in theſe Caſes alledged the Parties ſhould not be forced to ſhew Deeds which did not belong to them, for the ſame Reaſon in our Caſe the Plaintiff ſhall not be compelled to ſhew the Deed which does not belong to him.

The ſecond Cauſe was, for that the Eſtate contained in the Deed was ended and [a] determined by the Death of the Tenants for Life, in which Caſe foraſmuch as the Plaintiff does not * claim, nor can claim from them, but only ſhews the Leaſe in order to convey the ſecond Leaſe to himſelf, he ſhall not be forced to ſhew the Deed of the Intereſt that is determined. [b] And therefore it was ſaid, if one preſents to an Advowſon, and afterwards grants the next Avoidance to another by Deed, who preſents, and after the Church becomes void by the Death of the ſecond Preſentee, there if the Grantor preſent and be diſturbed by a Stranger, he ſhall have a Quare Impedit, and ſhall ſhew the Preſentment by the Grantee of the next Avoidance, and ſhall not be forced to ſhew the Deed of Grant thereof, becauſe the Eſtate is ended. And to warrant this one of the Years of H. 4. was alledged, but there is no ſuch Caſe in the Year cited. [c] But, note, that in M. 14. H. 4. he that had the Nomination in Fee, that is, he that ought to preſent his Clerk to the Abbot, who was to preſent him over, preſented his Clerk to the Abbot, who did preſent him over, and afterwards he granted the Advowſon to one for Life, and after that granted the Reverſion in Fee, and the Heir of the Grantee in Fee, after the Death of the Tenant for Life, brought a Quare Impedit, and made his Title ut ſupra. And the Defendant demanded Oyer of the Deed of Grant for Term of Life, and alſo of the Grant of the Reverſion. And as to the Deed of Grant of the Reverſion, it was ordered by the Court to be ſhewn forth; and as to the Deed of Grant for Term of Life it was not, becauſe he did not claim by it, and the Eſtate was determined; which perhaps was the Caſe intended. However the Caſe vouched ſeems to be good Law. And the Difference between the ſaid Caſe [d] of the Abbot of Crowland and this Caſe, is this, viz. the one Caſe was againſt a Privy, and the other againſt a Stranger. And it ſeems good Reaſon, that if one alledges a Preſentment in himſelf or in his Anceſtor or Predeceſſor, I ſhall not ſay that he who preſented had but the next Avoidance, or a particular Eſtate which is now ended, without ſhewing the Deed thereof, for thereby I diminiſh the Eſtate gained preſumptively by the Preſentment, and a Deed is requiſite in ſuch Caſe; but a gainſt a Stranger, who is not privy to the Preſentment, it isotherwiſe, and this ſeems to be the Difference.

The third Cauſe was, for that the ſecond Leaſe was * executed. And ſo it is pleaded by the Plea in Bar to the Avowry, viz. that the Plaintiff entered, which is confeſſed by the Demurrer. And then it was ſaid, that although in many Caſes a Deed ought to be ſhewn when the Thing is to be executed, yet when it is already executed the Party ſhall ſhew Title to it, without ſhewing a Deed. [e] And it was ſaid that 11. H. 4. tends to this Point viz. that if a Reverſion is granted in Tail by Deed, which is executed, the Iſſue in Tail ſhall have a Formedon in Deſcender, and ſhall not ſhew the Deed of Grant, becauſe it was executed. [f] And the Caſe in 40. Ed. 3. was alſo alledged, where a Prior brought an action of Treſpaſs for a Horſe, and counted that the King had granted to him all Chattles waived in a certain Place, and ſhewed that the ſaid Horſe was a Chattle waived there, and ſeized by the Bailiff of the Prior, and that the Defendant took him and carried him away, and the Defendant demanded Oyer of the King's Charter, and there it is ſaid, that if the King grants a Franchiſe or any Thing by Charter, and the Party brings an Action for the ſame Thing, where he never had any Poſſeſſion, he ought to ſhew the Charter, but if he brings an Action for Goods carried away out of his Poſſeſſion, although he recites the Charter where it is not neceſſary, the Charter for ſo much ought not to be ſhewn; ſo that there it was the clear Opinion that he ſhould not have Oyer of the Charter becauſe the Thing was executed. So here, although it ſhould be admitted for Argument's Sake, that in order to execute this ſecond Leaſe the Deed of the firſt Leaſe ought to be ſhewn, yet ſeeing that the ſecond Leaſe is now executed, the Deed of the firſt ſhall not be ſhewn. And afterwards by Rule of the Court this Exception was diſallowed.

Another Exception taken was, for that the Plaintiff has not ſhewn that Livery and Seizin was made by Letter of Attorney to the ſaid Leſſees for Life, for although Livery ſhall not be pleaded [g] where a Man makes a Leaſe for Life, or a Gift in Tail, or in Fee, but ſhall be intended to be made, becauſe the Perſon who made the Livery ſhall be intended to be upon the Land and to execute the ſame, yet when a Body politic of an Abbot and Convent make ſuch Eſtate, it cannot be intended that they were upon the Land, for the Law ſuppoſes [h] them to be always in their Houſe, and therefore if their Deed be denied it ſhall be tried where the Houſe is, becauſe it ſhall be intended to be made there, and no where elſe. [i] And it was ſaid that in 3. H. 6. in Treſpaſs againſt the Abbot of T. and his Canon, Exception was taken to the Writ, becauſe the Plaintiff had not declared of what Town the Canon was, and the Exception was diſallowed, becauſe he ſhall be intended to be Canon of the ſame Houſe of which his Soveraign is ſuppoſed to be Abbot. So that religious Perſons ſhall be intended always to abide in their Houſe, and never to be elſewhere. And therefore here they cannot be intended to make Livery and Seizin in proper Perſon, nor otherwiſe than by Warrant, which ought to be pleaded, for it is neceſſary to ſhew that the Leaſe for Lives was good, becauſe the ſecond Leaſe is made by the Name of a Reverſion, and was to commence after the End of the firſt Leaſe, and ſo foraſmuch as it is not ſhewn that Livery was made by Warrant, the Bar to the Avowry is not good. But this Exception was diſallowed by the Rule of the Court, [k] becauſe the neceſſary Circumſtance, viz. the Livery ſhall be intended here as well as in the Caſe of another Perſon. And it has never been uſual before to plead the Livery, ut ſupra, but always to the contrary.

Another Exception was taken to the Plea in Bar to the Avowry, viz. that the Plaintiff has not alledged the Place where the ſecond Leaſe was made, for, it was ſaid, it ought to be ſhewn on Account of the Trial, if the Leaſe ſhould be denied. [l] As if Attornment be pleaded, the Place ought to be ſhewn where it was made, cauſâ qua ſupra. And it was ſaid here, the Plaintiff has alledged the ſecond Leaſe to be made at Tewkſbury * aforeſaid, where Tewſbury was not ſhewn before as a Place, but it was recited in this Form, viz. the Abbot and Convent of the late Monaſtery of St. Mary the Virgin of Tewkſbury; ſo that there Tewkſbury is not recited as a Place, but as the Name of a Monaſtery, for which Reaſon the Place of making the ſecond Leaſe is omitted, and therefore the Bar is bad. And this Exception was alſo diſallowed by the Court, becauſe when it is ſaid that the Abbot of the late Monaſtery of St. Mary the Virgin of Tewkſbury, &c. this is a Recital of the certain Place, for there can be no Monaſtery without a Place. And to ſay, the Abbot of Dale, is the Abbot of ſuch a Place, and ſo it contains the Certainty of ſuch a Place.

Exception 4.

Another Exception taken was, viz. that it is ſhewn in Bar to the Avowry, that John Smith granted over his Term to William Cartwright and Henry Cartwright, which is not pleaded to be by Deed. And it was ſaid, that the Leaſe had not been good if it had not been firſt made by the Abbot and Convent by Deed, and that which may not commence without Deed, may not be granted over without Deed; [a] as a Grant of the next Avoidance of an Advowſon, a Warren, and ſuch like, and eſpecially in the Caſe here, becauſe the Term was not commenced, and till then nothing but a Right or Title was granted, for which Reaſon it ought to be by Deed. But this Exception was alſo ruled by the Court to be of no Weight, becauſe the ſecond Leaſe is uſed not as a Grant of the Reverſion, but as a Leaſe to commence after the Eſtates for Life determined. Which, admitting the Leaſe good ([c] although it might not be good to bind the Houſe if it was not made by the Abbot and Convent by Deed at the Beginning) [d] might well enough be granted over by Smith without Deed, as a [d] Chattle which was in Smith and his Wife, altho' the Term was not commenced.

Exception 5.

Another Exception was taken, viz. that in the Count the taking is ſuppoſed to be at Beckford in a Place called Didcote, and the Defendant has alſo affirmed the Land to lie in Beckford, and the Leaſe for Years by which the Plaintiff claims is alledged to be made by the Name of the Reverſion of all and ſingular the Meſſuages, Lands, &c. in Didcote in the County of Glouceſter, &c. which Didcote ſpecified in the per nomen ought to be intended a Town, for it is there limited as a Place in which the Lands lie, and that ſhall be intended a Town, and then if it ſhall be ſo intended, it cannot ſtand with what the Plaintiff has alledged in the Count, for in the Count the Town in which the taking is alledged to be is called Beckford, and the Place in the Town is there called Didcote, and now in the Plea in Bar to the Avowry the Plaintiff has alledged that the Lands which he claims by the Leaſe lie in Didcote, which is as much as if he had ſaid, the Town of Didcote, which Leaſe would not be ſufficient to convey to him the Lands lying in the Town of Beckford, for which Reaſon the Bar to the Avowry is inſufficient. To which it was anſwered, that the Plaintiff in the ſaid Plea in Bar to the Avowry has ſaid, that the Abbot with the Aſſent of the Convent leaſed to Smith and his Wife the ſaid Tenements amongſt other Things by the Name of the Reverſion of, &c. (which Word (ſaid) is an Averment in itſelf, and contains that they are the ſame Tenements which are ſpecified in the Count and in the Avowry. And if they are the ſame Tenements, then they muſt neceſſarily lie in Beckford, and the per nomen will ſtand with it. For Didcote in the per nomen may be a Hamlet of Beckford, or a Place known in Beckford, and ſo it may be in Didcote in Beckford without any Contrariety. And ſo this Exception was alſo diſallowed by the Court, and the Plea in Bar to the Avowry held good notwithſtanding it.

Exception 6.

Another Exception taken was, viz. that the Leaſe for Years is of the Reverſion of, &c. all which George and his Wife and his Daughter then held for their Lives, &c. And it was ſaid, that the Plaintiff ought to aver that they three held the Tenements for their Lives. But this Exception was diſallowed by the Court, becauſe it was pleaded that the Abbot with the Aſſent of the Convent leaſed the ſaid Tenements, &c. which Word (ſaid) comprehends that they three held them for Life, for if they did not hold them for Life, then they did not leaſe them, and ſo the Premiſſes and the per nomen ſtand well together, the one containing an Averment of the other. And by ſome the Words (all which John George, &c. hold for Term of Life) are but Words of Recital, and not of Subſtance.

Exception 7.

Another Exception was taken as to the Variance between the Words of Pleading the Demiſe, and the per nomen reciting the Demiſe itſelf. For the Words of the Plea are a Demiſe of the Thing itſelf, and the per nomen and the Leaſe, as it is entered, is a Demiſe of the Reverſion, which don't agree in one, but are in a Manner contradictory. [e] As if a Man will ſay that ſuch a one was ſeized of the Manor of Dale, and of the Manor of Sale, and infeoffed him of the Manor of Dale by Deed, by the Name of the Manor of Sale, this Plea is not good, becauſe the per nomen does not agree with the Premiſſes, and therefore will not warrant it. [f] So if a Man pleads that J. S. was ſeized of 20 Acres of Land by Deſcent on the Part of the Father, and thereof infeoffed him by Deed by the Name of all his Lands which he had by Deſcent on the Part of the Mother, this Plea is not good; for the per nomen does not agree with the Premiſſes, and therefore will not warrant the Premiſſes. So here the per nomen in Reverſion will not warrant the Demiſe of the Poſſeſſion, but for the Variance the Plea ſhall be bad. And many other Caſes were put to enforce this Point. To which it was anſwered by thoſe that argued for the Plaintiff, [g] that when a Man pleads by a per nomen a Plea of any thing given by Deed or other Writing whatſoever, if the Thing contained in the per nomen agrees in Effect and Subſtance with the Premiſſes before the per nomen, then the Plea is good, and the Premiſſes and the per nomen ſhall ſtand as one full and entire Matter varying in Words, and not in Subſtance. [h] And therefore it was ſaid if one makes Title to a Rent of 20*s.* and ſays that J. S. was ſeized of ſo much Land, &c. and granted to him by the Deed ſhewn forth the Rent by the Name of 20*s.* Rent iſſuing iſſuing out of all his Lands and Tenements, this Plea with the per nomen is good, as it is held in 8. H. 4. and the per nomen and the Plea ſhall ſtand together. [a] And in 46. Ed. 3. a Man juſtified the taking of certain Goods, for that ſuch a one was ſeized of the Manor in which the taking was, and granted by the Deed ſhewn forth an annual Rent in Tail to a Man and his Wife, of whom the Defendant made himſelf Iſſue; and the Deed was thus, Obligo me tali et uxori ejus filiæ meæ et hæredibus de corpore eorum in uno annuali redditu de tali ſumma, percipiendum annuatim de manerio meo de C. et obligo manerium meum prædictum, et omnia bona mea in dicto manerio meo exiſtentia diſtringenda per Ballivum Domini Regis; and for the Rent behind at a Day he juſtified the taking of the Goods: And there the Book is that the Plea is good, and that there is no Variance between the Plea and the Deed, becauſe the Deed is in Subſtance the ſame with what is contained in the Plea, viz. a Grant of a Rent-Charge. And ſo a Leaſe of 100 Acres of Land and ſo many of Meadow, by the Name of a Yard-Land, ſtands well together, and may be ſo impleaded. And many Caſes were put upon this Head. [b] And it was ſaid that if the Matter in Law contained in the per nomen will warrant the Premiſſes of the Plea, the Plea is good enough, otherwiſe not. And ſo this cannot be made an Exception by itſelf diſtinct from the Matter in Law, but the Matter in Law and it are all one. Wherefore this Exception was referred to the principal Matter, viz. to the Matter in Law.

The Argument upon the Matter in Law.

And as to this, it was ſaid by the ſaid Serjeants who argued for the Defendants, that the Title which the Plaintiff has conveyed to himſelf is not good, becauſe the Leaſe made to Smith and his Wife is not a good Leaſe for Years. For it is to be obſerved, that by the Premiſſes of the Deed made to Smith and his Wife, the Demiſe is of the Reverſion of all and ſingular the Meſſuages, Lands, Tenements, &c. to Smith and his Wife from the Feaſt of St. Michael next after the Death, &c. ut ſupra, in which Caſe the Premiſſes and the Habendum do not ſtand together, for the Reverſion of the Land, and the Land itſelf are not the ſame Thing, but vary not only in Words but in Subſtance alſo. For the Reverſion of Land is a compound Word, which conſiſts of two Things, the one is, that it is the Reſidue or Remnant of an Eſtate, the other is, that it is of or in Land, and ſo it is part of an Eſtate in Land. And as a Manor is a compound Word, viz. conſiſting of the Demeſn and Services, [c] and the Word (ſtagnum) is a Word compounded of Land and Water, and contains both, [d] and as the Words (aqua et piſcaria) conſiſt of the Water and the Land, which a Man ſhall have by a Grant of the ſaid Words, as it is adjudged in the Eire of Derby in 4. Ed. 3. ſo in the ſame Manner a Reverſion of Land is a Compoſition of the Land and of the Eſtate therein, and contains the Land itſelf and an Eſtate in it, which Eſtate is always in one Degree only removed from the Poſſeſſion, and it is that which is left in the Perſon of him who makes a particular Eſtate. So that he who has the particular Eſtate in Demeſn is he that is poſſeſſed of the Land, and he who made the Eſtate, or his Heirs or Aſſigns, is he that has the Reverſion. So that there is never a Reverſion, but where there is a particular Eſtate in Poſſeſſion, [e] and if the Poſſeſſion comes to the Reverſion, then there is no Reverſion at all, and if the Reverſion comes to the Poſſeſſion, then alſo there is no Reverſion; for there cannot be a Reverſion of a Thing, but where the Poſſeſſion of it is divided from it, for the uniting of them deſtroys the Reverſion, and the Separation of Part of the Eſtate of him that has the Land, reſerving the Reſidue, makes it a Reverſion; ſo that a Reverſion cannot be but where there is a particular Eſtate in Poſſeſſion, and where there is a Diviſion and Separation of the Reverſion from the Poſſeſſion; wherefore the Poſſeſſion and the Reverſion are in Degree merely contradictory, but yet the Subſtance of them both is the Thing of which they conſiſt, as if it is of Land, then the Land is the Subſtance, and if it is of Rent, the Rent is the Subſtance, et ſic de ſimilibus. And therefore if the Reverſion of Land which J. S. holds for Life is granted in Fee, and Attornment is had, there if J. S. dies, the Grantee ſhall have the Land in Poſſeſſion, becauſe the Reverſion was compounded both of the Land and of the Eſtate therein, from which the Poſſeſſion was ſeparated, and then when the Reverſion is granted, all that which the Reverſion contains paſſes by the Grant, as by the Grant of a Manor all that which the Manor contains ſhall paſs. And ſo it is of a Grant de [f] ſtagno, [g] aqua, or [h] piſcaria; all that the Words contain ſhall paſs by the Grant, and they contain what is ſaid above. And ſo by the Grant of a Reverſion of Land, Land by a Mean ſhall paſs, that is to ſay, to be had in Poſſeſſion after the particular Eſtate ended, and therefore foraſmuch as it was granted as a Reverſion, and in ſuch Degree ſhall paſs, it carries with it the Land to be afterwards executed in Poſſeſſion. And this being admitted, it is next to be ſeen how it ſtands in the principal Caſe. And as to this, the Reverſion of the Lands is granted, habendum the Lands themſelves from the Feaſt of St. Michael after the Determination of the Eſtate ut ſupra, until the End of ſuch a Term; and, Sir, this habendum is not purſuant to the Grant precedent, for the Grant was of the Reverſion of the Land, which in it's true Definition is an Eſtate in the Land ſeparated from the Poſſeſſion, habendum the Land, which is as much as to ſay, the Poſſeſſion of the Land. For this Word (Land) is intended to be in Poſſeſſion, and ſimply without any Degree, and if it be taken in that Light it is contrary to the Premiſſes, for although a Reverſion does by a certain Mean contain Land, yet it is contrary to Land in Poſſeſſion, and ſo although Land is contained in each of them, yet it is Land in a different Degree, and therefore the Degrees are diſtinct and ſeveral, for which Reaſon that in the habendum is not purſuant to that in the Grant. And therefore it was ſaid if J. S. holds of a Manor by Fealty and 20 s. Rent, and he that has the Manor gives the Manor by Deed to J. K. habendum the Rent of 20 s. which is iſſuing out of the Land of the ſaid J. S. to the ſaid J. K. and his Heirs, this habendum is not purſuant to the Premiſſes, and yet the Premiſſes of the Deed before the habendum, that is to ſay, the Word (Manor) contains the Rent which is expreſſed in the habendum, but nevertheleſs the habendum is not purſuant thereto, becauſe in the

Word

Word (Manor) the Rent was granted as a Rent-Service Parcel of the Manor, and by the habendum it is limited as a Rent-Seck, and ſo it is in another Degree. In the ſame Manner if A. B. holds of me certain Land by Homage, Fealty, and 12 d. Rent, and I grant the Services to another, habendum the Rent to him in Fee, this habendum is void, becauſe in the Grant the Rent was contained as a Rent-Service, and now by the habendum it is a Rent-Seck, as in the other Caſe before, and ſo not purſuant becauſe it is in another Degree. And as a Rent Service and Rent-Seck are of ſeveral Degrees and of ſeveral Natures, and the Grant of the one and the habendum the other is not purſuant, ſo a Reverſion of Land and the Poſſeſſion of Land are of ſeveral Degrees and Qualities, inſomuch that by the Grant of the one the other ſhall not paſs. [a] And therefore the Caſe in 8. H. 7. was cited, where the Abbot of Tewkſbury avowed for an Amercement in a Leet, for that King Edward 4. was ſeized of a Hundred, of which a Leet for Time immemorial had been Parcel, and granted the ſame Hundred to one for Life, and afterwards the King died, and after that King Richard 3. by his Letters-patent reciting the ſaid Grant of King Edward 4. granted the Reverſion of the ſaid Hundred to the aforeſaid Abbot, and his Succeſſors, together with the Leet within the ſame Hundred, and for an Amercement afterwards in the Leet the Abbot avowed, and there it is debated, whether the Leet might be Parcel of the Hundred, and it ſeems by the better Opinion, that if the Leet might not be Parcel of the Hundred, then the Leet ſhould not paſs, for by the ſaid Grant the Reverſion of the Leet is granted, and ſo are the Words of the Grant to be taken, and King Richard 3. had no Reverſion thereof, becauſe the Leet did not paſs for Life by the Grant of King Edward 4. and it might not be granted as a Thing in Poſſeſſion from a Day to come, that is to ſay, after the Death of the Tenant for Life. And ſo the Grant of a Reverſion cannot make a Thing in Poſſeſſion to paſs, becauſe it is of another Nature and Degree. And it was ſaid, that it was held in the ſame Book, [b] that if I have a Rent in Fee, and I grant it poſt mortem J. S. this is void, for the Nature of the Grant is, that the Thing ought to paſs preſently, and that it cannot do, for it is granted as a Reverſion where there was no Reverſion of it, but the Thing was in Poſſeſſion. So that by the Grant of a Reverſion the Poſſeſſion cannot paſs, being a Thing of another Degree. And as the Reverſion of a Thing granted cannot make the Poſſeſſion to paſs, ſo, it was ſaid, if a Thing is granted as a Thing in Poſſeſſion, it cannot paſs the Reverſion. [c] As if I am ſeized of an Acre in Fee, and make a Leaſe for Years thereof, and afterwards I make a Feoffment in Fee of the ſame Acre by Deed, if Livery is not made thereupon, the Reverſion with Attornment ſhall not paſs, becauſe the Thing was granted in Poſſeſſion, by which Grant the Reverſion being of another Nature ſhall not paſs. And this Caſe was put the other Way by ſome who argued on this Side, for by them it was ſaid that when a Thing is granted, all the Grantor's Intereſt therein ſhall paſs, and therefore the Grant of a Thing is a general Grant, and will make the Reverſion to paſs; but the Reverſion will not make the Poſſeſſion to paſs; wherefore they could not agree as to this Caſe. [d] And ſo they ſaid that the habendum here is of a Thing which was not granted in the Premiſſes of the Deed, and therefore it is void. [e] And thereupon the Caſe of 38. H. 6. in a Quare Impedit brought by the King againſt the Abbeſs of Sion was cited, where the King being ſeized of a Manor in Fee to which an Advowſon was Appendant, granted the ſame Manor to two for their Lives, and afterwards the King reciting the Grant for Life granted that the ſaid Manor, after their Deaths, ſhould remain to two Biſhops, habendum et tenendum omnia prædicta terras et tenementa, una cum Advocatione Eccleſiæ prædictæ, &c. and there it is held by all the Juſtices that by the Leaſe of the Manor the Advowſon did not paſs, becauſe nothing was ſpoken of it in the Grant, but it remained in the King as in groſs, and not appendant in Right, nor in Poſſeſſion: And there it is alſo clearly held, that the Advowſon ſhould not paſs to the Biſhops, becauſe nothing was ſpoken of the Advowſon in the Grant, but in the habendum, and that nothing ſhall paſs in the habendum if it be not ſpoken of in the Grant, except it be a Thing appendant or appurtenant; and beſides the Advowſon being in groſs and ſevered from the Reverſion could not paſs by the Reverſion, as it was there granted, (for it was granted after the Death of the Tenants for Life) becauſe there was no Reverſion of it. And as the Advowſon in Poſſeſſion there was not included in this Word (Reverſion) nor ſhould paſs by the Grant of the Reverſion, and as the Thing which was not there comprized in the Premiſſes could not paſs by the habendum, ſo in the Caſe here this Word (Reverſion) ſhall not include the Poſſeſſion, nor ſhall the Thing which is not comprized in the Premiſſes paſs by the habendum. Then it is to be ſeen of what Effect the Grant made to Smith and his Wife is. And as to this, it is a good Grant of the Reverſion to them for their Lives, if Attornment had been had, and not otherwiſe. [f] And therefore it is taken in the Expoſition of Deeds, that the Nature of every habendum in Deeds is to declare and limit the Certainty of the Eſtate which ſhall paſs by the Deed, and if the Certainty is declared in the habendum, which ſtands with the Premiſſes of the Deed, the Law will adjudge the habendum to be of Force and effectual. [g] And therefore if a Man grants to another 20 s. Rent by Deed, if the Deed ſtop there this ſhall be adjudged an Eſtate for Life, becauſe the Deed is taken moſt beneficially for the Grantee, and moſt ſtrongly againſt the Grantor, and the greateſt Eſtate that the Grantee may have is a Freehold, except only an Eſtate of Inheritance, which none can have without Words of Inheritance, and therefore he ſhall have an Eſtate for Life, as hath been ſaid; but if the Deed goes further and ſays, habendum the Rent for a Day, or for a Year, then he ſhall not have it longer, becauſe the habendum has limited ſuch certain Eſtate, which is its Office, and ſuch Eſtate ſhall ſtand. [h] But it is a kind of Principle in the Law, that if the habendum is not purſuant to the Eſtate before, but is leſſer than it, or contrary to it, or repugnant, and the like, then the Eſtate before the habendum ſhall ſtand, and the habendum ſhall ſhall be void. [a] As if the Grant is to one and his Heirs, habendum for Life, the habendum is void, becauſe it gives a leſſer [b] Eſtate; [c] or if the Grant or Gift is to two, habendum to the one for Life, the Remainder to the other for Life, this is a void habendum, becauſe the Premiſſes make them Jointenants, and the habendum would ſevere the Jointure, and make the one to have the whole during his Life, and the other to have the whole after him. [d] And if two Acres are given to two, habendum the one Acre to the one, and the other Acre to the other, this is a void habendum, becauſe it excludes the Intereſt of the one in the one Acre, and the Intereſt of the other in the other Acre, whereas the Premiſſes of the Deed has made them Jointenants of each Parcel. And if a Man grants to another an annual Rent of 20 s. payable yearly at the Feaſts of the Annunciation of our Lady and of St. Michael, habendum for a Day, this is a void habendum becauſe the Premiſſes of the Deed grant an annual Rent and payable at two Days, and now by the habendum it ſhall not be annual nor payable at any Day, and therefore it is repugnant. [e] And where a Man makes a Leaſe of two Acres, excepting one, or [f] reſerving all the Profits, as this Exception or Reſervation ſhall be void becauſe it is expreſly contrary to what goes before, ſo the habendum which is contrary to what goes before it is void. In our principal Caſe then the Reverſion of the Land was granted to Smith and his Wife, and if the Deed had ſtopp'd there this would have been an Eſtate for their Lives in the Reverſion; and when the habendum ſays, to have the ſaid Meſſuages, Lands, &c. this is a Limitation of an Eſtate in another Thing, and ſo not purſuant to the Premiſſes of the Grant, and therefore void. And altho' there is in the habendum this Word (Tenements) which includes and comprehends the Reverſion, yet this Word will not make the habendum purſuant to what goes before, for the Clauſe is to have and to hold the ſaid Meſſuages, Lands, Tenements, &c. to the aforeſaid Smith and his Wife from the Feaſt of St. Michael the Archangel next following after the Death, Surrender, or Forfeiture of the ſaid (Leſſees for Lives) or whenſoever by any other Means the Reverſion ſhall fall, until the End of the Term of 21 Years thence next enſuing; in which Caſe if a Man will take the Word (Tenements) to contain the Reverſion, and then will interpret the Clauſe in this Manner, viz. habendum the Reverſion from the Feaſt of St. Michael after the firſt Eſtate ended for 21 Years thence next enſuing, yet cannot he make this habendum effectual, becauſe when the particular Eſtate ends the Reverſion is no longer a Reverſion, for then the Land is in Demeſn, and the Reverſion is gone; and when a Man grants a Reverſion the Nature of it is to veſt and take Effect preſently whilſt it is a Reverſion, and not at a Day to come, but the habendum if taken that Way would make the Reverſion to take Effect when it was not a Reverſion, and a Thing to veſt when it was no longer in Being, and therefore the Time being material would deſtroy the habendum if taken that Way. So that quacunque via data the habendum ſhall be void, and the Eſtate granted ſhall be a Reverſion for Lives, and ſo is the Grant to be expounded, as ſome of them thought, and then the Intereſt of Smith and his Wife ſhould be for Lives if Attornment had been had, which is not pleaded. And others of them thought that the whole Grant ſhould be void, and conſequently that the Plaintiff had no Intereſt at all, and therefore that the Defendants ſhould have a Return.

On the other Side it was argued by Prideaux, Bendloe, Robert Catline, Morgan, and Richard Catline, and amongſt them it was ſaid that the Intereſt which paſſed by the Deed indented to Smith and his Wife ſhall be a good Leaſe for 21 Years after the Eſtates for Lives determined. And in order to prove or diſprove this we muſt have Recourſe to the Words of the Demiſe and of the habendum, which are to be weighed and diſcuſſed. And as to this (it was ſaid) the Reverſion of any Hereditament conſiſts of two Things, as it has been before defined. The chief or principal Thing is the Hereditament from whence it ſprings, as if it is a Reverſion of Rent, then the Rent is the principal Ingredient; if a Reverſion of Land, then the Land, for that is the Foundation of it; the other is no more than the Degree of it, for the Reverſion of Land is Land which is in a Degree of Reverter, for if there is no Poſſibility of a Reverter, then it is not a Reverſion, and it cannot revert but where there are two Eſtates in the Land, as where a Leaſe for Years, for Life, or in Tail is made, there he that has the particular Eſtate has one Eſtate, and he that made the particular Eſtate has another Eſtate left in him, and his Eſtate is called a Reverſion, becauſe the particular Eſtate may be ended, and then the Land ſhall come back again to him, which coming back again is called a Reverter. So that a Reverſion derives it's Name from reverter, and the Subſtance of which it conſiſts is the Thing itſelf from whence it ſprings, for a Reverſion of Land and Land in Reverſion is all one, ſo that Land is the Subſtance. And when a Reverſion of Land is granted, true it is that [g] Attornment ought to be had, and that it ought to veſt preſently by the Attornment and not at a Day to come, but this is always to be underſtood when it is granted and paſſes as a Reverſion, that is to ſay, when the Subſtance and the Degree are joined together. But in our principal Caſe it is quite otherwiſe, for here the Reverſion of the Land is granted, habendum the Land itſelf after the particular Eſtate ended, which habendum, in the Expoſition of the Deed, ought to be compared with the Premiſſes of the Deed, for the Premiſſes is one Part of the Deed, and the habendum is another Part, both which do but make one Deed. And by comparing them together it appears that the Intent of the Demiſe of the Reverſion of the Land here is not to be taken as a Demiſe thereof, as of the Reverſion of the Land, but as a Demiſe of the Land itſelf; but foraſmuch as the Demiſe is of the Reverſion of the Land, habendum the Land, and a Reverſion conſiſts of the Land itſelf and of the Degree, and here they cannot paſs together in ſuch Sort, it is to be ſeen whether the one may paſs without the other by Words of a Reverſion, that is to ſay, whether the Subſtance, viz. the Land, will paſs without the Degree, or whether the Degree will deſtroy the Grant of the Subſtance. And as to this it is to be conſi-

dered that every Deed ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt the Grantor, and if by any reaſonable Intendment it can be taken to be good and effectual, it ſhall be ſo taken rather than be void, and if the Intent of the Parties appears, the Law will conſtrue the Words in ſuch Senſe as to perform that Intent rather than in any other Senſe. And here altho' the Premiſſes of the Deed has the Words, viz. the Reverſion of the Land, yet the Leſſors intended therein to paſs the Land which they had in Reverſion, for the habendum and the Limitation of the Commencement of the Term after the Eſtate ended argue and prove their Intent to be ſuch, and the Act of the Leſſees in taking the Eſtate by ſuch Words by Indenture proves that the Intention of the Leſſees alſo was ſuch, and that both of them intended here to exclude and ſever the one Ingredient of a Reverſion, viz. the Degree, and to uſe the Word (Reverſion) not in its proper Signification, but as deſcriptive of and confined to the Land itſelf, that is to ſay, all their Lands which they had in Reverſion in Didcote, &c. and that they would not have the Land to paſs in a Degree of Reverſion, but in Degree of Demeſn. And that the Law will oftentimes draw the Words from their proper and uſual Signification to fulfil the Intention of the Parties when the ſame appears, is eaſily proved by many Caſes. [a] And therefore if a Diſſeizee agrees with the Heir of the Diſſeizor who is in by Deſcent to confirm his Eſtate, and he makes him a Deed by theſe Words dedi et conceſſi the Land to him, this cannot enure in it's natural Senſe, for the Nature of Dedi is to give one a Thing which he had not before, but ſince it cannot enure ſo, it ſhall enure as a Confirmation, and the Law will apply the Word out of its proper Signification to fulfil the Intent. [b] So in 17. Ed. 3. it is held that a Manor may paſs by the Name of a Knight's-Fee, for if it was the Intent of the Parties to paſs the Manor, the Law adjudges it beſt to apply the Word (Knight's-Fee) to the Intent, altho' it be not it's proper Signification. [c] And ſo in 10. Ed. 4. it is held by the better Opinion that a Man may plead a Demiſe to him of Land for a Year, by Force of the Words of a Licenſe to him to occupy the Land for a Year: So that he may take the Word out of it's proper Signification, and uſe it in another Senſe in order to perform the Intent of the Matter. In the ſame Manner this Word (Reverſion of Land) may be applied out of it's common and natural Acceptation to the Land itſelf, when the Intent of the Parties is ſuch, and this Application is not very ſtrange, ſeeing it contains the Thing to which it is applied, for the Reverſion includes the Land. And therefore we may frequently ſee that where a Word includes a Thing in itſelf, the Thing included ſhall paſs by the Word. [d] As in 11. R. 2. it is held that if one grants to another aquam ſuam, the Piſcary in it ſhall paſs by the Grant, becauſe it is included in the Word (aqua). [e] And ſo by the Grant of a Piſcary the Soil ſhall paſs, as it ſeems by 40. Ed. 3. for there a Monſtraverunt lay of a Piſcary, by which it is implied that it contains Land and Demeſn, or elſe it could not have been held good, nor could [f] Diſtreſs be taken in it. [g] And in 7. Ed. 3. it is ſaid that if a Lord grants to another to dig Turves in a certain Place to ſell and carry them at his Pleaſure, the Property of the Soil paſſes by it, for it is included in ſuch a Grant of Turbary. [h] And ſo, it was ſaid, by the Grant of a Pool the Soil and Wear ſhall paſs, becauſe it is included in the Word: [i] for by one Book a Formedon lies de gurgite. [k] And ſo 100 Acres of Land may paſs by the Name of una acra cornubienſis, for Corniſh Acre contains ſo much. Therefore where a Grant is made by any Word, the Thing included in the Word ſhall always paſs. So in our Caſe, by the Grant of a Reverſion of Land the Land itſelf is included, and then the habendum the Land is not an habendum of another Thing, but of the ſame Thing that is contained in the Premiſſes, altho' according to the common Acceptation of the Thing in the Premiſſes it is there mentioned in another Degree, nevertheleſs they are both one ſame Thing in Subſtance, and as ſuch the habendum is purſuant to the Grant, altho' it varies ſomewhat in Words. As if one makes a Leaſe for Life of an Acre, Remainder in Fee, and he that has the Remainder grants it to another by the Name of the Remainder of the Acre, habendum the Reverſion of the ſaid Acre to him and his Heirs for ever, this habendum is good, and ſhall make the Remainder to paſs in Fee, and yet there the habendum varies in Words from the Premiſſes, and alſo in the Degree of the Thing, which Variance in the Degree is as great as in the principal Caſe, for a Remainder is that which paſſes from the Leſſor at the Time of the particular Eſtate made, and a Reverſion is that which is left in him who makes the particular Eſtate, ſo that it varies both in Terms and Degree, but inaſmuch as the Subſtance is one, that is, the Acre, the habendum is purſuant enough to the Grant in Judgment of Law, which regards the Intent of the Matter, and applies the Words to fulfil the ſame. So if a Man makes a Gift in Tail, reſerving the three firſt Years a Roſe, and afterwards a Rent of 20 s. and he reciting the Gift and Reſervation by Deed grants the Roſe to another, habendum the ſaid Rent of 20 s. to him and his Heirs, this habendum, altho' it varies in Terms, yet is purſuant enough to the Premiſſes, and good, becauſe it is the ſame Thing in Subſtance, for the Roſe and the 20 s. are but one [l] Rent in Subſtance, and not ſeveral. And ſo the Subſtance of the Reverſion in our Caſe is the Land, and the Subſtance and effectual Intent of every Grant of a Reverſion of Land is to have the Land after the particular Eſtate ended, and then when the Reverſion of the Land is granted, habendum the Land after the particular Eſtate ended, this is the ſame Thing to which the Effect of the Grant of the Reverſion tends, and is the Sum and Scope of the Matter, in the Limitation whereof by the habendum it cannot be ſaid that the habendum varies from the Premiſſes, or is of another Thing. For the Land is ſo much the Subſtance of a Reverſion, that by the Grant of the Land the Reverſion ſhall paſs. [m] And therefore if a Man has two Acres of Land, and leaſes the one for Years, and after makes a Deed of Feoffment of both, and makes Livery of that which is in his own Poſſeſſion, if the Leſſee attorns the Reverſion of the

the other ſhall paſs; to prove which 7. Ed. 4. was cited. [a] And alſo it was ſaid that where the Heir had endowed the Wife of the third Part of a Mill, and afterwards gave to a Stranger totum molendinum ſuum, the Reverſion of the ſaid third Part of the Mill ſhould paſs thereby; and this Caſe was cited to be ſo adjudged in 30. Ed. 1. in the Eire of Cornwal. [b] Which Caſes prove that a Gift of Land ſhall make the Reverſion of the ſame Land to paſs, and yet the Land is in another Degree than the Reverſion of the Land. From whence it appears that the Reverſion of the Land and the Land itſelf are not two diſtinct Things, as before hath been alledged, but they are one ſame Thing in Subſtance. And then when the Reverſion of the Land is granted, habendum the Land itſelf, this explains what was the Meaning of the Party in the Word (Reverſion) and is purſuant enough to the Grant. And there are many Caſes where Words of Explanation of the Premiſſes of a Deed ſhall correct the Words that go before much more ſtrongly than they do in our Caſe. [c] And therefore in 7. Ed. 3. it is held that if I grant to one 10 l. Rent out of my Manor, to be taken out of one Acre of Meadow in the ſame Manor, nothing ſhall be charged but that Acre of Meadow. And if the Law be ſo that the Words of the Grant out of the Manor ſhall be corrected and explained by the Limitation of the a prender afterwards, and nothing but one Acre charged, and that by the Judgment of Law in order to perform the Intent of the Parties, a fortiore in our Caſe the Words (Reverſion of the Land) may be corrected and explained by the habendum to mean the Land itſelf being the ſame in Subſtance. And it was admitted that the Word (Tenements) in the habendum, which is a general Word [d] containing the Reverſion, would never help the Matter for the Reaſon given by the Counſel on the other Side, but that the Law will well enough warrant the habendum in the Words (Lands, Meadows, Paſtures, &c.) And therefore the Title of the Plaintiff is good, and he ſhall recover his Damages.

Anthony Brown. The Matter which we are to conſider here is how the firſt Part of the Deed and the habendum ſtand together. And, Sir, the firſt Part contains a Demiſe and Grant of a Reverſion, and the habendum is of Meſſuages, Lands, Tenements, &c. which Words (Tenements) [e] compriſes the Reverſion. [f] For it appears in 33. Ed. 3. that where the King had granted Licenſe to an Abbot to purchaſe Lands and Tenements in Mortmain, and he purchaſed a Reverſion, there this Purchaſe was purſuant enough to the Licenſe; which proves that the Word (Tenements) compriſes a Reverſion. But altho' it does compriſe it, yet for two Cauſes the Word ſo taken in the habendum cannot agree with the Premiſſes by the Rule of Law. The firſt Cauſe (if it ſhould be ſo taken, and then the Clauſe to ſtand thus, viz. the habendum the Reverſion from the Feaſt of St. Michael after the firſt Leaſe ended for 21 Years thence next enſuing) is, for that then it is no Reverſion. For in the mean time, viz. after the Eſtate for Lives ended, and before the ſaid Feaſt of St. Michael, the Land is in Poſſeſſion, which the Leſſors ought to have and occupy, and the Reverſion is gone, for there cannot be a Reverſion but when there is a particular Eſtate continuing, whereas there the particular Eſtate by it's Determination is become no particular Eſtate, and conſequently the Reverſion is become no Reverſion, and to appoint the Reverſion to commence and veſt as a Reverſion at a Time when it is no Reverſion, but when the Land is in Poſſeſſion is repugnant and contradictory. [g] As in the Caſe in 21. H. 7. where a Man made a Gift in Tail upon Condition that if the Donee alien'd in Fee, then his Eſtate ſhould ceaſe, and the Land ſhould remain to a Stranger, there this Remainder cannot be good, for a Remainder cannot veſt but during the particular Eſtate, and when his Eſtate ceaſes, and all the particular Eſtates are determined, and the Land is become Land in Poſſeſſion, then there cannot be a Remainder, for it is then in another Degree; and as a Remainder in Land cannot veſt in a Stranger, as a Remainder, when the Land is become in Poſſeſſion after the particular Eſtate ended, no more can a Reverſion of Land veſt in a Stranger, as a Reverſion, when the Land is become in Poſſeſſion after the particular Eſtate ended. [h] And upon this Reaſon the Caſe in 9. Ed. 3. is founded, where it is put, that if a Man makes a Gift in Tail rendring Rent, and afterwards the Donor takes a Wife, his Wife ſhall be endowed of the Rent, but if the Donee is a Woman, who dies, and her Huſband is Tenant by the Curteſy of the Land, and afterwards the Iſſue in Tail dies without Iſſue, now the Wife of the Donor ſhall not have Dower of the Rent; for her Title of Dower was to be endowed of the Rent of Inheritance, and there cannot be an Inheritance in the Rent longer than the Inheritance of the Land endures, and ſo the one is in Reſpect of the other; and ſince her Title was to be endowed of the Rent of Inheritance, and now the Rent is changed into a Rent for Life only, and ſo is in another Degree before the Execution of her Eſtate, it ſhall never be executed, for it would be repugnant in itſelf. So in our Caſe, foraſmuch as the Reverſion of the Land was granted, and the habendum appoints the Commencement and Execution of it to be at a Time when it ſhall not be a Reverſion, but in Poſſeſſion, and conſequently in another Degree, it cannot ſo veſt or be executed, for it is a Contradiction in itſelf, and therefore it ſhall be void. The other Cauſe is, for that if [i] a Reverſion might be granted at a Day to come, from thence it would follow that the Grantor would have a particular Eſtate in it in the mean time of his own Creation, which cannot be by the Rule of Law that a Man ſhould be [k] Leſſor to himſelf, or that he ſhould diminiſh his own Eſtate, reſerving a [l] leſſer Eſtate, and giving the greater out of him without Alteration of his leſſer Eſtate. [m] And therefore it is truly ſaid in 8. H. 7. that if one has a Rent in Fee, and grants it to another after the Death of J. S. this is void, for if it ſhould be good, then until J. S. was dead he ſhould have a Freehold of his own Grant, and the Grantee ſhould have the Fee, for if the Fee ſhall ever paſs, it ſhall paſs preſently; but the Law will not ſuffer him to have a particular Eſtate in the Rent by ſuch Means, nor will it ſuffer the Eſtate to be ſo ſeparated and divided without an Alteration of the whole Eſtate. the Case in 12. Ed. 3. may stand well enough with Law and good Reason, [a] for there it is held that if one grants to another a Rent out of his Land in Fee, upon Condition that if the Grantee or any of his Heirs die, his or their Heir being within Age, then during such Nonage the Rent shall ceale, there if the Grantee dies, his Heir being within Age, his Wife shall have Dower, but Execution shall cease during the Nonage of the Heir; but there it is put, that if the Heir dies during his Nonage, his Wife shall not have Dower of the Rent, for there the Rent was never leviable in the Son as it was in the Father, and the Rent would have been in esse at the full Age of the Heir, if he had lived so long; [b] and so there the Rent for a Time may be in esse, and for a Time shall not be in esse, because it was newly granted. And at the first Commencement of a Grant a Man may grant the Thing in what Form he pleases. [c] As a Rent de novo may be granted to commence after the Death of J. S. * But when a Rent or a Reversion, or other Thing is in esse, a Man cannot make it to be in esse at one Time and to cease at another, nor grant it to another Person after the Death of any one, or at a Day to come, reserving to himself an Estate in the mean Time. And therefore for these Causes it seems that tho' one should take the Word (Tenements) to contain the Reversion, yet this does not agree with the Premisses of the Deed. And as to what has been said, that forasmuch as the habendum is not pursuant to or agreeable with the Premisses, the habendum shall be void, and the Demise before the habendum shall be good, in which Case Smith and his Wife should have had the Reversion for their Lives if Attornment had been made, and so the Deed shall not be utterly void, but shall take Effect for their Lives; Sir, this is not so, for the Limitation of the Time in Gifts or Grants is material, and if it cannot pass according to the Time limited it shall be utterly void. [d] As in the Case that I have put before, viz. if I have a Rent in Fee, and I grant it to another, if I stop there the Grant shall be for Life, but if I go further and say, "habendum after the Death of J. S." there the whole shall be void, for the Time is Part of the Intent of the Party, and material, and therefore if it cannot pass as he intended it, the whole shall be void. So if I have Land for Years, and I grant to another all my Interest therein, if I stop there he shall have the whole, but if I say further, "habendum after my Death," there the whole shall be void, for the Time is material, and the Estate by such Words ought to pass presently or never, and to take the whole Interest to pass presently, contrary to the Intent of the Party, would be very unreasonable. [e] And if a Man makes a Lease for Years the Remainder in Fee, if the Tenant for Years enters before Livery his Term is good, but the Remainder is void by Littleton. [f] But if the Lessor appoints the Lease to commence at Michaelmas next, the Remainder over in Fee, there although he makes Livery and Seizin to the Lessee, yet the Livery and Seizin and Remainder shall be void, because there is no present Estate to which the Livery may be annexed, or on which it can rest in the mean Time. And if Livery and Seizin shall be there void, because the Time of the Commencement of the Lease is postponed, and the Livery shall not destroy the Time, but the Time shall destroy the Livery and the whole Estate in Fee, a fortiore in our Case when the Reversion is demised, habendum the Tenements, that is, the Reversion after the particular Estate ended, the Grantee shall not have it before, and if he cannot take it then it shall be void. So that the Time shall destroy the Livery of Seizin or Grants, rather than Livery of Seizin or Grants shall destroy the Time limited by the Party. From whence it appears that the Argument made on the other Side, which would have the Premisses of the Deed to stand, and the habendum to be void, is not agreeable to Law, but in Truth tends to the utter Destruction of the whole Grant and Demise, and to make the Deed meerly void. And such Expositions of Deeds are by no Means reasonable, if by Law or Reason they may be taken otherwise; for every Deed is made to some Purpose, and therefore it is reasonable that it should be construed to some Purpose, and not to be void. And every Act shall be taken most strongly against him that does it, and most beneficially for him to whom it is done, [g] and the Law gives him to whom the Deed is made an Election to use it in the same Sense, and to the same Purpose for which he says it was made. [h] And therefore a Man may plead a Lease for Years and Release as a Feoffment. [i] So in 8. H. 6. a Deed of Feoffment was pleaded as a Confirmation. [k] So it is said in 22. H. 6. that one Jointenant shall plead the Feoffment of his Companion as a Confirmation. [l] So in 9. H. 7. it is said that where the King by Act of Parliament (reciting that he had granted the Land by his Letters-Patent) ratifies and confirms the Estate of the Patentee, and further adds damus et concedimus the same Land to the Party, there the Party may plead this Act as a Grant or as a Confirmation. [m] And so in 21. H. 7. where the Obligee had granted by Deed to the Defendant that he should not be sued nor vexed by Force of the said Obligation before the Feast of St. Michael, and if he was impleaded, that then he should plead the said Grant as an Acquittance, and that the Obligation should be held void and of no Effect; it was there held that if an Action of Debt was brought before the Feast of St. Michael, the Defendant might use the Deed as he pleased, that is to say, he might plead it in Bar of the Duty, or have an Action of Covenant upon it. [n] And in 24. Ed. 3. where there was Tenant for Life, the Remainder for Life, the Remainder to the right Heirs of the first Tenant for Life, and the first Tenant for Life afterwards granted by Deed to him in Remainder for Life that he might do Waste, there it is held that he might plead this in Bar of an Action of Waste brought against him after the Death of the first Tenant for Life, and therefore in a Quod juris clamat he knew the Advantage. From which Cases we may see that Deeds which have primâ facie one Sense may be used in another Sense, and that the Party to whom they are made has Liberty to apply them, contrary to the Sense they bear at first Sight, in such Manner as serves best for his own Benefit. In our Case then the

the Deed primâ facie is a Demiſe and Grant of the Reverſion of the Land, but the Party has uſed it as a Demiſe or Leaſe of the Land itſelf, and not as a Grant of the Reverſion. And foraſmuch as that is beſt for his Advantage, he may uſe it in that Senſe by Law, as I apprehend. [a] For a Reverſion of Land is that Part of the Land which is left in him that makes the particular Eſtate, and may well be called the Reſidue or Remnant of the Land. And Land is compriſed in this Word (Reverſion of Land); [b] for if a Man releaſes all his Right in the Land to him in the Reverſion, the Releaſe ſhall be good, and his Right ſhall be extinct, ergo the Land is compriſed in the Reverſion. But it has been ſaid that the Reverſion comprehends the Land where it is granted as a Reverſion, and veſts as a Reverſion by Attornment, as to this, Sir, if the Land was not included in it before Attornment, the Attornment could not make the Land to paſs. [c] And it appears by 5. H. 5. that if a Man makes a Leaſe for Years, and afterwards the Leſſor grants a Rent-Charge out of the Land, this ſhall charge the Reverſion, which proves that the Land and the Reverſion are not two diſtinct Things, but that the Land is contained in the Reverſion. [d] For if a Man recovers the Land againſt Tenant for Life, this ſhall deveſt the Reverſion. And if I make a Covenant to aſſure the Reverſion of two Acres of Land by Fine to one, and he brings a Writ of Covenant quod teneat conventionem of two Acres of Land, I ought to levy a Fine upon this Writ, [e] for when a Man levies a Fine of the Reverſion of Land, the Writ of Covenant is of the Land itſelf. And the Concord of a Fine for the Reverſion of Land is, viz. that the aforeſaid (the Conuſor) hath acknowledged the Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances to be the Right of the ſaid R. and hath granted for himſelf and his Heirs, that the Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances, which H. the Day when this Agreement was made held for Term of his Life by the Law of England of the Inheritance of the aforeſaid (the Conuſor), and which after the Death of the ſaid H. ought to revert to the aforeſaid (the Conuſor) and his Heirs, ſhall immediately after the Death of the ſaid H. remain to the aforeſaid R. and his Heirs; and this is the uſual Form of the Grant of a Reverſion by Fine. And if the uſual Form in ſuch Caſe is according to the Matter, as we ought to intend it, then to have the Reverſion of the Land is to have the Land itſelf. For the Party grants that the Land ſhall remain after the Death, &c. and ſuch Grant is called a Grant of the Reverſion of Land, ſo that the Reverſion of Land comprehends the Land itſelf. And when the Conuſee of the Reverſion of Land by Fine brings a Quid Juris clamat againſt the particular Tenant for Life, the Writ is, that the Sheriff ſhall diſtrain him, &c. and ſhall have his Body at ſuch a Day, to ſhew what Right he claims in one Meſſuage, one Garden, and 14 Acres of Land with the Appurtenances in S. which T. in the Court of the King here hath granted to (the Plaintiff) by Fine between them made, &c. and ſo it recites that the Land was granted, whereas in Fact nothing was granted but the Reverſion. But foraſmuch as by the Grant of the Reverſion the Land in Subſtance and Effect was granted, the Words of the Writ of Quid juris clamat are true in Effect. [f] And ſo it was held in 4. Ed. 3. where the Reverſion of Tenant for Life was granted in Tail, that the Iſſue in Tail ſhould have a Formedon of one Meſſuage, which J. S. granted after the Death of the Tenant for Life, &c. [g] And Littleton ſaith in his Book that if there is Tenant for Years, and the Reverſion of the Land is granted to him in Fee, he has the Land in Poſſeſſion in Fee-ſimple preſently. By which Caſe, and by the others before put it is evident that the Reverſion of Land and the Land itſelf are not two diſtinct Things, but the one in the Premiſſes and the other in the habendum are purſuant enough to each other, for in the Grant of the Reverſion the Land was granted, and then habendum the Land after the Eſtate for Lives determined is the ſame in Subſtance with what is contained in the Premiſſes. And although the habendum is not in the Degree of a Reverſion as the Premiſſes of the Deed is, yet inaſmuch as the Words (Reverſion of the Land) compriſe the Land in Subſtance, it ſhall be good enough to make the Contract here valid; as we may ſee in other like Caſes where a Word contains another Thing in Senſe. [h] As a Grant of the Reverſion of Land ſhall enure as a Remainder; and ſo a Grant of a Remainder, where he has a Reverſion, is good enough to make the Reverſion paſs. [i] And ſo in 3. H. 6. it is held that if a man makes his Will, and commits the Adminiſtration to one, thereby he ſhall be Executor, for the Word (Adminiſtration) compriſes Executorſhip in Subſtance. [k] And by 7. Ed. 3. an Advowſon ſhall paſs by the Grant of a Church. [l] And if one grants to me that I ſhall name to him a Clerk for his Church when it becomes void, and that he ſhall preſent him over to the Biſhop, hereby the Preſentment ſhall paſs to me, and I ſhall have a Quære Impedit, by the Opinion of all the Juſtices in 14. Ed. 4. But it is there ſaid, if I grant to one that he ſhall name to me two Clerks, and I ſhall preſent the one, &c. in this Caſe the Preſentment is not given to the Grantee, for it is in my Election which of them ſhall have the Benefice. [m] And in 8. Ed. 3. it is held that if one makes a Gift in Tail reſerving Rent, and if the Rent be in Arrear that the Land ſhall return, this is a good Condition, for by returning it is intended that he ſhall have the Land again, and therefore in Senſe it includes another Word. [n] So by a Grant de ſtagno molendini the Soil where the Water is ſhall paſs, for it is not a Pond without Soil, nor with Soil without Water. From which Caſes it appears that where a Word comprehends another Thing, the Thing comprehended ſhall paſs by ſuch Word, although it has not the ſame Name. [o] And ſo if the Thing is comprehended in the Premiſſes, and has another Name in the habendum, which contains the Thing, the habendum is good. [p] As if the Nomination of an Advowſon is granted, habendum the Advowſon, the habendum is good, although it varies in Name, for it is the ſame Thing. So a Gift of a Manor, habendum the Services, is a good habendum, cauſâ qua ſupra. So if a Manor be granted or rendered by Fine, habendum an Acre Parcel of the Manor to him and his Heirs, thereby he ſhall have the Manor for Life, and the Acre in Fee, becauſe there wants a Limitation of Eſtate for the reſt of the Manor. So if an Acre Parcel of a Manor is let to one for Life, and afterwards the Manor is given, habendum the Reverſion of the Acre in Fee, this is a good habendum for the Acre, cauſâ qua ſupra, and he ſhall have the Manor only for Life, becauſe no Eſtate was expreſsly given in it. [a] And if I give to Man all my Lands in Dale, habendum Black-acre in Fee, if Black-Acre lies there it is a good habendum, for it was compriſed in the Premiſſes. [a] And Littleton in his Book ſays that where a Man confirms the Eſtate of his Tenant for Life, habendum the Land to him and to his Heirs, the Fee ſhall paſs thereby, and this habendum is good, and yet the Land was not given in the Premiſſes, nor was any Thing given, but only his Eſtate in the Land was confirmed, nevertheleſs foraſmuch as the Land was contained in the Eſtate, for this Reaſon the habendum the Land is purſuant to the Premiſſes. [b] And ſo Littleton alſo puts the Caſe where there are two Jointenants, and the one confirms the Eſtate of the other, habendum the Land to him and to his Heirs, that the Fee ſhall paſs thereby. By which Caſe, and by the others before cited it appears, that where there are words in Deeds which comprehend other Things in Senſe, the Thing comprehended ſhall paſs by the Words, and if it is contained in the Premiſſes of the Deed, and is named in the habendum by another Name, which contains the ſame in Subſtance, the habendum is good. And ſuch is our preſent Caſe, for in the Premiſſes of the Deed, which is a Demiſe of the Reverſion of the Land, the Land is contained and compriſed as the Effect and Subſtance of the Grant and Demiſe: and the habendum the Land after the Eſtate for Lives ended, as of Land in Poſſeſſion, is purſuant enough to the Contents of the Premiſſes. For if the Reverſion of the Land had been granted for 20 Years after the particular Eſtate ended, he ſhould have had the Land in Poſſeſſion by ſuch Grant. And this proves that the Limitation of the Land in Poſſeſſion is not a Limitation of a Thing not compriſed in the Premiſſes, but it is a Limitation agreeable and purſuant enough thereto, and ſufficient in Law to fulfil the Intent of the Parties in making good a Contract. For the Law does many Times allow of a more ſtrange habendum than this is. [c] For if a Man deviſes Land to one, habendum to him and to his Heirs after the Death of the Wife of the Deviſor, there although the Wife is not named before the habendum, yet ſhe ſhall take an Eſtate for Life thereby. [d] So it is held in 4. Ed. 3. where a Man gave Land to another, habendum with Joan the Daughter of the Donor in Frankmarriage, there the Wife not named before the habendum ſhall take a joint Eſtate with her Huſband by the habendum. [e] And if I leaſe Land to J. S. habendum to him for 20 Years, the Remainder to J. K. in Fee, he ſhall take the Fee-Simple, and yet he is not named before the habendum, for ſuch was the Intent of the Parties. And then I ſay, if the habendum is of ſuch Efficacy in Law that it ſhall enable another Perſon to take who is not named in the Premiſſes of the Deed, a fortiore in our Caſe the habendum may explain the Intent of the Premiſſes in ſhewing the Senſe of a Word, and eſpecially where the Subſtance of the habendum is compriſed in the Premiſſes. Wherefore it ſeems to me that the Plaintiff ought to recover his Damages.

C. § 107. Note, this Caſe, as it is here put, is clearly contrary to the ſettled Rule of Law at this Day, and is not warranted by the Book of 13. H. 7. here cited, tho' it is by the Abridgment thereof in Bro. Deviſe 52. (which is a moſt incorrect Abridgment of it) and by 29. H. 8. Ibid. 48. For the Caſe in 13. H. 7. is of a Deviſe to the Heir at Law after the Death of the Wife, which is univerſally agreed to be good Law, and to carry an Eſtate for Life to the Wife by neceſſary Implication, for if ſhe ſhould not take it, nobody elſe could, becauſe the Heir is expreſsly excluded by the Deviſe from taking it until after her Death. But here the Caſe is put of a Deviſe to a Stranger after the Death of the Wife, which varies materially, and cannot carry an Eſtate for Life to the Wife by neceſſary Implication, becauſe during her Life it ſhall go to the Heir, who ought to have it immediately on the Death of his Anceſtor, and from whom the Law will never give away the Land by a poſſible Implication only of the Deviſor's Intent (as here), but by a neceſſary Implication. And therefore in this Caſe it is only a Demonſtration when the Eſtate of the Stranger ſhall commence. So note a Diverſity between a poſſible and a neceſſary Implication, wherewith agree all the later Books of Authority. And therefore 29. H. 8. Bro. Deviſe 48. is not Law. See Accord Cro. J. 75. Eaſter Term 2 & 3. P. & M.

Afterwards in Eaſter Term 2 & 3. Philip and Mary, the Caſe was argued again by Gawdy for the Defendants, and by Dyer for the Plaintiff. But I have not here reported Gawdy's Argument, becauſe it was much to the ſame Effect with that before reported on the Part of the Defendants, for this Argument was in a great Meaſure a Repetition of what he ſaid in his firſt, and I only heard Part of his former Argument as well as of this, and therefore I have not here reported it, though what I heard was very well argued by him.

Dyer. [f] This Word (Reverſion of Land) has a double Meaning; the one is the Eſtate left in him that makes the particular Eſtate, (as before hath been truly defined,) and is jus revertendi, for the Land ſhall revert to the Eſtate left: The other is the Land itſelf when it is reverting, and that is the proper Definition of the Word. For reverſio is a Latin Word, and in Latin it is called a Noun-verbal, which is as much as to ſay, a Noun derived from a Verb, and ſo it is, for it is derived from this Verb (revertor) and in Engliſh it is called (returning). So that reverſio terræ is in Engliſh, the returning of the Land, which is as much as to ſay, the Land returning. Which Senſe is warranted by the Latin, by converting the Noun-verbal into the Participle of the Verb from which it is derived. And ſo the returning of the Land, and the Land returning, is all one. And in this Senſe of Land returning a Reverſion is oftentimes taken by Statutes, and alſo by the Writs in the Regiſter. For the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 5. concerning Advowſons of Churches ſays, it is provided that ſuch Preſentments ſhall not be ſo prejudicial to the right Heirs, or to them unto whom ſuch Advowſons ought to revert after the Death of any Perſons, &c. ſo that the Statute calls the Reverſion of an Advowſon, the Advowſon itſelf which after the Death of the particular Tenant ought to revert, and therefore by this Statute a Reverſion is of a Thing which is in ſuch Eſtate as may revert, and it does not call it a Right, or a Poſſibility of Reverſion, but it calls it the Thing itſelf which ought to revert after the particular Eſtate ended. [g] And the Form of Entry for him that prays to be received upon Default of Tenant for Life is, and ſo ſays, that T. S. (the Tenant for Life) holds the aforeſaid Tenements with the Appurtenances for Term of his Life, the Reverſion thereof after the Death of the aforeſaid J. S. belonging to the ſame (him that prays to be received) and his Heirs, &c. which Form of Entry terming this a Reverſion after Death, proves that by a Reverſion is meant the Thing itſelf after the particular Eſtate ended, and it is not only that which a Man has during the particular Eſtate, for it is a Reverſion after Death. And therefore it is the Thing which is immediately after the particular Eſtate ended, and that is the returning of the Land, or the Land returning. Which Speech is moſt properly applied to living Things, and by Uſage it is transferred from animate Things to Things inanimate.

* And

* And ſo in 14. Ed. 2. the Reverſion of the Tenant for Life was granted to one and to his Heirs; ſi ſupervixerit the Tenant for Life, and he had an Action of Waſt againſt the Tenant for Life, which is grounded upon the Reaſon above. [a] And, Sir, the Writ of Eſcheat is, quæ ad ipſum reverti debet tanquam eſchata ſua. [b] And ſo the Writ of Ceſſavit is, quod ad ipſum reverti debet per formam ſtatuti, &c. [c] And the Writ of Contra formam Collationis is, ad præfatum (the Demandant) reverti debet, &c. [d] And the like Words are in the Writs of Formedon in Reverter; and the Writs of ad terminum qui præteriit, Intruſion, in Caſu proviſo, and conſimili caſu, do expreſs that the Land ought to revert to the Demandant, which Writs at the ſame Time that they declare that the Land ought to revert to them, do alſo declare that there is a Reverſion of the Land when the particular Eſtates are ended. For in the very reverting of the Land, there is a Reverſion, that is, a returning. And a Remainder and Reverſion have a great Reſemblance. [e] For the Fine by which a Reverſion is granted after the Death of the Tenant for Life ſays, that the Land after the Death of the particular Tenant ſhall remain, and does not ſay, revert. [f] And if a Reverſion is granted in Tail dependant upon an Eſtate for Life, the Grantee ſhall have a Formedon in Remainder, and not a Formedon in Reverter, by Fitzherbert's Natura Brevium. The Reaſon, (as I apprehend) is, becauſe the whole [g] Eſtate is not given, but the Fee is reſerved; [h] and the Writ demands the Land which the Donor, after the Death of the Tenant for Life, granted to the Demandant, habendum after the Death of the Tenant for Life, &c. And ſo there the Writ is alſo the uſual Form of every Fine, as hath been recited, viz. that the Land ſhall remain after the particular Eſtate ended. And therefore it declares that the Remainder of the Land is the Land itſelf which ſhall remain after the particular Eſtate. [i] And in 10. Ed. 2. 3. where a Woman was endowed of the third Part of a Houſe, the Heir granted the two other Parts together with the third Part which the Wife held in Dower cum acciderit, and by ſuch Grant the Reverſion of the third Part ſhall paſs: for the Reverſion is nothing elſe but the Land itſelf when it falls, and it is a common Phraſe of Speech, that he who has taken a Leaſe for Years to commence after a former Leaſe, has taken the Reverſion of the Land which the Leſſor held, and the Senſe of the Word is proper enough for the Matter. [k] And the Statute of Erection of the Court of Surveyors, which gave them Authority to demiſe the Lands of the King for 21 Years, has a Proviſo in it, that they ſhall not make any Leaſe of the Reverſion of any of the ſaid Lands, and it was expounded that they might not make a Leaſe to commence after any other Leaſe, for that in Effect was a Leaſe of the Reverſion, which Statute does therein declare that the Reverſion of the Land may be taken for the Land itſelf after the Determination of the firſt Eſtate. And to ſay that ſuch a one demiſed reverſionem terræ, or terram cum revertetur, or reverſionem cum acciderit, is all one in common Speech, and of the ſame Effect. And therefore reverſio terræ is rather poſſeſſio revertendi, than jus revertendi. And foraſmuch then as this Word (Reverſion) has two Intendments, the one being that Eſtate which a Man has during the particular Eſtate, the other that which is immediately after the particular Eſtate ended, and according to this laſt Intendment is its proper Signification and Definition, and foraſmuch as it is the Intent of the Parties to have the Demiſe enure according thereto, why therefore ſhall it not enure ſo? Indeed I know no Reaſon to the contrary. And that the Intent of the Parties is ſuch, is very apparent, for if it ſhould be taken as a Grant of the Reverſion, then the Rent which the Abbot reſerved upon the firſt Leaſe ſhould paſs with it, which was not the Intent of the Abbot, as every Man may diſcover. And the Appointment of the Term to commence after the firſt Eſtate ended declares alſo the Intent of the Parties to be that it ſhould enure as a Leaſe, and not as a Grant of the Reverſion. Alſo the Words have delivered, granted, and to Farm-let, imply the Intent of the Parties to be, that it ſhould enure as a Leaſe of the Demeſn, and not as a Grant of the Reverſion. For one cannot properly be Farmer of a Reverſion, nor ſhall a Man have an Ejectione firmæ of a Reverſion, and therefore theſe Words (to Farm-let) declare that it was the Intent of the Parties that it ſhould enure as a Leaſe after the Eſtates for Lives ended. And therefore inaſmuch as the Intent was ſuch, and the Words are capable of performing the Intent, it ſeems to me that the Demiſe ſhall enure accordingly. [l] But if the habendum here had been for Life, or in Fee, then it might not be good, nor commence after the particular Eſtate ended; for when a Freehold is to paſs it ought to have Livery or Attornment, but that is not neceſſary in Caſe of a Leaſe for Years which is but a Contract; and therefore it ſeems to me that the Intent appearing as it is here ought to be favoured. And the Words here incline to make the Thing enure accordingly, as Bracton well ſays, [m] quod cartæ et munimenta benignè interpretanda ſunt, ut res magis valeat quam pereat. But note, the true Words of Bracton, as Dyer ſhewed me afterwards in his Book, are thus, viz. benignè faciendæ ſunt interpretationes inſtrumenti propter ſimplicitatem laicorum, ut res magis valeat quàm pereat: And to cavil about the Propriety of Words, when the Intent of the Parties appears, is not commendable, nor has it been practiſed by the Judges in former Times, but on the contrary they have applied the Words to fulfil the Intent, rather than have deſtroyed the Intent by reaſon of the Inſufficiency of the Words. And therefore in 3. Ed. 2. a Man prayed to be received upon Default of Tenant for Life, becauſe he had the Remainder, and the Deed which he had of it was, volo et concedo that after the Death of the Tenant for Life the Land ſhall deſcend to him, &c. and there it is adjudged, that he ſhould be received, and that the Word (ſhall deſcend) is of the ſame Senſe as the Word (ſhall remain.) [n] So in 6. Ed. 2. there is a Caſe of a Feoffment in which it was contained, that if the Feoffor pay ſuch a Sum, &c. it ſhall be lawful for him recipere terram, this is there adjudged to be the ſame Thing in Senſe as if it had been ſaid, he ſhall re-enter, becauſe the Intent was ſuch. Note that afterwards I ſaw Dyer's Book which was, if the Rent be in Arrear, it ſhall be lawful for the Feoffor ad recipiendam terram illam, et eam ordinandam ad voluntatem ſuam. [o] And ſo in the ſaid Caſe cited in 8. Ed. 3. the Words that the Land ſhall return, were taken as a Condition, cauſa qua ſupra. And a Gift of Land to a Man for

for Life, and after his Death to J. S. and his Heirs, is held a good Remainder to J. S. for the manifest Intent of the Party, notwithstanding there is not any immediate Gift to him, nor any habendum in the Deed. And if the Intent has been so greatly considered in the said Cases, that in some the Words have been taken out of their proper Signification, in order to perform that Intent, and in others the Intent has supplied the Deficiency of the Words, then in our Case the Word (Reversion of Land) being declared in the habendum to be taken in the Sense of Land reverting, which is its proper Signification according to the Latin, may well enough be so taken, and shall be warranted by Law, in Favour of the Intent of the Parties, although most commonly it is used in another Sense. For an habendum will do greater Things than this does here. For sometimes the habendum shall give an Estate where nothing was given before the habendum, and sometimes it shall give to a Person not named before, and sometimes it shall alter the Estate given in the Premisses. [a] And therefore Littleton in his Book puts the Case, where a Woman Lessee for Life takes Husband, and the Lessor confirms their Estate, habendum et tenendum the Land for Term of their two Lives, in this Case the Confirmation shall enure to the Husband by Way of Remainder for Term of his Life: yet nothing is there given by the Premisses, but the whole is given by the habendum. [b] And so he also puts the Case in his Book, that where the Lessor confirms the Estate of his Tenant for Life, the Remainder to another in Fee, this shall be a good Remainder to him, if it may not be a Grant of the Reversion; but be it the one or the other, there is nothing granted by the Premisses of the Deed, for the Estate of the Tenant for Life is not enlarged, but the last Words of the Deed do only give the Estate. [c] So a Gift to a Man, habendum to him with a Woman in Frankmarriage, shall enable the Woman to take tho' not named before the habendum. [d] And Littleton puts the Case, that where Land is given jointly to two, habendum the one Moiety to the one, and the other Moiety to the other, this shall sever the Jointure, and make them Tenants in common. [e] So by the better Opinion in 8. Ed. 3. where a Man gives Land to two, habendum to the one for Life, and after his Death to the other and his Heirs, the one shall have the whole for Life only, notwithstanding the Jointenancy given in the Premisses, although it has been put contrary fo. 153. And if the habendum shall give an Estate in a Thing not given before, and to a Person not named before, and shall alter an Estate given before, then may it best declare the Sense of the Words of the Premisses in our Case; especially where the Premisses comprehends the Thing in the habendum, as it does in our Case. [f] As a Grant de dispositione Ecclesiæ, habendum advocationem, or a Grant of the Soil of a Wood, habendum the Wood, or a Grant de fundo domus, habendum domum, or a Grant of a Manor, habendum the Advowson which is appendant to it, is good, for the Thing in the habendum is contained in the former Part of the Grant, as it is in our Case. [g] But a Grant of Common out of Land, habendum the Land, or of the Herbage of a Park, habendum the Park, and such like, is not a good habendum, because it is of another Thing which is not comprised in the Premisses of the Deed. But ours is quite a different Case, as I have shewn before, wherefore it seems to me that the Plaintiff shall recover his Damages.

Afterwards at another Day in the same Term all the Justices argued. But because a great Part of their Arguments tended to the same Effect with those before reported, and also because the learned and ingenious Arguments already reported were very long, I have here but briefly touched upon what they said, and have rather shewn their Opinions upon the Matter, than reported their Arguments at large. For if I should report their Arguments as well as those of all the said Serjeants in full, it would make too large a Volume, and would tire the Reader's Patience.

Staunford J. Staunford puisn Justice laid down three Rules for the Understanding of Deeds. First, that they shall be taken most beneficially for the Party to whom they are made; secondly, that a Deed shall never be void, where the Words may be applied to any Intent to make it good; and upon this he cited Bracton, who saith, benignè faciendæ sunt interpretationes instrumenti, ut res magis valeat quàm pereat, and in another Place he saith, in re dubiâ; thirdly, [h] that the Words shall be construed according to the Intent of the Parties, and not otherwise; and here he cited what Bracton saith, carta non est nisi vestimentum donationis; and the Intent directs Gifts more than the Words. [i] As if an Annuity is granted pro consilio impendendo, and the Grantee has divers Faculties, yet the Counsel shall be given in such Faculty as was intended. [k] And so it is held in 9. Ed. 4. that if a Receiver is bound in an Obligation to his Master to pay him omnia recepta et recipienda in his Office, he is not thereby bound to pay all that he might receive, but only what he shall receive in Fact, so that the Intent shall be pursued rather than the Words. [l] And where a Man makes a Lease of a House, so that the Lessee may make his Profit of the House, he may not throw down the House, nor commit Wast therein, by the Opinion of the Book, for the Intent was otherwise, altho' the Words may seem to favour that Construction. And upon this last and the other two Rules he put several Cases. And he said that to pursue the Words is summum jus, which Judges ought to avoid, and rather pursue the Intent. And as to the principal Matter, he said [m] that a Reversion has two Intendments, the one is an Estate left continuing during the particular Estate, which is the most common Sense, the other is the returning of the Land after the particular Estate ended, which is the natural Sense of the Word, according to the Definition of the Latin-Tongue, so that the Reversion of the Land, and the Land when it reverts, is all one. And the Statute of Westminster 2. cap. 1. which says, that they, to whom the Land was given under such Condition, shall have no Power to alien the same, but that it shall revert unto the Giver, if Issue fail, &c. intending to put a Stop to the Power of the Donee from barring the Donor of the Reversion of the Land, prohibits his Alienation, and directs that the Land shall revert to the Donor, so that the Reversion of the Land, and the Land reverting, is all one. And in such Sense the Deed here is used; but if it had stopped in the first Part, viz. in the Premisses, then it should have been taken meerly as a Grant of the Reversion, but the habendum, which is the other Part, is is such an Addition as makes the Clause but one in effect. As if I release all Actions, and stop there, all Actions are gone; but if I say further, "which I have as Executor to J. S." there the Generality is restrained. [a] So in the Case of 7. Ed. 4. where the King had granted to Garter King of Heralds 10 l. for Term of his Life, if he had stopp'd there he should have had it absolutely for Term of his Life; but when he says further, by Reason of his Office, thereby the Generality of the Grant is restrained, so that if he were removed from his Office he should lose the Annuity. So is it in the Case here, if the Deed had stopp'd when the Reversion was granted, it had been meerly a Reversion in the Nature of a Reversion commonly taken; but when it is said, habendum the Land from the Feast, &c. this is become annexed to the first Part, and makes it but one entire Deed, which ought to agree in itself, nam turpis est pars quæ cum suo toto non convenit. And then forasmuch as every Part of the Deed ought to be compared with the other, and one entire Sense ought to be made thereof, to this End the three Rules abovesaid are to be remembered, by the one of which the Deed ought not to be made void, if any Sense can be made of it, as there may here; by the second Rule it shall be taken most beneficially for Smith and his Wife; and by the third Rule it shall be taken according to the Intent of the Parties: And in order to accomplish these three Rules the Deed here ought to be taken as a good Lease for 21 Years after the first Estate ended, for such Way the Deed takes Effect, and shall be most beneficial for him to whom it is made, and shall enure according to the Intent of the Parties; and in taking it in this Sense the three Rules are fulfilled. [b] And he said that where the Party demises and grants reversionem terræ, habendum terram, here is an habendum of the same Thing which is mentioned before, altho' it is in another Case, for (terræ) is in the Genitive Case, and (terram) is in the Accusative, and it is not necessary that they should both be in the same Case. For if a Man grants to another all his Estate in una acra terræ, habendum prædictam acram sibi et hæredibus suis, this is a good habendum, altho' the Acre was mentioned before in the Ablative Case, and in the habendum it is in the Accusative, for the Acre was mentioned before notwithstanding it was in another Case. So is it in our Case here. Wherefore it seemed to him to be a good Lease, and that the Plaintiff should recover his Damages. And this was the Substance of his Argument, altho' it was much more amplified with many Cases.

Saunders Justice to the same Purpose. He said that Deeds ought to have a reasonable Exposition, which shall be without wrong to the Grantor, and with the greatest Advantage to the Grantee. [c] As if an Abbot grants a Corody to one for him and his Servant to sit at his Mess, he may not bring one that has a noisom Disease. [d] So if one grants Estovers to another out of his Manor, he may not cut down Fruit Trees. [e] So if one grants to another Common in his Land for all his Cattle, yet he shall not have Common for Goats or Geese, which are Things hurtful to the Land. Wherefore there is a Kind of Equity in Grants, so that they shall not be taken unreasonably against the Grantor, and yet shall with Reason be extended most liberally for the Grantee. [f] As a Release by the Lessor of all his Right made to the Lessee for Years shall enlarge his Estate for his Life; [g] but if the Grantor was Tenant in Tail, then it should only be for the Life of the Tenant in Tail. [h] So a Grant of 20 s. by two Tenants in common out of their Land shall enure as several Grants, so that the Grantee shall have 20 s. of each. [i] So in 34. Ass. where a Man granted totam partem suam piscariæ de Tese quamdiu terræ suæ se extendunt, salvo tamen stagno molendini, there it is held that the Fishery in the Mill-pool should pass to the Grantee, for the Deed shall be taken most strongly against the Grantor, so that the Pool and not the Fishery shall be excepted. From whence we may see that there is an Equity in the Exposition of Deeds, and that they are taken most liberally for the Grantees. Then in the principal Case, he that has the Reversion of the Land dependant upon an Estate for Life is the Proprietor of the Land, and the Tenant for Life is the Possessor, and the Land is included in his Estate who is in the Reversion, and who is the Proprietor of the Land; for if one warrants the Land to him he shall vouch, and if he that has the Reversion grants a Rent out of the Land, or accepts a Release of Right in the Land it shall be good. And he admitted the said Cases of 7. Ed. 4 and 30. Ed. 1. that a Reversion shall pass by a Grant of the Land or of a Mill, as it is put before fo. 155. [l] And so he said that a Grant of the Land shall make a Reversion to pass, [m] and a Grant of the Reversion shall make the Land to pass, and the Nature of an habendum is to give, enlarge, or qualify, and the habendum here is good, for the Thing in Substance was granted in the Premisses. Wherefore the Premisses and the habendum make a perfect Demise, and the one with the other have the Substance and Intent of a Lease. And he said he was of the like Opinion that Brudnel seemed to be of in [n] 14. H. 8. that Contracts shall be as it is concluded and agreed between the Parties, according as their Intents may be gathered. And to cavil about the Words in Subversion of the plain Intent of the Parties, as Tully [o] says in his Book of Offices, Est calumnia quædam et nimis callida sed malitiosa juris interpretatio, ex quo illud, summum jus, summa injuria; as he puts an Example of one who had taken a Truce for 130 Days with his Enemy, and in the Night he destroyed and depopulated their Possessions, because (as he said) the Truce was for Days and not for Nights, which Tully accounted meer Injury and Injustice. And such Interpretation of the Law he has admonished Men to avoid, and to observe and follow the Intent of the Words. And certainly the Words are no other than the Testimony of the Contract. And in the Case here (as he apprehended) there are all the five Garments which Bracton says are necessary for the cloathing of Contracts, as they are expressed in these Verses,

[p] Re, verbis, scripto, consensu, traditione, Junctura, vestes sumere pacta solent.

for here there is Matter of Substance, Words, Writing, Consent, and Delivery, and then it shall be a perfect Contract, and consequently a Lease. And therefore he was of Opinion that the Lease was good, and that the Plaintiff ſhould recover. And he put much other Matter, and many other Caſes in Maintenance of his Opinion.

Brown J. Sir Humphrey Brown Juſtice to the ſame Purpoſe. He ſaid that the Intent of the Abbot and Convent, and of Smith and his Wife was to have the Land paſs as a Leaſe after the particular Eſtate ended, and not otherwiſe; and foraſmuch as it was their Intent that the Word (Reverſion) ſhould enure ſuch Way, it ſeemed to him that the Law would warrant it. For the Land is included in the Reverſion, which if it was not, a Man by a Grant of the Reverſion could not have the Land in Poſſeſſion after the particular Eſtate ended. And a Feoffment of a Carve, habendum [a] the Manor of D. is good, if the Carve conſtitutes the Manor. And if Land is parcel of an Office it ſhall paſs by a Grant of the Office, becauſe it is included in the Grant. So is it in the Caſe of a Grant of a Reverſion, and much more, he ſaid, when it has a Tendency to make the Leaſe good. And therefore he was of Opinion that the Plaintiff ſhould recover.

[a] Co. Litt. 49. a. 2. Rol. Abr. 1. B. pl. 3. 1. Keb. 331.

Brook C. J. Robert Brook Chief Juſtice to the contrary. There ſeems to me to be a Diverſity between the Caſes put and our Caſe here. For where a Releaſe of the Right in the Land is made by him in the Reverſion to the Termor, habendum the Land, this is a good habendum, altho' he did not give the Land before, for the Termor had the Land, and ſo was in Poſſeſſion of it, and therefore it was not neceſſary to give him the Land, but the habendum enuring by way of Enlargement of his Eſtate is good. But in our Caſe Smith and his Wife had nothing in the Land before the Deed of Demiſe, ſo that it commences de novo, in which Caſe the Premiſſes of the Deed ought to give an Eſtate before the habendum can enlarge it, for which Reaſon the Caſes are not alike. And as to the Caſe where a Man gives all his Eſtate in the Land, habendum the Land in Fee, Sir, this is a good habendum, for this Word (Eſtate in Land) is a general Word, which comprehends the Land and all the Degree which the Party has in it, and therefore the habendum is there purſuant to the former Part. But a Reverſion of Land is not a general Word, but a ſpecial Word, and does not contain all the Degrees, or all Eſtates in the Land, but one Degree, or one Eſtate only: And then when a Man grants the Reverſion, which is in one Degree, habendum the Land, which is in another Degree, and the Word is general, it is not alike, for in the one Caſe the general Word goes before, and in the other the ſpecial, and ſo the Caſes are not alike. [b] And as to the Caſe of an Office, by the Grant whereof Land ſhall paſs, Sir, this is true, and the Caſe is in 1. H. 7. but there the Land is [c] appurtenant and appendant to the Office, which the Land is not to the Reverſion, but the Reverſion is a ſpecial Eſtate in the Land; and therefore the Caſes do not agree. And as to what has been ſaid, [d] that by the Grant or Feoffment of the Land the Reverſion ſhall paſs with Attornment, [e] and ſo by the Grant of the Reverſion the Land ſhall paſs, Sir, I admit that a Reverſion ſhall paſs by a Grant of the Land, for the Word (Land) is a general Word which contains all Eſtates that the Grantor or Feoffor has in it, and therefore it is able to convey to another all Eſtates which the Grantor or Feoffor has in it. But a Reverſion is a particular Eſtate made out of the general Land, which Particular is not able to convey to another the General, and ſo the Caſes are not alike. And as to the Caſes where a Thing may paſs by another Name, as a Manor by the Name of a Carve, and an Advowſon by the Name of a Nomination or Diſpoſition, and the like, Sir, there the Thing itſelf paſſes, for he that has an Advowſon has no other Profit or Thing but the Nomination or Diſpoſition, and the Manor is made of the Carve, and ſo it is one ſame Thing. But the Poſſeſſion and the Reverſion are two Things, the one whereof is not known by the Name of the other, but they are diſtinct Things, and therefore the Caſes are not alike. And as to what is ſaid, that the Intent of the Parties appears here, which we ought always to purſue, and for that Purpoſe the Rule of Bracton is cited, Sir, to this it may well be anſwered, non eſt regula quin fallit, and there ought to be apt Words to expreſs the Meaning, or elſe the Meaning ſhall be void. [f] For the Party ought to direct his Meaning according to the Law, and not the Law according to his Meaning, for if a Man ſhould bend the Law to the Intent of the Party, rather than the Intent of the Party to the Law, this would be the Way to introduce Barbarouſneſs and Ignorance, and to deſtroy all Learning and Diligence. For if a Man was aſſured that whatever Words he made Uſe of his Meaning only ſhould be conſidered, he would be very careleſs about the Choice of his Words, and it would be the Source of infinite Confuſion and Incertainty to explain what was his Meaning. [g] And therefore a great Number of Caſes might be produced where the Intent ſhall be ſet aſide, if it does not agree with the Law. [h] As in the Caſe of 9. H. 6. where an Abbot and Convent by Deed indented gave a Croft to W. in Fee, and in Return for this Gift the ſaid W. renunciavit toti communiæ quam habere conſuevit averiorum ſuorum cum averiis of the Abbot and Convent, and this Releaſe of the Common was there taken to be void, becauſe it did not ſhew to whom he renounced the Common, yet there the Intent was plain, for he had Common in the Land of the Abbot, and his Meaning was to releaſe it to the Abbot, but becauſe of the Incertainty it was void. [i] And where a Leaſe was made to Huſband and Wife, and the Reverſion of the Land which the Huſband held was granted, this was held void notwithſtanding the Intent, becauſe it miſtakes the Certainty of the particular Eſtate. [k] And ſo where there was Lord and Tenant of 3 Acres, and the Lord granted the Seigniory which he had in one Acre, this was holden void in 17. Ed. 3. notwithſtanding the Intent, becauſe his Intent did not agree with the Law. [l] So where one holds of a Man by Caſtle-guard, Homage, and Fealty, and he grants to another all the Services, it is held in 31. Ed. 1. that the Caſtle-guard cannot paſs becauſe he does not grant the Caſtle but reſerves it, and therefore he that has not the Caſtle cannot have the Caſtle-guard; wherefore his Intent to grant all the Services could not make them all to paſs, becauſe it was not according to Law, ſo that the Law rules the Intent, and not the Intent the Law. [m] But in Teſtaments the Intent only ſhall be obſerved and conſidered, becauſe it is preſumed that the Teſtator has not Time to ſettle every Thing according to the Rules

Rules of Law, and Wills are moſt commonly made on a ſudden, and in the Teſtator's laſt Moments; and ſo is the Difference between them and Acts executed in the Party's Lifetime. And Sir, here the Reverſion of the Land, as it is uſed and taken in our Law, and the Land itſelf are of two different Natures, and the one will extinguiſh the other, [a] for if the Reverſion comes to the Poſſeſſion it is no longer a Reverſion, no more is it where the Poſſeſſion comes to the Reverſion, ergo it is a diſtinct Eſtate from his Eſtate. And for theſe Reaſons the habendum the Land is not purſuant to the Reverſion granted in the Premiſſes, and ſo the Intent is not framed according to Law. And it is moſt certain that the Cloiſterers in making their Leaſes and Deeds had commonly a peculiar Form thereof which they would ſtick to ſo preciſely, that rather than deviate from their Cuſtom they would mar the whole; and therefore becauſe they would not direct their Form according to the Rule of Law, but would have the Law bend to their Uſage, they have deſtroyed the Force of many Deeds, as they have done here; for which Reaſon the Plea in Bar to the Avowry is not good.

[a] Ante 151 (e).

And Note, he and alſo Brown Juſtice ſaid that the Avowry was not good, becauſe the Avowant had not averred his Plea. But afterwards the Prothonotaries ſearched their Precedents, and told the Juſtices that the common Uſage in ſuch Avowry was to make the Avowry ut ſupra, without Averment, with which the Juſtices were ſatisfied. And afterwards Brook ſaid to Juſtice Saunders (as I was informed by Saunders himſelf) that he was content that Judgment ſhould be given for the Plaintiff, and accordingly the ſame Term Judgment was given for the Plaintiff by Award of the Court, as hereafter appears by the reſt of the Record.

At which Day here came as well the aforeſaid John Throckmerton as the aforeſaid Richard Tracy and William Nicholſon by their Attornies aforeſaid; whereupon the Premiſſes being ſeen, and by the Juſtices here more fully underſtood, it ſeems to the ſame Juſtices that the aforeſaid Plea of the aforeſaid John Throckmerton upon the aforeſaid Writing indented to the Avowry of the aforeſaid Richard, and to the Cognizance of the aforeſaid William in Manner and Form aforeſaid above in Bar pleaded, is ſufficient in Law to maintain the Action of the aforeſaid John Throckmerton for the taking the Cattle aforeſaid againſt the aforeſaid Richard Tracy and William, and to preclude the ſaid Richard Tracy and William from their Avowry and Cognizance aforeſaid againſt the aforeſaid John Throckmerton, as the aforeſaid John hath above alledged. Therefore it is conſidered that the aforeſaid John do recover againſt the aforeſaid Richard and William his Damages by Reaſon of the taking and unjuſt Detention of the Cattle aforeſaid. But becauſe it is unknown what Damages the ſame John has ſuſtained by Reaſon of the taking and unjuſt Detention of the Cattle aforeſaid, it is commanded to the Sheriff that by the Oaths of good and lawful Men of the County aforeſaid he diligently enquire what Damages the aforeſaid John has ſuſtained as well by Reaſon of the taking and unjuſt Detention of the ſaid Cattle, as for his Coſts and Charges by him about his Suit in this Behalf laid out; and the Inquiſition which, &c. the Sheriff ſhould make appear here from the Day of the holy Trinity in fifteen Days, under his Seal and the Seals &c. At which Day here came the aforeſaid John Throckmerton by his Attorney aforeſaid. And the Sheriff, viz. Walter Dennis Knight now returned a certain Inquiſition taken before him at Winchcomb in the County aforeſaid the ſeventh Day of June laſt paſt by the Oaths of twelve &c. by which it is found that the aforeſaid John has ſuſtained Damages by Reaſon of the Premiſſes, beſides his Coſts and Charges by him about his Suit in this Behalf laid out, to the Amount of 30 l. and for his Coſts and Charges 8 l. Whereupon it ſeems to the Juſtices here that the aforeſaid John ſhall mitigate the Damages aforeſaid for Coſts &c. in a reaſonable Manner to be releaſed before they give Judgment thereon, wherefore it is ordered to the ſaid John that he do ſo. And thereupon the ſame John remits here in Court to the aforeſaid Richard Tracy 60 s. of the ſaid Damages; and prays Judgment of the Reſidue of the Damages aforeſaid to be rendered to him; whereupon the ſaid 60 s. being deducted and taken off, it is conſidered that the aforeſaid John do recover againſt the aforeſaid Richard and William the Reſidue of his Damages aforeſaid to the Amount of 55 l. by the Inquiſition aforeſaid above found. And the aforeſaid Richard in Mercy, &c.

JOHN GRANGE late of Great-Eſton in the County aforeſaid Yeoman was attached to anſwer William Hill of a Plea, wherefore with Force and Arms the Cloſes and Houſe of the ſaid William at Great-Dunmow he broke, and his Graſs to the Value of 10 l. there lately growing with certain Cattle eat up, trod down, and conſumed, and other Wrongs to him did, to the great Damage of the ſaid William, and againſt the Peace of the Lord the King and Lady the Queen now, &c. And whereupon the ſame William by John Bill his Attorney complains that the aforeſaid John the tenth Day of November, in the ſecond and third Years of the Reign of the Lord the King and Lady the Queen now, with Force and Arms the Cloſes and Houſe of the ſaid William at Great-Dunmow broke, and his Graſs to the Value, &c. there lately growing with certain Cattle, viz. Horſes, Oxen, Cows, Hogs, and Sheep eat up, trod down, and conſumed, and other Wrongs, &c. to the great Damage &c. and againſt the Peace &c. wherefore he ſays that he is damnified, and has Damage to the Value of 20 l. and thereupon he brings Suit, &c.

And the aforeſaid John by Robert Bedingfield his Attorney comes and defends the Force and Injury when, &c. and as to the coming with Force and Arms ſays that he is not guilty thereof, and of this he puts himſelf upon the Country; and the aforeſaid William likewiſe. And as to the reſt of the Treſpaſs aforeſaid above ſuppoſed to be done, the ſame John ſays that the Cloſes and Houſe aforeſaid, and alſo the Places in which the Treſpaſs aforeſaid is ſuppoſed to be done, are, and at the Time aforeſaid when the Treſpaſs aforeſaid is ſuppoſed to be done were, one Meſſuage, 100 Acres of Land to the ſame Meſſuage appertaining from Time beyond the Memory of Man, and 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances in Great-Dunmow aforeſaid. And as to any Treſpaſs in the aforeſaid Meſſuage and 100 Acres of Land with the Appurtenances of the Tenements aforeſaid, the ſame John ſays that the aforeſaid William his Action aforeſaid thereof againſt him ought not to have, becauſe he ſays that before the aforeſaid Time when the Treſpaſs aforeſaid is ſuppoſed to be done, one Henry Pate was ſeized of the ſame Meſſuage and 100 Acres of Land in his Demeſn as of Fee, and being ſo ſeized thereof before the aforeſaid Time when &c. viz. the ſixth Day of Auguſt in the ſecond and third Years of the Reign of the Lord the King and Lady the Queen now, at G[illegible]Dunmow aforeſaid, by a certain Indenture made between the aforeſaid Henry of the one Par[illegible] the aforeſaid John of the other Part, (one Part whereof ſealed with the Seal of the ſaid Henry the ſame John here brings into Court, the Date whereof is the ſame Day and Year) demiſed the aforeſaid Meſſuage with all the Lands to the ſame Meſſuage appertaining to the aforeſaid John, to have to him and his Aſſigns from the ſame ſixth Day of Auguſt until the End and Term of 20 Years from thence next following and fully to be compleat, yielding therefore yearly to the aforeſaid Henry and his Heirs forty Shillings at two Terms of the Year, that is to ſay, at the Feaſts of the Annunciation of the bleſſed Virgin Mary, and of St. Michael the Archangel to be paid by equal Portions, by virtue of which Demiſe the ſame John was and yet is poſſeſſed of the ſame Meſſuage and 100 Acres of Land. And the aforeſaid William, claiming the aforeſaid Meſſuage and 100 Acres of Land by Colour of a certain Deed of Demiſe thereof made to him for Term of his Life by the aforeſaid Henry Pate long before the Demiſe aforeſaid made to the ſaid John (where nothing of the ſaid Meſſuage and 100 Acres of Land ever paſſed into the Poſſeſſion of the aforeſaid William by that Deed) into the ſame Meſſuage and 100 Acres of Land before the aforeſaid Time when, &c. entered, upon the Poſſeſſion of which ſaid William thereof the ſame John afterwards, viz. the ſame time when, &c. claiming his Term aforeſaid, into the ſaid Meſſuage and 100 Acres of Land re-entered, and the Graſs in the ſame 100 Acres of Land then growing with the Cattle aforeſaid eat up, trod down, and conſumed, as it was lawful for him to do; and this he is ready to verify, wherefore he prays Judgment if the aforeſaid William his Action aforeſaid thereof againſt him ought to have, &c. And as to any Treſpaſs in the aforeſaid 100 Acres of Meadow the Reſidue of the Tenements aforeſaid with the Appurtenances, the ſame John ſays that the aforeſaid William his Action aforeſaid thereof againſt him ought not to have, becauſe he ſays that before the aforeſaid Time when the Treſpaſs aforeſaid is ſuppoſed to be done, one John Palmer late Abbot of the late Monaſtery of the bleſſed Virgin Mary of Tiltey in the aforeſaid County of Eſſex was lately ſeized of the ſame 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances in his Demeſn as of Fee, in Right of his late Monaſtery aforeſaid, and being ſo ſeized thereof, the ſame late Abbot with the Conſent of the then Convent of the ſame late Monaſtery, before the aforeſaid Time when, &c. viz. the ſixth Day of November in the 24*th* Year of the Reign of Lord Henry late King of England the eighth from the Conqueſt, the Father of the Lady the Queen now by his certain Writing indented, one Part whereof ſealed with the common Seal of the ſame late Abbot and the then Convent the ſame John produces here in Court, the Date whereof is in the Chapter-Houſe of the ſame late Abbot and Convent, at the aforeſaid late Monaſtery of Tiltey aforeſaid, the ſame Day and Year, demiſed the ſame 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances to the aforeſaid John Grange, to have and occupy to him and his Aſſigns from the ſame ſixth Day of November until the End and Term of ſixty Years from thence next following fully to be compleat, yielding therefore yearly to the aforeſaid late Abbot and his Succeſſors forty Shillings to be paid by equal Portions at the Feaſt of the Annunciation of the bleſſed Virgin Mary, and of St. Michael the Archangel, by virtue of which Demiſe the ſame John was and yet is thereof poſſeſſed. And the aforeſaid William, claiming the ſame 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances by Colour of a certain Deed of Demiſe thereof made to him for Term of his Life by the aforeſaid late Abbot, long before the aforeſaid ſixth Day of November, (where nothing of the ſame 100 Acres of Meadow ever paſſed into the Poſſeſſion of the aforeſaid William by that Deed,) into the ſame 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances before the aforeſaid Time when, &c. entered, upon the Poſſeſſion of which ſaid William thereof the ſame John afterwards, viz. the ſame time when, &c. into the ſame 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances re-entered, and the Graſs aforeſaid in the ſame 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances then growing with the Cattle aforeſaid eat up, trod down, and conſumed, as it was lawful for him to do; and this he is ready to verify, wherefore he prays Judgment if the aforeſaid William his Action aforeſaid againſt him ought to have, &c. Colour.

And the aforeſaid William, as to the aforeſaid Plea of the aforeſaid John to the Treſpaſs aforeſaid done in the aforeſaid Meſſuage and 100 Acres of Land above in Bar pleaded, ſays that by any thing before alledged in the ſame Plea he ought not to be precluded from having his Action aforeſaid thereof, becauſe he ſays that true it is that before the aforeſaid Time of the Treſpaſs aforeſaid done the aforeſaid Henry Pate was ſeized of the ſame Meſſuage and 100 Acres of Land in his Demeſn as of Fee, and being ſo ſeized thereof, before the ſame Time when, &c. viz. the aforeſaid ſixth Day of Auguſt in the ſecond and third Years aboveſaid, at Great Dunmow aforeſaid, demiſed the ſaid Tenements by the Name of one Meſſuage, and all the Lands to the ſame Meſſuage appertaining, to the aforeſaid John, to have to him and his Aſſigns from the ſame ſixth Day of Auguſt until the aforeſaid End and Term of the aforeſaid 20 Years from thence next following, and fully to be compleat; yielding therefore yearly to the aforeſaid Henry and his Heirs 40 Shillings, to be paid by equal Portions at the aforeſaid two Terms of the Year, viz. at the aforeſaid Feaſts of the Annunciation of the bleſſed Virgin Mary, and of St. Michael the Archangel. And the aforeſaid William Hill further ſays, that the aforeſaid Demiſe was made upon the Condition following, viz. that if and whenſoever the Rent aforeſaid ſhould be in Arrear in part or in all after any of the aforeſaid Feaſts on which it ought to be paid, as is aforeſaid, by the Space of ten Days during the Term aforeſaid, that then and ſo often it ſhould be lawful for the aforeſaid Henry and his Heirs into the ſaid Tenements with the Appurtenances to re-enter, and the ſame as in his former Eſtate to have again, the aforeſaid Demiſe in any wiſe notwithſtanding; by virtue of which Demiſe the ſame John was poſſeſſed of the ſame Meſſuage and 100 Acres of Land, and being ſo poſſeſſed thereof, and the aforeſaid Henry Pate being ſeized of the Reverſion of the ſame Tenements in his Demeſn as of Fee, the ſame Henry afterwards, viz the firſt Day of September, in the ſecond and third Years aboveſaid, at Great Dunmow aforeſaid, by his certain Writing, (which the ſame William produces here in Court ſealed with the Seal of the aforeſaid Henry, the Date whereof is the ſame Day and Year,) granted his Reverſion and Intereſt of and in the ſame Meſſuage and 100 Acres of Land to the ſame William, to have to him and his Heirs for ever, to which ſaid Grant of the Reverſion aforeſaid the aforeſaid John at Great Dunmow aforeſaid attorned himſelf to the aforeſaid William, whereby the ſame William became ſeized of the Reverſion of the ſame Meſſuage and 100 Acres of Land in his Demeſn as of Fee and Right. And the ſaid William being ſo ſeized of the Reverſion of the ſame Meſſuage and 100 Acres of Land, for that twenty Shillings of the Rent aforeſaid for half a Year ending at the Feaſt of St. Michael the Archangel in the aboveſaid ſecond and third Years of the Reign of the Lord the King and Lady the Queen now to the ſame William then due were in Arrear and unpaid, the ſame William the ninth Day of October in the ſecond and third Years aboveſaid came to the Meſſuage aforeſaid, and into the ſame entered one whole Hour next before the ſetting of the Sun the ſame Day, and remained there all the ſame Hour, to demand the aforeſaid twenty Shillings, until the ſetting of the Sun the ſame Day, and no one came on behalf of the aforeſaid John, before the ſetting of the Sun the ſame Day, then there to pay the aforeſaid twenty Shillings to the ſame William; by Reaſon whereof the ſame William the twelfth Day of October, in the ſecond and third Years aboveſaid, into the ſame Meſſuage and 100 Acres of Land entered, and was thereof ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee, until the aforeſaid John the aforeſaid tenth Day of November in the ſecond and third Years aboveſaid, the Cloſes and Houſe of the ſaid William, in the aforeſaid Meſſuage and 100 Acres of Land in the aforeſaid firſt Plea ſpecified, broke, and his Graſs to the Value, &c. there lately growing with his Cattle aforeſaid eat up, trod down, and conſumed, againſt the Peace of the Lord the King and Lady the Queen now, as he above complains thereof againſt him: and this he is ready to verify, wherefore for that the aforeſaid John above confeſſes the Treſpaſs aforeſaid done in the aforeſaid Tenements with the Appurtenances in the aforeſaid firſt Plea of the ſaid John ſpecified, the ſame William prays Judgment and his Damages by reaſon of the ſaid Treſpaſs to be adjudged to him, &c. And as to the aforeſaid laſt Plea of the aforeſaid John to the aforeſaid Treſpaſs in the aforeſaid 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances above in Bar pleaded, the ſame William ſays that by any thing before alledged in the ſame Plea he ought not to be precluded from having his Action aforeſaid thereof, becauſe he ſays that true it is that before the aforeſaid Time of the Treſpaſs aforeſaid done, the aforeſaid late Replication.

Abbot of the ſaid late Monaſtery of Tiltey was ſeized of the aforeſaid 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances in his Demeſn as of Fee, in Right of the late Monaſtery aforeſaid, and being ſo ſeized thereof, the ſame late Abbot with the Conſent of the then Convent of the ſame late Monaſtery, before the aforeſaid Time when, &c. viz. the aforeſaid ſixth Day of November in the aboveſaid twenty-fourth Year of the Reign of the aforeſaid late King Henry the Eighth, by the aforeſaid Writing indented ſealed with the common Seal of the ſame late Abbot and the then Convent, the Date whereof is in the Chapter-houſe of the ſame late Abbot and the then Convent at the aforeſaid late Monaſtery of Tiltey aforeſaid, the ſame Day and Year, demiſed the ſame 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances to the aforeſaid John Grange, to have and occupy to him and his Aſſigns from the ſame ſixth Day of November until the aforeſaid End and Term of the aforeſaid ſixty Years from thence next following, and fully to be compleat; yielding therefore yearly to the aforeſaid late Abbot and his Succeſſors forty Shillings, to be paid by equal Portions at the aforeſaid Feaſts of the Annunciation of the bleſſed Virgin Mary, and of St. Michael the Archangel. And the ſame William further ſays, that the aforeſaid Demiſe by the aforeſaid late Abbot in Form aforeſaid made was upon the Condition following, viz. that if it ſhould happen the aforeſaid Rent be in Arrear and unpaid in part or in all by the Space of ten Days after any of the Feaſts aforeſaid on which it ought to be paid, as is aforeſaid, that then it ſhould be lawful for the aforeſaid Abbot and his Succeſſors into the ſame 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances to re-enter, and the ſame as in his former Eſtate to have again, and the aforeſaid John Grange and his Executors therefrom wholly to expel and remove, the aforeſaid Demiſe thereof notwithſtanding, as by the ſame Writing more fully appears. By virtue of which Demiſe the ſame John Grange was poſſeſſed of the ſame 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances, and being ſo poſſeſſed thereof, and the aforeſaid late Abbot being ſeized of the Reverſion of the ſame 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances in his Demeſn as of Fee, in Right of his late Monaſtery aforeſaid, the ſame late Abbot with the Aſſent of his Convent aforeſaid, afterwards and before the aforeſaid Time when, &c. viz. the twelfth Day of May in the twenty-eighth Year of the Keign of the ſaid late King Henry the Eighth, at Weſtminſter in the County of Middleſex, by his certain Writing ſealed with the common Seal of the ſame late Abbot and Convent, the Date whereof is the ſame Day and Year, and inrolled in the Court of Chancery of the ſaid late King before Thomas Audley, Knight of the moſt noble Order of the Garter, Lord Audley of Walden, then Chancellor of England to the ſame late King, by the Aſſent of his Convent aforeſaid gave and ſurrendered the ſame 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances amongſt other Things to the aforeſaid late King Henry the Eighth, to have to him his Heirs and Succeſſors for ever; by which the ſame late King was ſeized of the Reverſion of the ſame 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances in his Demeſn as of Fee, in Right of his Crown of England, and being ſo ſeized of ſuch Eſtate therein he died ſeized, after whoſe Death the Reverſion of the ſame 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances deſcended to the Lord Edward the Sixth late King of England, as Son and Heir of the ſame late King Henry the Eighth, by which the ſame late King Edward the Sixth was ſeized of the Reverſion of the ſame 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances in his Demeſn as of Fee, in Right of his Crown of England, and being ſo ſeized thereof, the ſame late King Edward the Sixth, afterwards and before the aforeſaid Time when, &c. viz. the third Day of May in the ſecond Year of his Reign, by his Letters-patent, (which the ſame William Hill here produces in Court, the Date whereof is at Weſtminſter the ſame Day and Year,) gave the ſaid Reverſion of the ſaid 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances to the aforeſaid William Hill, to have to him and his Heirs for ever. By reaſon of which ſaid Letters patent the ſame William was ſeized of the Reverſion of the ſame 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances in his Demeſn as of Fee, and the ſaid William Hill being ſeized in Form aforeſaid of the Reverſion of the ſame 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances, for that twenty Shillings of the ſaid Rent for half a Year ending at the Feaſt of St. Michael the Archangel in the ſixth Year of the Reign of the ſaid late King Edward the Sixth to the ſame William then due were in Arrear and unpaid, the ſame William the ninth Day of October in the ſixth Year aboveſaid came to the aforeſaid 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances by the Space of one Hour next before the ſetting of the Sun the ſame Day, and there remained, to demand the aforeſaid twenty Shillings, until the ſetting of the Sun the ſame Day, and no one on behalf of the aforeſaid John, before the ſetting of the Sun the ſame Day, then there came to pay the aforeſaid twenty Shillings to the ſame William, by Reaſon whereof the ſame William, the twelfth Day of October in the ſixth Year of the late King Edward the Sixth aboveſaid into the ſame 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances re-entered, and was thereof ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee, until the aforeſaid John, the aforeſaid tenth Day of November in the ſecond and third Years aboveſaid, the Cloſe of the ſaid William in the aforeſaid 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances in the aforeſaid ſecond Plea ſpecified broke, and his Graſs to the Value, &c. there lately growing with the Cattle aforeſaid eat up, trod down, and conſumed, againſt the Peace of the Lord the King and Lady the Queen now, as he above complains againſt him. And this he is ready to verify. Wherefore for that the aforeſaid John above confeſſes the Treſpaſs done in the aforeſaid 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances, the ſame William prays Judgment, and his Damages by reaſon of the ſaid Treſpaſs to be adjudged to him, &c.

Rejoinder. Defendant demurs to one Part of the Plaintiff's Replication.

And the aforeſaid John, as to the aforeſaid firſt Plea of the aforeſaid William to the aforeſaid Treſpaſs in the aforeſaid Tenements with the Appurtenances in the ſame Plea ſpecified above by replying pleaded, ſays that the ſaid Plea is inſufficient in Law for the ſaid William to have or maintain his Action aforeſaid thereof againſt him, and that he has no Neceſſity, nor is by the Law of the Land bound to anſwer that Plea ſo pleaded, and this he is ready to verify, wherefore for want of a ſufficient Replication of the aforeſaid William in this behalf, the ſame John prays Judgment, and that the aforeſaid William may be precluded from having his Action aforeſaid ſaid thereof againſt him. And as to the aforeſaid ſecond Plea of the aforeſaid William to the Treſpaſs aforeſaid done in the aforeſaid 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances in the ſame Plea ſpecified above by replying pleaded, the ſame John ſays that the aforeſaid ninth Day of October in the ſixth Year aboveſaid he came upon the aforeſaid 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances by the Space of one Hour next before the ſetting of the Sun the ſame Day, and there remained all the ſame Hour, ready to offer the ſaid Rent, and no one on behalf of the aforeſaid William during that Space of Time came there to receive the ſaid Rent of the ſame John, and of this he puts himſelf upon the Country. Offers Iſſue to the reſt.

And the aforeſaid William, as to the aforeſaid firſt Plea of the ſaid John above by replying pleaded to the aforeſaid Treſpaſs in the aforeſaid Tenements with the Appurtenances in the ſame Plea ſpecified ſays, for that he has above pleaded a ſufficient Replication to the Bar of the aforeſaid John, and is ready to verify the Matter contained in the ſame Replication, which ſaid Matter the aforeſaid John does not deny, nor thereunto in any wiſe anſwer, but wholly refuſes to admit that Averment, as before prays Judgment and his Damages by reaſon of the ſaid Treſpaſs done in the ſame Tenements with the Appurtenances in the ſame Plea ſpecified to be adjudged to him, &c. Surrejoinder. Plaintiff joins in Demurrer on the firſt Part of his Replication. And as to the aforeſaid ſecond Plea of the aforeſaid John above by rejoining pleaded to the aforeſaid Treſpaſs in the aforeſaid 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances, the ſame William ſays, that the ſaid Plea in Manner and Form aforeſaid by rejoining pleaded is inſufficient in Law to preclude the ſaid William from having his Action aforeſaid thereof againſt the aforeſaid John, and that he has no Neceſſity, nor is by the Law of the Land bound to anſwer the ſaid Plea in Manner and Form aforeſaid pleaded, and this he is ready to verify, wherefore for Want of a ſufficient Rejoinder of the aforeſaid John in that behalf, the ſame William as before prays Judgment, and his Damages by reaſon of the Treſpaſs in the ſame 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances to be adjudged to him, &c. Demurs to the Defendant's Rejoinder.

And the aforeſaid John, for that he has above pleaded a ſufficient Rejoinder in Bar to the Replication of the aforeſaid William to the Treſpaſs aforeſaid done in the aforeſaid 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances, and is ready to verify the Matter contained in the ſame Rejoinder, which ſaid Matter the aforeſaid William does not deny, nor thereunto in any wiſe anſwer, but wholly refuſes to admit the ſaid Averment, as before prays Judgment, and that the aforeſaid William may be precluded from having his Action aforeſaid thereof againſt him, &c. And becauſe the Juſtices here will adviſe of and upon the Premiſſes before they give Judgment thereon, Day is given to the Parties aforeſaid here until from the Day of Eaſter in fifteen Days, to hear their Judgment thereon, becauſe the Juſtices here thereof not yet, &c. Defendant joins in Demurrer.

It appears by the Record before recited, that William Hill has ſued an Action of Treſpaſs againſt John Grange for breaking of his Cloſes and Houſe, and ſpoiling his Graſs at Great Dunmow in the County of Eſſex, the 10th Day of November in the 2d and 3d Years of the Reign of the ſaid King and Queen. Grange ſays, that the Cloſes, Houſe, and Place where, &c. were one Meſſuage and 100 Acres of Land to the ſame Houſe appertaining from Time beyond the Memory of Man, and 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances in Great Dunmow aforeſaid. And as to the Treſpaſs in the Meſſuage and Land, he pleads in Bar, that long before the Treſpaſs ſuppoſed one Henry Pate was thereof ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee, and being ſo ſeized, the 6th Day of Auguſt in the 2d & 3d Years of the Reign of the King and Queen that now are, by an Indenture bearing the ſame Date, leaſed the ſaid Meſſuage with all the Lands to the ſame Meſſuage appertaining, to the ſaid John Grange, to have and to hold from the ſame 6th Day of Auguſt until the End and Term of 20 Years thence next enſuing, yielding for the ſame annually to the ſaid Henry Pate and his Heirs 40*s.* to be paid by equal Portions at two Terms of the Year, viz. at the Feaſts of the Annunciation of our Lady, and of St. Michael the Archangel; by Force of which Leaſe he entered into the ſaid Meſſuage and 100 Acres of Land, and ſo as to this Part juſtifies the Treſpaſs, &c. and gives Colour to the Plaintiff, &c. And as to the Treſpaſs in the ſaid 100 Acres of Meadow, he pleads in Bar thereof a Leaſe for 60 Years made to him the 6th Day of November in the 24th Year of the Reign of King Henry 8. by Deed indented by the Abbot of Tiltey in the County of Eſſex with the Aſſent of the Convent, yielding for the ſame yearly to the ſaid Abbot and his Succeſſors 40*s.* to be paid by equal Portions at the Feaſts of the Annunciation of our Lady, and of St. Michael the Archangel, by Force of which he juſtifies, and gives Colour to the Plaintiff. The Plaintiff by his Replication as to the Meſſuage and the 100 Acres of Land, confeſſing that Pate was thereof ſeized, and leaſed ut ſupra, yielding ut ſupra, further ſays, that the Leaſe was made upon Condition that if and whenſoever the ſaid Rent was in Arrear in part or in all after either of the ſaid Feaſts at which it ought to be paid by the Space of ten Days during the ſaid Term, that then and ſo often it ſhould be lawful for the ſaid Henry Pate and his Heirs into the ſaid Tenements to re-enter, and them to have again as in his former Eſtate, by Force of which the Defendant entered; and he ſhews that after this, viz. the firſt Day of September next following the Leaſe, the ſaid Pate by Deed granted to the Plaintiff his Reverſion and Intereſt of and in the ſaid Meſſuage and 100 Acres of Land, to which the Defendant attorned. And ſays further, that becauſe 20*s.* of the ſaid Rent for half a Year ending at the Feaſt of St. Michael the Archangel in the 2d & 3d Years of the Reign of the ſaid King and Queen due to the ſaid Plaintiff were in Arrear and unpaid, the ſame Plaintiff the 9th Day of October in the ſaid 2d & 3d Years came to the ſaid Meſſuage, and entered into the ſame one whole Hour next before the ſetting of the Sun the ſame Day, and there remained all that Hour demanding the ſame 20*s.* until the ſetting of the Sun the ſame Day, and none on behalf of the ſaid John Grange, before the ſetting of the Sun the ſame Day, then there came to pay the ſaid 20*s.* to him the ſaid William Hill, wherefore the ſaid Plaintiff the 12th Day of the ſame October entered into the ſaid Meſſu-

Meſſuage and Land, and was thereof ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee until the Deſendant did the Treſpaſs. And as to the laſt Plea in Bar, the Plaintiff confeſſing the Leaſe of the Meadow made to the Defendant ut ſupra, further ſays by Replication, that the Leaſe was upon Condition that if the Rent was in Arrear in part or in all by the Space of ten Days after either of the ſaid Feaſts on which (as is ſaid before) it ought to be paid, that then it ſhould be lawful for the ſaid Abbot and his Succeſſors into the ſaid 100 Acres of Meadow to re-enter, &c. And he ſhews further, that by force of the Leaſe Grange entered, and that in the 28th Year of the Reign of King Henry 8. the ſaid Abbot with the Aſſent of the Convent by Deed enrolled ſurrendered the ſaid 100 Acres of Meadow to the ſaid King Henry 8. in Fee, and that the Reverſion thereof deſcended from him to King Edward 6. who in the 2d Year of his Reign granted the Reverſion of the ſaid 100 Acres of Meadow to the Plaintiff and his Heirs; and he ſhews that becauſe 20*s.* of the ſaid Rent for half a Year ending at the Feaſt of St. Michael the Archangel in the 6th Year of the Reign of the ſaid King Edward 6. being due to the Plaintiff were in Arrear and unpaid, he came to the Meadow the 9th Day of October in the ſaid 6th Year, and demanded the ſame in Manner and Form as before is pleaded for the other Rent, and none came on behalf of the ſaid Grange to pay it, &c. for which Reaſon on the 12th Day of October in the ſaid 6th Year he entered into the ſaid 100 Acres of Meadow, and was thereof ſeized until the Defendant did the Treſpaſs, &c. And the Defendant by his Rejoinder as to the firſt of the Pleas demurs in Law, and as to the ſecond Plea he ſays, that the ſaid 9th Day of October in the ſaid 6th Year he came upon the ſaid 100 Acres of Meadow by the Space of one Hour next before the ſetting of the Sun the ſame Day, and tarried there all the ſame Hour ready to offer the ſaid Rent, and none came on behalf of the Plaintiff during the ſame Space of Time to receive the ſaid Rent of him the ſaid John Grange. And upon this Plea the Plaintiff by his Surrejoinder has demurred in Law.

And upon theſe Demurrers Prideaux, Bendloe, Catline, and Brown Serjeants argued on the Part of the Defendant. And Walpole, Raſtal, and Morgan argued on the Part of the Plaintiff. And upon theſe two Demurrers five Points were moved and debated as well at the Bench as at the Bar. The firſt was if Land might be appurtenant to a Meſſuage, or not. For the Defendant as to the Land has pleaded in Bar a Leaſe of the Meſſuage with all the Lands appertaining to the ſame Meſſuage, intending thereby that Land may be appurtenant to a Meſſuage, and that ſo it ſhall paſs to him. And if the Law be ſo that Land may not be appurtenant to a Meſſuage, then, it was ſaid, his Plea in Bar was not ſufficient to convey the Land by the Leaſe to him. And hereupon it was debated whether or no Land might be appurtenant to a Meſſuage. And by thoſe who argued for the Plaintiff it was ſaid that it might not; for a Meſſuage and Land are two diſtinct and ſeveral Things, and of diſtinct and ſeveral Natures, for a Meſſuage is a Place to dwell in, and Land is a Place to plow and ſow, and therefore they ſerve to ſeveral Purpoſes, and are in ſeveral Degrees, in which Caſe the one may not be appurtenant to the other, no more than one Liberty may be appurtenant to another Liberty of another Nature. [a] For a Warren cannot be appurtenant to a Leet, [b] nor a Leet to a Hundred, and the like, becauſe they are of ſeveral Natures, [c] nor can one Office be appurtenant to another, [d] nor one Land to another. [e] But Things which are of a compound Nature may have divers Things appurtenant to them, or Parcel of them. [f] As a Manor is compounded of ſeveral Things, and may contain Land, Meadow, Paſture, Wood, and Rent, and divers other Things, all of which are contained in the groſs Name. And ſo a Knight's-Fee contains divers Things, and Land and Meadow may be Parcel of it. [g] And ſo a Foreſt may be Parcel of an Honour, [h] and a Monaſtery contains the Houſe and the Lands and Poſſeſſions thereof. [i] In like Manner a Caſtle contains Land, for in the Caſtle of Dover, and in ſome other Caſtles there are four or five Acres of Land, and Land may be Parcel of the Caſtle. And a Town may contain Land and Paſture, for the Houſes may be decayed, and Land or Paſture be where the Houſes ſtood; and other like compound Words may contain Land, Meadow, Paſture, and divers other ſimple Things. And ſo may general Words, [k] as an Oxgang of Land, [l] or a Yard Land, or a Bovate of Land may contain in them Land, Meadow, Paſture, Wood, and divers other ſimple Things. But a Meſſuage is not a compound Word, nor a general Word, but it is a ſimple Word conſiſting of a ſpecial Thing, and containing nothing but one Particular, and therefore it cannot have Land Parcel of or appurtenant to it. [m] And therefore in 27. H. 6. where one pleaded a Deed of Feoffment of a Meſſuage, and ſaid that an Acre of Land paſſed as Parcel thereof, this was not received, becauſe (as it is there held) Land cannot be Parcel of or appurtenant to a Meſſuage. And, Sir, no more ſhall paſs by the Grant of a Meſſuage than ſhall be recovered by Demand of a Meſſuage. And in a Præcipe quod reddat nothing ſhall be recovered by the Demand of a Meſſuage but the Meſſuage itſelf, and no Land ſhall be recovered by ſuch Demand; and therefore it was ſaid that Land which is a diſtinct Thing from a Meſſuage cannot be appurtenant to a Meſſuage, and conſequently might not paſs by the Leaſe, ut ſupra. And ſeveral other Things were ſaid to enforce this Point.

On the other hand it was argued at the Bar for the Defendant, and admitted [n] that by a Feoffment or Grant of a Meſſuage with the Appurtenances Land might not paſs, for no more ſhall paſs thereby than the Edifices adjoining or appertaining to the Houſe, and all other Things that are incident or belonging to it; but Land is another Sort of a Thing which cannot paſs by ſuch Words, for it cannot be intended to appertain to a Meſſuage. But in the Caſe here the Defendant in his Bar has averred [o] that the 100 Acres of Land have from Time beyond the Memory of Man

been appurtenant to the ſaid Meſſuage, and has pleaded that the Leaſe was made to him of the Meſſuage, and of all the * Lands appertaining to the ſame Meſſuage, by which Averment and Demiſe the Land may well paſs by the Leaſe; for the Averment ſhews to the Court the perpetual Continuance of the Land to the Meſſuage, and if it has been always uſed and continued with the Meſſuage, it may well paſs by the ſaid Words with the Meſſuage. For a Manor and the Things that appertain to it is conſtituted by Continuance of Time, for when the Inhabitants in a certain Meſſuage have always occupied ſuch particular Land, Meadow, and Paſture, and have had ſuch Rents and Services paid to them, and have preſented to the Advowſon of a Church, and ſuch particular Men have always done Service to the Inhabitants of ſuch Meſſuage, and have always demeaned themſelves as their Villains, this Continuance is what conſtitutes it a Manor, and makes the Advowſon to be appurtenant, and the Villains to be regardant to the ſame. [a] And ſo it is held in 1. H. 7. that Land may be appurtenant to an Office of Foreſterſhip, and it is there held by all the Juſtices that Land may appertain to an Office, as to the Office of Warden of the Fleet, and the like, and the Reaſon is, becauſe they who have had the Office have always had the Land, ſo that Continuance is the Cauſe thereof. And the Maſter of the Rolls has a Houſe appertaining to his Office. And ſeveral Farms are appurtenant to the Office of Warden of the Caſtle of Colcheſter, by Reaſon of Uſage and Continuance. [b] And ſo one Office may be appurtenant to another, as here in this Court the Cuſtos Brevium gives one of the Offices of the Prothonotaries, [c] and ſo the Judges, in reſpect of their Offices, have the Diſpoſal of certain Offices by virtue of Uſe and Continuance. And if Uſage and Continuance can make one Office of one Degree to be appurtenant to another Office of another Degree, and if it can make Land of one Condition to be appurtenant to an Office which is of another Condition, as well may it make Land which is of one Degree to be appurtenant to a Meſſuage which is of another Degree. But perhaps it may be ſaid that in the Caſes alledged the Office is greater than the Land, or the one Office is more worthy than the other, and as ſuch the leſſer may be appurtenant to the greater; Sir, ſo it is in our Caſe, [d] for the Meſſuage is more worthy than the Land, [e] and every Thing is placed in Writs in the Regiſter it is demanded before Land, [f] and Land before Meadow, and Meadow before Paſture, et ſic de ſimilibus. And every Thing is ranked and diſtinguiſhed in Dignity, for which Reaſon a Meſſuage is placed before Land, and Land before Meadow, and nity according to its neceſſary Uſe in Life, for to have a Houſe for a Man to dwell in, and to defend his Body againſt the Coldneſs and Inclemency of the Air is more neceſſary than to have Land to plow for Bread; and to have Land for Bread is again more neceſſary than to have Meadow for Hay for Cattle; and to have Meadow for Hay which will ſerve the whole Year is more neceſſary than Paſture, et ſic de ſimilibus; wherefore a Meſſuage is more worthy than Land. [g] And if a Man makes a Leaſe of a Meſſuage and of Land together, rendring Rent, and for Default of Payment a Re-entry, he ought to demand the Rent at the Meſſuage, and not upon the Land, becauſe the Meſſuage is more worthy. And if the Meſſuage is more worthy than the Land, then is it conſonant to Reaſon that the Land being the leſs may appertain to the Meſſuage being greater, and the leſs worthy may be appendant to the more worthy. [h] And in 3. Ed. 3. in the Eire of Northampton in Aſſize of Mort-danceſtor, the Tenant pleaded in Bar a Releaſe as to three Acres of Land, and three Rods of Meadow, and the Deed was read, which was, three Acres of Land cum pertinentiis, and the Demandant prayed Judgment and Seizin of the Meadow, becauſe the Tenant had confeſſed his Action by his Anſwer, for that the Deed was no Bar as to the Meadow, and it was there awarded that he ſhould anſwer over, becauſe Meadow may be appurtenant to Land. And if Meadow may be appurtenant to Land, a fortiore Land may be appurtenant to a Meſſuage, for as Land is more worthy than Meadow,, ſo is a Meſſuage more worthy than Land. [i] And in 5. H. 7. in Treſpaſs a Recovery was pleaded of a Caſtle, whereof an Acre, Part of the Land where the Treſpaſs was ſuppoſed to be done, was parcel, and Exception was taken to it, for that Land cannot be parcel of a Caſtle, et non allocatur, and it is there ſaid that if Land which is held by Caſtle-guard eſcheats, it ſhall be parcel of the Caſtle. And as Land may be parcel of a Caſtle, which is but a ſtronger Kind of a Houſe, ſo may it be parcel of or appurtenant to a Meſſuage. And, Sir, it is the common Courſe throughout the Realm, when a Man has a Mind to make a Leaſe of a Meſſuage and of all the Land uſed with it or lying to it, to make it by the Name of the Meſſuage and of all the Lands appertaining to the ſame, and if in ſuch Caſes it has always been the Intent of the Parties in every Country that the Land uſed with a Meſſuage ſhall paſs by a Contract made in ſuch Words, [k] it is the Office of the Judges to know the common Language of the People, and their common Method of ſpeaking, and to adjudge upon them according to the common Courſe and Underſtanding of the Country. [l] For he that takes a Leaſe for Years of a Farm in the North calls it Tack, and in Lancaſhire it is called Fermholt, and in Eſſex, Wyke, and if he takes it by the ſaid Words uſed in ſuch particular Country, it would be unreaſonable that he ſhould loſe his Farm becauſe he has not made Uſe of a Language which is not uſed in his own Country, but the Judge ought to enquire and know the Senſe of Words, and adjudge upon the ſame according to common Uſage, for elſe he would create great Confuſion and Diſturbance in the Public-weal. So here foraſmuch as it is in a Manner a univerſal Order and Form to make Leaſes by ſuch Words, and the Intent of the Leſſor and Leſſee is to have all the Lands paſs which were uſed to be occupied with the Meſſuage, and to that Purpoſe they uſed the Words, and ſo are they vulgarly uſed by the common People of every Country, for this Reaſon the Judges ought to adjudge accordingly, and that the Lands ſhall paſs by the Leaſe. And Brown ſaid, if any one will ſay that Land cannot be appurtenant to a Meſſuage, and that the Word (appurtenant) in our Caſe cannot have any Senſe in the Law, from thence it follows that for the Repugnancy it is utterly void, and then it is all one as if theſe Words (to the ſame Meſſuage appertaining) had been left out, in which Caſe the Sentence is thus, viz. that Pate had demiſed to Strange the ſaid Meſſuage with all the Lands, and then the Leſſee ſhall have all the Lands of the Leſſor in any Place within the Realm, and the Bar ſhall be good to convey the Lands to the Leſſee, for there is a Difference where a Man limits a Thing which is void and does not appear, and where he limits a Thing which is void and does appear. [a] As if a Man makes a Leaſe to one of all his Lands in Dale which he has by Deſcent on the Part of his Mother, and he has no Lands in Dale by Deſcent on the Part of his Mother, if the Leſſor has other Lands in Dale the Leſſee ſhall not have them. [b] But if he had leaſed to him all his Lands in Dale which he has by Deſcent from his Son, there the Leſſee ſhall have all his Lands in Dale by whatſoever Title he has them, becauſe there it appears that he could not have Lands by Deſcent from his Son by the Courſe of Law, but in the other Caſe it might be that he had Lands by Deſcent on the Part of his Mother, in which Caſe he was deceived in Fact, whereas in the other he was deceived in Law. And ſo in our Caſe if Land cannot be appurtenant to a Meſſuage the Party is deceived in the Law, and the Words (appertaining to the Meſſuage) are void, from whence it follows that the Land ſhall paſs, and ſo the Bar is good. And many other Caſes were mentioned at the Bar on this Head.

And afterwards all the four Juſtices argued, all whoſe Arguments I heard except the Beginning of Staunford's Argument, and what I here affirm touching the Beginning thereof, I report upon the credible Information of others. And they all argued to the ſame Intent, and agreed unanimouſly [c] that Land could not be appurtenant to a Meſſuage in the true Senſe of the Word appertaining. [d] For a Meſſuage conſiſts of two Things, viz. the Land and the Edifice, and before it was built upon it was but Land, [e] and then Land cannot be appurtenant to Land. For a Thing of one Subſtance cannot be appurtenant to a Thing of the ſame Subſtance, and when it is built upon then it is a Meſſuage, and conſiſts in a great Meaſure of the ſame Subſtance that it did before. But the Name is changed entirely, ſo that if the Building afterwards falls to Decay, yet it ſhall not have the Name of Land, altho' there be nothing in Subſtance left but the Land, but it ſhall be called a Toft, which is a Name ſuperior to Land, and inferior to Meſſuage, and this Name it ſhall have in reſpect of the Dignity which it once bore. But the chief Subſtance of a Meſſuage is the Soil, altho' the Superſtructure and the Soil are one entire Thing; and then nothing can be appurtenant to another but where it is of another Nature and Subſtance. [g] And therefore it was ſaid there is hæreditas corporata and hæreditas incorporata. Hæreditas corporata is ſuch as Meſſuage, Land, Meadow, Paſture, Rents, and the like, which have Subſtance in them, and may continue always. But hæreditas incorporata is ſuch as Advowſons, Villains, Ways, Commons, Courts, Piſcaries, and the like, which are or may be appendant or appurtenant to Inheritances corporate; and ſuch Things are and may be termed Appurtenances. And Bracton calls the Things which are Inheritances corporate Things corporeal; and after he has treated of corporeal Things he has a Chapter concerning Appurtenances, wherein he treats of ſuch Things corporeal, ut ſupra, which are belonging, appendant, or appurtenant to Things incorporeal. [h] But a groſs Name may contain divers Things corporeal, as a [i] Manor, [k] Monaſtery, Rectory, Caſtle, Honour, and the like, are Things compound, and may contain all together Meſſuages, Lands, Meadows, Wood, and ſuch like, and a Thing corporeal may be parcel of a groſs Name, and of a Thing compound, [l] but one ſimple Thing corporeal cannot be parcel of or appurtenant to another ſimple Thing corporeal. As Land cannot be parcel of or appurtenant to Meadow, nor Meadow parcel of or appurtenant to Paſture, nor Paſture parcel of or appurtenant to Wood, nor can Land be parcel of or appurtenant to a Meſſuage, nor to any other Thing corporeal, for theſe Things are but ſimple Things, which of themſelves connot receive or include other Things corporeal. But an [m] Advowſon, [n] Way, [o] Eſtovers, and ſuch like Things incorporeal may well enough be appurtenant to a Meſſuage, and ſo is the Difference. And altho' it is here pleaded that the Land has been appurtenant to the Meſſuage from Time immemorial, this Pleading or Averment is to no Purpoſe or Effect. For a Man cannot aver that to be appurtenant which the Law will not ſuffer to be appurtenant, tho' Uſage and Continuance may make a Law in ſuch Things as ſtand with and are conſonant to Reaſon. But in Things which are againſt Law and Reaſon, there Uſage and Continuance is to no Purpoſe, as here the Pleading or Averment that the Land has been always appurtenant to the Meſſuage is an Averment that that is Law which is not Law. And all the four Juſtices agreed unanimouſly that the Averment or Pleading that the Land has been always appurtenant to the Meſſuage is not good here, and alſo they agreed that Land might not be appurtenant to a Meſſuage in the true and proper Definition of an Appurtenance. But yet all of them (except Brown Juſtice, who did not ſpeak to this Point) agreed that the Word (appertaining to the Meſſuage) ſhall be here taken in the Senſe of [p] uſually occupied with the Meſſuage, or lying to the Meſſuage, for when appertaining is placed with the ſaid other Words, it cannot have it's proper Signification, as it is ſaid before, and therefore it ſhall have ſuch Signification as was intended between the Parties, or elſe it ſhall be void, which it muſt not be by any Means, for it is commonly uſed in the Senſe of occupied with, or lying to, ut ſupra, and being placed with the ſaid other Words it cannot be taken in any other Senſe, nor can it have any other Meaning than is agreeable with Law, and foraſmuch as it is commonly uſed in that Senſe, it is the [q] Office of Judges to take and expound the Words, which common People uſe to expreſs their Meaning, according to their Meaning, and therefore it ſhall be here taken not according to the true Definition of it, becauſe that does not ſtand with the Matter, but in ſuch Senſe as the Party intended it. [r] As where a Leaſe was made for Life, and after his Death that the Lands redibunt to a Stranger, it was taken as remanebunt, for to that Purpoſe the Party there uſed it, and therefore by 18. Ed. 3. it ſhall be taken by way of a Remainder. taken for a Remainder, cauſa qua ſupra. And many other Caſes were put where a Word ſhall be taken out of its natural Senſe, according to the Senſe intended by the Party. So the Word (appertaining) ſhall be here taken as occupied, uſed, or lying with or to the Meſſuage, and in ſuch Senſe the Averment may ſerve to declare that the Land has been always occupied with, or has lain to the Meſſuage, and the Demiſe ſhall ſerve to convey the ſame to the Defendant, and ſo the Bar is good notwithſtanding the ſaid Exception. And that was the Opinion of the ſaid three Juſtices. And afterwards it was adjudged accordingly, as appears hereafter by the Judgment. The ſecond Point moved and argued was touching that Part of the Plaintiff's Replication, where he ſhews Matter to avoid the Leaſe made to the Defendant by Pate, by Reaſon of a Re entry given him for the Rent not paid at Michaelmas. And it was ſaid by thoſe who argued for the Defendant, that no Rent was due to him, or payable at Michaelmas. For the Rent is reſerved at two Terms, viz. at the Feaſts of the Annunciation of our Lady, and of St. Michael the Arch-angel, to be paid by equal Portions. And foraſmuch as it is reſerved to be paid at the Annunciation, &c. and at Michaelmas, the Annunciation ought to be the firſt Day of Payment, for it is firſt named, and when he has reſerved it at two Terms, viz. ut antea, this viz. is a Demonſtration how he will have it, and he ſhall not have it in any other Manner, for by the (viz.) he has explained his Intent. And ſince it is to be paid at the Annunciation, and at Michaelmas, the firſt Payment ought to be made at the Annunciation, [b] for Reſervations ſhall always be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt the Reſervors, becauſe it is their Words and Act, and therefore they ſhall not be extended beyond the Words. [c] As if two Tenants in common make a Leaſe reſerving a Rent of 20 s. and a Horſe, they ſhall have but 20 s. and one Horſe. [d] But if two Tenants in Common grant a Rent of 20 s. and a Horſe out of their Land, the Grantee ſhall have of each of them a Horſe and 20 s. for it ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt the Grantors, and therefore ſhall enure as ſeveral Grants; and in the other Caſe it ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt the Reſervors, and therefore they ſhall have but one Rent of 20 s. and one Horſe; ſo that a Reſervation ſhall not be taken nor extended beyond the Words. [e] And in 10. Ed. 4. it is held that if a Man makes a Leaſe of two Acres for Life, yielding to him and his Heirs 12 d. for the one, and yielding to him 12 d. for the other, his Heir ſhall not have the 12 d. laſt reſerved, becauſe it was not reſerved to him and his Heirs. [f] And yet if he had reſerved the Rent without ſaying more, the Law would have given it to him and his Heirs, but when he ſays reſerving to him, the Law will not aid him beyond the Extent of the Words. So here he has expreſſed by the (viz.) how he would have the Rent, and he has appointed the Feaſt of the Annunciation to be the firſt Feaſt, and therefore he ſhall not have Michaelmas Rent. And, Sir, there is good Reaſon to ſay that he ſhall not have Michaelmas Rent, becauſe the Leaſe commenced but in Auguſt before, and if he ſhould pay the Michaelmas Rent, he ſhould pay Rent for half a Year when had only Occupation of it for eight Weeks, which would be unreaſonable, for which Cauſe he ſhall not have the Rent at Michaelmas, and conſequently he ſhall not enter for the Non-payment of it. And ſo the Replication is not ſufficient in this Point. And of this Opinion was Saunders Juſtice alſo.

E Contra for the Plaintiff.

[g] On the other Hand it was argued by the Counſel for the Plaintiff, and by Staunford Juſtice, and Brook Chief Juſtice, (for Brown Juſtice did not argue upon this Point, but omitted it entirely in his Argument) that the Rent was payable at the firſt Michaelmas. For the Words of the Reſervation are, yielding annually to the ſaid Pate, &c. which Word (annually) ought to be fulfilled. And if the Rent ſhould not be paid at the firſt Michaelmas, then it would not be paid annually, for the firſt Year he would only have Rent for half a Year, becauſe the firſt Year commences in Auguſt and ends in Auguſt, and if he ſhould have no more than Rent for half a Year at the Feaſt of the Annunciation of our Lady, then he would not have annually 40 s. for he would only have 20 s. the firſt Year, and therefore in the Conſtruction of the ſaid Words of Reſervation a Man ought to conſider the firſt Part and the laſt, and every Word, and to make every Word effectual, and none to loſe it's Force, and here this Word (annually) would not have it's Effect and Operation if it ſhould be taken in ſuch Manner as the Counſel for the Defendant have argued. And as to the Reaſon that has been given why he ſhould not have the Rent at Michaelmas, viz. becauſe the Leaſe only commenced eight Weeks before Michaelmas, and therefore it ſeems to be intended that he ſhould not pay Rent for half a Year at Michaelmas, becauſe he could not have half a Year's Profit before Michaelmas, Sir, this is eaſily anſwered, for altho' he has not a whole half Year's Profit before the firſt Day of Payment, yet the laſt Year he ſhall have the Profit of the Land from the Feaſt of the Annunciation of our Lady until the ſixth Day of Auguſt without paying any Thing, ſo that what he wants in the firſt Year he ſhall have in the laſt; but according to the Argument for the Defendant he ſhall have half a Year's Profit without paying any Thing for it. For by that Argument he ſhall pay nothing for the Occupation of the Land from the Commencement of the Leaſe, viz. from the ſixth Day of Auguſt until the firſt Michaelmas, nor the laſt Year from the Feaſt of the Annunciation of our Lady until the End of the Leaſe, viz. the ſixth Day of Auguſt, ſo that he ſhould have half a Year's Profit without paying any Rent for it; and there is no Sort of Reaſon to induce us to believe that the Intent of the Parties was ſuch. And as to the (viz.) Sir, when it is reſerved at two Terms of the Year, viz. at the Feaſts of the Annunciation of our Lady, and of St. Michael the Archangel, this (viz.) which is (that is to ſay) is of no other Effect but to ſhew what Terms, and it is intended to expreſs and point out the Days of Payment rather than the Commencement of the Reſervation; ſo that the (viz.) and the Intent of the Parties to make the Payment commence at Michaelmas ſtand well together. And the Caſe

Case in 10. Ed. 3. was often cited upon this Point, * where one brought a Writ of Annuity bearing Date the 15th Day of July Anno 9. Edw. 3. against the Abbot of Osney, and counted upon a Deed bearing Date in February Anno 1. Ed. 3. by which 40 s. a Year were granted to him for his Life, payable at two Terms of the Year, viz. the one Moiety at the Feast of St. Michael, and the other Moiety at the Annunciation of our Lady, of which Annuity he was seized, and demanded 16 l. for the Arrears of eight Years, and the Defendant took Exception to the Count, because he had declared that he was seized, and further had shewed that the Annuity was in Arrear for eight Years before the Date of the Writ, and there was but eight Years in all, to which it is there answered that between the Date of the Deed of Grant and the Date of the Writ there are eight Years and one Day of Payment, accounting the first Day of Payment at the Feast of the Annunciation of our Lady next after the Grant, and it is there debated whether or no the first Payment should commence at the Feast of the Annunciation of our Lady, inasmuch as the Feast of St. Michael is there first named after the viz. and after it was debated it was said to the Defendant by Stone for the Court, "Answer if you will, we will not abate the Count." Which Case, it was said, is all one with our Case, saving that the Case there is by Grant, and in our Case it is by Reservation, but that makes no Difference, for they are both the same as to the misplacing of the Feast, and that too after the viz. and so in Effect and Substance there is no Difference between them; wherefore in our Case he shall have the Rent at Michaelmas, and then the Replication is good to avoid the Lease notwithstanding this Exception. And at last the Court agreed to this, and it was ruled accordingly, as appears hereafter by the Judgment.

3. Point. At what Time Rent ought to be demanded by the Lessor, and tendred by the Lessee.

The third Point which was argued was touching the Time of the Demand of the Rent by the Plaintiff being the Person in Reversion, and the Time of the Attendance of the Lessee upon the Land. For as to the Entry into the Messuage and Land, the Plaintiff, in order to avoid the Lease thereof, has shewn that the Rent was in Arrear, and that he came to the Messuage the last Day an Hour before Sun set, and tarried there that whole Hour demanding the Rent, and none was ready there to pay it, and he has not shewn that he was there before that Time. And that he was there at the Time alledged by him, and tarried there until Sun set, is confessed by the Defendant by his Demurrer upon the Plea, by which Demurrer he [a] confesses all Matters of Fact well and materially alledged to be true. And as to the Meadow, whereas the Plaintiff has alledged a Demand of the Rent ut supra, and that none came on Behalf of the Defendant to pay it, the Defendant has alledged that he was upon the Meadow an Hour next before Sun set the last Day, and tarried there that whole Hour ready to offer the said Rent, and none came on Behalf of the Plaintiff during the same Space of Time to receive it, by which Pleading it is confessed that the Defendant was there the last Hour, for the Plaintiff has said that he was there, and that none came on Behalf of the Defendant, and the Defendant has said that he was there, and that none came on Behalf of the Plaintiff, which Pleas are sufficient to make two Issues without [b] a Traverse; for there are two Affirmatives and two Negatives, the first Affirmative is in that the Plaintiff says he was there, and the Negative to that is in that the Defendant says none came on Behalf of the Plaintiff; the other Negative is in that the Plaintiff says none came on Behalf of the Defendant, and the other Affirmative is in the Defendant's Answer thereto, viz. that he was there, and so the Defendant has offered him two Issues which are but one Matter in Effect, and when the Plaintiff does not maintain these Issues, but demurs, by which he confesses what the Defendant says to be true, therein he confesses that the Defendant was there the last instant, and also he confesses that he himself was not there; and therefore whether or no the Defendant's being there the said last Hour of the last Day, and continuing there until the last Instant of the same Day be sufficient for him being the Lessee, without saying that he was there from the rising of the Sun until the setting thereof the same Day, or for a greater Time than the last Hour, and whether the said last Instant of the last Day be sufficient for the Plaintiff being in the Reversion to make both the Demands or not, was debated, and both these Matters were made one Point and so argued.

Curia.

And as to this, all the Justices unanimously held and agreed [c] that the last Instant of the last of the said ten Days only was effectual enough as well for the Lessee to be ready to pay it, as for the Plaintiff being in the Reversion to demand it. And it is sufficient for him to demand it the last Instant, without making any Demand the first Day when it was due; tho', they said, formerly some were of Opinion that the Demand ought to be made both the last Instant of the first Day when it was due, and the last Instant of the Time limited after it also, but that, they said, is not requisite, for the last Instant of the last Time is sufficient for the Lessor and the Lessee also. And the Condition is, that if the Rent be in Arrear after either of the said Feasts on which it ought to be paid by the Space of ten Days, that then he shall enter, &c. in which Case the Lessee has Liberty during all the ten Days to pay the Rent, so that if it is in Arrear nine Days and a half he is in no Danger, for nine Days and a half are not ten Days, and if it is in Arrear nine Days and three Parts of the tenth Day, yet it is not in Arrear by the Space of ten Days. And therefore the Lessee is in no Danger as long as he has Time to come to pay it, and he has Time to come to pay it as long as the tenth Day continues, and the Day continues until the Night comes, and when the Night is come then his Time is elapsed. [d] So that his Time to pay it continues until the Seperation of Day and Night, which is the Time when the Day ends and the Night begins. And therefore the Lessee is not bound to be there before the last Instant of the last Time, and so (it was said) the Opinion is held in [e] 6. H. 7. And forasmuch as the Lessee is not bound to pay the Rent until the last Instant of the last Day, the Lessor is not bound to be there to demand it before the last instant of the last Day, for he is not bound to demand the Rent until the other is bound to pay it, for if the Law should force him to do it sooner than the other is forced to pay it, it would be contrary to all Reason, which our Law is not, for it will not compel a Man to make a vain Demand or Request for a Thing which the other is not bound to

to pay. [a] Yet the Law will compel him to make a Demand, or elſe he ſhall never enter, as it is held in 20. H. 6. And if the Leſſor does not come to the Land the laſt Inſtant of the laſt Day to demand the Rent, and the Leſſee be not there to pay it, the Leſſor ſhall never enter, becauſe he ought to do the firſt Act, that is, make a Demand. And ſuch Demand ſhall not be until the other is bound to pay it, and that he is not before the laſt Inſtant of the laſt Day, which Time only is material for them both. And according to this it was ruled, as it appears hereafter by the Judgment. And in arguing this Point Robert Brook Chief Juſtice and Saunders ſaid, [b] that if the Rent reſerved was a great Sum, as 500 l. or 1000 l. the Leſſee ought to be ready to pay it ſuch a convenient Time before Sun ſet in which the Money might be counted, for the Leſſor is not bound to count it in the Night after Sun-ſet, for if ſo, he might be deceived, for Brook ſaid, qui ambulat in tenebris neſcit quo vadit.

4 Point.

The fourth Point upon theſe Demurrers was, whether or no the Entry of the Plaintiff into the Meſſuage and Land for the Condition broken be lawful by virtue of the Statute of 32. H. 8. cap. 34. ſince the Reverſion did not come to the Hands of King Henry 8. Which Point is no other than this, viz. if the Grantee of a Reverſion of a common Perſon may enter for a Condition broken, or not. And as to this Matter it was ſaid by thoſe who argued for the Defendant, that the Cauſe of making the Statute ought firſt to be conſidered, and then the Words of the Statute. And if the Words fully anſwer the Cauſe of making the Statute, and remedy the Miſchief intended, and have a direct Tendency thereto in their Senſe and Meaning, then in ſuch Senſe they ought to be taken, and in no other. And (it was ſaid) both the Words and the Cauſe of making the Act agree in the ſame Thing, viz. that the Grantees of common Perſons ſhall not take Advantage of Conditions by the Statute. For the Statute was made in the 32 Year of Henry 8. and before that Time by Reaſon of the Statute of 27. H. 8. and of 31. H. 8. concerning the Diſſolution of Monaſteries, and by the Surrender and Suppreſſion of Abbies or otherwiſe, a great Part of the Lands of this Realm was come into the Hands of King Henry 8. who by free Gift, Exchange, Bargain and Sale, or otherwiſe, had parted with, and was very likely afterwards to part with a great Part thereof. And by the Statute of 31. H. 8. the King himſelf might take Advantage of Conditions, but not his Patentees. And that was conſidered by the Parliament of 32. H. 8. and taken as a general Miſchief, ſeeing that by the Gifts, Exchanges, and Sales of the ſaid King the Cauſe was become and likely to become in a Manner general, and to touch all the King's Subjects, for Remedy whereof only the Statute of 32. H. 8. was made. So that this particular Cauſe, viz. where a common Perſon had made a particular Eſtate upon Condition, and afterwards had granted the Reverſion to another, was not the Cauſe of making this Statute, for that was not a common Caſe, but a particular one which happened very rarely, and which the Parliament at no Time has gone about to amend; but the general Cauſe which laſt happened by the Diſſolution of Abbies was the great Grief, and the only Cauſe of making this Statute, and not the particular Cauſe above mentioned. And the Intent of the Makers of the Act was only to redreſs this great Miſchief, and according to ſuch Intent they have uſed the Words in the Act. For in the Preamble of the Act after it is recited that divers Leaſes have been made upon Condition, and that no Stranger may take Advantage of them by the Common Law, it is ſaid further, by Reaſon whereof as well all Grantees of Reverſions, as alſo all Grantees and Patentees of the King of ſundry Manors, Lordſhips, &c. late belonging to Monaſteries, and other religious Houſes come to the Hands of the King ſince the fourth Day of February in the 27th Year of his Reign, be excluded to have any Entry or Action againſt the Leſſees, which the Leſſors before that Time might have had againſt the ſame Leſſees for the Breach of any Condition or Covenant, &c. And the Act ſaith further, be it therefore enacted, &c. By which Words in the Preamble it is to be noted that the Makers of the Act did not intend to make a general Act for all Grantees of Reverſions, becauſe they have reſtrained the general Words by the Words after, for the general Words, viz. as well all Grantees of Reverſions are reſtrained by the Limitation of the Thing afterwards, viz. of ſundry Manors, Lordſhips, &c. late belonging to Monaſteries and other religious Houſes come to the Hands of the King, &c. and by putting theſe together, the Words are, all Grantees of Reverſions of ſundry Manors, Lordſhips, &c. late belonging to Monaſteries and other Religious Houſes come to the Hands of the King. So that theſe Words (of ſundry Manors, Lordſhips, &c.) come after the general Words, and after the ſpecial Words alſo, that is, after (as well all Grantees of Reverſions) and alſo after (all Grantees and Patentees of the King). And ſo the Sentence is, viz. as well all Grantees of Reverſions of ſundry Manors, Lordſhips, &c. late belonging to Monaſteries and other religious Houſes come to the Hands of the King, as all Grantees and Patentees of the King of ſundry Manors, Lordſhips, &c. late belonging to Monaſteries and other religious Houſes come to the Hands of the King, &c. So that the Generality of the firſt Words is ſtraitned by the Thing to which it has Relation; as if a Man will give or leaſe to one all his Lands, if he ſtop there the Grantee ſhall have all his Lands which he has in England, but if if he ſays further, lying in Dale, there the Generality is ſtraitned by the other Words added after, and if he ſays ſtill further, parcel of his Manor of Dale, there he has reſtrained the general Words ſtill more, ſo that the Grantee ſhall have no Lands but ſuch as lie in Dale and are parcel of his Manor of Dale. Therefore this Word (al') contains perhaps but little, and is determined by the Things to which it is referred. So here the general Words (as well all Grantees of Reverſions)

Whether the Grantee of a Reverſion of a common Perſon may enter for a Condition broken by the Statute of 32. H. 8. cap. 34.

For the Defendant.

ſions) are referred to Lands belonging to religious Houſes, and yet not to all of them, but to ſuch only as came to the Hands of the King after the 4th Day of February in the 27 Year of his Reign. But perhaps it may be objected to the contrary that the Words cannot be ſo referred, for there are two Clauſes, viz. as well all Grantees of Reverſions, and as all Grantees and Patentees of the King, and if they ſhould both be referred to the Words after, viz. of Lands belonging to Monaſteries, then one Part of the Sentence would contain as much as both the Parts of the Sentence, and of Courſe the one would be void; Sir, in Anſwer to this it may be ſaid that it is not ſo, for the one Clauſe contains the Patentees of the King, that is, them to whom the Patents are made, and the other contains their Grantees. As if the King had granted by his Letters Patent to J. S. the Reverſion of ſuch Lands ut ſupra, J. S. is contained in the ſaid laſt Part of the Sentence. And if J. S. had granted it over to J. K. J. K. ſhould be contained in the firſt Part of the Sentence. So that the one Part contains that which the other does not contain, and it is all one ſame Land. Wherefore by the Preamble the Generality of the Words is reſtrained, as it is ſhewn before. And the Words declare that it was not the Intent of the Legiſlature to make a general Act for all Grantees of all Reverſions: And this is alſo declared by the Words (be it therefore enacted) which Word (therefore) is a relative Word, and has Relation to the Matter preceding, which is the Miſchief recited, viz. that the Grantees and Patentees of the King of the Reverſions of Lands belonging to religious Houſes, and their Grantees or Aſſigns might not enter for Conditions broken. So that it gives us juſt Cauſe to affirm that they intended only to make the Act particular for certain Reverſions, that is, thoſe recited in the Statute, and not for all. Then as to the Purview it goes in like Manner, and is divided into two Parts. The firſt Part comes under the Word (as well) and the ſecond comes under the Word (as alſo). And the firſt Part which comes under the (as well) gives Remedy to thoſe who had or ſhould have any Gift or Grant of King Henry 8. by his Letters Patent of any Lordſhips, Manors, &c. or of any Reverſions of the ſame which belonged to any of the ſaid Monaſteries or other religious Houſes come to the Hands of the ſaid King after the ſaid 4th Day of February, or which at any Time before belonged to any Perſons, and afterwards came to the Hands of the ſaid King. So that this Part of the Purview extends only to the Patentees of the King, that is, thoſe named in the Patents, and who had Patents of the Reverſions of Land in one of theſe two Degrees, viz. of Land which was belonging to religious Houſes, and which came to the Hands of the King after the ſaid 4th Day of February, or which belonged to other Perſons, and afterwards came to the Hands of the ſaid King. And in ſuch Degree the Plaintiff here is not, for he is not the Patentee of King Henry 8. nor did this Land or the Reverſion thereof ever come to the Hands of the ſaid King, for Pate made the Leaſe, and afterwards granted the Reverſion to the Plaintiff, and ſo that Part of the Purview does not give Remedy to the Plaintiff, but the Plaintiff is quite left out of it. Then as to the ſecond Part of the Purview, viz. that which comes under the (as alſo), it extends to two Manner of Perſons. The firſt Sort of Perſons are other Patentees of the King not named before, for the Patentees of the King ſpecified in the firſt Part of the Sentence were Patentees of the Land which belonged to religious Houſes, and after the ſaid 4th Day of February came to the Hands of King Henry 8. or they were Patentees of Land which belonged to others, and afterwards came to the Hands of the ſaid King. But if the Land did not come from others to the King, then was it out of the Words, as the Land which was the ancient Land of the Crown, and the Land which he had by Deſcent, as the Land of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, and ſuch other Lands, the Patentees whereof are now contained in this ſecond Part of the Sentence, who were not contained in the firſt Part. The ſecond Sort of Perſons contained in the ſecond Part of the Purview are all other Perſons being Grantees or Aſſignees to or by any other Perſon or Perſons than the ſaid King; and it is to be obſerved that the Act does not ſpeak nor ſhew of what Lands, and therefore they ſhall be intended Grantees or Aſſignees of the Lands ſpoken of before, and not of any other Land, for if it ſhould be of any other Land, then it ought to be expreſly ſaid ſo, or elſe it ſhall not be intended of any other Land not mentioned in the Act, eſpecially where the Sentence is good and perfect in meaning the ſame Land before mentioned, as it is here. For the firſt Part of the Purview contains only the Perſons named in the Letters Patent of the Lands ſpoken of in the ſaid firſt Branch. And if they that are named in the Letters Patent have granted over the Reverſions, theſe ſecond Grantees are not contained in the firſt Part of the Purview, and therefore this laſt Part of the Purview was inſerted, in which Caſe the Grantees or Aſſignees of the Patentees are contained. And ſo the firſt Part contains thoſe named in the Patents, and this laſt Part of the ſecond Part contains their Grantees, and the Grantees of thoſe Grantees, but the whole is intended of the Lands before ſpecified, viz. of the Lands which belonged to religious Houſes, and after the ſaid 4th Day of February came to the Hands of the ſaid King, or which belonged to ſome other, and afterwards came to the King's Hands. And the Sentence ſo taken agrees with the Preamble, and as a further Proof hereof the Concluſion of the Purview may be conſidered, which ordains that the Grantees of Reverſions ſhall enter for Conditions broken, as the Leſſors might, in like Manner and Form as if the Reverſion of ſuch Tenements had not come to the Hands of the ſaid King, or as the ſaid King his Heirs or Succeſſors might have had or enjoyed in certain Caſes by virtue of an Act made at the firſt Seſſion of this Parliament, if no ſuch Letters Pa- tent had been made by his Highneſs. Which Words (if there had been any great Doubt in the Conſtruction of the Senſe of the ſaid former Words) would have cleared up the ſame. For if the Grantees ſhall enter for Conditions broken, as the Leſſors might, in like Manner as if the Reverſion had not come to the Hands of the King, and no otherwiſe, from thence it follows that the Makers of the Act intended ſuch Lands as once came to the King's Hands, and no other, for the ſaid Words are Part of the Sentence, and the whole Sentence is protracted and continued unto them, and they are added as the Concluſion of both the Parts of the Sentence, and make all the reſt of the Sentence to be clearly taken as it is ſhewn before. [a] And hereupon the Caſe in 4. H. 7. was alledged, where a Man was attainted by Parliament of High Treaſon, and the King granted his Lands to another, and this Attainder was afterwards repealed by Parliament, and the Perſon attainted was reſtored, and the Words of the Act were that the Attainder ſhould be void as if no Act had been made, and afterwards the Patentee brought an Action of Treſpaſs againſt him that was reſtored for Treſpaſs done upon the Land before the Reſtitution, and by the better Opinion the Action does not lie, for the firſt Act was repealed as if it had not been made, and if the Act had not been made the Party had not been a Treſpaſſor, and therefore the (as if) there being the Concluſion of the Act declares the Manner of the Repeal, and the manifeſt Intent of the Makers of the Act. So in our Caſe the Words (in like Manner and Form) being the Concluſion of the Act, declare fully how he ſhall enter, and manifeſtly ſhew the Intent of the Makers of the Act to be, to provide for ſuch Reverſions as came to the Hands of King Henry 8. And as to the laſt Branch of the Act, it was ſaid, perhaps it will be ſaid that it is a general Branch, and provides that all Farmers and Leſſees of Lands whatſoever ſhall have their Advantage and Remedy for any Covenant broken, or other Agreement expreſſed in the Indenture of Leaſe againſt the Grantees of Reverſions whatever, as they might againſt the Leſſors, in which Caſe perhaps it will be ſaid that the Makers of the Act would not have been ſo unreaſonable as to give Leſſees their Remedy for the Covenants and Agreements of the Leſſors to be performed by them in the Reverſion, if they had not intended that they in the Reverſion ſhould have their Remedy and Advantage againſt the Leſſees for Conditions broken, for to give Remedy to the Leſſees againſt the Grantees of the Reverſion, and not to the Grantees of the Reverſion againſt the Leſſees, would be great Injuſtice, which is not to be preſumed in a Parliament: To this, Sir, it may be anſwered that none ought to preſume any ſuch Thing, and therefore we ought to intend the Remedy as large for the Grantees of the Reverſion againſt the Leſſees, as for the Leſſees againſt the Grantees. But in taking it ſo we ought not to conſtrue the laſt Clauſe to extend to all Leſſees againſt all Grantees of Reverſions, but only againſt thoſe Grantees who came in by the King, and againſt their Grantees and Aſſignees, for the Remedy is given againſt thoſe Perſons who have or ſhall have any Gift or Grant of the King, or of any other Perſon or Perſons of any Reverſions of the ſame Lands. And the Lands recited in the Clauſe are general, viz. all Farmers of Lordſhips and Manors, &c. and therefore it ſhall be intended of ſuch Lands whereof Mention is made in the reſt of the Statute before, and theſe Words in the ſaid Clauſe, viz. (of any other Perſon or Perſons) may well be taken as before, viz. thoſe who come under the Letters Patent, and not named in the Letters Patent. And ſo every Part of the Statute ſtands together, and this laſt Clauſe aids them whom the firſt Part of the Act puniſhes, and therein it is agreeable with Reaſon. And ſo the Plaintiff being the Grantee of Pate is not within the Purview of the Act, and conſequently his Entry upon the Defendant for the Condition broken is not lawful.

[a] T. 4. H. 7. 10. pl. 6. Fitz. Bar. 134. Bro. Parlement 41. Relation 44. Treſpaſs 270. Lane 37.

On the contrary it was argued by the ſaid Serjeants who were of Counſel for the Plaintiff, and alſo by all the Juſtices. And they ſaid that altho' a great Part of the Lands in this Kingdom within the Time limited came into the King's Hands, and a great Part thereof was granted over, and it was very likely that the ſame would be afterwards granted over to the King's Subjects, yet the Impediment which hindered their Entry was in the Law in ſuffering the Miſchief. And altho' the Miſchief was greater where a greater Quantity of Land came, yet it was a Miſchief before, and the Miſchief was but one altho' many happened in it. For altho' a Miſchief is greater by the Multitude of Things that happen under that Miſchief, or by the Multitude of People that are affected by it, yet it is a Miſchief in each of the Things divided by itſelf from the other, and to each Perſon diſtinct from the other; and it is the Part of them that took it in hand to reform the Miſchief, and to reform it in every Part, and utterly to extirpate and root it out, ſo that neither many nor any Individual ſhould be grieved by it. And accordingly the Parliament have done here, [b] for they intended to deliver all other Grantees of Reverſions of Lands from this Miſchief, as well as the Grantees of ſuch Reverſions as came to the King's Hands. And to this Purpoſe they have ordered their Words, which (altho' they are obſcure) yet they tend moſt plainly to illuſtrate this Point. And therefore in the Beginning the Act recites, whereas before this Time divers as well temporal as eccleſiaſtical and religious Perſons have made ſundry Leaſes, &c. Which Word (temporal) implies that they did not take the Miſchief to be only in Reverſions of Lands of religious Houſes, (for ſuch are included in eccleſiaſtical Perſons) but they took the Miſchief alſo to be in Leaſes made by temporal Perſons whatever, who are the others whom the Counſel for the Defendant here conſidered in the Preamble. And in the ſame Light the Preamble goes on, and after reciting the Miſchief in that Strangers to Conditions ſhould not take Advantage of them by the

E contra for the Plaintiff.

[b] M. 4. M. 1. Bro. Entry congeable 139. B. N. C. § 483. Co. Litt. 215. a.

the Common Law, ſays further, by Reaſon whereof as well all Grantees of Reverſions, as alſo all Grantees and Patentees of the King of ſundry Manors, Lordſhips, &c. late belonging to Monaſteries, and other religious Houſes come to the Hands of the King after the 4th Day of February, &c. have been excluded of their Entry againſt the Leſſees, &c. Which Words (Grantees of Reverſions) are general and abſolute, and not referred to Manors and Lands after mentioned; but Grantees and Patentees of the King are referred to Manors and Lands after mentioned, and the other Words, viz. all Grantees of Reverſions are ſpoken abſolutely, and contain thoſe that are ſpecified in the Argument for the Defendant, as alſo all others, for they contain all Grantees of Reverſions of all other Lands not named in the Act. And ſo this Word (all) is a general Word, than which there is none more large and extenſive, and it is not reſtrained by Relation to the Sentence after. And where the Words are further, be it therefore enacted, this Word (therefore) has Relation to the Cauſes before written, and that is, to the Miſchief which reſtrained all Grantees of Reverſions, as well as Grantees and Patentees of the King and their Aſſignees. And then as to the Purview, the laſt Part of the Sentence coming under the (as alſo) that is to ſay, all other Perſons being Grantees or Aſſignees to or by our Sovereign Lord the King, or to or by any other Perſon or Perſons than the King's Highneſs, contains generally all Grantees of Reverſions of all Lands. For when it ſays all other Perſons being Grantees or Aſſignees, there is no Word more large or general than (all) to expreſs the Generality. And as to the Concluſion of the Sentence, viz. in like Manner and Form, &c. theſe are not Words of Neceſſity, for the Sentence is full and perfect before them, and they are but Words of Abundance affirmatively put without any Effect. And if they were of Effect, yet may they well be referred to Grantees or Patentees of the King only; for ſince it gives the Benefit of Re-entry as well to all Grantees of Reverſions as to Patentees of the King, in like Manner and Form as if the Reverſion of ſuch Lands had not come to the Hands of the King, the Words (in like Manner and Form) cannot be referred to all, but to parcel, that is, to ſuch parcel with which it agrees, viz. to Grantees of Reverſions of Lands which are come to the King's Hands, and ſo the Concluſion and the Premiſſes of the Act ſtand together without Contradiction. And that the reſt of the Act before is general to all Grantees of Reverſions, it is ſtrongly proved by the laſt Branch which gives to all Farmers and Leſſees of Lordſhips, Manors, &c. their Remedy againſt all Perſons who have any Gift or Grant of the King, or of any other Perſon or Perſons of the Reverſion of the ſame Manors, Lands, &c. Which Branch may not be expounded to be but particular, for it gives Remedy to all Farmers of Lordſhips, Manors, &c. againſt thoſe who have any Grant of the Reverſion of them, and does not ſpeak of any particular Lands. But when the Act gives the Remedy to all Farmers of Lands, that is to be underſtood of all Lands whatſoever, and may not be applied to any particular ones. And forasmuch as Remedy is given to all Leſſees of all Lands againſt the Grantees of the Reverſion, thereby it is to be collected that the Legiſlature intended to give Remedy to all that are in the Reverſion againſt the Leſſees, for elſe there would not be any Equity or Reaſon in the Act. And ſo this Branch explains the reſt of the Act, and it is as reaſonable to take the laſt Part of the Act to explain the firſt, as the firſt Part to explain the laſt. And therefore the Plaintiff being the Grantee of the Reverſion of Pate ſhall take Benefit of the Act, and may enter upon the Defendant for the Condition broken. To which the whole Court agreed, and it was afterwards ruled accordingly, as hereafter appears by the Judgment.

Curia.

5 Point. Whether the Patentee of a Reverſion of King Edward 6. may enter for a Condition broken by the Statute of 32 H. 8. cap. 34. under the Words Patentee of the King.

The fifth Point alſo aroſe upon this Statute; and it was whether or no the Plaintiff, being the Grantee of King Edward 6. of the Reverſion of the Meadow which belonged to the Monaſtery, might by the ſaid Statute enter into the Meadow for the Condition broken, as well as he might if he had been the Grantee of King Henry 8. And it was ſaid by thoſe who argued for the Defendant that he might not. For in the Preamble and in the Purview, and in the End of the Act Mention is made only of the Patentees of the then King, which was King Henry 8. and no Mention is made of his Heirs or Succeſſors, and therefore the Act ſhall not here extend to the Patentees of his Heirs or Succeſſors. [a] And yet it was ſaid, when a Thing is ſpoken by the King, or names the King, in many Caſes it ſhall contain his Heirs or Succeſſors. As the Statute de religioſis, which prohibits Mortmain, ſays, that if the Lords immediate don't enter within the Time limited, we will immediately take ſuch Lands and Tenements into our Hands, and thereof infeoff others. So the Statute of Magna Charta cap. 17. ſays, No Sheriffs, &c. nor any other our Bailiffs ſhall hold Pleas of our Crown. And the Statute de Prerogativa Regis, which in ſome Points is a Statute, and in ſome not, ſays, the Lord the King ſhall have, &c. And ſo the Statute of Magna Charta cap. 11. which ſays, Common Pleas ſhall not follow our Court, &c. and ſuch other Statutes, whereof there are an infinite Number that ſpeak of the King only, have been expounded to extend to his Heirs and Succeſſors, to give them Benefit or to bind them. And the Reaſon is becauſe the King is a Body politic, [b] and when an Act ſays, the King, or ſays, we, it is always ſpoken in the Perſon of him as King, and in his Dignity Royal, and therefore it includes all thoſe who enjoy his Function. But in our Caſe here the Act firſt names the King in the Preamble with a ſpecial Mark of Diſtinction adapted to himſelf, for it ſays, as alſo all Grantees and Patentees of the King our Sovereign Lord, of ſundry Manors, &c. late belonging to Monaſteries, &c. come to the Hands of the King's Majeſty after the 4th Day of February in the 27 Year of his Reign; where this Addition of the Monaſteries coming to his Hands is as ſtrong and lively a Demonſtration of King Henry 8. as if a Man was to point him out with his Finger. And then in the Purview afterwards, when it ſpeaks of the Patentees of the King, it ſays in every Place, our ſaid ſovereign Lord, and concludes in like Manner and Form as if the Reverſion of ſuch Lands had not come to the Hands of our ſaid ſovereign Lord, which Word (ſaid) has Relation to the King beforementioned, and that is, the King to whoſe Hands the Monaſteries came after the 4th Day of February in the 27th Year of his Reign, which is King Henry 8. only. So that the ſaid Words added to the King mentioned in the Act is a Demonſtration what King is intended. As the Statute of 37. H. 8. which gave Power to the King to make Commiſſions to Perſons by him to be appointed to enter upon Chauntries, Colleges, and ſuch like, and them to ſuppreſs to his own Uſe, did not extend to his Heirs or Succeſſors, for if it had, it would have been in vain to have made a new Act in the 1. Edw. 6. for the Preamble and the reſt of the Words in the Act declare that it was the Intent of the Makers of the Act to give King Henry 8. alone the Power of ſuppreſſing them. So here the Words of the Act give every one good Cauſe to ſay that both the Words and Intent of the Act of 32. H. 8. extend to the Patentees of King Henry 8. but not to the Patentees of his Succeſſors. Wherefore the Patentees of King Edward 6. cannot be contained under the Patentees of the King mentioned in the Act. And perhaps it will be ſaid, that although the Patentees of King Edward 6. might not be contained in the Words aforeſaid, yet King Edward may be contained in the other Words, viz. in the Clauſe coming in the Purview under the (as alſo) concerning other Perſons; for (perhaps it may be ſaid) King Edward was another Perſon, and as ſuch contained under thoſe Words, and ſo ſince the Meadow in our Caſe was belonging to a Monaſtery, the Plaintiff is here by that Means enabled to take Benefit of the Condition by Deed. In Anſwer to this it may be ſaid, that King Edward 6. cannot be contained under the Words (other Perſons), for thoſe Words contain only a Body natural, and the King, as King, is a Body politic, which cannot be contained under the Term of a Body natural. Alſo in the ſaid Clauſe the Words are, as alſo all other Perſons being Grantees or Aſſignees to or by our ſaid Sovereign Lord the King, or to or by any other Perſon or Perſons than the King's Highneſs, &c. ſo that in the Clauſe of other Perſons the King is excepted. And, Sir, this Exception extends to the Heirs and Succeſſors of the King, for the Heir or Succeſſor of the King is King, and this Term (Highneſs) may well be added to him, for Grace, Majeſty, Highneſs, and ſuch like Terms, may be well applied to the Predeceſſor, or to the Heir or Succeſſor of the King, and in ſpeaking now they may properly enough be applied to him who ſhall be Succeſſor; wherefore the Heir or Succeſſor ſhall be excepted. But if the Act had ſaid, "others than the King's Highneſs aforeſaid," then the ſaid King Henry 8. only had been excepted, but as it is, it is general, and may extend to the Heir, and ſo out of the general Words (other Perſons) King Edward 6. was excepted. And therefore his Patentee in our Caſe is not within the Purview of the Act, and conſequently might not enter into the Meadow for the Condition broken.

On the contrary it was argued by the ſaid Serjeants on the Part of the Plaintiff, and alſo by Staunford, Saunders, and Brown Juſtices, [a] that the Patentees of King Edward 6. are contained within the Letter of the Act, and that in the firſt Part of the Purview coming under the (as well) viz. as well all Perſons who ſhall have any Gift or Grant of our ſaid Sovereign Lord, by his Letters-patent, of any Lordſhips, &c. which Words (our ſaid ſovereign Lord) may well be referred to the Heir or Succeſſor of the King. For the Heir or Succeſſor may have the Term of ſovereign Lord, and may be called our ſovereign Lord, and although the Word (ſaid) is referred to King Henry 8. yet is it referred to him, as King. [b] And King is a Name of Continuance, which ſhall always endure as the Head and Governor of the People (as the Law preſumes) as long as the People continue, quia ubi non eſt gubernator, ibi diſſipabitur populus, and in this Name the King never dies. [c] And therefore the Death of him who is the King is in Law called the Demiſe of the King, and not the Death of the King, becauſe thereby he demiſes the Kingdom to another, and lets another enjoy the Function, ſo that the Dignity always continues. And then when the Act gives Remedy to the Patentees of our ſaid Sovereign Lord, and Henry 8. is mentioned before to be the King, and ſo the Relation is to him, as King, he as King never dies, although his natural Body dies, but the King in which Name it has Relation to him does ever continue, and therefore (and the rather becauſe it ſeems to be the Intent of the Legiſlature by the reſt of the Act to have the Purview continue always) the Word (King) ſhall extend to King Edward 6. And the Statute of Purveyors made in 25. Ed. 3. has the Style thus, that the Parliament was ſummoned in the Year of his Reign of England the 25. and of France the 12. and contains, that our ſaid ſovereign Lord by the Aſſent, &c. hath ordained and eſtabliſhed the Things under-written; and when the Treaſons are there recited, the Act ſays, and of ſuch Treaſon the Forfeiture of the Eſcheats belongs to our ſovereign Lord, as well of the Lands and Tenements holden of others as of himſelf; and although the Act there and in divers other Places ſays, our ſovereign Lord, and the King is before named in whoſe Reign it was of England the 25. and of France the 12. which was only King Edward 3. yet it extends to all his Heirs and Succeſſors, and ſo has it ever been put in uſe. From whence we may ſee that where a Thing is referred to a particular King by the Name of King, in that Caſe it may extend to his Heirs or Succeſſors, where the Intent was that the Thing ſhould always continue. And ſo here the Patentees of King Edward 6. ſhall be contained under the ſaid Words; and herein the ſaid three Juſtices agreed. And ſome held, that if King Edward 6. ſhould not be contained in the Words ſupra, he ſhould be contained in the other Words, viz. (to or by any other Perſon or Perſons) well enough, and then the Exception in the Act ſhould extend to Henry 8. only. And Staunford Juſtice ſaid, that if he was not within the Words, he ſhould not be within the Equity of it, becauſe the Condition is to take away another's Entry, which ſhall be taken ſtrictly.

As the Statute of Pernors of Profits by which it was enacted that a Recovery in Aſſize againſt the Ceſtuy que uſe ſhould be good, was not extended by Equity to a Writ of Entry, becauſe it was to take away the Land of another, viz. the Land of the Feoffee. But Saunders was againſt him in this Point, becauſe the Act was pro bono publico.

Brook C. J. Brook Chief Juſtice argued that the Words (the Patentees of our ſaid ſovereign Lord) could not extend to the Patentees of other Kings than Henry 8. and that the other Clauſe could not contain the Patentees of Edward 6. and that the Patentees of Edward 6. were out of the Words of the ſaid Statute. But he argued that the Patentees of Edward 6. ſhould be taken within the Equity of the ſaid Statute. For, he ſaid, the Statute was made to remedy the Miſchief generally, and there is no Reaſon to ſay that the Patentees of King Henry 8. and the Grantees of all other Perſons ſhould be aided by this Statute, and not the Patentees of the Heirs or Succeſſors of the King, for it is to be preſumed that Henry 8. would permit a great Part of the Lands to deſcend to his Heirs or Succeſſors, who might be ſuppoſed to part with ſome of them; and therefore there is no Colour of Reaſon to induce one to believe but that the Makers of the Act intended to aid the Patentees of the Heirs of Henry 8. as well as his own Patentees, and to make the Proviſion general, and not to ſuffer a Miſchief in equal Degree to remain unremedied. And therefore he ſaid, we may frequently ſee that where an Act is made to remedy any Miſchief, there in order to aid Things in like Degree one Action has been uſed for another, one Thing for another, one Place for another, and one Perſon for another, notwithſtanding that in ſome Caſes the Thing is penal. [a] As an Action of Waſt is given by the Statute of Glouceſter, cap. 5. againſt a Termor for Years, yet by Equity of that Statute a Man ſhall have it againſt him that holds but for half a Year, notwithſtanding the Statute is penal. [b] So the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 11. gives an Action againſt the Goaler that lets out of his Priſon him that is committed to his Cuſtody for Arrears of Account, yet if one is committed to him upon Condemnation in Debt, and he lets him go at large, the Party ſhall have an Action of Debt againſt him, notwithſtanding the Act is penal. [c] So the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 3. gives an Action of cui in vita to the Wife after the Coverture diſſolved by Death, yet if the Coverture is diſſolved by Divorce, the Wife ſhall have a cui ante divortium by the Equity of the Statute. [d] And a Formedon is given againſt the Pernors of Profits by the Statute of 1. H. 7. cap. 1. yet to execute a Remainder in Tail a Man may have a ſcire facias out of a Fine againſt the Pernor of the Profits by the Equity of the ſaid Statute. So one Thing ſhall be taken for another, [e] as an Elegit medietatem terræ ſuæ is given by the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 18. yet by an Elegit he ſhall have the Moiety of a Rent, by the Equity thereof. So one place ſhall ſometimes be taken for another, [f] as the Statute of Magna Charta cap. 12. gives Power to Juſtices of Aſſize to adjourn Aſſizes before them in itinere ſuo, or for difficulty, into the common Bench, yet it is adjudged in 12. H. 4. that by the Equity of the ſaid Statute they may adjourn Aſſizes before themſelves at Weſtminſter, which is out of their Circuit. So is it with regard to Perſons, [g] as an Action of Treſpaſs de bonis aſportatis is given to Executors by the Statute of 4. Ed. 3. cap. 7. yet an Adminiſtrator ſhall have the Writ by Equity thereof. [h] So one of the Adminiſtrators coming by Diſtreſs ſhall anſwer by the Equity of the Statute of 9. Ed. 3. cap. 3. which gives it againſt Executors. [i] So the Statute of Glouceſter cap. 3. ordains that the Iſſue of the Wife ſhall not be barred by the Warranty of the Huſband Tenant by the Curteſy except with Aſſets, yet it is extended by Equity to the Iſſue in Tail. [k] So where the Statute of Weſtminſter 1. cap. 39. ſays that it ſhall be a good Counterplea of Voucher to ſay that his Anceſtor whoſe Heir he is was the firſt that abated, by the Equity of the Statute it is taken a good Counterplea to ſay that his Predeceſſor was the firſt that abated. [l] So the Statute de donis conditionalibus ordains, that they, to whom the Land was given under ſuch Condition, ſhall have no Power to alien the Land ſo given, but that it ſhall remain to the Iſſue of them to whom it was given, after their Death, yet by the Equity of the Statute it is taken that the Iſſue of the Donees are reſtrained from aliening the Tenements to Bar their Iſſues, as well as the Donees to whom the Lands were firſt given. [m] So the Statute of 25. Ed. 3. ordains, that the Incumbent ſhall anſwer to the King's Title; and by the Equity of that Statute he ſhall plead againſt all other Patrons. To conclude then, foraſmuch as Statutes heretofore made to relieve [n] the people from Trouble, and to take away Miſchief from them, have been enlarged by Equity, ſo that one Action has been extended further, or taken for another, one Thing for another, one Place for another, and one Perſon for another, why then ſhould not our Act here, being made to relieve the People from Trouble, and to remove a Miſchief that was ſuffered at the common Law, be extended by Equity? And why ſhall not the Iſſue of the King be taken within the Equity of this Statute which ſpeaks of his Father, as well as the Iſſue of the Donee in Tail is taken within the Equity of the Statute de donis conditionalibus which ſpeaks of his Father? And why ſhall not all Perſons, Patentees of the Son of the King, be contained within the Equity of this Statute which was made touching the Patentees of the King, and their Termors, as well as all perſons are contained within the Equity of the ſaid Statute of 25. Ed. 3. made touching the King and his Incumbents? Certainly (he ſaid) I know no Reaſon to the contrary, for there is as great Cauſe for them to be taken within the Equity of the ſaid Statute, as there are in the other Caſes. For which reaſon it ſeems to me that Hill the Patentee of King Edward 6. may have Benefit of this Statute. And he held that he ſhould be aided by the Equity, and not by the Words, and the other three Juſtices held that he ſhould be aided by the Words of the Act. So that all of them agreed in this, that the Plaintiff was within the Remedy of the Statute.

And afterwards becauſe the Plea in Bar as to the Treſpaſs in the Meſſuage and Land was good, and the Replication of the Plaintiff as to it was good, and gave the Plaintiff good Cauſe to avoid the Leaſe made of the Meſſuage and Land, and was a ſufficient Title to the Plaintiff for the Cauſes ſhewn, and the Defendant demurred without Cauſe, it was awarded that the Plaintiff, as to the Treſpaſs in the Meſſuage and Land, ſhould recover his Damages. And as to the Treſpaſs in the Meadow, foraſmuch as the Plea in Bar as to it was good, and the Replication was ſufficient to avoid the Leaſe thereof for the Cauſe ſhewn, and the Rejoinder was a ſufficient Rejoinder to the Replication, and contained a direct Traverſe to the Matter of the Replication, viz. to the Plaintiff's being upon the Land, and to the Demand of the Rent alledged by the Replication, as is before recited in the Argument, and foraſmuch as the Plaintiff by his Surrejoinder demurred in Law where he ought not to have done ſo, becauſe the Traverſe was ſufficient, but he ought to have joined Iſſue, for that his Replication was traverſed, as is ſhewn before in the Argument, and by that Demurrer he refuſed the Iſſue which was receivable, for this Reaſon it was awarded that the Plaintiff, as to the Treſpaſs in the Meadow, ſhould be barred, which Judgment was as follows.

The reſt of the Record.

At which Day here came as well the aforeſaid William Hill, as the aforeſaid John Grange by their Attornies aforeſaid, and thereupon as well the aforeſaid Plea of the aforeſaid William above by replying pleaded to the Treſpaſs aforeſaid done in the aforeſaid Meſſuage and 100 Acres of Land with the Appurtenances, as the aforeſaid Plea of the aforeſaid John above by rejoining pleaded to the Treſpas aforeſaid done in the aforeſaid 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances, being ſeen, heard, and by the Juſtices here more fully underſtood, it ſeems to the ſame Juſtices here that the aforeſaid Plea of the aforeſaid William in Manner and Form aforeſaid above by replying pleaded to the Treſpaſs aforeſaid done in the aforeſaid Meſſuage and 100 Acres of Land with the Appurtenances is ſufficient in Law for the ſaid William to have and maintain his Action aforeſaid thereof againſt the aforeſaid John; wherefore it is conſidered that the ſame William do recover againſt the aforeſaid John his Damages by reaſon of the Treſpaſs aforeſaid done in the aforeſaid Meſſuage and 100 Acres of Land with the Appurtenances, beſides his Coſts and Expences by him about his Suit in this behalf laid out, to the Value of 100 s. and for the ſaid Coſts and Expences to the Value of five Marks with the Aſſent of the ſaid William by the Court here to be taxed: And that the aforeſaid John be taken, &c. And alſo it ſeems to the ſame Juſtices here, that the aforeſaid Plea of the aforeſaid John in Manner and Form aforeſaid above by rejoining pleaded to the Treſpaſs aforeſaid done in the aforeſaid 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances, is ſufficient in Law to preclude the ſaid William from having his Action aforeſaid thereof againſt the aforeſaid John; wherefore it is conſidered that the aforeſaid William, as to the aforeſaid Treſpaſs done in the aforeſaid 100 Acres of Meadow with the Appurtenances take nothing by his Writ aforeſaid thereof, but that he be in Mercy for his falſe Claim therein, and that the aforeſaid John go thereupon without Day, &c.

Judgment.

So note (Reader) that each of the five Points is warranted by the ſaid Judgment; for if the Bar had been inſufficient to convey the Land to the Defendant by the Leaſe made by Pate, then the Demurrer being upon the Replication made to the Bar, as it is here, the Judgment thereupon ought to be that the Parties ſhould replead as to the Land. †For if the Bar is naught, and a Replication is made to it, and a Demurrer is upon the Replication, the Judgment ought to be that they ſhall replead. But the Judgment here being that the Plaintiff ſhall recover, proves the Bar good, and the Replication alſo. And if the Replication is proved by the Judgment to be good, ergo the Judgment proves that Hill ſhall have the Rent due at Michaelmas for the Meſſuage and Land, and alſo that he ſhall enter for the condition broken. And the other Judgment, viz. as to the Meadow, proves the Replication good for the ſame, and proves that Hill being the Patentee of King Edward 6. may enter into it for the Condition broken, for if he might not, from thence it would follow that the Replication was inſufficient as to the Meadow. And if the Replication had been inſufficient as to the Meadow, ſeeing that the Demurrer as to it is upon the Rejoinder, the Judgment ought to have been that the Parties ſhould * replead, cauſâ qua ſupra. But foraſmuch as the Judgment is that the Plaintiff ſhall be barred, from thence it follows that the Replication as to the Meadow is taken by the Judgment to be good, and the Rejoinder alſo. And if the Rejoinder is good, from thence it follows that the Plaintiff's being upon the Land at the Time mentioned by him and his Demand is ſufficiently denied, and that the laſt Inſtant of the tenth Day is ſufficient for the Leſſee to be upon the Land to tender the Rent, although he was not there from the riſing until the ſetting of the Sun. Wherefore the Judgment warrants each of the five Points to be as it is before reported.

John Doe* and Richard Roe, which ſaid Bill follows in theſe Words. London, to wit, Richard Norwood complains of Thomas Norwood the elder and Edward Read, Executors of the laſt Will and Teſtament of Thomas Gray, in the Cuſtody of the Marſhal of the Marſhalſea of the Lord the King and Lady the Queen before the ſaid King and Queen being, for this, viz. whereas the aforeſaid Richard Norwood in the Lifetime of the aforeſaid Thomas Gray, viz. the ſecond Day of April in the ſecond and third Years of the Reign of the Lord the King and Lady the Queen now, at London in the Pariſh of St. Sepulchre in the Ward of Faringdon without, at the ſpecial Inſtance and Requeſt of the aforeſaid Thomas Gray had delivered to the ſame Thomas Gray to the proper Uſe and Behoof of him the ſaid Thomas Gray forty Shillings of lawful Money of England, the ſame Thomas Gray in conſideration of the ſame forty Shillings to him, as is aforeſaid, paid, then and there to the aforeſaid Richard Norwood faithfully promiſed and aſſumed upon himſelf that he the ſame Thomas Gray his Executors or Aſſigns ſhould well and faithfully deliver to the aforeſaid Richard Norwood at Ramſgate in the Iſle of Thanet in the County of Kent, ſixty Quarters of Wheat of full Meaſure in Manner and Form following, viz. on the Feaſt of St. Andrew the Apoſtle then next following, or within three Weeks next following after the ſame Feaſt, twenty and five Quarters of Wheat of full Meaſure, and on the Feaſt of the Annunciation of the bleſſed Virgin Mary then next following, other twenty-five Quarters of Wheat of full Meaſure, being the Reſidue of the aforeſaid fifty Quarters of Wheat, for thirty and three Pounds, ſix Shillings, and eight Pence of lawful Money of England to be paid to the ſame Thomas Gray his Executors or Aſſigns by the aforeſaid Richard Norwood in Manner and Form following, viz. ſixteen Pounds, thirteen Shillings, and four Pence thereof to be paid immediately after the Delivery of the aforeſaid twenty-five Quarters of Wheat to be delivered on the aforeſaid Feaſt of St. Andrew the Apoſtle, or within three Weeks next following after the ſame Feaſt, as is aforeſaid, and other ſixteen Pounds, thirteen thirteen Shillings, and four Pence, being the Reſidue thereof, to be paid immediately after the Delivery of the aforeſaid twenty-five Quarters of Wheat to be delivered on the aforeſaid Feaſt of the Annunciation of the bleſſed Virgin Mary, as is aforeſaid, nevertheleſs the aforeſaid Thomas Gray, who after the aforeſaid Feaſt of the Annunciation of the bleſſed Virgin Mary next after the Aſſumption aforeſaid was alive at the Pariſh of St. Peter in the Iſle of Thanet in the ſaid County of Kent, his Promiſe and Aſſumption aforeſaid not regarding, but the aforeſaid Richard Norwood in this Behalf craftily and ſubtily intending to deceive and defraud, the ſame fifty Quarters of Wheat, or any Part thereof to the aforeſaid Richard Norwood (although the ſame Thomas Gray was often requeſted thereunto by the aforeſaid Richard, and although the aforeſaid Richard at the ſeveral Times aforeſaid on which the ſaid Wheat ſhould have been delivered in Form aforeſaid was ready at Ramſgate aforeſaid to receive the ſaid Wheat ſo (as is aforeſaid) ſeverally to be delivered, and to pay to the ſame Thomas the aforeſaid ſeveral Sums of Money which he ought to pay immediately after the ſeveral Receipts of the Wheat aforeſaid in Form aforeſaid) hath not delivered, but the ſame to deliver to him wholly refuſed in his Lifetime; and alſo the aforeſaid Thomas Norwood and Edward Read, Executors of the Teſtament of the ſame Thomas Gray (to whoſe Hands the Money, Goods and Chattles which belonged to the aforeſaid Thomas Gray at the Time of his Death, ſufficient to ſatisfy as well all the Debts which the ſame Thomas Gray owed to any Perſon or Perſons at the Time of his Death, as to ſatisfy the ſame Richard for the true Value of the aforeſaid fifty Quarters of Wheat in Manner and Form aforeſaid to be delivered, after the Death of the ſame Thomas Gray came, and were in their Hands at the Time of obtaining this Bill) after the Death of the ſaid Thomas Gray have wholly refuſed, and yet do refuſe to deliver the ſame to the ſaid Richard Norwood; by reaſon whereof the ſame Richard Norwood in his Credit with divers Subjects of the ſaid Lord the King and Lady the Queen now, and eſpecially with Ralph Manning and Criſtopher Stranſham, to whom the ſame Richard Norwood had ſold the ſaid fifty Quarters of Wheat, and to whom the ſame Richard Norwood, relying upon the faithful Performance of the Promiſe and Aſſumption aforeſaid, had promiſed to pay and content the ſame fifty Quarters of Wheat at a certain Time now paſt, is greatly hurt and damnified, and has Damage to the Value of 200 Marks, and therefore he brings the Suit, &c.

And the aforeſaid Thomas Norwood and Edward Read by John Goldwell their Attorney come and defend the Force and Injury when, &c. and ſay that the aforeſaid Richard his Action aforeſaid againſt them ought not to have or maintain, becauſe they ſay that the Declaration aforeſaid of the aforeſaid Richard is inſufficient in Law, to which the ſame Thomas Norwood and Edward Read have no Neceſſity, nor are by the Law of the Land in any wiſe bound to anſwer. Wherefore for want of a ſufficient Declaration in this behalf, they pray Judgment, and that the aforeſaid Richard may be precluded from having his Action aforeſaid againſt them the ſaid Thomas Norwood and Edward Read, &c. Defendants demur to the Declaration.

And the aforeſaid Richard ſays that his Declaration aforeſaid is good and ſufficient in Law to have and maintain his Action aforeſaid againſt the ſaid Thomas and Edward, which ſaid Declaration the ſame Richard is ready to verify, whereunto the ſaid Thomas and Edward do not anſwer, nor the ſame hitherto in any wiſe deny; wherefore the ſame Richard prays Judgment, and his Damages aforeſaid by reaſon of the non-Performance of the Aſſumption and Promiſe aforeſaid to be adjudged to him, &c. And becauſe the Court of the Lord the King and Lady the Queen here are not yet adviſed of giving their Judgment of and upon the Premiſſes, Day therefore is given to the Parties aforeſaid before the Lord the King and Lady the Queen at Weſtminſter until Friday next after the Morrow of the Holy Trinity, to hear their Judgment of and upon the Premiſſes, &c. becauſe the Court of the Lord the King and Lady the Queen here thereof not yet, &c. Joinder in Demurrer. The Plaintiff declares that the ſaid Teſtator, in conſideration of 40 s. to him paid by the Plaintiff, promiſed and aſſumed to deliver to the Plaintiff fifty Quarters of Wheat at a certain Place, and at two certain Days, for 33*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* to be paid him by the Plaintiff by equal Portions immediately after the Delivery, that is to ſay, at each of the Days of Delivery 16*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* And he declares further that the Teſtator lived until after the laſt Day; and that although the Plaintiff was ready at the Place and Days to receive the ſaid Wheat, and to have paid his Money for it, yet the Teſtator did not deliver to him the Wheat nor any Part thereof at the Days and Place, &c. according to the ſaid Aſſumption; and alſo that the Defendants themſelves, (to whoſe Hands the Money, Goods, and Chattles which belonged to the Teſtator at the Time of his Death, ſufficient as well to ſatisfy all the Debts which he owed to any Perſon whatever, as to ſatisfy the Plaintiff himſelf for the ſaid Wheat in Manner and Form aforeſaid to be delivered, came, and were in their Hands at the Time of exhibiting the Bill,) after the Death of the Teſtator have not delivered the ſame to the Plaintiff, but wholly refuſe to deliver them, to the Damage of the Plaintiff 200 Marks. And upon this Declaration the Defendants demur in Law.

And it was argued in Michaelmas Term in the fourth and fifth Years of the Reign of the preſent King and Queen by Loveleſs and Gerard on the Part of the Defendants, and by Foſſet and Manwood on the Part of the Plaintiff, (as I heard, for I was not preſent at all.) For the Defendants.

ſumption of the Teſtator, which Aſſumption (it was ſaid for the Defendants,) was no other than a ſimple Contract, and if the Executors ſhould be charged by ſuch a Contract, by the ſame Reaſon they ſhould be charged by every Contract executory, as well for Debt as for other Things. For every Contract executory is an * aſſumpſit in itſelf, and it would be inconvenient to charge them as well by Contracts made by Parol in pais, as by Specialties, for of the former they cannot have Knowledge. And further it was ſaid, that there are divers Precedents in this Court, which have been ſhewn to you (my Lords), that in ſuch Actions as our's is here brought againſt Executors, the Executors have pleaded in Bar, and upon the Pleas tried for the Plaintiffs they have recovered, yet this does not prove the Law againſt us in our Caſe, we having demurred in Law. [a] For the Book of 13. H. 6. ſays that in an Action of Debt brought againſt Executors upon a ſimple Contract, or the like, wherein the Teſtator might have waged his Law, if the Executor will not demur at firſt, but will plead ſome other Plea in Bar, which is found againſt him, he ſhall not take advantage of it in Arreſt of Judgment or by Writ of Error; and therein the Book agrees with Reaſon, for when the Executor anſwers to the Debt, and avoids it by another Plea, he has loſt the Favour given him by the Law, which would not force him to anſwer to it at all, becauſe it preſumes that he could not have Knowledge of it, being only a Contract, and therefore for the Ignorance which the Law preſumes in Executors, it will not compel them to anſwer to the Debt; but when they plead other Matter in diſcharge of it, thereby they take upon them Knowledge of the Contract, and go about to diſcharge it by other Matter than by Ignorance, and therefore by taking upon them Knowledge of the Contract, they have loſt the Advantage which they might have taken in reſpect of the Preſumption in Law of their Ignorance of it. And ſo the Precedents ſhewn to you ſtand well with the ſaid Book, and do not make againſt us, for we have demurred in Law, by which we don't take upon us any Knowledge of the Contract, but pray to have the Benefit which the Law has given us for the Preſumption of Ignorance, or for ſome other Cauſe. And there is no Caſe ruled touching our Matter but one, which is the Caſe in [b] 12. H. 8. where one brought an Action upon the Caſe againſt Executors upon a Promiſe made by the Teſtator, that if one who bought ſome Goods of the Plaintiff did not pay the Plaintiff for them, he (the Teſtator) would pay him for them; and it was adjudged (as it is there reported) that the Plaintiff ſhould recover againſt the Executors upon this Action. But it does not appear there whether the Defendants demurred in Judgment or not, for perhaps they pleaded ſome Matter in Bar to it after they had heard the Opinion of ſome of the Judges, and if they did ſo, and it was tried againſt them, then is the Caſe in Point with what is mentioned above. And admitting that Judgment was there given upon Demurrer, yet pleaſe to hear what Fitzherbert ſays in [c] 27. H. 8. concerning the ſame Caſe, for he ſaith thus, "I was of Counſel "with one Clement of London in an Action upon the Caſe brought againſt Executors upon the "like Matter, viz. upon a Contract without Specialty, and the Caſe was adjudged with me by "Fineux and Coniſby againſt the Executors; but I hold the Law to be clearly otherwiſe, and that "they gave that Judgment without any Advice, but only upon their own Opinions." And when one told him that this Caſe was in the Report of 12. H. 8. above-mentioned, Fitzherbert ſaid, "put that Caſe out of your Books, for it is not Law without Doubt." So that (it was ſaid) the Authority of the ſaid Caſe in 12. H. 8. is impeached by Fitzherbert, who was of Counſel therein for the Plaintiff, for whom the Judgment was given, which he held to be erroneous, and he was a Judge of great Fame. And indeed the Judgment there ſeems to be againſt the Principles of Law, becauſe ſuch an Aſſumption is but a Contract in pais, as a Contract of Debt is.

And further it was ſaid, that if the ſaid Book of 12. H. 8. was Law, yet the Declaration here is not good. For in the Book of 12. H. 8. the Plaintiff ſurmiſed in his Declaration that the Teſtator had left to his Executors Aſſets to pay all Debts and all Legacies, and to content him alſo, but here the Plaintiff has only averred that the Executors have Aſſets to pay all Debts, and to ſatisfy him, and has omitted to aver that they have Aſſets to pay the Legacies, and it is reaſonable that Legacies ſhould be paid before ſuch a Duty as this is here; and for this Cauſe alſo, it was ſaid, the Bill is inſufficient.

E contra for the Plaintiff.

On the other Side it was ſaid that the Teſtator could not have * waged his Law in this Caſe, [d] and where he could not do that, an Action lies againſt his Executors by the Rule of the common Law. † For it is not reaſonable that if they have Aſſets to pay the Debts and Legacies, and alſo to ſatisfy the Plaintiff himſelf, that they ſhould retain the reſt of the Goods to their own Uſe. And to pay this is no Way prejudicial, but charitable and beneficial for the Soul of the Teſtator, but to leave it unpaid is good to none but the Executors, and they ought not to have the Benefit of it, for that was not the Intent of the Teſtator, and they are no more than [e] Miniſters and Diſtributors of the Goods of the deceaſed, and by applying the Benefit of his Debts to themſelves they are guilty of a Breach of that Truſt which the deceaſed repoſed in them. [f] And the ſaid Judgment in 12. H. 8. being given by the Court is not ſo eaſily to be rejected by the ſaying of Fitzherbert. And as to the Objection, viz. that the Plaintiff has omitted in the Declaration to aver that the Executors have Aſſets over and above paying the Legacies alſo, the Juſtices have more Cauſe to ſtay upon this than upon the principal Matter, and they would do well to order the Record of the ſaid Caſe in 12. H. 8. to be ſearched and ſhewn to them; which was done accordingly. [g] And the Caſe was entered in Mich. Term Anno 12. H. 8. Rot. 40. and it was between Oliver Cleymond Plaintiff, and Robert Vincent and Thomaſin his Wife, Executrix of the Teſtament of Penſon, Defendants, and it was not demurred in Law upon the Caſe, but the Defendants pleaded in Bar, as appears by the Record: and the Record was not [h] as the Book of Report

IT appears amongſt the Records of the Common Bench of Hillary Term 3 & 4 P. & M. Rot. 305. that one Thomas Woodward ſued an Action of Debt in London upon an Obligation for 140 l. made to him by Sir John Luttrell Knight, againſt Thomas Lord Darcy of Chich, Sir John Chicheſter Knight, and Humphry Coles Eſquire, Executors of the Teſtament of Thomas Windham, who was Executor of the Teſtament of the ſaid Sir John Luttrell. Coles pleaded never Executor, nor ever adminiſtered as Executor. And further they ſaid, that the ſaid Thomas Windham in his Lifetime had fully adminiſtered all the other Goods and Chattles of the ſaid Sir John Luttrell, beſides the ſaid Goods and Chattles to the Value of the ſaid 200 l. And thereupon they demanded Judgment ſi actio.

Law of Teſtaments, &c. 356.

And whether or no this was a ſufficient Bar, was put to the Juſtices of the Common Bench, and alſo to the Juſtices of the King's Bench, as well this preſent Trinity Term in the ſaid 4 & 5 Years of the Reign of Philip and Mary, as oftentimes in ſeveral other Terms before. And it was ſaid, that the Law would not permit the Debtee Executor to retain in his own Hands the Goods of the Teſtator his Debtor for the Debt which the Teſtator owed him, for two Cauſes. The one is, for that when the Debtee takes upon him the Adminiſtration of the Goods of the Teſtator, and ſo aſſents to the Executorſhip, as it is here confeſſed by the Record Windham had done, thereby the Law has extinguiſhed the Action of the Debtee for ever, and it ſhall be taken that the Debtee was content to have his Debt remitted, for he might have refuſed the Executorſhip, and might have brought his Action againſt the Ordinary, or other Perſon to whom the Ordinary had committed the Adminiſtration, which bringing of the Action would have been a Diſagreement to the Executorſhip, and by ſuch Action he might have recovered his Debt well enough. [a] And therefore it was ſaid, there is a Diverſity taken in 21. Ed. 4. viz. if the Debtee makes the Debtor and another his Executors, although the Debtor never adminiſters, yet his Action is gone for ever, which is agreed to by all the Juſtices, according to the Report. And the Reaſon thereof is good, [b] for the other cannot bring an Action without naming him who does not adminiſter, notwithſtanding his Refuſal; and they two cannot ſue one of themſelves as Executors for a perſonal Thing. [c] And therefore in the ſame Caſe the Action is extinguiſhed, although the Debtor who does not adminiſter but diſagrees dies firſt, and the other ſurvives him. [d] For a perſonal Action once in Suſpence by the Act of the Party intitled to it is always extinguiſhed. [e] But if the Debtor makes the Debtee and another his Executors, and the Debtee does not adminiſter, but dies, there his Executors ſhall have an Action againſt the ſurviving Executor, as the Book purports, and ſo is the Diverſity. * But if he adminiſters, there his Executors ſhall never have an Action againſt the ſurviving Executor, which being the principal Caſe there, Iſſue was taken whether he adminiſtered in his Life or not, which ſhews that the meddling with the Adminiſtration is a Diſpenſation of his Action for ever. [f] And in 11. H. 4. the Court took the Law to be, that if the Debtee takes to Wife one of the Executors of the Debtor, who adminiſters, his Action is gone, but if ſhe does not adminiſter, his Action continues, becauſe he may have an Action againſt the others who have adminiſtered, without naming his Wife. And foraſmuch as in our Caſe Windham knew that the Adminiſtration extinguiſhed his Action, (for Ignorance of the Law ſhall not be aſcribed to any one, but we are to preſume that he knew the Law, and was well content with the Rule of it) this gives us Cauſe to judge that Windham was well ſatisfied that his Action for this Duty ſhould be loſt for ever. For if Windham had died inteſtate, and the Ordinary had committed the Adminiſtration of the Goods of Sir John Luttrell to one, and of the Goods of Windham to another, yet the Adminiſtrators of Windham ſhould not have had an Action for the Debt againſt the Adminiſtrators of Luttrell, for a perſonal Action once ſuſpended by the Act or Agreement of the Party is always extinct, and then if a perſonal Thing cannot be had but by Action, if the Action is extinguiſhed, the Thing itſelf is extinguiſhed. [g] As if one is bound to a Feme ſole and to a Man in 20 l. and afterwards the Obligor takes the Woman to his Wife, and afterwards ſhe dies, the Duty is extinguiſhed. So here foraſmuch as the Action is extinct, which was the Means to come at the Duty, the Duty itſelf is alſo extinct. And then Windham might not retain the Goods of the Teſtator in Satisfaction of a Duty which was extinct.

when Windham being Executor to Luttrell repreſented the Perſon of Luttrell, and in his own Perſon was as a diſtinct Perſon from him whom he repreſented as Executor, from thence it follows that the Debt due to his own Perſon could not be in any other Degree than it was when Lutrell was alive, and that was in Action, and not executed. [a] And therefore it was ſaid, in the Caſe of T. 4. H. 7. b. where Reynold Sands as Executor to one brought an Action of Debt upon an Obligation againſt Peers Peckham, and Peckham pleaded that the Teſtator made him Executor by one Teſtament, and the Plaintiff claimed to be Executor by another Teſtament, and by Delegacy of the Pope the Teſtament by which Sands claimed to be Executor was annulled, and Peckham was adjudged Executor, by Reaſon whereof he adminiſtred, and paid the Debt in Demand to one of whom the Teſtator had received ſo much for Uſury, in Diſcharge of the Teſtator's Conſcience, and afterwards by another Delegacy of the Pope the firſt Sentence was repealed, and Sands was adjudged Executor, and he demanded Judgment ſi actio, and this Plea of Peckham was held inſufficient, and it was adjudged that Sands ſhould recover the Debt. And one of the Exceptions there taken to the Plea, and which was, as it ſeems, one of the Cauſes of the Judgment, was becauſe the Debt was a Choſe in Action, and the Teſtator himſelf could not have given it to another without recovering it by way of Action, no more might Peckham being his Executor. Wherefore (it was ſaid) as it appears there that the Executor might not pay a Choſe in Action to another, ſo here by the like Reaſon Windham Executor cannot pay himſelf by retaining this Debt which was in Action to him. For which Cauſes (it was ſaid) it ſeems too hard that the Plea in Bar ſhould be good. And of this Opinion was Brook Chief Juſtice of the Common Bench.

E contra for the Defendants.

On the other Hand it was ſaid by the other Judges, and by others at the Bar, that Teſtaments are much favoured, and the Will of the Teſtator is benignly reſpected by the Law. And if the Teſtator ſhould appoint one to be his Executor in whom he had the greateſt Confidence of all others, as Teſtators commonly do, and he that is ſo appointed has a Debt due to him by the Teſtator, if the meddling with the Adminiſtration ſhould be an Extinguiſhment of his Debt, the Conſequence of it would be that the Executor, rather than loſe his Debt, would refuſe the Executorſhip, and thereby the Confidence and Truſt of the Teſtator would be diſappointed, and the Will would be left unperformed. And beſides it cannot be ſuppoſed but that the Teſtator, who requires that his Debts ſhould be paid to every Man, intended that his Debt to his Executor ſhould be paid, and that more eſpecially than others, becauſe it is to be preſumed he was his chief Friend, in that he repoſes his greateſt Confidence in him by making him his Executor. So that if the Execution of the Adminiſtration ſhould extinguiſh the Debt, this would be derogatory to Teſtaments, and to the Souls of Teſtators. To Teſtaments, for that Executors would refuſe rather than loſe their Debts, [b] and without an Executor a Will is null and void: And to the Souls of Teſtators, for that if the Executor takes upon him the Adminiſtration which is an Act of Charity, then thereby the juſt Debt due from the Teſtator to the Executor would remain for ever unpaid, which would be dangerous for the Soul of the Teſtator. So that ſuch a Law would induce a Man to omit Charity and Friendſhip, or if he did execute it, he would be ungratefully requited with the Loſs of a juſt Debt due to him, and would be forced to pay all the other Debts of the Teſtator, and to leave the Teſtator's Debt due to himſelf unpaid. But our Law is not ſo unreaſonable or uncharitable, [c] for the Executor may retain Aſſets to pay himſelf, notwithſtanding he may not bring an Action to recover it, [d] for true it is that the Action is gone by the Act of Adminiſtration. † And therefore the Books of 21. Ed. 4. and 11. H. 4. are good Law, that the Action is gone by the Adminiſtration, notwithſtanding the Executor Debtee firſt dies, and the other ſurvives. But the Reaſon why the Action is loſt for ever is, [e] becauſe in Judgment of Law he is ſatisfied before, for if the Executor has as much Goods in his Hands as his own Debt amounts to, the [f] Property of thoſe Goods is altered and veſted in himſelf, that is, he has them as his own proper Goods in Satisfaction of his Debt, and not as Executor. So that there is a Tranſmutation of Property by the Operation of Law without Suit and Execution, for inaſmuch as Windham here could not have an Action againſt himſelf as Executor, nor have Execution againſt himſelf as Executor, the Operation of the Law is equivalent to a Recovery and Execution for him, and the Property is as ſtrongly altered as it could be by Recovery and Execution. So that the Reaſon why the Action is gone is, becauſe he has full Satisfaction by the Alteration of the Property. And altho' the Debt was a Choſe in Action, yet it is not ſo in him as Executor, for his Action is totally gone for the Reaſon aforeſaid, in which Reſpect the Choſe in Action is become converted into a Choſe in Poſſeſſion, and a Satisfaction executed. Wherefore Windham might well retain Goods to ſatisfy his own Debt. [g] And to prove this the Caſe of 12. H. 4. was cited, where in Debt upon an Obligation againſt the Heir, he pleaded that the Plaintiff was Executor to his Anceſtor, whoſe Deed he ſhewed forth, and adminiſtred certain Goods to the Value of the Debt, and more, retaining the ſame Sum towards paying himſelf, and Hull ſaid, if he did not retain to pay himſelf, he might have retained, and therefore it ſhall be ſaid his Folly that he did not, et hæc opinio quorundam, wherefore the Plaintiff took Iſſue that he adminiſtred no Goods of the deceaſed, &c. et alii e contra. By which Caſe it appears that they then took the Law to be, that an Executor might retain Goods of the Teſtator to ſatisfy his own Debt, notwithſtanding the Reaſon which has been given, viz. that the Debt was a Choſe in Action; and it ſeems alſo by the ſame Caſe, that if the Goods which he adminiſtred had not amounted to his own Debt, his [h] Action would have lain againſt the Heir. So that the Adminiſtration of the Executor is not an Extinguiſhment of his Action, unleſs he has in his Hands ſufficient Goods of the deceaſed to ſatisfy his own Debt. [i] For he cannot retain Goods for Part of his Debt, and for the reſt have an Action againſt the Heir, for he cannot apportion his Debt, but he ought to retain Goods for the whole, or have an Action for the whole againſt the Heir. And ſo upon a Conſideration or Satisfaction Property ſhall be altered by the Law in ſeveral other Caſes. [a] And therefore in the Caſe between Dive and Langſton in 19. H. 7. which (it was ſaid) appears in a ſpecial Report thereof extant, where in Debt againſt Dive and his Wife Executrix of one Redy they pleaded fully adminiſtred, and upon the Evidence it appeared that the Defendants had in their Hands certain Goods which were the Teſtator's, but they had [b] paid to the Value of them in their own Money to others to whom the Teſtator was indebted, and whether or no theſe Goods ſhould be Aſſets was demurred in Law upon the Evidence; and it was adjudged that they were not Aſſets, for the Property of theſe Goods was altered by the Law upon the Election of the Defendants, towards Satisfaction of their own Money which they had laid down and defrayed about the Debts of the Teſtator; which Caſe is grounded upon the ſame Reaſon with the principal Caſe, as it is ſhewn before. [c] The like Reaſon is in the Caſe of 2. H. 7. where the Clerk of the Parliament brought a Writ of Liberate current to the Clerk of the Hanaper, to deliver to him a certain Sum due to him for his Fee as Clerk of Parliament, and there it is held that if he delivers to him the Liberate, and offers him an Acquittance, and the Clerk of the Hanaper has ſo much in his Hands, he is preſently become Debtor to him that delivered the Liberate, ſo that if the Clerk of the Hanaper die, an Action of Debt lies againſt his Adminiſtrators for the Sum: For altho' the Property of the Money in the Hands of the Clerk of the Hanaper was the King's, yet by the Liberate and Acquittance the Property was altered and became the proper Money of the Clerk of the Hanaper, in reſpect of his being chargeable to the Party. [d] From whence it appears that the Property of Money or Goods upon Satisfaction or Conſideration ſhall be altered in the Hands of him that has it, without Parol, without Contract, and without Suit of Law or Execution, and all by the ſole Operation of Law. And therefore Windham might retain the Goods of the Teſtator for the Debt due to himſelf, and that ſhall be a Payment in Law, and thereby the Property ſhall be altered for the Satisfaction of the Debt; and this is grounded upon Reaſon and good Conſcience. [e] And it was ſaid if the Debtee of 20 l. makes the Debtor and another his Executors, and he has no other Goods but the ſame Debt, the Executor Debtor ſhall be charged of the ſame 20 l. to others to whom the Teſtator was indebted, by Danby and Choke in 8. Ed. 4. ſo that by the making of him Executor the Duty was not extinct tho' the Action was gone, and he ſhall be charged to account for the ſame 20 l. before the Ordinary, quod Moile ibi conceſſit. By the Opinion of which Judges it ſeems, that notwithſtanding the Action for the Duty is gone, and it was a Choſe in Action, yet the Duty is not extinguiſhed, but it ſhall be Aſſets in his Hands. And by the ſame Reaſon in the principal Caſe the Debt of 20 l. which was a Choſe in Action is not gone, altho' the Action for it be gone, but it ſhall be in eſſe to be ſatisfied, as in the other Caſe it ſhall be in eſſe to be paid to others. Wherefore Windham might well retain the Money to ſatisfy his own Debt which was a Choſe in Action, and ſo the Plea in Bar is good. And this was the clear Opinion of all the Juſtices of the one Bench and of the other, except Brook who was ſtrongly of Opinion againſt them, and it was the Opinion of all the Serjeants alſo, as well of the reſt of them as of Catline at laſt, who was of Counſel for the Plaintiff. Wherefore the Plaintiff having before replied Aſſets at London beſides the 200 l. (and becauſe it was the clear Opinion of the Juſtices and Serjeants, except Brook, that the Parties ought not to plead de novo, but that the Bar was good and the Replication alſo, and there was no misjoining of Iſſue, nor could there be any Repleader) the Plaintiff (ſeeing no other Remedy) took a Venire Facias to try the Iſſue. And afterwards the Writ and the Plea abated * by the Death of the Lord Darcy, who died in the latter End of the ſaid Trinity Term.

A brief

A brief Report of a Case argued by the Serjeants in the Common Bench in Trinity Term in the first Year of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, and in Michaelmas Term next following, and by the Judges in Hillary Term next afterwards, between Richard Wrotesley Plaintiff, and Richard Adams and Elizabeth his Wife Defendants, in an Ejectione Firmæ brought by the said Plaintiff against them. And the Record was as follows.

Trin. Term 4 & 5. P. & M. Rot. 341. Salop. Declaration. Same Precedent Rast. Entr. 253. b.

Richard Adams late of Brosley in the County aforesaid Yeoman and Elizabeth his Wife were attached to answer Richard Wrotesley Gentleman of a Plea, wherefore with Force and Arms into one Messuage, 60 Acres of Land, 20 Acres of Meadow, and 100 Acres of Pasture, with the Appurtenances in Brosley, which John late Prior of the Monastery of St. Milburgh of Great-Wenlock now dissolved, and the then Convent of the same Place demised to the aforesaid Richard Wrotesley for the Term of 63 Years, within the said Term they entered, and the same for a long Time occupied, and the said Richard Wrotesley hindered from taking the Profits of the Tenements aforesaid with the Appurtenances according to the Form of the Demise aforesaid, and him from his Farm aforesaid within the Term aforesaid ejected; and other enormous Things to him did, to the great Damage of the said Richard Wrotesley, and against the Peace of the Lord the King and Lady the Queen now, &c. And whereupon the same Richard Wrotesley by Thomas Newman his Attorney complains, that whereas one Thomas late Prior of the aforesaid late Monastery was seized of the Tenements aforesaid with the Appurtenances in his Demesn as of Fee in right of his Monastery aforesaid, and being so seized thereof, the same then Prior and the then Convent of the same Place by their certain Writing indented, bearing Date on the Feast of the Nativity of St. John the Baptist in the 22d Year of the Reign of Lord Edward the fourth late King of England, and made at Great-Wenlock aforesaid between the same then Prior and the then Convent of the same late Monastery of the one Part, and one John Bailey and Joice his Wife of the other Part, and sealed with the Convent Seal of the same late Prior and Convent, by their unanimous Assent and Consent demised, granted, and to Farm let to the aforesaid John Bailey and Joice the Tenements aforesaid with the Appurtenances, to have and to hold to the same John and Joice and their Assigns from the Feast of St. Michael the Archangel then next following unto the End and Term of 80 Years thence next ensuing, and fully to be compleat. By Force of which Demise the same John Bailey and Joice were possessed of such Title, Interest, and Term of Years of and in the Tenements aforesaid with the Appurtenances, and being so thereof possessed, after the aforesaid Feast of St. Michael the Archangel then next following they entered into the Tenements aforesaid with the Appurtenances, and were thereof possessed, and being so thereof possessed, the same John died, and the aforesaid Joice survived him, and held herself in the Tenements aforesaid with the Appurtenances, and was thereof sole possessed by Right of Survivorship, &c. And the same Joice being so possessed thereof took to Husband one Roger Wilcox, whereby the same Roger and Joice were possessed of the Tenements aforesaid with the Appurtenances, and being so thereof possessed, the aforesaid Joice died, and the aforesaid Roger survived her, and was sole possessed of the Tenements aforesaid with the Appurtenances; and the said Roger being so possessed of the Tenements aforesaid with the Appurtenances, and the Reversion of the same Tenements with the Appurtenances belonging to the aforesaid Thomas late Prior and his Successors, the same Thomas late Prior died. After whose Death one Richard was duly elected and made Prior of the Monastery aforesaid, whereby the same Richard was seized of the aforesaid Reversion of the Tenements aforesaid with the Appurtenances as of Fee and Right, in right of the late Monastery aforesaid, and the same Richard being so seized thereof afterwards likewise died; after whose Death one Rowland was duly elected and made Prior of the Monastery aforesaid, whereby the same Rowland was seized of the Reversion of the aforesaid Tenements with the Appurtenances as of Fee and Right, in right of the Monastery aforesaid, and the same Rowland being so seized thereof afterwards likewise died; after whose Death one John was duly elected and made Prior of the Monastery aforesaid, whereby the same John late Prior was seized of the aforesaid Reversion of the Tenements aforesaid with the Appurtenances as of Fee and Right, in right of the Monastery aforesaid. And the aforesaid Roger being possessed of the Tenements aforesaid with the Appurtenances, the Reversion thereof belonging to the aforesaid John late Prior, and to the Convent, and his Successors, as in right of the Monastery aforesaid, the same John then Prior and the then Convent of the same late Monastery afterwards, viz. the fourth Day of September in the 26th Year of the Reign of Lord Henry late King of England the Eighth from the Conquest, at Great-Wenlock aforesaid, by their certain Writing indented made between them the said John then Prior of the Monastery aforesaid and the then Convent of the same Place of the one Part, and the aforesaid Richard Wrotesley of the other Part, (one Part whereof, sealed with the common Seal of the aforesaid John then Prior and the Convent, the same Richard Wrotesley produces here in Court, the Date whereof is the same fourth Day of September in the 26th Year aforesaid) by their unanimous Assent and Consent granted and to Farm let to the same Richard Wrotesley the Tenements aforesaid with the Appurtenances, by the Name of the Reversion of all their Farm in Brosley, and by the Name of one other Tenement there with all the Lands, Leasows, Pastures, and Meadows to the same belonging, and with all and singular their Appurtenances then in the Tenure and Occupation of the aforesaid Roger Wilcox. To have and to hold to the same Richard Wrotesley and his Assigns from the End and Expiration of the aforesaid Term of Years demised to the aforesaid Roger Wilcox unto the End and Term of 63 Years from thence next following, and fully to be compleat, with this, that the aforesaid Richard Wrotesley will aver, that the aforesaid 60 Acres of Land, 20 Acres of Meadow, and 100 Acres of Pasture with the Appurtenances in Brosley aforesaid from Time whereof the Memory of Man is not to the contrary have always been demisable and demised with the aforesaid Farm and Tenements aforesaid, and let and occupied with the same. And afterwards the aforesaid John late Prior and the Convent of the aforesaid late Monastery by their Deed sealed with the common Seal of the said late Prior and Convent, and inrolled of Record in the Court of Chancery of the aforesaid late King Henry the eighth at Westminster in the County of Middlesex, bearing Date the 25th Day of January in the 31st Year of the Reign of the aforesaid late King Henry the eighth, granted the Reversion of the Tenements aforesaid with the Appurtenances amongst other Things to the aforesaid late King Henry the eighth, to have to him his Heirs and Successors for ever. By virtue of which Grant, and of a certain Statute made in a Parliament of the aforesaid late King Henry the eighth begun and holden at Westminster the 28th Day of April in the 31st Year of his Reign, the same late King Henry the eighth was seized of the Reversion of the Tenements aforesaid with the Appurtenances as of Fee and Right, in right of his Crown of England. And the same late King Henry the eighth being so seized of the Reversion of the Tenements aforesaid with the Appurtenances, by his Letters Patent bearing Date at Westminster the 27th Day of September in the 37th Year of the Reign of the same late King Henry the eighth, granted the Reversion of the Tenements aforesaid with the Appurtenances amongst other Things to one William Pinnock and Elizabeth his Wife, to have and to hold to them their Heirs and Assigns for ever. By Reason of which said Letters Patent the same William Pinnock and Elizabeth were seized of the Reversion of the Tenements aforesaid with the Appurtenances as of Fee and Right. And being so seized thereof, and the aforesaid Roger Wilcox being possessed in Form aforesaid of the Tenements aforesaid with the Appurtenances, the same Roger Wilcox afterwards at Brosley aforesaid made his last Will and Testament, and therein devised his Term, Estate, and Interest of and in the aforesaid Tenements with the Appurtenances to Elizabeth his Wife, and constituted the same Elizabeth Executrix of his last Will and Testament aforesaid, and there died, by Reason whereof, after the Death of the same Roger Wilcox, the aforesaid Elizabeth entered into the Tenements aforesaid with the Appurtenances, and was thereof possessed by virtue of the Legacy aforesaid. And the same Elizabeth being so thereof possessed took to Husband the aforesaid Richard Adams, whereby the same Richard Adams and Elizabeth were possessed of the Tenements aforesaid with the Appurtenances. And being so thereof possessed, and the aforesaid William Pinnock and Elizabeth being seized in Form aforesaid of the Reversion of the same Tenements with the Appurtenances, the same William Pinnock and Elizabeth his Wife afterwards, viz. the tenth Day of May in the fourth Year of the Reign of Lord Edward the sixth late King of England, at Brosley aforesaid demised to the aforesaid Richard Adams and Elizabeth his Wife the Tenements aforesaid with the Appurtenances, to have and to hold to the same Richard Adams and Elizabeth his Wife and their Assigns for Term of their Lives, and of the longest Liver of them, whereby the same Richard Adams and Elizabeth his Wife were seized of the Tenements aforesaid with the Appurtenances in their Demesn as of Freehold, and by Reason whereof the aforesaid Term of Years of the said Richard Adams and Elizabeth his Wife of and in the Tenements aforesaid with the Appurtenances was utterly ended and expired. And afterwards, viz. the last Day of October in the second and third Years of the Reign of the Lord the King and Lady the Queen now, the aforesaid Richard Wrotesley entered into the Tenements aforesaid with the Appurtenances, and was thereof possessed by virtue of the aforesaid Demise thereof made to him in Form aforesaid by the aforesaid John late Prior and Convent, until the aforesaid Richard Adams and Elizabeth his Wife, the first Day of November in the second and third Years of the Reign of the Lord the King and Lady the Queen now, with Force and Arms into the Tenements aforesaid with the Appurtenances entered, and the same occupied for a long Time, viz. from the aforesaid first Day of November in the second and third Years aforesaid, until the Day of obtaining the original Writ of the said Richard Wrotesley, that is to say, the 26th Day of May in the third and fourth Years of the Reign of the Lord the King and Lady the Queen now, and him the said Richard prevented from taking the Profits of the Tenements aforesaid with the Appurtenances, according to the Form of the Demise aforesaid, and him from his Farm aforesaid within the Term aforesaid ejected; and other Wrongs &c. to the great Damage, &c. and against the Peace, &c. Wherefore he says that he is damnified and has Damage to the Value of 20 l. and thereupon he brings Suit, &c.

The CASE.

A Prior leaſed a Farm to Huſband and Wife for Years, the Huſband died, the Wife took another Huſband, and died; the Prior leaſed the Reverſion of all the Farm to the Plaintiff for a Term of Years to commence after the End and Expiration of the firſt Term of Years, and afterwards the Prior by Deed enrolled granted the Reverſion to King Henry 8. who granted the Reverſion over in Fee; the ſurviving Huſband in Poſſeſſion of the firſt Leaſe died, leaving an after-taken Wife, to whom he deviſed the Term, who took to Huſband the Defendant, and they being ſo poſſeſſed of the Term, the Patentee of King H. 8. leaſed to them for Life, which Acceptance of the ſecond Leaſe during the firſt is a Surrender of the firſt in Law, whereupon the Plaintiff may enter by virtue of the Leaſe made to him, as well as if the Years had been ſpent by Effluxion of Time. The Caſe was recited in this Manner. It appears by the Record that Richard Wroteſley has brought an Ejectione Firmæ againſt Richard Adams and his Wife, for one Meſſuage, 60 Acres of Land, 20 Acres of Meadow, and 100 Acres of Paſture with the Appurtenances in Broſley. And he counts that Thomas late Prior of the Monaſtery of St. Milburgh of Great Wenlock now diſſolved was ſeized of the ſaid Tenements in his Demeſn as of Fee, in Right of the ſaid Monaſtery. And that he being ſo ſeized and the Convent by Deed indented bearing Date on the Feaſt of St. John Baptiſt in the 22d Year of the Reign of King Edward 4. made a Leaſe thereof to John Bailey and Joice his Wife for 80 Years next enſuing after the Feaſt of St. Michael then next to come, and that after the ſame Feaſt they entered, and the Huſband died, and the Wife ſurvived, and took to Huſband Roger Wilcox, whereby the ſaid Roger and Joice were poſſeſſed of the ſaid Tenements; and afterwards Joice died, and Roger ſurvived her, and was ſole poſſeſſed of the ſaid Tenements. And he being ſo poſſeſſed, and the Reverſion belonging to the ſaid Prior and his Succeſſors, the ſaid Prior died, after whoſe Death one Richard was duly elected and made Prior of the ſaid Monaſtery, whereby he was ſeized of the Reverſion of the ſaid Tenements as of Fee and Right, in Right of his ſaid Monaſtery. And he being ſo ſeized died, after whoſe Death one Rowland was duly elected and made Prior of the ſaid Monaſtery, whereby he was ſeized of the Reverſion of the ſaid Tenements as of Fee and Right, in Right of the ſaid Monaſtery. And he being ſo ſeized died, after whoſe Death one John was duly elected and made Prior of the ſaid Monaſtery, whereby he was ſeized of the ſaid Reverſion of the ſaid Tenements as of Fee and Right, in Right of the ſaid Monaſtery. And the ſaid Roger being poſſeſſed of the ſaid Tenements, and the Reverſion thereof belonging to the ſaid John Prior and his Succeſſors, the ſame John Prior and the Convent of the ſame Monaſtery afterwards, viz. the 4th Day of September in the 26th Year of the Reign of King Henry 8. by their Deed indented, (one Part whereof is here ſhewn forth) leaſed to the Plaintiff the ſaid Tenements with the Appurtenances, by the Name of the Reverſion of all their Farm in Broſley, and alſo by the Name of another Tenement, with all the Lands, Leaſows, Paſtures, and Meadows to the ſame belonging, and with all and ſingular their Appurtenances, then in the Tenure and Occupation of the ſaid Roger Wilcox, to have and to hold to the ſame Plaintiff and to his Aſſigns from the End and Expiration of the ſaid Term of Years demiſed to the aforeſaid Roger Wilcox, unto the End and Term of 63 Years thence next enſuing; with this, that the Plaintiff will aver that the aforeſaid 60 Acres of Land, 20 Acres of Meadow, and 100 Acres of Paſture with the Appurtenances in Broſley aforeſaid from Time immemorial have been always demiſable and demiſed with the Farm and Tenement aforeſaid, and let and occupied with the ſame. And afterwards the aforeſaid John late Prior and the Convent by their Deed inrolled in the Chancery, bearing Date the 25th Day of January in the 31ſt Year of the Reign of King Henry 8. granted the Reverſion of the ſaid Tenements amongſt other Things to the ſaid late King Henry 8. his Heirs and Succeſſors for ever, by virtue of which Grant, and of a certain Statute made in a Parliament of the ſaid late King Henry 8. begun and holden at Weſtminſter the 28th Day of April in the 31ſt Year of his Reign, the ſaid King Henry 8. was ſeized of the Reverſion of the ſaid Tenements as of Fee and Right, in Right of his Crown. And afterwards the ſame King by his Letters-patent bearing Date at Weſtminſter the 27th Day of September in the 37th Year of his Reign, granted the Reverſion of the ſaid Tenements with the Appurtenances to William Pinnock and Elizabeth his Wife, and to their Heirs. And afterwards the ſaid Roger Wilcox being poſſeſſed ut ſupra, made his Teſtament, and thereby deviſed all his Term, Eſtate, and Intereſt in the ſaid Tenements to Elizabeth his Wife, and made her his Executrix, and died, and Elizabeth his Wife entered into the ſaid Tenements, and was thereof poſſeſſed by Force of the ſaid Legacy, and took to Huſband the ſaid Richard Adams one of the Defendants, by Reaſon whereof he and his ſaid Wife were poſſeſſed of the ſaid Tenements. And they being ſo poſſeſſed, the ſaid William Pinnock and his ſaid Wife the 10th Day of May in the 4th Year of the Reign of King Edward 6. demiſed the ſaid Tenements to the Defendants for their Lives, whereby the ſaid Defendants were ſeized thereof in their Demeſn as of Freehold, and by Reaſon whereof the ſaid Term of Years which the Defendants had in the ſaid Tenements was utterly ended and expired. And afterwards, viz. the laſt Day of October, in the 2d and 3d Years of the Reign of King Philip and Queen Mary, the ſaid Plaintiff entered into the ſaid Tenements, and was thereof poſſeſſed by virtue of the ſaid Demiſe in Form aforeſaid made to him by the ſaid late Prior and Convent, until the ſaid Defendants the firſt Day of November in the 3d and 4th Years of the Reign of the ſaid King and Queen ouſted him. And he counts to his Damages of 10*l.* And the Defendants demand Oyer of the ſaid Deed of Demiſe made to the Plaintiff by the ſaid late Prior and Convent, and it was read to them, and entered de verbo in verbum. And the Deed was, that they had granted and demiſed to the Plaintiff the Reverſion of all their Farm in Broſley, and alſo another Tenement, with all the Lands, Leaſows, Paſtures, and Meadows to the ſame belonging, with all and ſingular their Appurtenances, then in the Tenure of one Roger Wilcox, to have and to hold all the ſaid Farm and Tenement with all others, as is before rehearſed, to the ſaid Richard Wroteſley and his Aſſigns from the End and Expiration of the Term of Years granted to the ſaid Roger Wilcox to the End and Term of 63 Years then next and immediatly enſuing, and fully to be compleat and ended. And upon this the Defendants demur in Judgment.

And on their Part it was argued in Trinity Term by Walle Serjeant, and in the ſaid Term of St. Michael by Southcote, Walſh, and Carus Serjeants. And on the Part of the Plaintiff it was argued in the ſaid Trinity Term by Harper Serjeant, and in the ſaid Term of St. Michael by Cholmley, Corbet, and Weſton Serjeants. And in the ſaid Term of St. Hillary it was argued by the Court, viz. by Weſton then being a Judge, and by Anthony Brown Juſtice, and Dyer Chief Juſtice, but Sir Humphry Brown who was then one of the Juſtices did not argue at all, becauſe he was ſo old that his Senſes were decayed, and his Voice could not be heard. And divers Exceptions were taken to the Count by them that argued for the Defendants. The firſt was, that where the Plaintiff, in order to ſhew the firſt Leaſe, commences at the Seizin of Thomas the firſt Prior mentioned, he there ſays that Thomas late Prior of the Monaſtery, &c. in which Caſe he has improperly called him late Prior, becauſe he has ſhewn that there were three Priors after him, viz. Richard, Rowland, and John. But he ought to have called him (quondam) ſometime Prior, for late contains the Time juſt paſt, and ſometime may be referred to any Time but the Time juſt paſt, wherefore inaſmuch as by ſhewing three Succeſſors he has falſified the late, and ſo has made a Repugnancy in his Declaration, which ought to be uniform, the Declaration ſhall for that Reaſon abate. To which it was anſwered, that ſometime Prior would have been more proper than late, but yet that late is proper enough, and is frequently uſed in the Senſe of ſometime, as well as ſometime in the Senſe of late. As in Writs of Forcible Entry ſued at this Day upon the Statute of 8. H. 6. the Words are, whereas in the Statute made in the Parliament at Weſtminſter in the eighth Year of the Reign of King Henry the Sixth late King of England, &c. So that the Form of the Writ at this Day calls King Henry 6. late King of England, although there have been eight Kings and Queens ſince his Time. And in the Writ of Dower unde nihil habet the Words are, Command A. that juſtly, &c. he render to B. who was the Wife of C. her reaſonable Dower which is come to her, of the Freehold which was of and belonging to the aforeſaid C. ſometime her Huſband. &c. So that although her Huſband died but a little while before, yet the Writ ſays ſometime her Huſband. From whence we may ſee that ſometime is in ſome places put for the Time juſt paſt, and late for the Time paſſed * long ſince, for which reaſon late uſed in the Senſe of ſometime may be well permitted, and eſpecially in Counts, † which if they have Matter of Subſtance ſhall never abate. And therefore the Exception was diſallowed by the Rule of the Court.

Exceptions taken by the Defendants to the Declaration. 1.

* Lane 84 Per Bromley, late may be intended 100 Years ago.

† Ante 83 (E).

Exception 2. Another Exception taken was, viz. that the Place is not ſhewn where John Bailey died, nor the Place where Joice took Wilcox to Huſband, nor the Place where John the Prior who made the Leaſe was elected: For to ſhew the Certainty of the Commencement of the Leaſe claimed by the Plaintiff, he ſhews the Conveyance of the firſt Leaſe, in order to reduce the ſame to an End, for the End of the firſt Leaſe makes the Commencement of the ſecond Leaſe. And if John Bailey was not dead, then it follows that Joice could not have the whole Term ſolely by Survivorſhip: and if Joice was not married to Wilcox, thence it follows that Wilcox could not have the Term by the Marriage and Survivorſhip of the Wife: and if John (who is ſhewn to be the laſt Prior) was not elected and made Prior, from thence it follows that his Leaſe made to the Plaintiff is not good. So that each of theſe Things by itſelf is traverſable, and if any one of them be traverſed and found, it deſtroys the Plaintiff's Action, for which reaſon the Place where the Things were done ought to be shewn, because the Venue shall come from thence if the Things be traversed. [a] As in Debt upon an Obligation the Place where the Obligation was made ought to be shewn in the Count; [b] or if Attornment be alledged, the Place where it was made ought to be pleaded; and in other such like Things which may be traversed the Place where the Thing was done ought to be shewn, for the better Certainty of the Trial. To which it was answered, that the first Lease, and the Death of Bailey, and Joice's taking of Wilcox to Husband, and the Election of John to be Prior who made the Lease, is but Matter of Conveyance in order to shew the certain Commencement of the second Lease, for the second Lease and the Ejectment of the Plaintiff out of it is the Effect and Substance of the Suit. And the first Lease and the other Circumstances thereof are only Conveyance and Inducement to the second Lease, [c] which Conveyance and Inducement needs not be so certainly alledged as the principal Matter. [d] And it is the common Form of Entries to plead the Election ut supra, without shewing any Place where it was done; wherefore this Exception, as to the Incertainty of the Place, was disallowed by the Rule of the Court.

[d] Heath's Max. 151, 152.

Another Exception taken was, in that it is alledged that Joice took to Husband Roger Wilcox, whereby the said Roger and Joice were possessed, &c. whereas he ought to have said that they were possessed as in [e] Right of the Wife, for it is a Chattle-real, [f] and the Wife surviving her Husband shall have it again, and not the Executors, and therefore by the Espowsals it is not [g] devested out of the Wife, but remains in her, for which reason the Plaintiff ought to say that the Husband and Wife were possessed as in Right of the Wife, as they should have pleaded if it had been a Freehold in the Wife. But this Exception was also disallowed by the Rule of the Court, [h] for true it is that the Husband and Wife were possessed, and the Mean and Manner how they were possessed is shewn, so that if the whole be put together, the Manner of the Possession appears, and therefore it is sufficient.

Another Exception taken was, that after the Election of each of the Priors, it is said, "by force "whereof he was seized of the Reversion of the Tenements as of Fee and Right," where it ought to have been said, "in his Demesn as of Fee." [i] For he should have an Assize if the Termor was ejected, and in such Things whereof a Man shall have an Assize he shall say in his Count Countant that he was seized in his Demesn as of Fee. But if the Reversion had been dependant upon an Estate for Life, he should say ut supra, but here he ought to say "in his Demesn as of "Fee." To which it was answered by the Court, [k] that true it is he might have said so, and it would have been good, and yet the other Form of pleading is good also. For when a Man has made a Lease for Years, he cannot of right meddle with the Demesn, nor the Fruits thereof, but he has the Reversion, and the Things incident to it, as Fealty. And the Reversion cannot properly be said to be in Demesn, but Demesn is properly so called when a Man has the Thing in Possession, for which reason a Man may say of a Reversion dependant upon an Estate for Years, as well as dependant upon an Estate for Life, that he was seized as of Fee. And therefore this Exception was also disallowed by the Rule of the Court.

Exception 4.

[g] 1 Rol. Abr. 342. E. pl. 1. Wentw. Off. of Exec. 196. Post 192 (f). 418 (c).

[h] Vin. Abr. tit. Baron and Feme D. b. pl. 20. See Lutw. 1007 arguendo it is said that this was a hard Shift to make this Plea good.

Another Exception taken was, that the second Lease was made by the Name of the Reversion of all their Farm in Brosley, and of another Tenement, with all the Lands, Leasows, Pastures, and Meadows to the same belonging, and with all and singular their Appurtenances then in the Tenure and Occupation of the said Roger Wilcox at the Time of the second Lease, for if it was not, then (it was said) the same shall not pass, for the whole Sentence is protracted until that Part comes, and rests upon it, so that nothing is demised but what was in the Tenure and Occupation of Roger Wilcox. As if a Man leases all his Lands lying in such a Parish, or which descended to him on the Part of the Mother, he that claims the Lease ought to aver that the Thing claimed lies in such a Parish, or descended on the Part of the Mother, for the End of the Sentence rests in that. And so is it in the principal Case. To which it was answered and argued by the Court, [l] that the Averment is not here necessary to be made, for the Lease is of all their Farm in Brosley, which Word (Farm) is a capital Messuage and all the Lands lying to it, and signifies the chief House and the Lands belonging to it, and not a common House, and so has a Certainty in itself. And when it goes further and says, in the Tenure and Occupation of Roger Wilcox, this is of no Effect, [m] for if it was not in his Tenure and Occupation, yet it should pass, for there is a Certainty in the Thing demised, viz. the Farm in Brosley, and so another Certainty put to a Thing which was certain enough before is of no Manner of Effect. [n] And therefore there is a Diversity where a Certainty is added to a Thing that is incertain, and where to a Thing certain. [o] For if I release all my Right in all my Lands in Dale which I have by Descent on the Part of my Father, and I have Lands in Dale by Descent on the Part of my Mother, but no Lands by Descent on the Part of my Father, there the Release is void; for if the Releasee will aid himself by the Release, he ought to [p] aver that I had such Lands in Dale by Descent on the Part of my Father, to which the Release extended, and the same is issuable, and if he cannot aver this, then the Release is void. And so the Words of the Certainty, viz. which I have by Descent on the Part of my Father, being added to the general Words which were incertain, are of Effect. [q] But if the Release had been in White-Acre in Dale, which I have by Descent on the Part of my Father, and I had it not by Descent on the Part of my Father, but otherwise, yet the Release is good, and the Releasee shall not be compelled to take any Averment, for the Thing was certainly expressed by the first Words, in which Case the Addition of another certainty is not necessary, but superfluous, and therefore he shall not there take an Averment upon a Thing which is of no Effect, be the same true or false. [r] And upon this Dyer Chief Justice put the Case in 20. Ass. where in an Assize of 20 Cart-loads of Wood the Plaintiffs shewed forth a Deed, by which one H. Tenant of the Wood had granted out of it the 20 Cart-loads of Wood to one J. in Fee, of which the aforesaid J. had 16 by the Grant of Richard the Father of the aforesaid H. for Housebote and

and Heybote, and alſo they ſhewed forth another Deed of Grant made over to them the ſaid Plaintiffs by the ſaid J. And the Plaint was challenged, becauſe by the firſt Deed it was ſuppoſed that the 16 Cart-loads commenced by another Deed which they did not ſhew; and the Plaint was there held good, without ſhewing the Deed of the firſt Grant of the 16 Cart-loads, becauſe the Grant of H. Tenant of the Soil was ſufficient for the 20 Cart-loads; and although it was ſaid in the Deed that the 16 were by the Grant of his Father, this was not Matter of Subſtance, for there was Subſtance and Certainty enough before. [a] And hereupon he alſo put the Caſe of Margery Parker in 9. H. 6. where the Queen had granted to her for Term of her Life 20*l. percipiendum* [b] de quadam ſumma pecuniæ aſſignatæ in partem dotis ipſius Reginæ de magna Cuſtuma de London, by the Hands [c] of the Collectors of the ſame Cuſtom, and ſhe brought a Writ of Annuity for the 20*l.* againſt the Queen, and the Writ was adjudged maintenable; for it is there held, that if the Queen had [d] not any Sum of the Cuſtom aſſigned to her, yet the Grant was good, becauſe there was ſufficient Subſtance and Certainty in the Grant before the Words percipiendum de quadam ſumma, &c. So that if the Thing has Subſtance and Certainty enough, there needs no other Words of Certainty; and therefore the Averment that it was in the Tenure and Occupation of Wilcox ſhall be to no Purpoſe, ſeeing it is not material whether it was ſo or not. And as to what was ſaid, that the Demiſe is alſo by the Name of another Tenement with all the Lands, &c. which Words (another Tenement with, &c.) are not of themſelves ſo certain as the Word (Farm) is, but are utterly incertain, and becauſe of that Incertainty an Averment ought to be taken; Sir, as to this it is to be conſidered whether or no the Words (another Tenement with, &c.) are material to make the Leaſe good, and if they are not, then an Averment is not requiſite. And it was ſaid that they are not of Subſtance to make the Leaſe good; and becauſe this is Part of the principal Matter, the Validity of theſe Words is diſcuſſed and cleared up in the Argument of the principal Matter afterwards, where it appears more at large. Wherefore (it was ſaid) it is not neceſſary, for the Declaration is in this Manner, viz. "And the ſaid "Roger being poſſeſſed of the ſaid Tenements, the Reverſion thereof belonging to the ſaid John "Prior and his Succeſſors, the ſame John Prior and the Convent afterwards, viz. the 4th Day "of September, &c. leaſed to the Plaintiff, &c." Which Words contain that Wilcox was poſſeſſed at the Time of the new Leaſe made, for the Words (the ſaid Roger being poſſeſſed) being ſpoken in the ablative Caſe abſolute, are of the ſame Effect, by the Converſion of the Participle (being) into the Verb ſum, as if it had been ſaid, "when the aforeſaid Roger was poſſeſſed "the Abbot and Convent demiſed," &c. in which Caſe it is affirmed that Wilcox was poſſeſſed when the Abbot and Convent demiſed. And the Word (afterwards) in Latin (poſtea,) being in the Sentence, is referred to the Time before ſpoken of, viz. to the Election and Seizin of John the Prior. And then the Senſe is, viz. after that John was elected and made Prior, and ſeized of the Reverſion, and when Wilcox was poſſeſſed, the Prior and Convent demiſed, &c. And ſo the Poſſeſſion of Wilcox at the Time of the new Leaſe being affirmed and ſhewn by the Plaintiff once, it is not neceſſary to be ſhewn and affirmed again; and therefore the Exception was diſallowed by the Rule of the Court.

Exception 6. Another Exception taken was, that in the Count it is ſhewn that the Reverſion of the Farm is demiſed before the habendum, and nothing is there expreſſed in the habendum, by which Means it is referred by the Law to the Thing beforementioned, viz. to the Reverſion of the Farm, and in the Leaſe recited in the Record de verbo in verbum it appears that the habendum is of all the Farm, &c. and is not of the Reverſion of the Farm, as it ſhould be taken by the Count, ſo that there is a Variance between the Thing in the habendum intended by the Count, and the Thing in the habendum expreſſed in the Leaſe. To which it was anſwered, that if there be any Diverſity in Law between the habendum the Farm from the End of the firſt Leaſe, and the habendum the Reverſion of the Farm from the End of the firſt Leaſe, then is there a Variance in Fact, for which the Count ſhall abate; but if it is all one in Effect in Judgment in Law, then there is no Variance at all. So that this reſts upon the Judgment of the Law, and is one of the Points of the principal Matter; and therefore it is referred to the Argument of the principal Matter.

Exception 7. Another Exception was taken to the Count, becauſe the ſecond Leaſe is made to commence after the End and Expiration of the ſaid Term of Years demiſed to the aforeſaid Roger Wilcox, whereas in Truth the firſt Demiſe was made to Bailey and his Wife, and the Term was conveyed to Wilcox by the Marriage of the Wife and her Death, by the Act and Operation of Law. [e] For if a Woman poſſeſſed of a Term for Years takes Huſband, and the Wife dies, although during her Life the Term was not [f] deveſted out of her, yet by her Death it is veſted in the Huſband, and is given to him by the Act of the Law, quod Curia conceſſit, becauſe it is a Thing in Poſſeſſion and not in Action. Then it was ſaid, that foraſmuch as it is given to the Huſband by the Act of Law, it cannot be ſaid that the ſaid Term of Years was demiſed to Wilcox. To which it was anſwered, that although the Count is, after the End and Expiration of the ſaid Term of Years demiſed to Wilcox, and the Leaſe itſelf ſays, granted to the ſaid Wilcox, and although it is in Fact conveyed or given to Wilcox by the Act of the Law, [g] yet the Words are proper enough to limit the certain Commencement of the ſecond Leaſe, for it is not to be taken by the Words demiſed to Wilcox, that it muſt of Neceſſity be intended that the firſt Leaſe was made to Wilcox, for the Words demiſed to Wilcox may properly enough be uſed when the Term was firſt made to another, and granted or aſſigned over to Wilcox. So that demiſed may well be taken for left to another, or granted over to another, or demiſed over to another. [h] And therefore if a Leaſe for Years is made to A. who grants over his Term to B. and the Leſſor brings an Action of Waſt againſt B. the Form of the Regiſter is, that B. did Waſt in Land which he held by the Demiſe of A. to whom the Plaintiff demiſed. So that a Grant over of a Term may be called a Demiſe. And whether the Grant over of a Term be by Act in Deed, or by Act in Law, it may properly enough be called a Demiſe. Wherefore this Exception was alſo diſallowed by the Rule of the Court.

Another Exception taken was, that in the Count the Plaintiff has alledged that the Prior and Convent by Deed enrolled granted the Reversion to King, &c. and has not alledged that the Prior was then seized of the Reversion. And this he ought to do, inasmuch as he removes the Reversion out of the Prior to the King in order to convey it to Pinnock and his Wife, and so on to the Defendants, to drown the first Term. And that which shall be devested at a certain Time ought to be shewn to be at the same Time in him out of whom it shall be devested, and it shall not be intended to continue in him without being shewn. [a] And therefore in 7. H. 7. in Trespass for cutting and carrying away Trees the Defendant said that such a one before the Trespass supposed made a Feoffment to the Use of one Alice, prætextu quorum the said Alice gave him (the Defendant) the Trees, and this Plea was adjudged insufficient, because it is not shewn that the Feoffee was seized to the Use of Alice at the Time of the Gift, for it shall not be intended to continue in him without being specially shewn. So in the Case here where a Conveyance is made of the Inheritance out of the Prior, the Plaintiff ought to have shewn that the Thing conveyed out of him by the Grant was in him at the Time of the Grant, and especially as it is in a Count, which ought to contain Certainty to all Purposes, and shall not be taken by Intendment. And because the Plaintiff has not shewn certainly that the Reversion was in the Prior at the Time of the Grant to the King, the Count is vicious; and of this Opinion was Dyer Chief Justice. But the other Judges were of the contrary Opinion, because a Fee Simple or other certain Estate conveyed to one shall be intended to [c] continue in the Person, in whom it is reposed, always during the same Estate, if it be not shewn how it is otherwise devested, and especially in Men of Religion, into whose Hands the Lands which come are said in the Law to come into Mortmain, so called (as Weston Justice said) by Resemblance [d] to a Man in his last Moments, who holds whatever he takes in his Hand mortuo manu, that is, so fast that he never quits it until he is dead. So that an Inheritance is supposed to continue in Men of Religion as long as the House itself continues. [e] And the Successor without any Seizin in him shall have an Assize of Novel-Disseizin for Rent upon the Seizin of his Predecessor, for Seizin once had continues in the House. And so Continuance of the Reversion is supposed in the Prior. And altho' by the Rule of Law [f] Declarations shall not be taken by Intendment, but ought to have Certainty, yet this Rule admits of an Exposition, and is to be thus taken, viz. where the Incertainty is so great that it stands indifferently which Way it be taken. [g] But where one Way is most strong, and the Intendment that Way exceeds much the Intendment the other Way, such Intendment shall be allowed, and Declarations shall be adjudged good according to such Intendment. [h] As in Debt against the Heir the Count shall be good notwithstanding the Plaintiff does not shew that the Executors have not Assets, because that shall be intended, for it shall be presumed that the Plaintiff would not else have brought his Action. And many other Cases were put hereupon; for which Reason the Exception was not good, according to their Opinions.

Another Exception taken to the Count was, in that the Plaintiff has said therein that by Force of the Grant by Deed enrolled, and by Force of the Statute, King Henry 8. was seized of the Reversion of the said Tenements, &c. So that he has shewn that he was seized by two Means, whereas he might have omitted the Statute, and in shewing these two Ways of Seizin he has made his Count double. To which the Court said, that of Necessity he ought to shew the Grant by Deed enrolled, [i] for the Statute of 31. H. 8. does not give any Monasteries, nor any Lands or Tenements of Monasteries to the King. But the Statute has two Branches in it, the first of which enacts that the said King shall have and hold to him his Heirs and Successors all Lands and Tenements of Monasteries which had come to his Hands after the 4th Day of February in the 27th Year of his Reign; the other Branch enacts, that not only the said Lands and Tenements come to his Hands since the said 4th Day of February, but also all other Monasteries which hereafter (viz. after the first Day of the said Parliament) shall be dissolved, surrendered, or by any Means come to the said King, and all Lands and Tenements appertaining to the same, whensoever they shall be dissolved, surrendered, or by any other Means come to the King's Hands, shall be vested, deemed, and adjudged by Authority of this Parliament in the actual and real Seizin and Possession of the said King his Heirs and Successors for ever, in the State and Condition they now be, &c. So that the Statute does not give any Lands or Tenements of Monasteries to the King, but the first Branch shews how the King shall hold them that were then come to his Hands, and the other shews how those and the others which should afterwards come to him shall be adjudged in him. Wherefore the Statute does not give de novo any Lands to the King, but expresses the Manner of holding them which were already come, and which were to come to his Hands. For which Reason the first coming of Lands to the King's Hands ought to be expressed, and therefore the Court held that of Necessity the Grant by Deed enrolled ought to be shewn. And also they held that the Plaintiff ought of Necessity to make Mention of the Statute also, for the said second Branch of the Statute ordains that those Monasteries and their Lands which are come, or shall come to the Hands of the King, shall be vested and adjudged by Authority of this Parliament in the actual and real Seizin and Possession of the King, &c. And if the Statute has made them to be vested in the King, and to be adjudged in him by Force of the Statute, then of Necessity the Plaintiff ought to shew that which makes the Land to be adjudged in the King, viz. the Statute. So that the Grant by Deed enrolled and the Statute also ought to be ſhewn, for the Statute does not enure without the Grant, and the Grant without the Statute cannot be ſhewn, for when the Statute ſays that the Lands ſhall be adjudged in the King by Force of the Statute, it reſtrains all Men from ſaying that they ſhall be in him otherwiſe; and therefore altho' they come to the Hands of the King by the Grant, yet after they are come they ſhall be adjudged in him by the Statute, and all Men are reſtrained from ſaying the contrary. As if a Statute was made that all Lands which the Duke of Somerſet ſhould purchaſe ſhould be adjudged by the Statute to him and to his Heirs of the Body of his ſecond Wife begotten, this Act reſtrains all Men from ſaying that they ſhould be in him otherwiſe. So that the Grant to the King was not the only Cauſe of the Seizin of the King, but the Grant and the Statute together, and therefore both of them ought to be ſhewn; [a] and that which a Man is forced to ſhew cannot be ſaid to be double, nor ſhall it ever make the Plea double. And many Caſes were put hereupon, and ſo they held that the ſhewing of the Grant and the Act did not make the Plea double. But Dyer Chief Juſtice ſaid, that altho' the Plaintiff ought to ſhew both, yet he thought that the Plaintiff ought to conclude virtute cujus ſtatuti the King was ſeized of the Reverſion &c. omitting the Grant, for the Grant by Deed enrolled does not make the Seizin, but the Statute, as it is ſaid; and there is a Transformation of the Seizin, by the Words of the Act, from the Force of the Grant to the Force of the Act, and then he ought to ſhew the Grant and the Act, and ſay, "by Force of which Act of Parliament he was ſeized &c." So that the Concluſion of the Seizin is not good. For if the Grant by Deed enrolled had been before the Act, as here it is in Time after the Act, tho' in it's Operation it precedes the Act, then he ought to have ſaid, "by Force of which Grant the King was ſeized of the Reverſion, "&c. until the Day of the Act, at which Day the King was ſeized of the Reverſion, &c. by Force "of the Act," ſo that when the Force of the Act takes Place he ought to rely only upon the Act. So in the principal Caſe foraſmuch as the Act took Effect at the ſame Inſtant that the Grant took Effect, he ought to have relied upon the Act only; and therefore it ſeemed to him that the Concluſion might have been better than it was. But for another Reaſon he was of Opinion that the Plaintiff had not well concluded upon the Seizin, viz. becauſe he has not ſhewn that the Prior granted to the King as well the Monaſtery as the Reverſion. For the ſaid Statute does not extend to any Lands or Tenements of any Monaſtery, but to Lands or Tenements of Monaſteries diſſolved, ſuppreſſed, renounced, relinquiſhed, forfeited or ſurrendered, for the Words of the ſaid ſecond Branch are, that not only the ſaid Monaſteries and other the Premiſſes immediately and preſently, but alſo all other Monaſteries, Abbies, Priories, &c. which ſhall happen hereafter to be diſſolved, ſuppreſſed, renounced, relinquiſhed, forfeited, ſurrendered, or by any other Means come to the King, and all the Sites, Circuits, Precincts, Lands, Tenements, &c. appertaining to the ſame, as ſoon as they ſhall be diſſolved, ſuppreſſed, &c. ſhall be veſted, deemed, and adjudged by Authority of this Parliament in the very actual and real Seizin and Poſſeſſion of the King, &c. And here theſe Words (appertaining to them) ought to be referred to them diſſolved, ſuppreſſed, ſurrendered, &c. And ſo the Plaintiff ought to have ſhewn that as well the Priory as the Reverſion of the Farm came to the Hands of the King, for now it does not appear when the Monaſtery was diſſolved; but in the Count it is, late Prior of the Monaſtery, &c. diſſolved, which implies that it was diſſolved at the Time of the Pleading, but the Time when it was firſt diſſolved is incertain to us. Wherefore foraſmuch as the Plaintiff has not ſhewn that the Monaſtery was diſſolved in the Time of King Henry 8. or came to his Hands, but has only ſhewn the Reverſion granted to him, he has not well concluded that by Force of the Grant and of the Act the King was ſeized, but he ought to have ſaid that by Force of the Act he was ſeized, omitting the Grant, and he ought not to have relied upon both.

Exception 10.

Another Exception the Lord Dyer took to the Count, viz. for that it is alledged therein that the Woman one of the Defendants took to Huſband Adams the other Defendant, whereby Adams and his Wife were poſſeſſed of the ſaid Tenements, and they being ſo poſſeſſed, the ſaid Pinnock and his Wife demiſed the Tenements to them for their Lives. And this they could not do, for during the Time that Adams and his Wife were poſſeſſed by Force of the firſt Leaſe, the ſecond Leaſe could not take Effect, for they could not have [b] both the Leaſes at one ſame Time. Wherefore it is repugnant to ſay that the ſecond Leaſe was made to them when they were poſſeſſed of the firſt Leaſe. But the Plaintiff ought to have alledged a Surrender previouſly of the firſt Leaſe, or that Pinnock and his Wife with the Aſſent of Adams and his Wife entered upon the Land, and made them a new Leaſe. [c] And ſo was it accordingly done in the Caſe of Chamberlain and his Wife in 40. Ed. 3. in Aſſize of a Houſe brought by them againſt the Prioreſs of Clerkenwel, where they made their Title in this Manner, viz. they ſhewed that the firſt Huſband of the Wife was Tenant for Life of the Leaſe of the Prioreſs, and afterwards the Prioreſs entered into the Houſe by the Aſſent of the firſt Huſband, and delivered Seizin again to him and to his Wife (one of the Plaintiffs) for Term of their two Lives, which Entry with the Aſſent of the Huſband was a Surrender, and this Title was good, for there it was ſhewn that the firſt Leaſe was determined by the ſaid Surrender before the ſecond Leaſe was made. But here the Plaintiff has alledged that Adams and his Wife being poſſeſſed, Pinnock and his Wife made the ſecond Leaſe to them, which could not be, for there is a Priority of Time in this Caſe, that is to ſay, the End of the firſt Leaſe is prior in Time to the Commencement of the ſecond Leaſe, and conſequently the Commencement of the ſecond Leaſe is after the End of the firſt. And therefore altho' the End of the firſt Leaſe and the Commencement

Commencement of the second Lease are made at one Time, yet in that Time there is a Priority, viz. first the End of the former Lease, and afterwards the Commencement of the new Lease. And because the Plaintiff has not divided the Time, and shewn first the End of the former Lease, and afterwards the Commencement of the second Lease, the Count is not good, according to his Apprehension, and yet, he said, it was a doubtful Point, and fit to be considered. But none of the other Justices spoke to it; for he, arguing last, moved the Exception, and none of them else took Notice of it.

The Argument upon the Matter in Law.

As to the Matter in Law, it was divided into three Points. First, what was the Thing demised to the Plaintiff; secondly, in what Degree the Thing demised was demised, viz in Reversion or in Possession; thirdly, when the Thing demised shall commence. And as to the first Point (it was said) it appears by the Count and also by the Deed of Demise, that the Demise is of the Reversion of all their Farm in Brosley, and also of another Tenement, with all the Lands, Leasows, Pastures, and Meadows to the same belonging, &c. Wherefore it is to be considered what is a Farm, and how much it contains. And by Anthony Brown Justice and Dyer Chief Justice, a [a] Farm is a collective Word consisting of divers Things collected together, whereof one is a Messuage, and the others are the Lands, Meadows, Pastures, Woods, Commons, and others Things lying or appertaining thereto. And the Messuage is not a common Messuage, nor are the Lands of the Quality of other Lands commonly lying to other Messuages in the same Town, but it is a capital Messuage in a Town, and the Lands lying to it are great Demesns, and more extensive in Quantity than the Demesns which lie to other Messuages. And yet all this does not make it to be called a Farm, if it has not another Thing also; and that is, [b] that it has been let or demised to another for Life, for Years, or at Will, for if it has been always reserved in the Hands of the Inheritor thereof, it has not the Name of a Farm. So that a Farm contains divers Things, as hath been said, as a [c] Grange does; and it is a capital Messuage and a great Demesn which have been let and demised, and so is it commonly taken in every Place. For which Reason the Law also says it is so, for the Law is the Custom in relation to Letters, Counts, Pleas, and Judgments, and the Common Law is nothing but common Use. And such is the Definition of a Farm as to the Lessor and the Lessee. But a Farm is oftentimes used in other Senses, for as to the Lessee only he may be said to be a Farmer of whatever Thing he has in Lease; and that which he holds may, as to him, be called his Farm. [d] And so the Statute of Marlbridge uses the Word, which says, Also Farmers during the Time of their Farms shall not make waste, sale, nor exile of Houses, Woods, or Men, nor of any Thing belonging to the Tenements that they have to Farm; so that it calls him a Farmer of Houses, Woods, and Villains, and says the Tenements which they have to Farm, and during the Time of their Farms, which is as much as to say during their Lease. And there Farmers are intended generally for Lessees. Also Farm has another Sense, viz. it is called a Rent reserved; and that is a common Sense of the Word. But the Sense of Farm in our Case is that which is first mentioned. And that Sense of the Word has been lately taken in this Court in Bridge's Case, [e] where a Man made a Lease of a capital Messuage and of the great Demesns lying thereto, rendring Rent, and devised by his Testament to another all his Farm in such a Place, and it was here debated whether the Devisee should have the Rent only, or the Reversion and the Rent, and the Opinion of this whole Court was, that the Devisee should have the Reversion and the Rent also, for the Word (Farm) was taken in such Sense as it is first defined above: Wherefore when he devised the Farm, this is sufficient to make the Reversion thereof pass, and when the Reversion passes, the Rent shall pass as incident to it, and so he shall have the whole. For which Reason in our principal Case Farm being taken as before has certainty enough in itself, and contains a Thing certain. And then the Words in the Lease, viz. with all the Lands, Leasows, Pastures, and Meadows to the same belonging, are of no Effect as to the Farm, for the Word (Farm) contains all this in itself. And also the Averment that the said Land, Meadow, and Pasture from Time immemorial have always been demisable and demised with the Farm, &c. is unnecessary to be taken, because the Word (Farm) comprehends this, as it has been said. So that it contains certainty enough to all Intents. And therefore if it was not in the Tenure of Wilcox, it is not material, by reason of the sufficient Certainty in the Word (Farm), for which Reason the Count is good without any Averment that the Thing demised was in the Tenure of Wilcox, as it is declared before in the Exception taken to it; and so the Thing leased is sufficiently shewn before. And as to the other Words in the Demise before the habendum, viz. by the Name of another Tenement, with all the Lands, &c. to the same belonging) it was said by Anthony Brown that these would not aid the Lessee, nor make the Lease good the sooner, because when it is said (by the Name of another Tenement) which is in Latin unius alius tenementi, this Word (alius) implies that it is another than the Farm, and it is an Exception from the Farm. As if I give to one all my Lands in Essex other than in Dale, there this is in Sense an Exception of all my Lands in Dale. [f] And so in Acts of Parliament touching the Forfeiture of the Lands of Persons attainted of Treason, it is commonly used to put in, saving the Right of all Men other than he that is attainted, and his Heirs, there (other than) is an Exception of the Person attainted and his Heirs. So (other Tenement) here cannot be the Farm of Brosley. Wherefore the Thing demised is only the Farm, or only the Tenement and the Lands thereof. And that it is the Farm which is intended to be demised here, and which is also shewn to be demised here, appears in that the Plaintiff has brought his Ejectione Firmæ in Brosley, whereby whereby it muſt of Neceſſity be for a Thing in Broſley, and it is not expreſſed where the other Tenement lies. And alſo by the Quantity of the Land, Meadow, and Paſture it ſeems to be a Farm, and by the Certainty of the Demiſe to Bailey and his Wife, and the Conveyance of the whole to Wilcox it is apparent that the Plaintiff brought the Suit for the Farm, and that the Thing demiſed to Bailey and his Wife was a Farm. So that it appears that the Suit here is brought for that which might paſs by the Name of a Farm, and that the ſaid other Tenement is different from it. Wherefore the Thing demiſed to the Plaintiff is ſhewn and expreſſed to us to be demiſed only by the Name of the Farm of Broſley, and the Thing demiſed is certain enough, and paſſes by the Name of the Farm only. And ſo it appears what was the Thing demiſed.

2 Point. As to the ſecond Point, viz. in what Degree it is demiſed, whether in Reverſion or in Poſſeſſion; for the underſtanding hereof, the Court ſaid, it is neceſſary to conſider the Premiſſes of the Deed, the habendum, and the Limitation of the Commencement of the Leaſe made to the Plaintiff, and in the Diſcuſſion thereof it is the Office of the Court to make all the Parts ſtand together, if they may by Law, for it is impoſſible to form a Judgment upon one Part only without taking all the Parts into Conſideration; ſo that one Part ſhall anſwer to another, one ſhall miniſter to another, and the one ſhall not confound the other, * for every Expoſitor ought to preſerve the Text, and make ſomething of it, and not deſtroy it. And here the Premiſſes of the Deed is a Grant and Demiſe of the Reverſion of the Farm, and the Reverſion of the Farm (if one ſhould adjudge upon this only without Reſpect to any Thing elſe) is, according to common Acceptation, a Parcel of the Eſtate in the Farm, that is, [a] it is the Eſtate left in the Leſſor or Donor, where he has given or parted with the Poſſeſſion to another. And the Reverſion and Poſſeſſion cannot ſtand together at one ſame Inſtant, for it is a Reverſion in reſpect of the Poſſeſſion ſeparated from it, [b] and the Unity of the Poſſeſſion to the Reverſion makes the Reverſion no longer a Reverſion; ſo that the Reverſion of the Farm is a certain Eſtate in the Farm in a certain Degree, that is to ſay, it is that Eſtate in the Farm which the Leſſor hath after the Diviſion of it, viz. after the Poſſeſſion is conveyed to and veſted in another during a particular Eſtate: And to this Reverſion Fealty is incident, and if it is granted [c] Attornment ought to be made, and the Reverſion of a Thing comprehends in Law the Thing itſelf. For if a Man grants to another in Fee the Reverſion of the Land which ſuch a one holds for Life, and the Tenant attorns, and afterwards he dies, the Grantee may enter and have the Land by Force of the Grant; ergo the Reverſion of Land contains the Land itſelf, for elſe he could not have the Land afterwards by Force of the Grant of the Reverſion. But it contains the Land in a Degree which is diſtinct from the Poſſeſſion, and it bears and carries in itſelf an Expectancy of the Poſſeſſion, and it is certain to have the Poſſeſſion if it continues longer than the Eſtate in Poſſeſſion. So that it comprehends in itſelf a Converſion which is to happen hereafter, viz. from it's own Degree into another Degree, and from an Eſtate in Reverſion into an Eſtate in Poſſeſſion. And ſuch is a Reverſion according to the common and moſt uſual Acceptation of the Word. But there is another Senſe of it according to it's proper Definition, wherein it is ſometimes uſed, which is meerly contrary to the Degree wherein it is moſt commonly taken, and that is, [d] it is taken for the Land itſelf diſcharged of the particular Eſtate. For Reverſion is a Noun Subſtantive derived from the Verb revertor. [e] So that reverſio terræ is in Engliſh the returning of the Land, which (as the Lord Dyer defined it) is the ſame in Senſe with the Land returning. Wherefore (as it ſeemed to him) reverſio terræ eſt terra revertens, which is the Land in a certain Degree, viz. when it is diſcharged of the particular Eſtate, and when the Poſſeſſion thereof is coming where the Reverſion was. So that a Reverſion cannot be uſed in this Senſe when the particular Eſtate and Poſſeſſion continue in another, but only where the particular Eſtate is ended, and the Poſſeſſion is not in any other, but is coming to him who had the Reverſion. As if I would ſay that whereas A. hath an Eſtate and Poſſeſſion for two Years in an Acre, after which two Years the ſaid Acre is to return to me, I demiſe to you the ſame Acre when it is returning to me, or when it ſhall return to me, or if I ſay, when it is returning to me you ſhall have it, theſe Words and the Demiſe of the Reverſion of the Acre are all one, and of the ſame Senſe and Subſtance. So that a Reverſion of Land, according to the moſt common Acceptation, is taken and uſed when the Poſſeſſion is removed from it, and when the particular Eſtate endures; but according to the proper Definition of it, and according to the Senſe leaſt uſed, it is taken for the Land diſcharged of the particular Eſtate, and when the Poſſeſſion is coming to him that had the Reverſion, and in both theſe Caſes it contains the Land, but in ſeveral Degrees. Then here foraſmuch as the Grant and Demiſe is only of the Reverſion of the Farm, (for the other Tenement does not ſerve here for the Cauſe before ſhewn) and this Word (Reverſion) may be taken in two Senſes, it is further to be ſeen in which Senſe it ſhall be here uſed, and whether it may ſerve in both Senſes, or perhaps but in one Senſe only. And as to this the habendum and the Limitation of the Commencement of the Leaſe made to the Plaintiff are to be conſidered. And the habendum here contained in the Count is referred to the Thing before mentioned, viz. to the Reverſion of the Farm. For when a Man limits a Thing before the habendum, and afterwards ſays, habendum for Years, or for Life, or in Fee, and does not name the Thing in the habendum, it ſhall be referred to the Thing mentioned before the habendum, and it is not neceſſary to repeat the Thing again in the habendum. [f] For the Office of the Premiſſes of a Deed is to expreſs the Certainty of the Thing given, [g] and of the habendum to expreſs the Quantity of the Eſtate.

And

‖ And the habendum is good enough without repeating the Thing, and shall be referred to the Thing beforementioned. And here it is not well to read habendum in the Count, but it ought to be habenda, for it is not put there gerundivè, but passivè, as the Lord Dyer said. So that all that which is disclosed by the Pleading and by the per nomen being put together is, that he demised the Reversion of the Farm, and the other Tenement with all the Lands, &c. habenda eidem Richardo, &c. but in the Deed it is habendum. Wherefore the Thing which is in the Premisses of the Grant appearing by the Count is the Reversion of the Farm, and the Thing contained in the habendum, as the Plaintiff has counted, is the Reversion also, but by the Deed recited the habendum is of the Farm, and not of the Reversion of the Farm, and so the Plaintiff has not demeaned himself in his Count according to the Deed. And (it was said) the Case as to this Point is the same in Effect with the Case of † Throckmerton v. Tracy adjudged in this Court in the Time of Queen Mary. But now inasmuch as by the Count the Grant is of the Reversion, habendum the Reversion from the End and Expiration of the first Term, &c. wherein there is some Variance from the Deed, it is to be seen whether the Thing contained in the habendum, viz. the Reversion, is of the same Effect and Substance in Law as if he had said, habendum the Farm itself from the End and Expiration of the first Term, &c. And as to this, forasmuch as the Word (Reversion) has two * Senses, as it is shewn before, and in each Sense it comprehends the Land, but in several Degrees, it is to be considered if the Word can serve here in the most usual Sense and Degree, as it is shewn before. And as to this, it was taken that it could not, if it be all considered together; but that in the Premisses of the Grant or Demise it might well enough serve in such Sense and Degree, or in the other Sense, as it might in the habendum also if it had not been limited at a Day to come, but presently, for if the Grant had been of the Reversion, habendum the Reversion for Years, for Life, or in Fee, this had been pursuant enough to the Premisses; and there he ought to have Attornment, and by reason of the Reversion he should have the Fealty and Rent, if any was incident to it. But when he goes further and says, "habendum the Reversion from the End "and Expiration of the first Term for 63 Years thence next ensuing," this cannot stand with the first Part, for the Nature of the Reversion here is taken in the most usual Sense, viz. to pass presently. [a] And it is contrary to the Law to vest in its proper Degree at a Day to come, for if it should vest at a Day to come, then the Grantor would in the mean time have a [b] lesser Estate in the Reversion of his own Creation than he had before. For if I make a Lease for Life to a Man, and afterwards I grant the Reversion to another, habendum to him and to his Heirs from the Feast of St. Michael the Archangel next coming, if the Grant should be good to the Lessee, and the Reversion take effect from the Feast of St. Michael, I who had a Fee in the Reversion before, after the Grant should have but a Chattlereal, viz. an Estate until the Feast of St. Michael. So that my Estate would be divided, and a small Part of it left in me, and I should be Tenant for Years of the Reversion of my own [c] Lease or making, which is a Thing the Law will not suffer, for in every Lease there ought to be a distinct Lessor, and a distinct Lessee. [d] For if I have a Rent in Fee, I cannot grant this to you from a Day to come, as it is held in 8. H. 7. for the Reason above given. [e] But if I have Land, I may grant a Rent de novo out of it to commence at a Day to come, for there I shall not have any particular Estate in it in the mean time, for it was not in esse before, but commenced de novo, and therefore I may appoint it to commence when I will. But in our Case the Reversion of the Farm is in esse, and he that has it cannot make his Estate less in it without first devesting the whole out of him. [f] And therefore a Reversion cannot pass in the Degree of a Reversion, according to the common Acceptation of it, at a Day to come. Also here it cannot vest as a Reversion in the Plaintiff after the End and Expiration of the first Lease for another Reason, viz. because then it is no Reversion. For then the Farm is in Possession, and so in another Degree than a Reversion, according to the common Acceptation of the Word. Yet the Nature of every Reversion is to come to the Possession of the Thing after the particular Estate ended, if it endures so long, but that is, when once it took Effect as a Reversion, and in the Degree of a Reversion, according to the common Acceptation of the Word, but to grant it in the Degree of a Reversion, and to take Effect at first in another Degree which is contrary to the Degree in which it was granted, is meerly repugnant in Law. Wherefore if the Reversion here should be taken in the most usual Sense and Degree, all the Parts of the Grant and Demise could not stand together, but the last would destroy the first. And it is the Office of Judges (as Anthony Brown said) to expound Things ut res magis valeat quam pereat, and to make all the Parts of a Deed and the Intent of the Parties also agree together, which cannot be here if the Grant and Demise of the Reversion should be taken according to its most usual Sense and common Acceptation. And therefore it is the most reasonable Way to reject such Sense and Degree of the Word (Reversion), and to use it according to the other Sense and Degree, if it may be used therein, and if it being so used will satisfy the Intent of the Parties, and agree with the Law. And this (it was said) it may well enough, for the Reversion of the Farm, taken in the said other Sense and Degree, is the Farm reverting, or when it is reverting, and so it is the Thing itself void and discharged of all Leases and particular Estates, and in such Degree it is properly demisable. And the Word (Reversion) taken in such Signification stands well with the Premisses of the Demise pleaded, and with the habendum, and with the Limitation of the Commencement of the Lease, and so every part put together makes a good Demise of the Farm when it shall revert, and of the Possession when it shall accrue, and avoids all Sort of Repugnancy. [g] And therefore it is all one where the Party demises the Reversion of the Farm, habendum the Farm from the Time of the first Lease ended and expired, and where he demises the Reversion of the Farm, habendum the Reversion of the Farm from the Time of the first Lease ended and expired, for in both Cases it is in Sense a De-

[a] Ante 147. miſe of the Farm when it ſhall revert, and ſo is equivalent to the ſaid Caſe of [a] Throckmerton v. Tracy, which each of the Judges alledged, and referred themſelves to the Argument therein, and ſaid that the Senſe of the Reverſion there taken before the habendum ſerves here in the ſame Senſe both before the habendum and after it. And they here put many Caſes which were then put in the Argument of the ſaid Caſe of Throckmerton v. Tracy, which I have here omitted, becauſe I have reported them at large in the ſaid Caſe itſelf. Wherefore the Court took the Reverſion in the Premiſſes and in the habendum to be in the ſaid ſecond Degree, and ſo to agree here well enough.

3 Point. Then as to the third Point, viz. ſeeing that the Leaſe made to the Plaintiff is limited to commence after the End and Expiration of the firſt Term of Years, which Term of Years is now determined by the Leaſe made to the Defendants by Pinnock and his Wife, whether or no the Demiſe made to the Plaintiff ſhall take place preſenly upon that Determination: And it was objected that it ſhould not, for although the firſt Leaſe is determined, yet this Determination came by the Act of the Defendants in taking a greater Eſtate, which is only a Determination in Law, and not a Determination in Fact, which was intended by the Limitation of the Commencement of the Demiſe to the Plaintiff. For the End of the Term limited for the Commencement of the ſaid Demiſe to the Plaintiff was ſuch an End as was commonly preſumed, that is, by Effluxion of Time, and not by Act of the Law, or Abbreviation of the Party. And though a Man ſhould ſtretch the Word (End) to every Kind of End or Determination, yet he cannot do ſo with the other Word, viz. Expiration, for (it was ſaid) Expiration is a particular Word, peculiarly appropriated to Effluxion of Time. So that although it might be objected (as indeed it cannot) that End is a general Term not limited to any ſpecial Meaning, yet it cannot be ſo objected as to Expiration, which is a particular Term that cannot be drawn to any general Senſe out of its particular Signification. And therefore ſeeing the Limitation of the Commencement of the ſaid Demiſe made to the Plaintiff is appointed to be upon the End and Expiration of the firſt Term of Years, the Plaintiff ought to wait until both the Words preceding the Commencement of his Term are accompliſhed, and the Time of the Commencement thereof is not yet come. And although it be admitted that the taking of the Leaſe for Life ſhall be an End and Expiration of the firſt Term of Years as to the Defendants themſelves, yet as to a Stranger it is not ſo, [b] for if the Defendants had granted a Rent-charge to a Stranger out of the firſt Term, there notwithſtanding the Determination of the firſt Leaſe by the taking of the Leaſe for Life, they ſhould have held the Farm charged with the Rent-charge as to the Grantee, for he is a Stranger, and as to him the firſt Leaſe has Continuance. So the Plaintiff here is a Stranger, and againſt him the firſt Leaſe continues and ſhall continue until the Years are elapſed by Time, wherefore the Term ſhall not yet commence, and conſequently the Plaintiff's Suit is not maintenable.

But the Court argued to the contrary. For where the Commencement of the ſecond Term is limited upon the End and Expiration of the firſt Term of Years, they ſaid it is proper to be ſeen what it is that ſhall be determined, viz. the Years, or the Eſtate in the Farm. And they ſaid it is the Eſtate, [c] for the Term contains all his Intereſt in the Land; [d] for if I grant to one all my Term in ſuch Land, this is as much as to ſay, all my Eſtate for Years which I have in the Land. So that a Term contains the Intereſt for Years which the Party has in it. And here the Emphaſis (as the Lord Dyer expreſſed it) is not upon the Word (Years) but upon the Word (Term); and in pronouncing the Words (from the End and Expiration of the ſaid Term of Years) the Accent ought to be laid upon the Word (Term) as the moſt material Word, and not upon the Word (Years). And it is not well written in the Record a fine et expiratione prædicti termini annorum dimiſſorum, but it ought to be dimiſſi in the ſingular Number, [e] referring the Word demiſed to the Term, and not to the Years. So that the Term, viz. the Eſtate which he has in the Farm for Years might be ended, and yet the Years not ended: Wherefore (Term) here is an Eſtate in Years or for Years, but it is not Years only without an Eſtate; and ſo if the Eſtate is ended, the Term is ended. And this is the Senſe of the Word (Term) here, although it has many other Meanings. And the Word (Expiration) is properly breathing up, or yielding up his Breath (as the Lord Dyer ſaid), and it is applied to Man, or other Things animate, and is uſed to expreſs the Death of a Man. For when he yields up his Breath, then he dies, for without his Breath he cannot live. And although it is properly uſed in Relation to Things animate which breathe, yet by a Similitude it is referred to Things inanimate. As in our Law we uſe the Word (reverter), which is properly applied to Things animate which move of themſelves, but ſometimes we uſe it in our Law in relation to Things inanimate, as we ſay, when Tenant in Tail dies the Land ſhall revert to the Donor. And ſo Expiration, which is here uſed by Similitude to Things living, implies any End whatever. For as we ſignify by Expiration the Death of a Man, and his laſt End, whatever Way it happens, ſo the Word Expiration, being applied to an Eſtate for Years, may aptly enough ſignify the End of it, whatever way it be. So that the Expiration of an Eſtate for Years, and the End of an Eſtate for Years is all one; and it cannot be otherwiſe taken but that the Intent of the Leſſor and of the Plaintiff was, that the Plaintiff ſhould have the Farm when the firſt Leaſe was gone or determined, by whatever Means the ſame happened; and to this Purpoſe they uſed the Word (Expiration). And as to what was ſaid, viz. that although it be determined as to the Defendants themſelves, yet it ſhall continue as to the Plaintiff being a Stranger, Sir, [f] a Stranger for his Advantage ſhall ſay that the Leaſe continues, and for his Advantage ſhall ſay that it is determined; [g] for if Pinnock had granted a Rent-charge out of the Reverſion, the Grantee after the Leaſe for Life made to the Defendants ſhould diſtrain for it, and if the Defendants would ſay that their Leaſe for Years had Continuance, and therefore he might not diſtrain, the Stranger ſhould ſay that it is determined. And ſo the Plaintiff being a Stranger ſhall for his Advantage take Benefit of the Determination of the firſt Eſtate, whether it be determined by Act of the Law, or by Act of the Party, or by Effluxion of Time. And therefore the firſt Eſtate for Years being abbreviated by the taking of the the Leaſe for Life trenches to the Advantage of the Plaintiff, and makes his Term to commence upon that Determination. And ſo the Opinion of all the Juſtices upon the Matter of Law was with the Plaintiff, viz. that his Leaſe was good, and that it ſhould commence [a] upon the Determination of the firſt Term of Years determined and ended by the taking of the new Leaſe for Life.

And Note, Anthony Brown ſaid that the Writ was not good for two Cauſes. One was, for that the Words of the Writ were that the Prior and Convent demiſed to the Plaintiff, whereas the Convent are dead Perſons in Law, and cannot [b] demiſe any Thing, but it is the Demiſe of the Prior only. The other was, [c] for that the Form of the Writ in the Regiſter recites that the Goods and Chattles of (the Plaintiff) to the Value, &c. found in the ſame Lands he took and carried away, which Clauſe was here omitted, and ought to have been inſerted in his Opinion, altho' it were not true, becauſe the Form of the Writ in the Regiſter is ſo and not otherwiſe. But the Lord Dyer was againſt him in both theſe Points. For, as to the firſt, inaſmuch as it is apparent in Law that the Convent could not make a Demiſe, it is to be adjudged nothing but Surpluſage, [d] which ſhall not abate the Writ. And he cited a Precedent where ſuch a Writ was good. As to the other Point, if it was not true that the Defendant took the Goods, it would not be well done to charge him with it. And although the Regiſter has this Clauſe, as it has been ſaid, yet it is to be intended by the Regiſter that the Clauſe ought to be inſerted where the Truth of the Matter is ſo, and not otherwiſe.

Rowland Morgan of Mahen in the County of Monmouth Eſquire was attached by Writ of this Exchequer to be here now on the Octave of St. Martin in this Term, to anſwer Thomas Stradling Knight in a certain Plea of Debt, and now at the aforeſaid Octave of St. Martin came here the aforeſaid Thomas Stradling Knight by Robert Leverton his Attorney, and the aforeſaid Rowland Morgan by Humphry Hatton his Attorney likewiſe came here; whereupon the aforeſaid Thomas Stradling complains againſt the aforeſaid Rowland Morgan of this, that the aforeſaid Rowland render to the aforeſaid Thomas Stradling 17*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* which he owes him, and unjuſtly detains; and for that whereas by a certain Act made at a Parliament of Lord Edward the Sixth late King of England begun and holden at Weſtminſter the firſt Day of March in the ſeventh Year of his Reign, by the ſaid Lord the King, and the Lords ſpiritual and Temporal, and the Commons in the ſame Parliament aſſembled, and alſo by Authority of the ſame Parliament amongſt other Things it is enacted, that if any Treaſurer, Receiver, or Miniſter Accountant, or their Deputy or Deputies, do take or receive of any Perſon or Perſons, any Sum or Sums of Money, or other Profit of and for the Payment of any Fees, Annuities, Penſions, Duties, or Warrants, more or otherwiſe than he or they may lawfully do by foreign Laws and Statutes therein then provided, that then the ſaid Treaſurer, Receiver, and Miniſter ſo offending ſhall forfeit and loſe for every Penny or Pennyworth ſo to be taken or received 6*s.* 8*d.* to the Party grieved, to be recovered in any of the King's Courts of Record by Bill, Plaint, or Action of Debt, in which Suit no Wager of Law, Eſſoign, or Protection ſhall be allowed, as in the Act aforeſaid amongſt other Things is more fully contained. Defendant prays Oyer of the Writ.

And the aforeſaid Rowland Morgan by his aforeſaid Attorney preſent, &c. defends the Force and Injury, Damages, and whatever, &c. and prays Oyer of the Writ aforeſaid, and it is read to him, &c. Which being heard, he ſays that at preſent he is not adviſed to anſwer the aforeſaid Thomas Stradling touching the Premiſſes; and prays Day to imparl thereon until the Octave of St. Hilary, within which, &c. which is granted to him by the Court, and the ſame Day is given to the aforeſaid Thomas Stradling here, &c. At which Day the Parties aforeſaid came here by their Attornies aforeſaid, and the aforeſaid Thomas Stradling prays that the aforeſaid Rowland Morgan may anſwer him touching the Premiſſes. And thereupon the ſame Rowland Morgan by proteſting ſays that the Declaration aforeſaid and the Matter therein contained is inſufficient in Law, to which he has no Neceſſity, nor is by the Law of the Land bound to anſwer, nevertheleſs for Plea the ſame Rowland ſays, that the aforeſaid Thomas Stradling his Action aforeſaid thereof againſt him ought not to have or maintain, becauſe he ſays that he did not take or receive the aforeſaid 4*s.* 4*d.* contrary to the Form of the Statute aforeſaid, in Manner and Form as the aforeſaid Thomas Stradling by his Writ and Declaration aforeſaid above againſt him has declared, and of this he puts himſelf upon the Country; and the aforeſaid Thomas Stradling likewiſe, therefore let a Jury come thereon. And becauſe the aforeſaid Town of Cardiff is in the County of Glamorgan in Wales, where a Sheriff of this Kingdom of England cannot intermeddle, therefore it is commanded to the Sheriff of the County of Hereford that he make to come here from the Day of Eaſter in fifteen Days twelve, &c. of the Neighbourhood of Leominſter in the ſaid County of Hereford, which is the Viſne next adjoining to the ſaid Town of Cardiff, every of whom, &c. by whom, &c. and who neither, &c. to recognize, &c. And the ſame Day is given to the Parties aforeſaid here, &c. At which Day the Parties aforeſaid came here by their Attornies aforeſaid, and the Sheriff of the ſaid County of Hereford hath not returned here the Writ, &c. Therefore it is commanded to the ſame Sheriff of the ſaid County of Hereford, as heretofore, that he make to come here on the Morrow of the Holy Trinity twelve, &c. of the Neighbourhood of Leominſter aforeſaid, in Form aforeſaid. And the ſame Day is given to the Parties aforeſaid here, &c. At which Day the Parties aforeſaid came here by their Attornies aforeſaid, and the Sheriff of the County of Hereford aforeſaid, viz. Richard Monington Eſquire, returned here the Writ of Venire Facias Juratores together with the Panel of the Names of the Jurors annexed to the ſame Writ. And the Jurors being called did not come, &c. Therefore it is commanded to the ſame Sheriff that he diſtrain the aforeſaid, &c. by their Lands, &c. ſo that, &c. on the Octave of St. Michael, or in the mean time before the Juſtices of the ſaid Lord the King and Lady the Queen aſſigned to take Aſſizes in the ſaid County of Hereford, if they ſhall firſt come, at Hereford in the ſaid County of Hereford on Wedneſday the 27th Day of July next coming, ſo that the Inquiſition thereof there diſtinctly and plainly taken before the aforeſaid Juſtices of the ſaid Lord the King and Lady the Queen for Aſſizes may be had here at the aforeſaid Octave of St. Michael; and it is ſaid to the Parties aforeſaid that they be ready there on the aforeſaid Wedneſday before the aforeſaid Juſtices of the ſaid Lord the King and Lady the Queen for Aſſizes; and that they be here at the aforeſaid Octave of St. Michael to hear their Judgment upon the Verdict of the Inquiſition aforeſaid, if, &c. At which Day the Parties aforeſaid came here by their Attornies aforeſaid, and the aforeſaid Juſtices of the ſaid Lord the King and Lady the Queen for Aſſizes delivered here the Tenor of this Plea, together with a certain Writ of Diſtringas Juratores, with the Panel of the Names of the Jurors fixed to the ſame Writ, and annexed to the ſame Tenor, which ſaid Tenor is indorſed thus, Afterwards at the Day and Place within contained before Edward Saunders Knight, and Richard Harper Eſquire aſſociated for this Purpoſe to the ſame Edward and John Whiddon Knight, Juſtices of the ſaid Lord the King and Lady the Queen aſſigned to take Aſſizes in the County of Hereford, the Preſence of the aforeſaid John not being expected, by virtue of the Writ of the ſaid Lord the King and Lady the Queen of ſi non omnes, by the Form of the Statute, &c. came as well the within named Thomas Stradling Knight, as the within ſpecified Rowland Morgan Eſquire, in their proper Perſons. And ſome of them now appeared, viz. John Goodwin Gentleman, William Burghill Gentleman, George Cromp Gentleman, James Bithell, William Tranter, and John Hilleſley, and were ſworn upon the ſaid Jury. And becauſe the reſt of the Jurors aforeſaid did not appear, therefore others of them that were ſtanding by being choſen for this Purpoſe by the Sheriff of the County aforeſaid, at the Requeſt of the aforeſaid Thomas Stradling, and by the Command of the Juſtices aforeſaid are newly added, whoſe Names are filed to the Panel within written, according to the Form of the Statute in ſuch Caſe lately made and provided; which ſaid Perſons ſo newly added being likewiſe called came, viz. John Olme, William Beal, Thomas Genis, Richard Dobbins, John Pearl, and Thomas Colling, and were ſworn upon the ſaid Jury together with the other Jurors before empannelled. Therefore, &c. Verdict for the Plaintiff.

The CASE.

The CASE was recited in this Manner. It appears by the Record that Sir Thomas Stradling Knight has ſued here an Action of Debt againſt Rowland Morgan for 17 l. 6 s. 8 d. and has declared that whereas it was enacted by a Statute made in 7. Edw. 6. that if any Treaſurer, Receiver, or Miniſter Accountant, or their Deputy or Deputies, do receive of any Perſon any Sum of Money, or any other Profit of and for the Payment of any Fees, Annuities, Penſions, Duties, or Warrants, more or otherwiſe than he lawfully may by foreign Laws and Statutes in ſuch Caſes provided, that then the ſaid Treaſurer, Receiver, and Miniſter ſo offending ſhall forfeit and loſe for every Penny or Pennyworth ſo taken or received 6 s. 8 d. to the Party grieved, to be recovered in any of the King's Courts of Record by Bill, Plaint, or Action of Debt, in which Suit no Wager of Law, Eſſoign, or Protection ſhall be allowed. And whereas the ſaid Plaintiff the laſt Day of October in the 3d & 4th Years of the Reign of King Philip and Queen Mary, and long before, by virtue of the Letters-Patent of King Henry 8. bearing Date at More the 19th Day of September in the 17th Year of his Reign, made to the ſame Plaintiff was Bedel or Collector of the Rents, Revenues, and Profits iſſuing and receivable of and in the Lordſhips or Manors of Miſkin, Glinrothney, Sighemith Nether, and Sighemith Over in the County of Glamorgan, and taking annually for the Exerciſe of his ſaid Office 13 l. 6 s. 8 d. as well by his own proper Hands as by the Hands of the Receiver of the ſaid Lordſhips or Manors for Term of his Life; The ſaid Rowland Morgan the ſame laſt Day of October being Receiver of the ſaid Lordſhips or Manors, not regarding the ſaid Statute, nor the Penalty therein, the ſame laſt Day of October at Cardiff in the ſaid County of Glamorgan, in Eaſter Term. 2 Eliz.

The Plaintiff declares in the Exchequer upon the Statute of 7. Ed. 6. cap. 1. which enacts that Receivers ſhall not extort Fees upon pain of forfeiting 6 s. 8 d. for every Penny extorted, and that the Plaintiff had the Office of Bedel and Collector of the Rents of ſome Manors in the County of Glamorgan in Wales, and 13 l. 6 s. 8 d. Fee by Patent of H. 8. for it. And that the Defendant being Receiver of the ſame Manors extortiouſly took 4 s. 4 d. at Cardiff in the County of Glamorgan. The Defendant traverſed the Receipt, which was tried by Niſi Prius in the County of Hereford, being the next Engliſh County to the Place where the Receipt was, which is in Wales, and there found for the Plaintiff. But afterwards becauſe it was not alledged in the Declaration to whom the Manors belonged at the Time of the Extortion ſuppoſed, and becauſe the Statute of 7. Edw. 6 does not extend to Receivers of others than of the King, for theſe Faults in the Declaration, notwithſtanding the Verdict for the Plaintiff, Judgment was given for the Defendant. Vide Crompton J. C. 101, a, 107, a.

the 3d & 4th Years of the Reign of the ſaid King and Queen, by the Hands of John Jenkin Servant and Deputy to the ſame Rowland, took of the ſaid Sir Thomas Stradling, by the Hands of Dio Howell then his Servant, for the Payment of 13 l. 6 s. 8 d. being the Fee then due to the ſame Sir Thomas Stradling for one whole Year ending at the Feaſt of St. Michael then laſt paſt, by Colour of the ſaid Office of the ſaid Rowland, extortiouſly 4 s. 4 d. according to the Rate of 4 d. for every twenty Shillings, more and otherwiſe than he might lawfully take or receive by any foreign Laws and Statutes in ſuch Behalf provided, contrary to the Form of the ſaid Statute. And thereupon an Action has accrued to the Plaintiff to have of the ſaid Rowland the ſaid 17 l. 6 s. 8 d. To which the Defendant pleads that he did not take nor receive the ſaid 4 s. 4 d. contrary to the Form of the ſaid Statute, in manner and Form as the ſaid Plaintiff has declared. And upon this they were at Iſſue. And becauſe the Town of Cardiff is in the County of Glamorgan in Wales, where a Sheriff of this Kingdom of England cannot meddle, the Venire Facias was awarded to the Sheriff of Hereford to cauſe 12 Men, &c. to come from the Neighbourhood of Leominſter in the ſaid County of Hereford, which is the next adjoining Viſne to the ſaid Town of Cardiff. And by Niſi prius before the Juſtices of Aſſize in the County of Hereford it was found againſt the Defendant, viz. that he had received the 4 s. 4 d. contrary to the Form of the Statute, in manner and Form as the Plaintiff had declared.

And upon this Verdict the Plaintiff afterwards in the Exchequer demanded his Judgment. And it was ſaid on Behalf of the Defendant that the Plaintiff ought not to have Judgment. And hereupon divers Points were moved. Firſt, what was the Senſe of the Declaration, viz. whether thereby the Defendant ſhall be taken a Receiver of the King, or a Receiver to another: And if he ſhall be taken by the Declaration to be a Receiver to another, and not to the King, then, ſecondly, if he ſhall be within the Purview of the Statute: And if he ſhall, then, thirdly, if the Plaintiff might ſue for the Penalty elſewhere than in Wales: And if he might, then, fourthly, if this Suit taken by original Writ in the Exchequer ſhall be maintenable by the Plaintiff, who has not ſhewn any Cauſe why he was or ſhould be privileged there. And theſe Points were moved and argued in Eaſter Term in the ſecond Year of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth by an Apprentice of the Middle-Temple on Behalf of the Defendant, and by Manwood on Behalf of the Plaintiff; and the Barons alſo argued the ſame Term.

1 Point. And as to the firſt Point, it was argued by the Counſel for the Defendants, and alſo by all the Barons, that the Defendant ſhall be taken by the Declaration to be a Receiver to another than to the ſaid King and Queen; for the Declaration ſhews that the Receipt of the 4 s. 4 d. was the laſt Day of October Anno 3 & 4. Philip and Mary, and ſhews alſo that the Plaintiff was then Bedel or Collector of the ſaid Manors by Force of the Letters Patent of King Henry 8. made to him in the 17th Year of his Reign, and ſhews alſo that the Defendant was then Receiver of the ſame Manors, but does not ſhew to whom the Manors then belonged, whether to the King or to another; and altho' it were admitted that the Manors ſhould be intended to belong to King Henry 8. in the 17th Year of his Reign, becauſe he then made the Plaintiff his Bedel of them, yet it is not ſhewn that they [a] continued in him and his Heirs, which ought to be ſhewn preciſely. And if the Manors belonged to another the ſaid laſt Day of October, then the Defendant was Receiver to that other, and not to the King; and then if ſo be there is a Diverſity in Law where the Receiver to the King takes more for Payment of a Fee than he ought, and where the Receiver to a common Perſon takes more for the Payment of a Fee than he ought, or in other Words, if the one be within the Danger of the Statute, and the other not, then the Declaration ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt the Plaintiff, viz. that the Defendant was ſuch a Receiver as ſhall be out of the Danger of the Act. For Declarations ought fully and preciſely to ſhew the Grievance of the Plaintiff, and that cannot be where in the ſubſtantial Part there is Incertainty, and ſuch too as ſtands indifferent to make the Defendant a wrong Doer or not, in which Caſe it is not reaſonable to puniſh one that is not preciſely charged. [b] Wherefore inaſmuch as Declarations impeach the Party, and force him to anſwer, and are the Foundation whereupon the Court is to give Judgment, it is reaſonable that they ſhould be certain, ſo that the Party may know what he is to anſwer to, and the Judge upon what he is to give Judgment. For which Reaſon if the Declaration is not certain to every Intent, [c] but has two Intendments, one of which makes for the Plaintiff and the other againſt him, it is reaſonable to take it in that Senſe which makes againſt him, for if his Complaint lies in the other Point it is his Folly that he did not ſhew it preciſely, ſeeing he might have done it; and ſince he has not, it ſhall be taken in the Senſe againſt him, and ſo ſhall abate, becauſe, it being taken in that Light, there is no Offence committed by the Defendant. [d] As if a Man brings an Action of Waſt againſt Tenant for Life, and declares that J. S. made the Leaſe for Life, and afterwards granted the Reverſion to him, and that the Tenant for Life attorned, and that he has done Waſt to the Diſheriſon of the Plaintiff; this Declaration is not good, becauſe he has not ſhewn that the Waſt was done after the Attornment, which he ought to do, as appears by the Book of Entries, for if it was done before the Attornment, then it was not to his Diſheriſon, nor is it any Offence to him, and if it was done after the Attornment, then it is to his Diſheriſon, and is an Offence to him. And becauſe by taking it one Way the Matter is for him, and the other Way againſt him, it ſhall be taken the Way that makes againſt him, and therefore it ſhall be inſufficient. [e] So in Aſſize of Land, if a Man makes Title in his Plaint, and ſhews that he was Lord, and that the Tenant alien'd the Land in Mortmain to the Tenant in the Aſſize, and that he entered, and ſo was ſeized until by the Tenant diſſeized, this Title is not good, becauſe it might be that he entered after the Year after the Alienation, in which Caſe his Entry was not lawful, or it might be that he entered within the Year, in which Caſe his Entry was lawful; and therefore it ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt him, viz. that he entered after the Year, and ſo the Plaint ſhall be adjudged inſufficient. [f] So (it was ſaid) the Caſe is in 3. Ed. 4. where a Man brought brought an Action of Debt for 15 l. againſt a Prioreſs, and counted that he was retained with one Cicily Predeceſſoreſs of the Defendant, in the Office of Bailiff of Huſbandry, taking 40 s. by the Year, and that he did the Services which came to the Uſe of the Houſe, and that he was not paid for ſo many Years as amount to the Sum before mentioned, and by the better Opinion this Declaration was held inſufficient, becauſe he had ſhewn that he was retained with the Predeceſſoreſs, and did not ſhew who retained him, for there it is ſaid it might be that he was retained by one who had no Warrant to retain him, and then the Retainer is void, and it might be that he was retained by the Predeceſſoreſs herſelf, or by ſome other by her Command, and then the Retainer is good; and as this may be taken two Ways it is incertain, and therefore ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt the Plaintiff, and that is, in the Senſe that makes againſt him, and ſo it ſhall be adjudged inſufficient. So in the principal Caſe the Plaintiff goes about to charge the Defendant for an Offence done the laſt Day of October Anno 3 & 4. P & M. and ſhews that he was then Receiver of the ſaid Manors, and has not ſhewn that the ſaid Manors then belonged to the ſaid King and Queen. So that it ſtands indifferent whether they belonged to them or not, and if they did belong to them, then the Defendant was Receiver to them, and ſo clearly within the Danger of the Statute; and if they then belonged to another, then the Defendant was Receiver to another. And if the Receiver to a common Perſon is out of the Danger of the Statute, then it ſhall be taken here that the Manors belonged to another than to the King, and ſo that the Defendant was Receiver to another than to the King, and conſequently out of the Danger of the Statute; for that is the Senſe that makes ſtrongeſt againſt the Plaintiff, and ſo it ſhall be taken, and therefore the Declaration is inſufficient [a] becauſe of the Incertainty in not ſhewing whoſe Receiver the Defendant was.

[a] S. P. Hardr. 135. Kitch. 437.

As to the next Point, viz. whether the Statute extends to Treaſurers, Receivers, or Miniſters Accountant of any other Perſon than the King; this was argued by the Counſel for the Defendant, and alſo it was argued and held by all the Barons, [b] that Treaſurers, Receivers, or Miniſters Accountant of common Perſons, and their Deputies, who receive Money or other Profit for Payment of Fees, &c. are out of the Purview and Penalty of the ſaid Statute. And yet they all agreed that ſuch are within the Words of the Statute, for the Words are, if any Treaſurer, Receiver, or Miniſter Accountant, or their Deputies, take or receive, &c. which Word (any) is a general Word, and contains every Treaſurer, Receiver, or Miniſter Accountant. For he that is a Treaſurer to a common Perſon is a Treaſurer, and this Word (any) includes every one, for in containing each ſingular Number it has the Senſe of the Plural, ſo that the Words which enact that if any Receiver do ſuch an Act he ſhall forfeit ſo much, include in them that if the Receiver of a common Perſon does the Act, he ſhall forfeit the Thing. Wherefore the Words of the Branch being general comprehend the Defendant here. [c] But if a Man conſiders where the Miſchief lay before the Statute, and what it was that the Parliament intended to redreſs, he will thereby perceive that the Intent of the Makers of the Act was only to puniſh the Treaſurers, Receivers, and Miniſters of the King, and not of common Perſons, for from the former only the Miſchief grew. [d] For when Monaſteries, Houſes of Religion, Colleges, and Chantries were diſſolved, and came to the Hands of King Henry 8. and King Edward 6. Penſions were aſſigned to the Abbots, Monks, Nuns, Incumbents and others who before lived upon the Poſſeſſions of the ſaid Monaſteries and Houſes which ſo came to the Hands of the ſaid Kings, and of theſe Penſioners there was a great Number. And alſo upon other Actions the ſaid Kings were charged with the Payment of many Annuities. And the Treaſurers and Receivers and other Miniſters Accountant appointed by the ſaid Kings to pay them, perceiving that ſo many were payable thro' their Hands, made a Gain of it, and would give for Anſwer to the Penſioners, Annuitants, &c. that they had no Money of the King's in their Hands, or would delay and put them off by other Means, until they were forced to give them ſome Reward to get what was due to them. And by ſuch extortious Delays and Means they compelled the poor Penſioners and others to part with a good deal of what was due to them to the Treaſurers, Receivers, and others appointed to pay them, who inriched themſelves thereby, and impoveriſhed the Penſioners, which was a great Enormity, and neceſſary to be reſtrained. And to this End a Branch was put in the Act made in 33. H. 8. concerning the Erection of the Court of Surveyors, by which it is enacted, that the general or particular Receivers, or their Deputies, who hereafter ſhall happen to pay any Annuity, Penſion, or Rent, ſhall not retain or take of the Party to whom they ſhall happen to pay the ſame by way of Reward or otherwiſe, above the Sum of 4 d. for every twenty Shillings which the ſame general or particular Receiver ſhall happen to pay, on Pain of forfeiting 6 s. 8 d. for every Penny which he or they ſhall happen to receive above the Sum of 4 d. for every twenty Shillings which he or they ſhall happen to pay, the one Moiety of this Forfeiture to be to the King, and the other to the Party that will ſue for the ſame; which Act extends only to the Receivers of the King, as one may ſee by comparing and conſidering the Clauſes therein together. And agreeable to the Intent of this Branch, and as a Confirmation of it was the ſaid Clauſe made in the ſaid Act of 7. Edw. 6. which was alſo made by Reaſon of the ſaid Miſchief which attended ſuch Payments made by the King's Receivers, and other Miniſters of the King, [e] and againſt them only was the Act intended to be made, which may be collected from the Words of the Act in other Branches; for the Stile of the Act is, An Act for the true anſwering of the King's Revenues, ſo that the Stile ſignifies the Scope of the Act to be touching the Matters of the King and his Miniſters. And alſo all the Branches before the ſaid Branch above recited treat of the King's Miniſters, viz. of his Receivers, Auditors, Bailiffs, and other Miniſters of Receipt or Payment, and then comes the ſaid Clauſe which hath general Words, viz. if any Treaſurer, Receiver, or Miniſter Accountant, &c. which are referred to ſuch Treaſurer, Receiver, or Miniſter before ſpoken of, that is, the King's. And the Clauſes before, ſpeaking of the King's Miniſters, are an Inducement to us to take the Intent of the Legiſlature in the ſaid Clauſe above recited to extend to the King's Miniſters. And that the ſaid Clauſe reaches only to the King's Miniſters, is more fully proved by the Words which come afterwards, viz. more or otherwiſe than he or they might lawfully do by foreign Laws and Statutes therein provided, (which Word (foreign) it was ſaid, ſhould be former, and was miſprinted, but by Saunders Chief Baron, foreign is well enough, and ſhall be taken in the Senſe of former) which Words (he or they) go to every Treaſurer, Receiver, or Miniſter reſtrained by the Statute: And the Words (foreign or former Laws and Statues) imply that the Officers intended in the Branch for the Payment of the ſaid Fees, Annuities, Penſions, Duties, or Warrants, might take ſome Sum. And what Treaſurers, Receivers, or Miniſters could by any former Law receive any Sum for the Payment of any Fees, Annuities, Penſions, Duties, or Warrants? [a] certainly the King's Miniſters might, and no other. And this they might do by Implication of the ſaid Act of 33. H. 8. which inflicts a Penalty on the King's Officers who receive for ſuch Payments above the Sum of 4 d. for every twenty Shillings, whereby it is implied that he might receive 4 d. for every twenty Shillings, and that which is implied by any Act is equal to expreſs Words in the Act. So that by the Senſe and Intent of the ſaid Act of 33. H. 8. they might receive 4 d. for the Payment of every twenty Shillings; and accordingly it has been uſed ſince. But there is not any former Law or Statute which permits the Receiver of a common Perſon to take any Thing for any Payment made by him to another. Wherefore foraſmuch as all the former Words of the Sentence, as to the Miniſters named and their taking any Thing, are referred to the latter Words, viz. more or otherwiſe than they might by foreign Laws or Statutes, which latter Words are intended only of the King's Miniſters, and no other, from thence it follows that the latter Words clear up the Intent of the firſt, and that the Treaſurers, Receivers, and Miniſters named in the former Part are intended the Treaſurers, Receivers, and Miniſters of the King only, and of no other. So that the Senſe of the ſubſequent Words diminiſh the Generality of the Words precedent, and alſo manifeſt the Intent of the Makers of the Act. And the Judges of the Law in all Times paſt have ſo far purſued the Intent of the Makers of Statutes, that they have expounded [b] Acts which were general in Words to be but particular where the Intent was particular. As the Statute de Prærogativa Regis cap. 1. provides, that the Lord the King ſhall have the Wardſhip of all the Lands of ſuch as hold of him in chief by Knights-Service, whereof the Tenants were ſeized in their Demeſn as of Fee the Day of their Death (of whomſoever they hold elſe by like Service, ſo that they held of ancient Time any Land of the Crown) until the Heir come to his lawful Age, &c. [c] yet if the King's Tenant, who has Land holden of the King in capite by Knights-Service by Deſcent on the Part of his Father, and other Lands holden of another by Knights-Service, which deſcended to him on the Part of his Mother, dies without Iſſue, his Heir on the Part of the Father, and alſo his Heir on the Part of the Mother being within Age, the Judges have ſo expounded the Law that the King ſhall not have the Wardſhip of the Lands deſcended to the Heir on the Part of the Mother, becauſe the Lands which came on the Part of the Mother did not deſcend to the Heir to whom the Lands holden in capite deſcended. So that altho' the Words of the Act or Treatiſe ſay that the King ſhall have the Wardſhip of all the Lands of ſuch as hold of him in chief, whereof the Tenants were ſeized in their Demeſn as of Fee the Day of their Death, yet he ſhall not have the Wardſhip of all the Lands whereof he dies ſeized in Fee in this Caſe, becauſe the Intent of the Makers of the Act was not ſuch, for it was not their Intent to give the King more than deſcended to the Heir to whom the Land holden of him deſcended. So that tho' the Words are general, they are not to be taken generally, but are to be reduced to a Particularity, viz. where the Lands holden of the King and the Lands holden of another deſcend to one ſame Heir. So is the ſame Statute taken afterwards in cap. 3. which provides, that the King ſhall have primer Seizin after the Death of thoſe who hold of him in chief of all the Lands whereof they were ſeized in their Demeſn as of Fee; [d] yet if the Tenant holds of the King in capite by Socage, it has been always taken that he ſhall not have primer Seizin of the Lands held of others, tho' by the Generality of the Words he ſhall have it there, but that was not the Intent of the Makers of the Act. So the Statute of Marlbridge cap. 4. enacts, that none from henceforth ſhall cauſe any Diſtreſs that he has taken to be driven out of the County where it was taken, and ſays further, if the Lord preſume to do ſo againſt his Tenant, he ſhall be grievouſly puniſhed by Amercement; [e] yet if one has a Manor in one County, and a Perſon holds Lands which he has in another County, of this Manor, it is held in 1. H. 6. that it is lawful for the Lord to diſtrain for the Services, and to carry the Diſtreſs to the Manor into the other County where the Manor is, notwithſtanding the ſaid Statute, and yet it ſeems contrary to the Letter of the Act, as it is in Truth contrary to the Generality of the Letter of the Act. But the Judges have expounded the Intent of the Makers of the Act not to extend to the Lord, but where the Seigniory and Tenancy are in one ſame County. So that by ſuch Expoſition made according to the Intent of the Act the Generality of the Words is abridged. And ſo it was ſaid, the Statute of Glouceſter cap. 1. provides, that the Diſſeizee ſhall recover Damages in a Writ of Entry upon Novel-Diſſeizin againſt him that is found Tenant after the Diſſeizor, [f] yet if a Diſſeizor by Deed makes a Feoffment to three, and makes Livery to two of them, but the third is not at the Livery of Seizin, nor ever agrees to the Feoffment, nor will ever take the Profits, and afterwards the two die, and the third ſurvives them, and the Diſſeizee brings his Writ of Entry ſur diſſeizin in the Per againſt him, he ſhall ſhew the whole Matter how that he never agreed to the Feoffment, and ſo ſhall diſcharge himſelf of the Damages: So that the Demandant ſhall not recover Damages againſt him, altho' he be Tenant of the Freehold of the Land, as Littleton ſays in his Chapter of Remitter, which Expoſition of the ſaid Statute by Littleton (it was ſaid) is founded upon the Intent of the Makers of the Act, and upon good Reaſon. And yet it ſeems contrary to the Text, which ſays generally that the Diſſeizee ſhall recover Damages againſt him that is found Tenant after the Diſſeizor. And Littleton ſays that in the ſaid Caſe he is found Tenant after the Diſſeizor, and yet the Diſſeizee ſhall not recover Damages againſt him, but it was the Intent of the Legiſlature that made him ſay ſo.

And that their Intent was ſo, he gathered from Reaſon, for Reaſon would never ſuffer him to pay Damages to the Diſſeizee, where he never aſſented to the Wrong done to the Diſſeizee, and never received nor intended to receive any Profits of his Land. So that by the Expoſition of the Statute there is a Diverſity where he is Tenant by his Agreement, and where without his Agreement. And from hence we may ſee that Statutes are often taken contrary to the Generality of the Words. And the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 48. concerning View provides that from henceforth View ſhall not be granted but in caſe when View is neceſſary, and then ſays further, in caſe when one by an Exception dilatory abates a Writ after the View of the Land, as by non-Tenure, or miſnaming of the Town, or ſuch like, if he purchaſe another Writ, in this Caſe View ſhall not be granted, if he had View in the firſt Writs; [a] yet (it was ſaid) if one has View in a Præcipe quod reddat, and afterwards abates the Writ by falſe-Latin, or other apparent Fault, it is held in Longo 5. Ed. 4. that in another Writ he ſhall have the View, becauſe there the Party abated the Writ by Exception ut Amicus Curiæ, for the Exception was apparent, but if the Tenant had abated it for other Cauſe not apparent, it had been otherwiſe, for there he ſhould not have the View. From which Caſe it appears that notwithſtanding the Generality of the Words of the Statute, which provides that the View ſhall not be granted in the ſecond Writ, where the Party after the View abated the firſt Writ by Exception dilatory, yet where he abates the Writ by ſome Kind of Exception dilatory the Judges have granted the View, becauſe they took the Intent of the Makers of the Act to be ſo, for it was not their Intent that the View ſhould be denied where the Party abated the Writ by ſuch an Exception for which the Court might have abated it without Motion of the Party. So that the Generality of the Purview is by ſuch Expoſition become ſpecial. And ſo the Statute of 25. Ed. 3. cap. 16. enacts, that no Writ ſhall abate by Exception of Non-tenure of Parcel, but for the Quantity of the Non-tenure which is alledged; [b] yet in a Præcipe quod reddat of a Manor if the Tenant pleads Non-tenure of Parcel, it has been adjudged ſince the Statute that the whole Writ ſhall abate, becauſe the Demandant had not an Exception in the Writ, for it has been taken that the Intent of the Makers of the Act was, that no Writ ſhould abate for Non-tenure of Parcel, but for the Quantity, where the Things demanded were ſeveral; but if the Thing demanded be entire, then it was not their Intent that the Writ ſhould not abate, nor did they deſign to alter the Form of the Regiſter in the Exception. So that where the Statute ſays generally, for Non-tenure of Parcel no Writ ſhall abate, the Judges have expounded it that in ſome Caſe for Non-tenure of Parcel the whole Writ ſhall abate, which Expoſition ſeems to be contrary to the Text, but when it is declared that ſuch is the true Intent of the Makers of the Act, then it is not contrary to the Text, but a Right Interpretation of the Letter thereof. And ſo the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 25. enacts, that in Aſſize if any being named Diſſeizor do perſonally alledge the Exception, viz. if he ſhall vouch a Record and fail at the Day, he ſhall be adjudged for a Diſſeizor without taking of the Aſſize, &c. [c] yet if a Feme-Covert with her Huſband vouch a Record in an Aſſize and fail, ſhe ſhall not be attainted a Diſſeizoreſs, but afterwards being received ſhe ſhall plead to the Aſſize, as it is taken in 11. H. 4. for it was not the Intent of the Makers of the Act to convict a Feme-Covert for a Diſſeizoreſs by ſuch Plea. So that when the Statute ſays if any alledge the Exception, it has been expounded not to include a Feme-Covert by the Intent of the Legiſlature. And ſo there are many other Inſtances where Statutes, which have inflicted a Penalty upon every one that ſhall do ſuch an Act, have been expounded not to extend to Femes-Covert, or Infants, ſo that though the Words have comprehended all, yet in Effect they have not reached to all. [d] And if the Conuſee in a Statute Merchant has the Land of the Conuſor extended, if it be extended too high, then at the Prayer of the Conuſee by Equity of the Statute of Acton Burnel (which extends to Goods only, and was made before the Statute Merchant) the Land ſhall be delivered to the Extenders, who ſhall preſently anſwer to the Creditor for his Debt, as the Words of the Act ſpeak; [e] and yet if it is delivered to the Extenders, they ſhall not pay the Money until the Days appointed and limited in the Extent, as Saunders Chief Baron put it, notwithſtanding the Words of the Act are (ſhall preſently anſwer, &c.) but the Intent of the Makers of the Act (as every reaſonable Man may obſerve) was not to compel them to pay it immediately, and to let them wait to receive it again when the Days ſhall come, for if ſo, every one would charge the Extenders with the Land, and then none would be willing to be an Extender; for which Reaſon the Judges have expounded the Words (preſently anſwer) to mean that they ſhall preſently become Debtors for the Duty, and chargeable with the Payment of it at the Days for paying the Rents or receiving the Revenues: And ſo they have qualified the Rigour of the Word (preſently) according to Reaſon, in ſuch Manner as the Intent of the Makers of the Act might be preſumed to be. From which Caſes it appears that the Sages of the Law heretofore have conſtrued Statutes quite contrary to the Letter in ſome Appearance, and thoſe Statutes which comprehend all things in the Letter they have expounded to extend but to ſome Things, and thoſe which generally prohibit all People from doing ſuch an Act they have interpreted to permit ſome People to do it, and thoſe which include every Perſon in the Letter they have adjudged to reach to ſome Perſons only, which Expoſitions have always been founded upon the Intent of the Legiſlature, which they have collected [f] ſometimes by conſidering the Cauſe and Neceſſity of making the Act, ſometimes by comparing one Part of the Act with another, and ſometimes by foreign Circumſtances. So that they have ever been guided by the [g] Intent of the Legiſlature, which they have always taken according to the Neceſſity of the Matter, and according to that which is conſonant to Reaſon and good Diſcretion. In our Caſe then the Occaſion and Neceſſity of the Act was to reform the Abuſe practiſed by the King's Receivers and Miniſters towards the Penſioners and others, as is ſhewn before, but not by the Miniſters of other People, for if the Miniſters of others had abuſed the Parties in the Payments, or had delayed to pay them, they that ought to be paid might eaſily have had Acceſs to the Maſter of ſuch Miniſter, and have ſhewed

* Litt. R. 247. their Grievance, or they might have * distrained for their Duties, if Distress was given to the Party, or they might have sued the Principals themselves that owed them the Duties; but such easy Access, Distress, or Suit they could not have with regard to the King, for which Reason the Mischief lay only in the King's Ministers, and it was the Intent of the Parliament to redress their Abuses only; and that their Intent was such, it may be collected from other Parts of the Act, as it is shewn before. Wherefore the whole Court held that Receivers and Ministers of others than of the King or Queen were out of the Provision and Penalty of the Act, and that the Declaration here shall be taken most strongly against the Plaintiff, viz. that the Defendant shall be taken for a Receiver to another than to the King and Queen Philip and Mary, and that for these Causes the Declaration is insufficient to charge the Defendant. And Saunders chief Baron said that the Declaration was also insufficient because he had not recited the said Act of 23. H. 8. for the Act of 7. Edw. 6. was grounded upon it, and both the Acts are but as one. [a] As if an Act is made which prohibits the doing of such a Thing, and afterwards another Act is made which ordains that if any does the Thing he shall forfeit so much, there if any one will sue for the Forfeiture he ought to recite both the Acts, for the first Prohibition and the Penalty given after are but as one Act. So is it here, as he said. And also he said that the Plaintiff has not shewn fully that he was Bedel, and that he had the Fee of 20 Marks, for he has said in the Declaration that by virtue of the Letters-patent of King Henry 8. &c. to the same (Plaintiff) made he was and yet is Bedel, &c. which is not a sufficient shewing that he was Bedel, for he ought to have declared in Fact that the King was seized of the Manors at the Time of the Date of the Letters-patent, which as it is here, is alledged only by Implication, and that is not sufficient. So that for this Cause also he took the Declaration to be insufficient.

3 Point. Further it was moved and debated whether or no if the Declaration had been good, and the Matter sufficient to charge the Defendant, the Plaintiff might sue for the Penalty elsewhere than in Wales, forasmuch as it appears by the Declaration that the Receipt was at Cardiff in the County of Glamorgan, which is a Welsh County. And it was argued for the Defendant, that altho' upon the Matter the Defendant had been chargeable, and although Wales is by the Statute of 27. H. 8. incorporated, united, and annexed to England, by which Means it might be that any personal Action for a Cause arising in Wales might be sued in the Common Bench in England, yet the Defendant here shall not be sued for the Duty now demanded elsewhere than in Wales; because Wales was by the aforesaid Statute of 27. H. 8. divided into twelve Counties, and by the Statute of 34 & 35. H. 8. concerning the Ordinance of Wales four Justices were appointed for Wales, that is, one for every three Counties, and they had Power given them by the same Statute to hold Plea of all Things within their Precincts at their Sessions limited by the said Statute, and also one original Seal was appointed to each of the four Circuits to seal all original Letters within the three Counties of each of the Circuits; and there is a Branch in the said Statute of 34 & 35. H. 8. containing the Words following, viz. Also that all Actions real and mixed, Attaints, Conspiracies, Assizes, and Quare Impedit, Appeals of Murder and Felony, and all Actions founded upon any Statutes, shall be sued by original Writ, to be obtained and sealed with the said original Seal returnable before the Justices at their Sessions within the limits of their Authorities, in Manner and Form before declared; by which Words of the Act all Actions founded upon Statutes, as our's here is, are appointed to be sued there by original Writ, to be sealed with the said original Seal, returnable before the said Justices. So that the Statute appoints the Place, Order, and Form of such Suits, and then they cannot sue in any other Place, or in any other Form, for if they should, it would be contrary to the Purview of the Statute. And upon this it was said, that the Statute of Westminster 2. cap. 11. provides, that upon Account finished before Auditors assigned, and Arrears found upon the Accountants, their Bodies shall be arrested, and by the Testimony of the Auditors of the same Account shall be sent and delivered to the next Goal of the King's in those Parts, &c. [b] upon which Words it is taken in 27. H. 6. that the Auditors ought to commit them to the next Goal, although the next Goal be in another County, for they cannot vary from the Place limited by the Statute. [c] And so the Statute of Westminster 2. cap. 3. gives a Writ of second Deliverance out of the Court where the first Replevin was granted, and a Man cannot have it elsewhere, for if so, then he would vary from the Place limited by the Statute. [d] So in the Principal Case this Action founded upon a Statute, which is appointed by the said Act of 34 & 35. H. 8. to be returned before the Justice of Glamorgan at his Sessions, cannot be sued nor returned elsewhere, nor before any other. [e] As the Statute of 31. Ed. 3. cap. 12. provides, that Error in the Exchequer shall be corrected and amended before the Chancellor and Treasurer, and therefore it cannot be corrected before any other. [f] For when a Statute appoints a Thing to be done before a certain Man, it cannot be done before any other, for it must be done as the Statute limits it. So here an Action founded on a Statute for an Offence in Wales appointed to be sued before the Justice there cannot be sued before any other. And although the Words in the Act of 34 & 35. H. 8. are in the affirmative, viz. that all Actions founded, &c. shall be sued there by original Writ, to be sealed with the said Seal, returnable, &c. and has not an express negative, as (and not elsewhere), yet this Affirmative implies in itself a Negative, viz. and not elsewhere; for the Clause saith, all Actions founded upon Statutes shall be sued there, and if any should be sued in the Exchequer, then all would not be sued there: So that this universal Word (all) admits of no Exception, but excludes every particular one from being sued elsewhere. And if any Writ should be sealed with any other Seal, then all would not be sealed with the said Seal, and if any should be returned before another Justice, then all would not be returned before the said Justice. [g] Wherefore every Statute that limits a Thing to be done in a particular Form, although it be spoken in the affirmative, includes in itself a Negative, viz. that it shall not be done otherwise. [h] As the Statute of Quod ei deforceat ordains that the Demandant shall vouch as if he were Tenant in the former Writ, Writ, this includes a Negative, viz. and not otherwiſe: For it has been taken ſince the Statute that if the firſt Writ was a Scire Facias, and the Tenant in the Quod ei deforceat maintains the Title of it, the Demandant ſhall not vouch, for he ſhall only vouch as if he were Tenant in the former Writ, which is as much as to ſay, "he ſhall vouch as if he were Tenant in the former Writ, and in no other Manner," and then in the former Writ (being a Scire Facias) he might not vouch, and therefore he may not now. [a] And if Tenant in Tail makes a Feoffment to the Uſe of himſelf for Life, and afterwards to the Uſe of his Iſſue in Tail, and dies, afterwards the Statute of 27. H. 8. is made, it has been adjudged that the Iſſue in Tail ſhall not be remitted, for the Statute executes the Poſſeſſion in the ſame Manner and Form as he had the Uſe, which is much as to ſay, "and in no other Manner and Form." And he had the Uſe as a Purchaſer, and ſo he ſhall have the Land now by the Statute, ergo he is not remitted. And ſo the Statute of 31. H. 8. enacts that the King ſhall have all the Poſſeſſions of Abbies and Colleges, &c. which then were come, and afterwards ſhould come to his Hands, in the ſame Eſtate as they then were; [b] and it has been adjudged that if any College, after that Statute, makes a Leaſe for Years, and three or four Years afterwards the College and the Poſſeſſions come to the Hands of the ſaid King, the Leaſe is void, for the King ſhall have the Poſſeſſions as they were then, viz. at the Time of the making the ſaid Statute, and then they were void of the Leaſe, and were in Poſſeſſion, and if the King ſhould now have them in Reverſion, he could not have them in the ſame Eſtate as they then were. So that this Statute ſpoken in the affirmative contains a Negative. And ſo in the principal Caſe the ſaid Statute of 34 & 35. H. 8. which limits the Order of ſuing Actions founded upon Statutes for Offences done in Wales, viz. that they ſhall all be ſued there by original Writ to be ſealed with the ſaid Seal, and to be returned before the ſaid Juſtices, implies a Negative, viz. that they ſhall not be ſued elſewhere, and eſpecially if the ſaid Word (all) be conſidered, which ſtrongly excludes the Suit of any particular one any where elſe. And of this Opinion was Frevil the third Baron.

On the contrary it was argued, that foraſmuch as by the Statute of 27. H. 8. Wales was [c] incorporated and united to England, and all was made but one Realm, for this Reaſon Actions upon Statutes ariſing upon a Cauſe there might before the ſaid Statute of 34 & 35. H. 8. be ſued in the King's Courts at Weſtminſter. And the ſaid Clauſe in the ſaid Ordinance made in the 34 & 35. H. 8. being ſpoken in the affirmative ſhall not take away the Juriſdiction of other Courts. Nevertheleſs in the ſaid Caſes of Quod ei deforceat, and upon the Execution of a Uſe, and in the other Caſes put on this Head, it was ſaid, the Law is accordingly as it is there alledged, becauſe by the common Law there was not any Voucher by the Demandant, nor any coming to the Land by the Uſe, nor any Power given to Auditors to commit an Accountant to Priſon. And therefore where an Act of Parliament gives them an Authority to do that which they could not do before, they ought to do it in the Order limited by the Statute, and not otherwiſe. But where an Action of Debt or other Action which was at the common Law is given by any Statute in a Caſe wherein it did not lie before, the Law ſays that it is ſuable in the common Courts uſed for it by the Common Law, [d] and that the Courts entitled to it ſhall not be deprived of their Juriſdiction in the Caſe but by expreſs Words of Reſtraint. And in our Caſe the affirmative Words in the Statute of 34 & 35. H. 8. which ordain that Actions founded upon Statutes ſhall be ſued before the Juſtices of Wales, are uſed rather to declare that the ſaid Juſtices might hold Plea of them, and to give them a Juriſdiction, than to take away the Juriſdiction of other Courts, and they are put to make the Offenders ſuable as well there as elſewhere, and not to reſtrain other Courts of their Juriſdiction in the Caſe. So that the affirmative Words there do not take away the Juriſdiction of other Courts. And of this Opinion was Saunders Chief Baron, who ſaid, that where it is enacted [e] that all Murders, Robberies, Felonies, and the Acceſſaries of the ſame, which ſhall happen hereafter to be perpetrated and committed within the County of Merioneth in Wales, ſhall and may be from henceforth enquired, heard, and determined in the Counties of Cannarvon and Angleſea, before the King's Juſtice of North-Wales, or his Deputy, [f] it has been taken by good Advice ſince that Statute, that the ſaid Murders and Felonies might be enquired, heard, and determined before the Juſtice of Merioneth, as well as before the Juſtice of the Counties of Caernarvon and Angleſea, for the Words being in the affirmative do not take away the Enquiry in the proper County where the Murder or Felony was committed, nor the Juriſdiction of the Juſtice thereof, but only tend to give the Juſtice of the ſaid other Counties a concurrent Juriſdiction to enquire thereof. And of the like Effect are the ſaid affirmative Words of the ſaid Statute of 34 & 35. H. 8. as it ſeemed to him.

But note that the ſaid Words of the ſaid Statute touching the Enquiry of the ſaid Offences done in the County of Merioneth are as before recited, viz. "that they ſhall and may be thenceforth enquired, "heard, and determined in the Counties of Caernarvon and Angleſea, before the Juſtice of North-"Wales or his Deputy for the Time being," but the Words are further, "by the Verdict or Enqueſt "to be taken by the Inhabitants of the ſame Counties of Carnarvon and Angleſea, or otherwiſe, if "by the Diſcretion of the Juſtice there or of his Deputy it ſhall be thought convenient," which Words (if by the Diſcretion of the Juſtice there, &c. it ſhall be thought convenient) are referred, as it ſeems, to the Enquiry, hearing, and determining in the other Counties, ſo that the Act refers the Thing to the Will of the Juſtice of North-Wales, and therefore the Words are not as preciſe to take away the Enquiry in the County of Merioneth, and to give it to the Juſtice of the other Counties, as the Words are in the ſaid Statute of 34 & 35. Nota bene by the Reporter.

As to the laſt Point, it was argued on behalf of the Defendant that where the Words of the ſaid Act of 7. Edw. 6. give the Penalty to be recovered in any of the King's Courts of Record by Bill, Plaint, or Action of Debt, notwithſtanding the Law ſhould be that the Words of the ſaid Statute of 34 & 35. H. 8. being put in the affirmative don't take away the Juriſdiction of other Courts which might hold Plea thereof before that Statute, yet the Suit here ſhall not be maintenable by the

4 Point.

For the Defendant.

the Plaintiff by original Writ of Debt in the Exchequer, as it is here brought. * For the Exchequer is not a Court for Common Pleas, but it is a Court for the King's Buſineſs only, that is, touching the Revenues, Debts,, and Duties of the King. But no Plea between common Perſons ſhall be held there, [a] unleſs for a Perſon privileged there, as Officers that attend upon the Court, the Abſence of whom (as they would be abſent if they were impleaded elſewhere) would be prejudicial to the Buſineſs of the King in the ſaid Court, and therefore for the King's [b] Benefit and to diſpatch his Buſineſs in the ſame Court the Officers and Miniſters of the Court ſhall ſue there. [c] And ſo ſhall one that is indebted to the King by Surmiſe of Quo minus, &c. (as here lately in an [d] Ejectione firmæ brought by Garraway againſt Richard ap Thomas upon an Ejectment of Lands in the County of Angleſea in North Wales, after Arguments made on both Sides, you adjudged the ſame maintenable, as well as a Suit ſhould be here maintenable by the King himſelf for an Intruſion into Lands in Wales,) and the Reaſon is, becauſe the King ſhall have [e] Execution of the Thing and Damages recovered in the Quo minus, towards Satisfaction of the Debt which the Plaintiff owes the King: So that the Plaintiff in the Quo minus partakes of the King's Prerogative, and the King ſhall have † benefit by the Suit. And ſo a Man may ſue here one that is in Ward in this Court, or one that is Accountant or Attendant here, becauſe he cannot have his Body out of this Court to be arreſted or impriſoned, and therefore the Plaintiff muſt of Neceſſity ſue him by Bill here. And upon theſe Cauſes only is the Office of common Pleas founded in this Court. And in all theſe three Caſes the Plaintiff, in order to give Juriſdiction to the Court, ought to make his Surmiſe, and ſhew the Cauſe, viz. that he is privileged, or indebted to the King, or that the Defendant is in Ward here, or attendant upon this Court. But in the principal Caſe the Plaintiff has brought his Action, and has not made any Surmiſe to entitle the Court to Juriſdiction. And without Surmiſe the Juriſdiction ſhall not be taken away from other Courts, and given to this Court. [f] As the Defendant ſhall not remove a Plea of Replevin out of the County Court into the Common-Bench without Surmiſe in the Pone or Recordare, for which reaſon it is uſual to make a Surmiſe in the Writ, and the Writ ſays, fiat Executio iſtius brevis, ſi cauſa ſit vera, aliter non. [g] And a Writ of Right for Lands holden of a Manor ſhall not be ſued in the Common Bench without Cauſe ſhewn, viz. that the chief Lord has remitted his Court to the King. [h] And a Venire Facias ſhall never be awarded to the Coroners without Cauſe ſhewn to take away the Direction to the common Officer, viz. the Sheriff, and to direct it to the Coroners. So here, without Surmiſe the Juriſdiction of the Court appointed for common Pleas ſhall not be taken away, and given to this Court, for the Penalty here and the Action for it is only given by the Act to the Party, and nothing is given to the Queen, for which reaſon the Court without Surmiſe or Cauſe ſhewn has no more Cauſe to hold Plea upon it than it has upon an Action of Debt brought upon an Obligation. And as to what has been objected to the contrary, viz. that the Penalty is given to be recovered in any of the King's Courts of Record by Bill, Plaint, or Action of Debt, and here the Exchequer is one of the King's Courts of Record, ergo the Action of Debt ſhall be maintenable here, Sir, although the Words of the Act are ſo, yet we ought to conſtrue ſuch general Words to ſtand with Reaſon, and not in ſuch Manner as to confound all Order and Uſage. [i] And therefore they ought to be taken to mean in ſome of the King's Courts of Record uſual and proper for that Purpoſe, and in no others. [k] For if the Offence was done in London or in Northumberland, a Man might not ſue for it in the Court of Oxford, and yet the Court held at Oxford before the Mayor there is the King's Court; but the Intent of the Makers of the Act was not to give the Suit but in Courts convenient for it, and within their Juriſdiction. And where the Act gives the Suit in any of the King's Courts of Record by Bill, Plaint, or Action of Debt, if it ſhould be expounded according to the Words, a Man might ſue for the Penalty in the Chancery by original Writ of Debt, for that is within the Words, and it never was ſeen that any Writ of Debt was returned into the Chancery, but the Intent of the Words is to give the Party an Action of Debt in ſuch Courts wherein Actions of Debt are ſuable, and a Bill or Plaint in ſuch Courts wherein original Writs are not ſued nor returnable, but where Bills or Plaints are uſed. So that the Intent of the Makers of the Act was to purſue Order and Juriſdiction, and not to alter Order, or to give a new Juriſdiction to Courts which never had Juriſdiction in ſuch like Caſes before; and therefore ſuch general Words in Acts ought to be interpreted with Reaſon, and not always according to the Rigour of the Text. And hereupon ſeveral of the Caſes before recited for the Underſtanding of Statutes were again repeated, and therefore it was ſaid, that notwithſtanding the ſaid Objection if the Offence had been done even in a County of England, the Action here would not be maintenable in this Court of Exchequer without Surmiſe or Cauſe ſhewn. And of this Opinion was Frevil the third Baron, and Luke the ſecond Baron. And Luke alſo ſaid, that by the Statute of Articuli ſuper Chartas cap. 4. it is ordained, that no common Pleas ſhall be from henceforth holden in the Exchequer contrary to the Form of the Great-Charter. And he alſo cited the Statute of Rutland made in 10. Ed. 1. which ſays, but foraſmuch as certain Pleas have been heretofore holden in our Exchequer, which did not concern us nor our Miniſters of our Exchequer, whereby as well our Pleas as the Cauſes of our People are unduly prorogued and letted, we will and ordain that no Plea ſhall be holden or pleaded in the Exchequer aforeſaid, unleſs it do ſpecially concern us or our Miniſters aforeſaid, &c. by which Statutes, he ſaid, the Exchequer is reſtrained from holding common Pleas, except in the Cauſes aboveſaid; which Statutes it was not the Intent of the Makers of the ſaid Act of 7. Edw. 6. to repeal, and therefore this Suit in the Exchequer is not maintenable.

E contra for the Plaintiff, Saunders Ch. B.

But Saunders Chief Baron was of opinion to the contrary. For he ſaid, the Exchequer has of very ancient Time been a Court to hold all common Pleas whatever between any of the King's Subjects. [l] And this (he ſaid) appears by Glanvil, who in the Title of his Book ſays, ex illas ſolum leges continet continet et conſuetudines, ſecundum quas placitatur in Curia regis ad Scaccarium, &c. From whence it appears that the Exchequer was then a Court for all common Pleas, and there has not been any Reſtraint by Statute ſince, but by Reaſon of the Multitude of the King's Buſineſs rather than for Want of Power this Court has of late Time ceaſed to hold Pleas between common Perſons in other Caſes than thoſe before mentioned, but not de rigore juris, and he denied that to be a Statute which was called the Statute of [a] Rutland, for he ſaid it was only an Ordinance made by the King without the Authority of Parliament, touching the Order of the Court of Exchequer. And as to the other Statute which refers to Magna Charta, he ſaid that there is no ſuch Reſtraint in Magna Charta. So that they did not agree upon the Authority and Juriſdiction of the Court, and in what Place the Action ought to be brought.

But they all unanimouſly agreed that the Receiver of a common Perſon is out of the Penalty of the Statute, and that by the Declaration the Defendant ſhall be intended a Receiver of a common Perſon, becauſe the Declaration ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt the Plaintiff. And alſo they all agreed, that altho' the Verdict be paſſed, yet for the Fault in the Declaration the Plaintiff ſhall not have Judgment; [b] and it is not remedied by the Statute of Jeofails, for Faults in the Matter of the Count cannot be compriſed within miſpleading or inſufficient pleading, for that which comes [c] after the Count ſhall be called the Pleading, as that which is contained in the Bar, Replication, and Rejoinder. And Saunders Chief Baron ſaid, that when Bromley was Chief Juſtice it was accordingly ſo adjudged in the King's Bench in a Writ of Error upon an Ejectione firmæ, viz. the Judgment given upon the Verdict in the Ejectione firmæ was reverſed for Default in the Count. And Note, that Caſe was between Moon and Clifford. For which Cauſes the Court agreed that Sir Thomas Stradling the Plaintiff ſhould not have Judgment upon the ſaid Verdict, but that they would and ought to award that he ſhould take nothing by his Writ, for the Cauſe aforeſaid. And afterwards it was ſo awarded, as appears by the Judgment which here follows.

Whereupon all and ſingular the Premiſſes being ſeen and read by the Barons aforeſaid, and more full Deliberation being thereupon had amongſt them, becauſe it ſeems to the ſame Barons here that the aforeſaid Writ and Declaration of the aforeſaid Thomas Stradling in manner and Form above declared, and the Matter ſpecified in the ſame is inſufficient in Law, &c. Therefore it is conſidered by the ſame Barons that the aforeſaid Thomas Stradling take nothing by his Writ and Declaration aforeſaid, and that the ſaid Thomas Stradling be in Mercy of the Lady the Queen now. And alſo that the ſaid Rowland Morgan as to the Premiſſes be diſmiſſed from this Court, and go thereof without Day &c.

[a] This Point has been much controverted. See 4 Inſt. 113. But 2 Inſt. 551 ſays it is a Statute, and that this Opinion of Saunders is to be rejected as contrary to great Authority, and being never read nor heard of before. Yet Pryn's Animadv. 55, 56, 57, gives many Reaſons to prove that it is no Statute.

Mich. Term 2 & 3 Eliz. Rot. 1321. North. Same Precedent Raſt. Entr. 536. b. pl. 24.

THE Sheriff was commanded that he diſtrain George Freeman and Joan his Wife by all their Lands and Chattles, ſo that he might have their Bodies here at this Day, viz. on the Octave of St. Michael, to acknowledge what Right they claim in two Meſſuages, two Cottages, two Gardens, 100 Acres of Land, 40 Acres of Meadow, 20 Acres of Paſture, one Acre of Wood, 8 Acres of Furze and Heath, and one Penny Rent with the Appurtenances in Arthingworth in the County aforeſaid, which Henry Edling in the Court here granted to William Saunders Eſquire by Fine thereof between them made, &c. And now here at this Day came as well the aforeſaid William by Richard Perwich his Attorney, as the aforeſaid George and Joan in their proper Perſons. And thereupon the ſame William prays that the aforeſaid George and Joan may attorn to him thereof, &c. And the aforeſaid George and Joan pray Oyer of the Writ aforeſaid. And it is read to them &c. They alſo pray Oyer of the Note from whence the ſame Writ iſſued; and it is read to them in theſe Words, " Between William Saunders Eſquire Complainant and Henry Edling Deforceant of " two Meſſuages, two Cottages, 100 Acres of Land, 40 Acres of Meadow, 20 Acres of Pa- " ſture, one Acre of Wood, 8 Acres of Furze and Heath, and one Penny Rent with the Ap- " purtenances in Arthingworth, whereof a Plea of Covenant was ſummoned between them, viz. " that the aforeſaid Henry has acknowledged the Tenements and Rent aforeſaid with the Appur- " tenances to be the Right of the ſaid William, and has granted for himſelf and his Heirs that " the aforeſaid Tenements and Rent with the Appurtenances, (which the aforeſaid George and " Joan hold for Term of Life of the ſaid Joan, of the Inheritance of the aforeſaid Henry, the Day " when this Agreement was made, and which after the Death of the ſaid Joan ought to re- " vert to the aforeſaid Henry and his Heirs,) after the Death of the ſaid Joan ſhall wholly remain " to the aforeſaid William and his Heirs for ever; to hold of the chief Lords of the Fee by the " Services which to the aforeſaid Tenements and Rent belong. And for this Acknowledgment, " Grant, Fine, and Agreement, the ſame William hath given to the aforeſaid Henry 100 Marks " Sterling." Which being read and heard, the ſame George and Joan ſay, that they by virtue of the Note aforeſaid ought not to attorn themſelves to the aforeſaid William Saunders for the Tenements and Rent aforeſaid, becauſe they ſay that before the aforeſaid Henry Edling had any Thing in the Tenements and Rent aforeſaid with the Appurtenances, one John Edling was ſeized of the Tenements and Rent aforeſaid with the Appurtenances in his Demeſn as of Fee; and that the ſame Tenements and Rent are, and at the Time of the Death of the aforeſaid John Edling were held of the aforeſaid William in Socage by Fealty and Rent of two Pence to be paid yearly at the Feaſt of St. Michael the Archangel. And the ſame John being ſo ſeized thereof, the ninth Day of March in the Year of our Lord 1556, at Arthingworth aforeſaid made his laſt Will and Teſtament in Writing, and thereby deviſed to the aforeſaid Joan the Tenements and Rent aforeſaid with the Appurtenances, by the Name of his Houſe with the Appurtenances to the ſame belonging for ever in the Town and Fields of Arthingworth, to have to her and to the Heirs of her Body lawfully begotten; and afterwards he there died, after whoſe Death the ſame Joan entered into the Tenements and Rent aforeſaid with the Appurtenances, and was thereof ſeized in her Demeſn as of Fee Tail, by Form of the laſt Will and Teſtament aforeſaid. And afterwards, viz. the ſecond Day of May in the Years of the Reign of the Lord and Lady Philip and Mary late King and Queen of England, at Arthingworth aforeſaid in the County aforeſaid, the ſame Joan took to Huſband the aforeſaid George, whereby the ſame George and Joan, in right of the ſaid Joan, were thereof ſeized in their Demeſn as of Fee Tail, viz. to the ſame Joan and to the Heirs of her Body lawfully begotten. And this they are ready to verify, wherefore they pray Judgment if they by virtue of the ſaid Note ought to attorn themſelves to the aforeſaid William thereof, &c.

Replication.

And the aforeſaid William Saunders ſays, that by any Thing before alledged he ought not to be precluded from having the Attornment of the aforeſaid George and Joan of the Tenements and Rent aforeſaid by virtue of the Note aforeſaid, becauſe by proteſting that the ſame Tenements and Rent with the Appurtenances are, and at the Time of the Death of the aforeſaid John Edling were held of the ſame William by Knights-Service, and not in Socage as the aforeſaid George and Joan in their Bar aforeſaid have above alledged, nevertheleſs for Plea ſays, that well and true it is that the aforeſaid John Edling was ſeized of the Tenements and Rent aforeſaid with the Appurtenances in his Demeſn as of Fee: And the ſame John being ſo ſeized thereof, the aforeſaid ninth Day of March in the aboveſaid Year of our Lord 1556, at Arthingworth aforeſaid made his laſt Will and Teſtament in Writing, as in the Bar aforeſaid is above alledged. But the ſame William Saunders ſays that the aforeſaid John Edling by his ſame laſt Will and Teſtament amongſt other Things willed and deviſed the aforeſaid Tenements with the Appurtenances, by the Name aforeſaid, to the aforeſaid Joan, to have to her for Term of her Life, and afterwards the ſame John there died, after whoſe Death the ſame Joan entered into the ſaid Tenements with the Appurtenances, and was thereof ſeized in her Demeſn as of Freehold by Form of the laſt Will and Teſtament aforeſaid. And being ſo ſeized thereof, the aforeſaid ſecond Day of May in the aboveſaid Years of the Reign of the aforeſaid late King and Queen at Arthingworth aforeſaid, ſhe took to Huſband the aforeſaid George, whereby the ſame George and Joan were ſeized of the ſame Tenements and Rent with the Appurtenances in their Demeſn as of Freehold in right of the ſaid Joan; without that that the aforeſaid John Edling by his laſt Will and Teſtament aforeſaid deviſed to the aforeſaid Joan the aforeſaid Tenements and Rent with the Appurtenances, to have to her and to the Heirs of her Body lawfully begotten, as the aforeſaid George and Joan have above alledged. And this he is ready to verify, wherefore he prays Judgment, and that the aforeſaid George and Joan may attorn to him thereof, &c.

And the aforeſaid George and Joan as before ſay that the aforeſaid John Edling by his laſt Will and Teſtament aforeſaid did deviſe to the ſame Joan the Tenements and Rent aforeſaid with the Appurtenances by the Name aforeſaid, to have to her and to the Heirs of her Body lawfully begotten, as they have above alledged. And of this they put themſelves upon the Country: And the aforeſaid William Saunders likewiſe. Therefore the Sheriff is commanded that he cauſe to come here on the Octave of St. Martin twelve, &c. by whom, &c. and who neither, &c. to recognize, &c. becauſe as well, &c. Alias Venire Facias returnable the Octave of St. Hillary.

THE CASE.

Mich. Term 3 & 4 Eliz. Where a Jury gives a privy Verdict, and on the Morrow gives an open Verdict in Court contrary to their privy Verdict, the open Verdict ſhall be good, and the firſt void. S. C. Dyer 209. pl. 21. Moor 33. S. P. Co. Litt. 227. b. 2 Rol. Abr. 712. pl. 1. Heath's Max. 228. Tri. per Pais 218, 273.

It appears by the Record that the Fine upon which the ſaid Writ of Quid juris clamat was founded, was levied between the ſaid William Saunders Complainant, and one Henry Edling Deforceant of the Tenements in Arthingworth in the County of Northampton, and was as follows, viz. "That the aforeſaid Henry hath acknowledged the Tenements and Rent aforeſaid with the Appurtenances to be the Right of the ſaid William, and hath granted for himſelf and his Heirs that the aforeſaid Tenements and Rent with the Appurtenances, which the aforeſaid George and Joan, the Day when this Agreement was made, held for Term of Life of the ſaid Joan, of the Inheritance of the aforeſaid Henry, and which after the Death of the ſaid Joan ought to revert to the aforeſaid Henry and his Heirs) ſhall after the Death of the ſaid Joan wholly remain to the aforeſaid William and his Heirs for ever, to hold, &c." And the ſaid George Freeman and his Wife plead in Bar of Attornment, that before the ſaid Henry Edling (the Conuſor) had any Thing in the ſaid Tenements, one John Edling was ſeized thereof in Fee, and held them in Socage of the Plaintiff, and by his Teſtament in Writing made in the Year of our Lord 1556 at Arthingworth aforeſaid he deviſed to the ſaid Joan the ſame Tenements by the Name, &c. to have to her and to her Heirs of her Body begotten, and afterwards died, after whoſe Death ſhe entered and took to Huſband the ſaid George, whereby they in right of the ſaid Joan were ſeized in Tail, and therefore they demand Judgment if they ought to attorn. And the ſaid William Saunders ſays, that well and true it is the ſaid John Edling was ſeized of the ſaid Tenements in Fee, but he ſays that he by his ſaid Teſtament deviſed them to the ſaid Joan for Term of her Life, and afterwards died, after whoſe Death Joan entered, and was ſeized thereof in her Demeſn as of Freehold, and ſhe being ſo ſeized took to Huſband the ſaid George Freeman, without that that the aforeſaid John Edling by his laſt Will and Teſtament aforeſaid deviſed to the aforeſaid Joan the aforeſaid Tenements and Rent with the Appurtenances, to have to her and the Heirs of her Body lawfully begotten, as the aforeſaid George and Joan have above alledged. And the ſaid George Freeman and Joan by their Rejoinder maintain the Deviſe in Tail, and thereupon they were at Iſſue, which was tried by Niſi Prius at Northampton, and the Poſtea came in as follows, "viz. Afterwards at the Day and Place within contained before James Dyer Knight Chief Poſtea.

" they were agreed of giving their Verdict touching the Matters within contained, ſaid that they

" ſaid at the Caſtle aforeſaid came the aforeſaid William Saunders by his Attorney aforeſaid, and
" the Jurors of the Jury aforeſaid under the Cuſtody of the Bailiff aforeſaid being called to give " their Verdict aforeſaid openly of and upon the Premiſſes came, whereupon the Verdict afore-
" ſaid in manner and Form aforeſaid given by the Jury aforeſaid before the aforeſaid Juſtices at " the Inn aforeſaid, on the aforeſaid eighth Day of July in the Evening of the ſame Day, being by " the Court then read and repeated, and the ſaid Jurors being thereupon aſked whether or no
" they would affirm the ſaid Verdict, the ſame Jurors, not denying that they had given the Ver" dict aforeſaid of and upon the Premiſſes on the Day then laſt paſt, but for certain Cauſes ſpe-
" cially moving them and their Conſciences holding the ſaid Verdict for nought, anſwered that " they were now otherwiſe agreed together upon the Matter; and they ſay upon their Oath that
" the aforeſaid John Edling by his laſt Will and Teſtament aforeſaid in Writing did not deviſe to
" the aforeſaid Joan the Tenements and Rent within ſpecified with the Appurtenances, by the " Name of his Houſe with the Appurtenances to the ſame belonging for ever in the Town and " Fields of Arthingworth, to have to her and to the Heirs of her Body lawfully begotten, as the " aforeſaid William Saunders within has alledged. And they pray that this their Verdict in Form
" aforeſaid given may be recorded by the Juſtices aforeſaid, &c." And becauſe the Juſtices here will adviſe of and upon the Premiſſes before they give Judgment thereon, Day is given to the Parties aforeſaid here until, &c.

And upon this Matter, whether the firſt Verdict was good and the ſecond void, or the ſecond good and the firſt void, was argued this Term in the Common Bench by Serjeant Harper for the Defendants, and by Serjeant Carus for the Plaintiff. And the laſt Day of the Term the Juſtices ſhewed their Opinions ſeverally, but I was not preſent at either the one Argument or the other. And all the Juſtices (as I was credibly informed) unanimouſly agreed that the laſt Verdict ſhould ſtand, and that the firſt ſhould not be taken as a Verdict, for the Jury was charged openly in Court, and in Court their Verdict ought to be received, and that which they pronounce openly in Court ſhall be taken to be their Verdict. And altho' it is uſual to take the Verdict privily when the Jurors are agreed, yet the Law does not neceſſarily require this, but it is only out of Curteſy for the [a] Eaſe of the Jurors, and in ſuch Caſe what they then ſay ſhall not be looked upon as their Verdict, until it be openly pronounced in Court. And when they come into Court the Plaintiff ſhall be called, and may then be nonſuited: [b] But when they give a privy Verdict the Plaintiff is not demandable, nor can he be then nonſuited, and he may be nonſuited when the Verdict ought of Right to be given, ergo it is of Force when given in Court, and not elſewhere. [c] And even in Court if they pronounce a Verdict they may change it if they have miſtaken it, or if it was not full in Law, or for any other reaſonable Cauſe immediately perceived; for, it was ſaid, in the Lord Chief Juſtice Mountague's Time one [d] Archer was arraigned in the King's Bench for Felony of the Death of a Man, and the Jury gave their Verdict, not guilty, and preſently after they ſaid they had miſtaken themſelves, and they ſaid he was guilty, and this laſt was received and entered as their Verdict. [e] And in 11. H. 4. in Conſpiracy againſt two the Inqueſt found one guilty

† So in Dy. 204. pl. 3. to part the Jury gave a Verdict at the Bar for the Defendant, and being remanded to enquire of the reſt, they came again and changed that Verdict, (of their own accord without being put to it by the Judge) and with the reſt gave for the Plaintiff, which was received.

ty, and it was there ſaid that their Verdict was contrary in itſelf, for a Conſpiracy cannot be but between two at leaſt, and if the one is not guilty the other is not guilty; for which Reaſon they were ſent back, and afterwards they came again and ſaid that both were guilty, and this was received as their Verdict. So that upon Occaſion they may contradict † their firſt ſaying, and if they may vary from or contradict their firſt ſaying in open Court, a fortiore they may do it upon better Advice when their firſt Verdict was given out of Court, and they not diſcharged, for they were not out of the Cuſtody of the Bailiff, but always under his Cuſtody, as the Record ſhews. And altho' the Poſtea contains that they were ſent back to the Place from whence they came, to eat and drink together if they would, yet it was not found by the Poſtea that they did eat and drink indeed, and it ſhall not be taken that they did ſo, inaſmuch as it is not ſhewn by the Record, nor aver'd by the Party. Wherefore their open Verdict in Court was taken to be their Verdict by the Opinion of the whole Court. And ſo it was afterwards adjudged, as appears by the Record here.

ON the Morrow of the Term of St. Michael, viz. on the Eve of St. Andrew the Apoſtle, in the 4th Year of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, Dyer Chief Juſtice of the Common Bench, Saunders Chief Baron of the Exchequer, Raſtal one of the Juſtices of the King's Bench, and alſo one of the Juſtices of Aſſize in the County Palatine of Lancaſter, Anthony Brown one of the Juſtices of the Common Bench, Corbet one of the Juſtices of the King's Bench, Weſton one of the Juſtices of the Common Bench, Frevil one of the Barons of the Exchequer, Carus Queen' Serjeant, Puttrel Serjeant who was the other Juſtice of Aſſize in the ſaid County Palatine of Lancaſter, Gerard the Queen's Attorney, Ruſwel the Queen's Sollicitor, Carell Apprentice Attorney of the Dutchy, and Plowden Apprentice who was one of the Counſel of the ſaid Court, by the Queen's Command aſſembled at Serjeant's-Inn in Fleetſtreet, to confer together in order to underſtand the Law in a certain Caſe which was depending in the ſaid Court between the Queen on the one Part, and divers of her Subjects ſeverally on the other Part, wherein the Queen required their Reſolution upon the Matter in Law. And the Caſe was delivered to them in Writing in this Manner. King Henry 8. being ſeized of certain Lands in right of his Dutchy of Lancaſter, made a Leaſe to W. C. by the Advice of the Counſel of the ſaid Dutchy, and under the Dutchy Seal, for the Term of 21 Years, and died, after whoſe Death King Edward 6. by like Advice made a Leaſe to R. W. of the ſame Lands for the Term of 21 Years, to commence immediately after the Expiration, Forfeiture, Surrender, or other Determination of the firſt Term, the ſame King Edward 6. then being within the Age of 21 Years. The Queſtion was, if the preſent Queen ſhall be bound by this Leaſe made by King Edward 6. or if ſhe ſhall avoid it by Reaſon of the Nonage of the ſaid King Edward 6. And this Caſe was argued in the Dutchy Chamber in the Time of Queen Mary, when Sir Edward Walgrave Knight was Chancellor of the Dutchy, on a Demurrer upon the Point between John Scudamore Plaintiff and Lady Mary Morgan, late Wife of Sir Richard Morgan Knight deceaſed, late Chief Juſtice of the Common Bench, Defendant, upon a Leaſe of Lands in the County of Monmouth parcel of the Dutchy: But it was not adjudged in the Time of Queen Mary. And the Judges and others abovenamed now conſidered firſt what the Common Law was in this Caſe, and then what was the Purport of the Statutes made concerning the Dutchy, all which they purſued.

And

And this the greateſt Part of them (as well as Sir Robert Catline Chief Juſtice of England, who was now ſick) had done twice before in Michaelmas Term in the ſecond and third Years of the preſent Queen, viz. once at the ſame Serjeant's-Inn, and the other Time at Spooner's-Hall in Fleet-ſtreet, being there aſſembled for the ſame Cauſe, at which Places they had debated the Matter at large, and by their ſeveral Arguments at Spooner's-Hall they had ſhewn their Opinions. And the greateſt Part of them then, and all of them now aſſembled, except Ruſwel (who had but little Time to conſider the Matter) unanimouſly agreed that the Queen ſhould not avoid the Leaſe made by King Edward her Brother, by reaſon of his nonage. For firſt of all they agreed, [a] that by the common Law no Act which the King does as King ſhall be defeated by his nonage. [b] For the King has in him two Bodies, viz. a Body natural, and a Body politic. His Body natural (if it be conſidered in itſelf) is a Body mortal, ſubject to all Infirmities that come by Nature or Accident, to the Imbecillity of Infancy or old Age, and to the like Defects that happen to the natural Bodies of other People. But his Body politic is a Body that cannot be ſeen or handled, conſiſting of Policy and Government, and conſtituted for the Direction of the People, and the Management of the public-weal, and this Body is utterly void of [c] Infancy, and old Age, and other natural Defects and Imbecillities which the Body natural is ſubject to, and for this Cauſe what the King does in his Body politic cannot be invalidated or fruſtrated by any Diſability in his natural Body. And therefore his Letters-patent which give Authority or Juriſdiction, or which give Lands or Tenements that he has as King, ſhall not be avoided by reaſon of his nonage. [d] And hereupon was alledged what Thorp ſaith in 26 Aſſ. that "the King's Gift ſhall not "be defeated by his nonage, and ſo have many Peers and Sages of the Realm ſaid." [e] And alſo it was ſaid, it appears in 6. Ed. 3. that the ſame King Edward 3. brought a Writ of Right of a Manor, as Heir to King Richard, and there it was pleaded that the King was within Age, Judgment if during his nonage he ſhould be received to this Writ, and the Exception was not allowed, for which reaſon the Tenant demanded the View and had it. By which Caſes it appears that the nonage which the King has in his natural Body ſhall not blemiſh or defeat the Acts or Suits which he does or purſues in his Body politic.

Further as to the Things which he has in his Body natural, they took the Law to be [f] that if the King has Land by Deſcent on the Part of his Mother or other Anceſtor, or which he (when King) purchaſed in Fee in the Capacity of his Body natural, or which he purchaſed before he was King, if he (being King) gives them to another during his nonage, ſuch Gift by the Courſe of the common Law ſhall never be defeated by reaſon of his nonage. For although he has or takes the Land in his natural Body, yet to this natural Body is conjoined his Body politic, which contains his royal Eſtate and Dignity, and the Body politic includes the Body natural, but the Body natural is the leſſer, and with this the Body politic is conſolidated. So that he has a Body natural adorned and inveſted with the Eſtate and Dignity royal, and he has not a Body natural diſtinct and divided by itſelf from the Office and Dignity royal, but a Body natural and a Body politic together indiviſible, and theſe two Bodies are incorporated in one Perſon, and make one Body and not divers, that is * the Body corporate in the Body natural, et e contra the Body natural in the Body corporate. So that the Body natural by the Conjunction of the Body politic to it (which Body politic contains the Office, Government, and Majeſty royal) is magnified, and by the ſaid Conſolidation hath in it the Body politic, for which reaſon the Acts which the King does touching the Things that he poſſeſſes or inherits in the Body natural require the ſame Circumſtance and Order as the Things which he poſſeſſes or inherits in the Body politic do; for the Thing poſſeſſed is not of ſuch Conſideration as to change the Nature of the King's Perſon, but the Perſon who poſſeſſes it changes the Courſe of the Thing poſſeſſed. [g] And therefore it was held, that if the King will part with Land in Fee which he has by Deſcent on the Part of his Mother, or by ſome other Anceſtor who was not King, this ſhall paſs by his Letters-patent only without other Matter, and without Livery of Seizin, for he cannot make Livery of Seizin in his Body natural diſtinct from the Body politic, becauſe they are one ſame Body and not divers. So that he cannot do it without doing it as King, and it would be inconvenient and beneath the Dignity royal for the Law to make the King give Livery in proper Perſon to a Subject. [h] And beſides Livery of Seizin is Matter of Fact, which the King cannot do, [i] for his Acts ought to paſs by Matter of Record, which is ſuitable to his Majeſty, and therefore the Land ſhall paſs by the King's Letters-patent only by the Courſe of the common Law. And ſo it has been the Practice with regard to the Lands which deſcended to the King from the Duke of York, the Earl of March, and others of the King's Anceſtors who never were Kings. [k] And alſo if a Man would give Land to the King and to his Heirs, which he would veſt in his Body natural, and not in his Body politic, the King cannot take this by Livery, but it ought to paſs to him by Deed enrolled or Matter of Record, cauſâ qua ſupra. [l] And if the Mother or other Anceſtor of the King makes a Leaſe for Life, rendering Rent, with Re-entry for Default of Payment, and dies, ſo that the Reverſion deſcends to the King, if the Rent be in Arrear, he ſhall re-enter without Demand, for he is not bound by Law to make Demand in his proper Perſon, cauſâ qua ſupra: [m] But the Breach of a Condition ought to be found by Office before the Entry of the King. [n] And ſo if the King aliens Land which he had by Deſcent from his Mother, he ſhall not defeat it by Reaſon that he was within Age at the Time of the Alienation; [o] for his Body politic which is annexed to his Body natural takes away the the Imbecillity of his Body natural, and draws the Body natural, which is the leſſer, and all the Effects thereof to itſelf which is the greater, quià magis dignum trahit ad ſe minus dignum. And yet if Land deſcends to the King from his common Anceſtor, he ſhall have it by reaſon of his Body natural, for this Body is privy to the Deſcent, but the Body politic is not privy to this Deſcent. And if the ſecond Son of the King purchaſes Land, and aliens it within Age, and afterwards the King and his eldeſt Son die, ſo that the ſecond Son becomes King, he may enter for the Nonage which was in him before, viz. at the Time of the Alienation when he was not King, but yet he ought to have an Office before his Entry to find his Title, becauſe his Perſon which had a Right of Entry before has now the Eſtate royal united to it, which can do nothing without Record. But if he had been King at the Time of the Alienation, he ſhould never have avoided it by reaſon of his nonage, [a] for it would be repugnant to ſay that he is diſabled to make a Feoffment or Leaſe, who is admitted and received to govern the Realm and the People, and all the Buſineſs of the Realm. Then in the principal Caſe here King Henry 4. was Son and Heir to John a Gaunt, who was one of the Sons of King Edward 3. and alſo Son and Heir to Blanch Wife of the ſaid John a Gaunt, who was Daughter and Heir to Henry Duke of Lancaſter. So that the Dutchy of Lancaſter came to the ſaid King Henry 4. by Deſcent on the Part of his Mother, [b] and in this Caſe if he had not afterwards been King, his Poſſeſſions ſhould have paſſed by Livery and Seizin, and Attornment, &c. in the ſame Manner as the Poſſeſſions of other Subjects ought to paſs. [c] But after he had depoſed King Richard 2. and had aſſumed upon him the royal Eſtate, and ſo had conjoined to his natural Body the Body politic of King of this Realm, and was become King, then the Poſſeſſions of the Dutchy of Lancaſter were in him as King, and not as Duke, [d] for the Name of Duke being lower than the name of King was drowned by the Name of King, and by the Acceſſion of the Eſtate royal to him who was Duke, for the King could not be Duke in his own Realm, though he might out of it. And in like Manner the Name of the Dutchy, and all the Franchiſes, Liberties, and Juriſdictions thereof, whilſt they were in the Hands of him that had the Crown and Juriſdiction royal, were extinguiſhed by the common Law. [e] And after that the Poſſeſſion of the Dutchy of Lancaſter could not paſs from King Henry 4. by Livery of Seizin, but by his Letters-patent under the Great Seal of England, without any Livery of Seizin or Attornment, as the Poſſeſſions of the Dukedom of York, or the Earldom of March, or ſuch other Poſſeſſions, which have deſcended to the Kings of this Realm from other Anceſtors than Kings, have uſed to paſs heretofore from the Kings of this Realm, [f] and ſo they ſhould have paſſed until this Day by the common Law, if no Statute had been made to the contrary. And therefore his Grant or Alienation of the Lands Parcel of the Dutchy made during his nonage ſhould not be avoided by the common Law. And ſo they took the common Law to be in this Caſe. But in order to take away the common Law, and to have the Dutchy to be a Dutchy with Liberties to it, as it was before, and to alter the Order and Degree of the Lands of the Dutchy, the ſaid King Henry 4. made a Charter by Authority of Parliament, which is intitled Carta Regis Henrici quarti de ſeparatione Ducatus Lancaſtriæ a Corona Auctoritate Parliamenti, anno Regni ſui primo, Part whereof here follows.

By which Charter it is ordained that the Dutchy of Lancaſter and all the Poſſeſſions thereof ſhall not be altered or changed by Reaſon that King Henry 4. aſſumed the royal Eſtate upon him, but that they ſhall be preſerved and continued in the ſame Form, Condition, and Eſtate in which they deſcended and came to him, and ſhall remain to the ſame Heirs contained in the Charters beforementioned, and that they ſhall ſo, in ſuch Manner, and by ſuch Officers and Miniſters in all Points remain, be ordered, governed, and demeaned, as they ſhould have been if he had never been King. So that by theſe Words the Dutchy is a Dutchy with the like Franchiſes and Liberties as it was before, meerly disjoined from the Crown, and from the Miniſters and Officers of the Crown, and from the Receipt of the Revenues of the Crown, and from ſuch Order of Conveyance as the Law requires in the paſſing of the Poſſeſſions of Crown; for if the King would give any Lands Parcel of the Dutchy to another in Fee, or for Life, he ought to make Livery of Seizin, and alſo upon his Grants of the Reverſion there ought to be Attornment, in the ſame Manner as there ſhould have been before he was King. And this is by reaſon of theſe Words of the Charter, † quod taliter et tali modo remaneant, deducantur, gubernantur, et pertractentur, ſicut remanere, deduci, gubernari, et pertractari deberent, ſi ad culmen dignitatis regiæ aſſumpti minimè fuiſſemus, and alſo by reaſon of the other Words in the ſaid Charter. Which Separation, Diviſion, and Severance of the Dutchy from the Crown, and from the Receipt and Order of the Poſſeſſions of the Crown, ſeemed to the Judges and other the Counſellors abovementioned to be a politic Scheme of King Henry 4. who well knew that he had the Dutchy of Lancaſter upon a good and indefeaſible Title, and that his Title to the Crown was not ſo good, and therefore having ſome Diſtruſt that in Time to come the Crown might be taken from him or his Heirs, and being deſirous nevertheleſs that the Dutchy ſhould continue to him and his Heirs, and knowing at the ſame Time that if the Poſſeſſions of the Dutchy ſhould be mixed with the Poſſeſſions of the Crown, and not be notoriouſly cut and diſſevered from the Poſſeſſions of the Crown, it might be a Means of cauſing the Dutchy the ſooner to be taken away from him or his Heirs, or at leaſt he or his Heirs would receive no good by their being mixed with the Poſſeſſions of the Crown, if the Crown ſhould be taken from him or his Heirs, for theſe Reaſons he made the ſaid Charter by the Authority of Parliament, whereby the ſaid Separation is made as is ſhewn before. But notwithſtand-

ing that the Poſſeſſions of the Dutchy ought to be demeaned and ordered and paſs as they ſhould before Henry 4. was King, by force of the Words of the ſaid Charter, yet there is no Clauſe in the Charter which makes the Perſon of the King that has the Dutchy to be in any other Degree than it was before; but for Things which concern his Perſon he ſhall be in the ſame Eſtate as he was before. So that if the Law before the Charter adjudged the Perſon of the King to be of full Age, having Regard to his Gifts as well of the Land which he inherits in his Body natural as of that which he inherits in Right of his Crown, ſo he ſhall be adjudged with regard to the Lands of the Dutchy ever ſince the Charter, for the Charter extends only to the Eſtate, Condition, and Order of the Lands of the Dutchy, but does not reach to the Perſon of the King who has the Lands, in Points touching his Perſon, nor does it diminiſh or alter the Preheminences which the Law gives or attributes to the Perſon of the King, but the ſame continue as well with regard to the Poſſeſſions of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, as the Lands which come to him from other Anceſtors. [a] And in Proof hereof was cited the Caſe in Hill. 10. H. 4. 7. which is as follows, viz. "King "Henry 4. brought a Scire facias againſt the Lord Strange, reciting that a Judgment given a- "gainſt Thomas of Lancaſter his Anceſtor, by which he was to forfeit his Land, was reverſed "for certain Errors at the Suit of Henry of Lancaſter, Brother and Heir of the ſaid Thomas, in a "Parliament holden in the firſt Year of the King his Grandfather, and the ſaid Henry was ad- "mitted to inherit to the ſaid Thomas; and he demanded to know if he could ſay any thing why "the Manor of M. (whereof the ſaid Thomas was ſeized at the Time of the Judgment given, and "whereof the Lord Strange is now ſeized) ſhould not be delivered to the King, as Couſin and Heir "of the ſaid Thomas, and the Record of the Reverſal was reſident of ancient Time in the King's "Bench. ¶ Horton, Judgment of the Writ, for the Writ ſaith, quòd non omittas propter ali- "quam libertatem in Balliva tua, which Words are uſed in Writs where the King demands as "King a Thing belonging to his Crown: But here he demands Execution by his Writ, as "Duke of Lancaſter, and not as King, ſo that theſe Words (non omittas) ſhall not be put in "the Writ, wherefore, &c. ¶ Tirwith, Although he demands the Manor as Parcel of the Dutchy "of Lancaſter, he is the ſame Perſon that is King, and he cannot ſue otherwiſe than as King. "¶ Huls, The King has ſuch a Prerogative, that no Officer ſhall [b] execute his Writ but his own, "and although there is a Franchiſe in the County, yet the Sheriff is the King's Officer, and ſhall "make Execution for the King within the Franchiſe and without, wherefore for the King the "Writ ought not to be otherwiſe. ¶ Gaſcoign, By Advice we award the Writ good." And this Caſe was cited by Catline Chief Juſtice of the King's Bench at the firſt Aſſembly abovementioned at the ſaid Serjeant's-Inn in the ſaid Term of St. Michael in the 2d & 3d Years of the Reign of the preſent Queen, and he had a Copy of the ſaid Writ of Scire facias written out of the ſaid Record remaining in the King's Bench, which he then ſhewed to the other Juſtices and Counſellors, and it was according as it is recited in the Caſe. Which Caſe being adjudged in Manner and Form aforeſaid, then and alſo now ſtrongly moved them to be and continue of Opinion according as it is ſaid above, viz. that the Prerogatives which the Law attributes to the Perſon of the King hold Place as well in relation to the Land of the Dutchy, as other Land which he has or holds in the Capacity of his Body natural; and by the ſame Reaſon the Prerogative which the Law attributes to the Perſon of the King touching his Age, viz. [c] that he ſhall always be judged of full Age, and never under Age, ſhall continue with relation to the Lands of the Dutchy ſince the ſaid Charter, as well as with relation to other Lands which he holds in his Body natural. [d] And to this Purpoſe the Lord Dyer now vouched a Record in Eaſter Term 3. H. 6. Rot. 112. which, he ſaid, he and the ſaid Anthony Brown read in the Treaſury the ſame Day, and the Record is to this Effect, viz. one Henry Kniveton brought a Writ of Treſpaſs againſt Ralf Shirley and four others for breaking his Cloſe at Bradley in the County of Derby, and ſpoiling and conſuming his Graſs and the Germins of his Wood with their Cattle, &c. and declared of a Treſpaſs on Sunday next after the Feaſt of St. John Baptiſt, in the tenth Year of the Reign of King Henry 5. and alledged Continuance until the ſecond Year of the Reign of King Henry 6. Ralf Shirley pleaded that the Place where, &c. was a great Waſt called Bradley-Hey, and that one Joan, who was Wife of Sir John Baſſet, Knight, was late ſeized of the Manor of Brailsford in her Demeſn as of Fee, and that ſhe and all her Anceſtors Lords of the ſame Manor, and all thoſe whoſe Eſtate ſhe had in the ſaid Manor, had Common of Paſture in the ſaid Waſt for all Cattle at all Times of the Year, as appendant to the ſaid Manor from Time beyond the Memory of Man, and for ſo long Time uſed to crop and lay Waſt with the ſaid Cattle the Germins of the Underwood growing in the ſaid Waſt. And he ſhewed that the ſaid Joan died, and that the Manor deſcended to one Ralf being within Age, and becauſe the Manor was held of the ſaid King as of his Dutchy of Lancaſter by Knight's-Service, the ſame King ſeized the ſaid Manor during the Nonage of the ſaid Heir, and committed it by his Letters-patent to a Huſband and Wife during the Nonage of the Heir, rendering 40 Marks Rent yearly, the Eſtate of which Huſband and Wife in one Meſſuage and one Yard-Land of the ſaid Manor the ſaid Ralf Shirley (the Defendant) at the Time of the Treſpaſs had, and now hath, and he prayed in Aid of the King, and had it by Award before Iſſue joined or Plea over. And afterwards the Plaintiff obtained a Procedendo a Procedendo with the following Words in it, viz. dum tamen ad judicium inde reddendum nobis inconſultis nullatenus procedatis; and there was the like Plea, Aid Prayer, and Procedendo by each of the other four Defendants. Which Caſe (it was ſaid) ſhews us what were the Opinions of the Judges in the time of King Henry 6. touching the Eſtate of the King's Perſon in relation to the Lands of the Dutchy, for if they had looked upon him, with regard to thoſe Lands, as Duke, and ſo as a common Perſon, and no higher, then ſhould not the Defendant have had Aid of him before Iſſue joined, any more than he ſhould have of another common Perſon, nor ſhould the Plaintiff have had a Procedendo with the ſaid Clauſe, viz. dum tamen ad judicium inde reddendum nobis inconſultis nullatenus procedatis. Wherefore notwithſtanding the Order limited by the Charter for the Lands of the Dutchy, viz. quòd taliter et tali modo remaneant, deducantur, gubernentur, et pertractentur, ſicut remanere, deduci, gubernari, et pertractari deberent, ſi ad culmen dignitatis regiæ aſſumpti minime fuiſſemus, and notwithſtanding that theſe Words have been ſo taken as to make the Dutchy Lands of the King paſs by other Order and Circumſtance than other Lands which he inherits in his Body natural, yet theſe Caſes argue and prove that the Perſon of the King, with regard to the Dutchy Lands, ſhall be uſed, demeaned, have his Prerogatives, and be in like Eſtate, as he ſhould have had or been if the Charter aforeſaid had not been made, altho the Eſtate and Nature of the Land is in another Degree. And the Prerogative which the Common Law gives to the Perſon of the King to be always of full Age, and never within Age, is as firmly annexed to him with Regard to the Dutchy Lands, as the Prerogative of Non omittas, or of not proceeding to Iſſue without Aid of him in the Caſe before recited, and Nonage is a Thing which touches the Perſon more than the Land, but the Land of the Dutchy, and the Things which concern it more than the Perſon, ſhall be demeaned and uſed as if a common Perſon had held them. And ſo is the Diverſity between the Eſtate and Degree of the Land of the Dutchy, and the Eſtate and Degree of the Perſon who inherits the Land of the Dutchy. And altho' the Charter and the Act make the King to have the Dutchy and all the Liberties, Privileges, and Juriſdictions thereof, as they were before in the Hands of the Duke, yet they don't make the King to be Duke of Lancaſter, for there is not a Word in them to any ſuch Purpoſe, nor can it be reaſonably ſuppoſed to be the Intent of the Charter or of the Makers of the Act to make him ſo, for the King cannot be Duke in his own Realm, tho' he may out of it, as it is ſaid before, * for his Name and Dignity of King merges and drowns the inferior Name and Dignity of Duke within his own Realm. And after the Charter if a Leaſe had been made of parcel of the Dutchy by the Name of Henry Duke of Lancaſter, without other Name, it had been void, for it ſhould have been in the Name of Henry 4. King of England. And for this Reaſon it is that in Leaſes which the Kings have made of the Poſſeſſions of the Dutchy they have uſed to call themſelves Kings, and not Dukes. And in Offices it is uſual to find that the Tenant held of the King as of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, and it is not well found that he held of the King as Duke of Lancaſter, for he is not Duke, but King. So that the Condition of his Perſon and his Prerogatives are not to be comprehended or meaſured by the Eſtate or Name of Duke, but according to the Eſtate and Name of King. And Infancy which is a great Diſability is repugnant to the Eſtate of a King, and altho' the natural Body of the King is ſubject to Infancy, † yet when the Body politic is conjoined with it, and one Body is made of them both, the whole Body ſhall have all the Properties, Qualities, and Degrees of the Body politic which is the greater and more worthy, and in which there is not nor can be any Infancy. So that neither the Common Law, nor the Charter (altho' it be by Authority of Parliament) gives Authority to the King or his Heirs to avoid by Reaſon of Nonage ſuch Leaſes as he makes during his Nonage. Wherefore it ſeemed to them that the whole Intent of King Henry 4. and of the Charter and Act was only to ſever the Lands, Poſſeſſions, Privileges, Juriſdictions, and Hereditaments of the Dutchy from the Hereditaments of the Crown, viz. in Survey, Order, Government, and Proceſs, but not in Perſon, ſo long as by the Grace of God the Crown and the Dutchy ſhould continue and abide together in the Blood of the Duke of Lancaſter, and of the ſaid Blanch Mother of the ſaid Henry 4. and that if the Crown ſhould afterwards by any Means be taken out of the Blood of the Duke of Lancaſter, that yet the ſaid Dutchy ſhould continue in the Blood of the ſaid Duke. So that the Intent of the Charter may be ſatisfied without derogating from the Perſon of the King, or deſtroying the Dignity or Preheminence which the Law attributes to it.

Further they conſidered the following Part of the Statute entitled, A Statute touching the Seal of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, made in the Parliament holden the ſixteenth Day of March in the third Year of the Reign of King Henry 5. viz. the Commons of England aſſembled in that Parliament delivered a Petition in the ſame Parliament in the Form following, " May it pleaſe our Sovereign " Lord the King by the Aſſent of the Lords ſpiritual and temporal and of the Commons in this " preſent Parliament aſſembled, by Authority of the ſame Parliament, to accept, approve, ratify " and grant your Letters Patent, by you made and granted in your Parliament holden at Weſt- " minſter in the ſecond Year of your Reign, touching the Liberties, Cuſtoms, and Franchiſes to " be uſed and to continue within your Inheritances of your Dutchy of Lancaſter, and of the " Counties of Hereford, Eſſex, and Northampton, and other Things compriſed in the ſaid Letters,

" ment thereof, and in Preſervation and Suſtentation of the aforeſaid Liberties, Cuſtoms, and
" Franchiſes, the Clauſes and Words here following, &c." Moreover we are willing by the Aſſent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and of the Commons of this Realm of England in our preſent Parliament aſſembled, and by Authority of the ſame Parliament do grant and declare for us and our Heirs, that no Gifts, Grants, Pardons, Remiſſions, or Releaſes which concern or in any Caſe ariſe, or by any Sort of Colour may concern or for the future happen or ariſe touching our ſaid Inheritances, or any parcel thereof, or the Honours, Caſtles, Manors, Lands, Tenements, Rents, Fees, Advowſons, Liberties, and Franchiſes to our ſame Inheritances or any parcel thereof in anywiſe belonging, or touching the Wards, Wardſhips, Marriages, Reliefs, Iſſues, Fines, Amercements, Profits, and Commodities, or the Officers and Miniſters of us our Heirs and Aſſigns, of the Inheritances aforeſaid, whether the ſaid Honours, Caſtles, Manors, Lands, Tenements, Rents, Fees, Advowſons, Liberties and Franchiſes be in the Hands of us, or our ſaid Heirs or Aſſigns, or in the Hands of others whomſoever by Grant or Feoffment of us, or of our ſame Heirs or Aſſigns thereof made or to be made for Term of Life, or Years, or in Fee, or any otherwiſe whatſoever, to the Uſe of us or our Heirs or Aſſigns, ſhall for the future be made under any other Seal of us our Heirs or Aſſigns aforeſaid great or ſmall, ordained or to be ordained, but only under our Seal for the Dutchy aforeſaid, as is aforeſaid, and if any ſhall happen in any wiſe to come under any other Seal for the future, they ſhall not be valid or effectual by any Means, but ſhall be judged and deemed vain, nul, and void for ever. Which Petition being read openly in the ſaid Parliament, and well underſtood, was anſwered in the Manner following, " The King, by " the Aſſent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal being in this Parliament, and at the Requeſt " of the Commons aforeſaid, wills that the ſame be done in all Points." Which Act making all Charters of any of the Poſſeſſions of the Dutchy ſealed with any other than the Dutchy Seal to be void, declares the Intent of the ſaid King Henry 5. to be, that the ſaid Dutchy and all the Poſſeſſions thereof ſhould be diſtinct, ſeparate, and ſo openly known and uſed, from the Poſſeſſions of the Crown. Which ſeemed to be done by the ſaid King Henry 5. being lineal Heir to the Dutchy of Lancaſter, with the ſame politic Deſign before mentioned. But yet there is nothing in it that touches the Perſon of the King, ſo that the Prerogatives concerning his Nonage and other Points of his Perſon remain as they were before the making of that Statute; and the ſaid Caſe in 3. H. 6. being adjudged as it is before recited, and being after this Statute, declares that the Prerogatives of his Perſon continue in him with regard to the Dutchy Lands after this Statute.

Statute of 1 Ed. 4. of Confiſcation for ever of the Dutchy of Lancaſter to the Crown. Vide B. N. C. § 373. Lutw. 1236.

Further they conſidered the following Part of the Statute made the fourth Day of November in the firſt Year of the Reign of King Edward 4. entitled An Act of incorporating and alſo of confiſcating, amongſt other Things, the Dutchy of Lancaſter to the Crown of England for ever, that is to ſay, It is declared and adjudged by the Aſſent and Advice of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and of the Commons being in this preſent Parliament, and by the Authority of the ſame, that the ſame Henry late called King Henry the ſixth, for the Conſiderations of the great, heinous, and deteſtable Matters and Offences before ſpecified by him committed againſt his Faith and Ligeance to our ſaid Liege Lord King Edward the fourth, his true, righteous, and natural Liege Lord, offended and hurt unjuſtly and unlawfully the Royal Majeſty of our ſaid Sovereign Lord, ſtand by the ſaid Advice and Aſſent convicted and attainted of High Treaſon. And that it be ordained and eſtabliſhed by the ſame Advice, Aſſent, and Authority, that he the ſame Henry forfeit unto the ſame our Liege Lord Edward the fourth, and to his Heirs, and to the ſaid Crown of England, all Caſtles, Manors, Lordſhips, Towns, Townſhips, Honours, Lands, Tenements, Rents, Services, Fee-Farms, Knight's-Fees, Advowſons, Hereditaments, and Poſſeſſions with their Appurtenances, which he or any other to his Uſe had the third Day of March laſt paſt, being of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, or that were any parcel or Member of the ſame Dutchy, or thereunto annexed or united in the firſt Year of the Reign of Henry late called King Henry the fifth, or at any Time ſince. And that it be ordained and eſtabliſhed by the ſame Advice, Aſſent, and Authority, that the ſame Manors, Caſtles, Lordſhips, Honours, Towns, Townſhips, Lands, Tenements, Rents, Services, Fee-Farms, Knight's-Fees, Advowſons, Hereditaments, and Poſſeſſions with their Appurtenances in England, Wales and Calais, and the Marches thereof, make, and from the ſaid third Day of March be to the ſaid Dutchy of Lancaſter corporate, and be called the Dutchy of Lancaſter. And that our ſaid Sovereign Lord King Edward the fourth have, ſeize, take, hold, enjoy, and inherit all the ſaid Manors and Caſtles, and other the Premiſſes with their Appurtenances, by the ſame Name of Dutchy from all other his Inheritances ſeparate, from the ſaid fourth Day of March, to him and to his Heirs Kings of England perpetually, and that the County of Lancaſter be a County Palatine: And that our Liege and Sovereign Lord King Edward the fourth and his Heirs have, as parcel of the ſaid Dutchy, the ſame County of Lancaſter and County Palatine, and a Seal, Chancellor, Judges, and Officers for the ſame; and all Manner of Liberties, Cuſtoms, Laws Royal, and Franchiſes in the ſame County Palatine lawfully and rightfully uſed, and over that, another Seal called the Seal of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, and a Chancellor for the keeping thereof, Officers and Counſellors for the guiding and Go- vernance of the ſame Dutchy, and of the particular Officers, Miniſters, Tenants and Inhabitants thereof, in as great, ample, and large Form as Henry, calling himſelf Henry the fifth, at any Time therein had, uſed, and enjoyed lawfully. And by the ſame Authority the ſaid Officers and Miniſters, and alſo the ſaid Tenants and Inhabitants of and in the ſame Dutchy have, uſe, exerciſe and enjoy ſuch and all Liberties, Privileges and Cuſtoms, as the Officers, Miniſters, Tenants and Inhabitants of the ſame Dutchy had, uſed, exerciſed or enjoyed lawfully in the Time of the ſame Henry, calling himſelf King Henry the fifth; and that alſo in the ſame Dutchy be uſed, had, and occupied all ſuch Freedoms, Liberties, Franchiſes, Privileges, Cuſtoms and Juriſdictions, as were uſed therein lawfully before the ſaid fourth Day of March. And the Officers, Miniſters, Tenants, and Inhabitants of or in the ſaid Dutchy be entreated and demeaned according to the ſame Freedoms, Liberties, Franchiſes, Cuſtoms, Privileges and Juriſdictions, and not diſtrained, arcted, nor compelled to the contrary in anywiſe.

From which Acts the ſaid Juſtices and Counſellors inferred, that if before the making of this Act the Nonage of the King had been any Cauſe to avoid Gifts or Leaſes made by him within Age of the Lands of the Dutchy, that yet by this Statute it is made clear that his Nonage is no Cauſe after the Act to avoid them, for by this Act the Dutchy is annexed to the Crown. And it is to be obſerved that King Edward took himſelf to be lawful Inheritor of the Crown of England, and that the Houſe of Lancaſter had unlawfully uſurped upon him and his Anceſtors. And as the Houſe of Lancaſter, doubting their Title to the Crown, intended to preſerve their Inheritance of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, in which they had no Manner of Doubt whilſt it was disjoined from the Crown, ſo on the contrary King Edward 4. knowing his Title to the Crown to be undoubted, intended to extirpate the Houſe of Lancaſter, and to unite to the Crown their Inheritance, in which he had no Title but in right of the Crown, viz. for Treaſon committed againſt it, and to veſt the Dutchy and all the Poſſeſſions thereof in the Body politic of the King. And to this Purpoſe are the Words of the ſaid laſt Act, viz. that King Edward 4. ſhall have, ſeize, take, hold, enjoy, and inherit all the ſaid Manors, &c. from the fourth Day of March, to him and to his Heirs Kings of England perpetually. So that the ſaid Inheritance of the Dutchy is placed and ſettled only in the Body politic of the King, in which Perſon there is no Nonage or other Imbecillity to which the Body natural is ſubject. And by theſe Words as well as by the other Words in the Act, by which it is ordained that the ſaid King Henry 6. ſhall forfeit to King Edward 4. and to his Heirs, and to the Crown of England, the Hereditaments of the Dutchy, the County Palatine of Lancaſter, and the Court of the Dutchy, and the Liberties and Franchiſes thereof ſhould have been utterly diſſolved and extinguiſhed in the Crown, if there had been no other Proviſion made in the Act; [a] for the Crown which receives any Hereditaments by Eſcheat (as it did theſe here) merges all Juriſdictions, Franchiſes, and Liberties had and uſed in them, which were before derived from the Crown, for the greater extinguiſhes the leſſer. So that the Act having Relation to the fourth Day of March laſt paſt, (on which Day King Edward 4. begun his Reign) would have extinguiſhed the ſaid County Palatine, and the ſaid Court, and the Liberties thereof from the ſaid fourth Day of March thenceforwards for ever, if it had ſtopped there without making any other Proviſion; but to raiſe it up again it was neceſſary to have a new Erection or a Saving by Words proper for it. And therefore King Edward 4. being deſirous that the Dutchy and all that belonged to it ſhould be as it was before, as to the Order and Direction of it, he made a new Eſtabliſhment thereupon by the Act, whereby it is ordained and eſtabliſhed, that the ſame Manors, Caſtles, &c. ſhould make, and from the third Day of March be the ſaid Dutchy of Lancaſter incorporate, and be called the Dutchy of Lancaſter, and that the County of Lancaſter ſhould be a County Palatine, and that the King ſhould have, as parcel of the Dutchy, the ſame County Palatine, and a Seal, Chancellor, Judges, and Officers there, and the Liberties and other Things as in the ſaid Act is before recited. So that this laſt Act has eſtabliſhed or confirmed the County Palatine from the third Day of March laſt before the Act, and that the ſame King Edward ſhould have the Hereditaments thereof, by the Name of the Dutchy, from the fourth Day of March to him and to his Heirs Kings of England for ever. Yet it ſhews how he ſhall have them, viz. from all other his Inheritances ſeparate; and how ſeparate? not from the Perſon of the King, as King, but from the Order of the other Poſſeſſions of the King, as to paſs by another Seal than a Leaſe of the Poſſeſſions of the Crown is uſed to do, and by other Means than Poſſeſſions of the Crown ſhall paſs by, viz. by Livery of Seizin and by Attornment, and by other Officers than the Officers of the Poſſeſſions of the Crown, and by ſuch other Rules and Methods uſed before. And to prove that the Dutchy is ſeparated from the other Poſſeſſions of the Crown in the Method of Conveyance, ſince this Act, as it was before the Act, the Caſe in M. 21. Ed. 4. was alledged at Spooners, which is, that in the Exchequer Chamber it was held by all the Juſtices, [b] that if the King makes a Feoffment of the Lands which he has in right of his Dutchy of Lancaſter in Fee, or for Term of Life, it is neceſſary to have Livery of Seizin as well as if the Feoffment be made by a common Perſon, unleſs it be of Lands within the County Palatine, which ſhall paſs by the Letters-Patent of the Dutchy without Livery; and the ſaid Queſtion was there demanded by the Attorney of the Dutchy. So that the Word (ſeparate) may and ought to be taken ſeparate in reſpect of Order, but not ſeparate from the Perſon of the King, as King. Wherefore the ſaid Statute of of King Edward 4. ordains three Things, firſt, it eſtabliſhes the County Palatine of Lancaſter; ſecondly, it veſts it in the Body politic of the King of this Realm and his Heirs; thirdly, it divides it from the Order of the other Poſſeſſions of the Crown. And in this Form the ſaid Dutchy continued until the Time of King Henry 7.

Statute of 1. H. 7.

Vide B.N. C. § 373.

And further they conſidered the following Part of the Statute made in the firſt Year of King Henry 7. entitled, A Repeal of a Feoffment made by King Edward 4. of certain Lands and Tenements of the Dutchy of Lancaſter by Authority of Parliament, for the Performance of his laſt Will in the 12*th Year of his Reign*, which was as follows, Where in the Parliament begun and holden at Weſtminſter the ſixth Day of October in the 12*th Year of the Reign of* Edward late King of England the fourth, and by divers Prorogations unto the 23*d Day of* February the 14*th Year of his Reign continued, and then there holden, for certain Conſiderations by the Advice of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and the Commons in that preſent Parliament aſſembled, and by the Authority of the ſame would, ordained, and enacted, that* Thomas Cardinal Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and divers others there named, from the ſaid 23*d Day ſhould, have, hold, enjoy, and poſſeſs the Honour, Caſtle, Lordſhip, and Manor of* Tutbury with the Members and Appurtenances, and all Manors, Lordſhips, &c. Be it enacted, ordained and eſtabliſhed by the Advice and Aſſent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons in this preſent Parliament aſſembled, and by the Authority of the ſame, that the ſaid Act and every Thing therein contained be from the 21*ſt Day of* Auguſt laſt paſt void, repealed, annulled, and of none Effect. And over that, by the ſame Authority, the King our Sovereign Lord ſhall have, hold, enjoy and poſſeſs, from the ſaid 21*ſt Day of* Auguſt to him and to his Heirs for ever, all the Honours, Caſtles, Lordſhips, Manors, Lands, Tenements, Rents, Reverſions, Services, Poſſeſſions, and other Hereditaments with their Appurtenances in the ſaid Act contained, and the County Palatine of Lancaſter, and all Honours, Caſtles, Lordſhips, Manors, Lands, Tenements, Rents, Reverſions, Services, Poſſeſſions, and other Hereditaments with their Appurtenances, that were parcel of the ſaid Dutchy of Lancaſter, in the Hands or Poſſeſſion of the ſaid Edward late King of England the fourth Day of March the firſt Year of his Reign, or any Time after, or in the Hands or Poſſeſſion of Richard the third, late in deed and not in right King of England, any Time during his Reign, with all Liberties, Freedoms, Franchiſes, and other Things as well to the ſaid County Palatine, as to any other the Premiſſes appertaining or belonging; and to be governed by like Officers, and uſe like Seals, as for Time paſt have been uſed and accuſtomed, in as ample and large Manner, and in like Manner, Form and Condition ſeparate from the Crown of England, and the Poſſeſſions of the ſame, as Henry 4. Henry 5. Henry 6. the King's noble Progenitors, late Kings of this Realm, or the ſaid Edward late King had and held, or any of the ſaid Kings had and held, any Act or Statute before this made in anywiſe notwithſtanding, &c.

And it was argued at Spooners by ſome, that by this Act the Dutchy is deveſted out of the Body politic of the King, in which Capacity it was veſted by the Act of Edward 4. and that it is become veſted in the natural Body of King Henry 7. For the Words are, that the King our Sovereign Lord ſhall have, hold, enjoy, and poſſeſs from the ſaid 21*ſt Day of* Auguſt to him and to his Heirs for ever, all the Honours, Caſtles, &c. in the County Palatine of Lancaſter, &c. and alſo they referred to this Clauſe the Words after, viz. in as ample and large Manner, and in like Manner, Form, and Condition ſeparate from the Crown of England, and from the Poſſeſſions of the ſame, as H. 4. H. 5. H. 6. or King Edward had and held, or any of them had and held, for the ſaid Words, in as ample and large Manner, and in like Manner, Form, &c. cannot be referred to the Clauſe before, viz. to be governed, &c. for that Clauſe ends at the Word accuſtomed, viz. to be governed by like Officers, and uſe like Seals, as in Time paſt have been uſed and accuſtomed; ſo that this Clauſe ends here. And alſo they took it that the Word ſeparate would not ſuffer this Clauſe to be referred to the Clauſe, to be governed; for then it ſhall be put adverbially, that is, ſeparately. And if the Words, in as ample and large Manner, and in like Manner, Form and Condition, be referred to the Words, the King ſhall have, hold, enjoy and poſſeſs, &c. as they ſaid they ought to be, then King H. 7. ſhall receive the Poſſeſſions in his Body natural, and not in his Body politic, as King. But if the Words had been to him and to his Heirs Kings of England, as the Words of the Act of King Edward 4. were, then H. 7. ſhould have taken them in his Body politic, as King Edward 4. took them. And the Words in like Manner, Form, and Condition ſeparate from the Crown, as any of the Kings H. 4. H. 5. H. 6. or Edw. 4. held, being referred thereto, do enforce the Conſtruction that he received them in his Body natural, for if King H. 7. ſhall have them in like Manner, Form, and Condition as any of the ſaid Kings held them, then ſhall he have them in his Body natural, for each of the three firſt Kings ſo held them, tho' King Edward 4. held them in his Body politic, but inaſmuch as the County Palatine is given to H. 7. in as large and ample Manner, and in like Manner, Form and Condition ſeparate from the Crown, as any of the four Kings held it, and three of them held it more largely ſeparated from the Crown than the fourth did, (for they three held it in their Body natural ſeparate from the Crown, and the fourth in his Body politic in right of the Crown, and ſeparated in the Order and Government of the Crown, and not otherwiſe) then King H. 7. ſhall take it according to the moſt ample and large Separation from the Crown that might be, and that is, in his Body natural. And this alſo ſeemed to them to be the Intent of the Act, for King H. 7. was deſcended from the Houſe of Lancaſter, and favoured that Party, and therefore it is moſt probable that he intended to have the Dutchy in the like Form as the Houſe of Lancaſter held it, which was in the Body natural, and this the rather, becauſe his Wife pretended an Intereſt in the Body politic along with him; and this Act repealed the other Act of Edward 4. in this Point, for it has in it theſe Words, viz. any Act before made notwithſtanding. And for theſe Cauſes it ſeemed to ſome that the Dutchy was veſted in the natural Body of King Henry 7. and in like Manner in the Body of King Edward 6. and then with regard to the Nonage, that it reſts only upon the common Law, without any Enforcement by the Statute of Edw. 4. or any other Statute.

On the contrary it was argued at Spooner's by others, that it is enforced by the ſaid Statute of Edw. 4. and that the Dutchy was not veſted in the natural Body of King Henry 7. but in his Body politic, for the Dutchy was veſted in King Edward 4. in his Body politic, and when King Henry 7. took upon him the Government of the Realm, whereby he had in him the Body politic of King of this Realm, in that Body he received and held the Dutchy before the ſaid Act in the firſt Year of his Reign was made; and although the ſaid Act ſays that King Henry 7. ſhall have it to him and to his Heirs from the 21ſt Day of Auguſt, this may be intended his Heirs that ſhould have inherited it if the Act had not been made, and that is, the Heirs to the Body politic; ſo that the Act is as a Confirmation of it to that Body which then held it. And if the Words (in as ample and large Manner, Form, and Condition, &c.) be referred to the Clauſe (the King ſhall have, hold, enjoy, and poſſeſs, &c.) they will enforce this Opinion; for if King Henry 7. ſhould have it in as large and ample Manner, and in like Manner as the four Kings or any of them held it, and three of them held it in their Body natural, which is not ſo ample and large as the other, and the fourth held it in his Body politic, which is more ample and large than the Body natural, then King Henry 7. ſhould have it in his Body politic, becauſe that is the more ample and large Manner; for both the Sentences are joined together by a Copulative, ſo that it ought to be in as ample and large Manner, and alſo in like Manner, Form, and Condition, &c. and ſo the firſt Part, viz. concerning the Ampleneſs and Largeneſs, ought to be ſatisfied as well as the ſecond Part, viz. the Likeneſs of the Manner, Form, and Condition. And the Word (ſeparate) may be fulfilled by ſuch a Separation from the Poſſeſſions of the Crown as relates only to the Order, Direction, and Method of Conveyance, as it is ſhewn before in the Expoſition of the Act of Edw. 4. And the Clauſe of (in as ample and large Manner, and in like Manner, &c. ſeparate from the Crown, &c.) may belong to the Clauſe (to be governed, &c.) and ſo it agrees with the Letter. And therefore the Leaſes are good, the rather by reaſon of the ſaid Statute of Ed. 4. and H. 7. and are not avoidable for the Nonage of the ſaid King Edward 6. And ſome held that the Opinion of the Serjeants in * 15. H. 7. is not Law, where it is reported to be held by them, that if a Man juſtifies in Treſpaſs as Bailiff of the King by Reaſon of his Manor which he has as of his Dutchy of Lancaſter, the Defendant ſhall not have Aid before Iſſue joined. And they alſo held, that if it was the Intent of the ſaid Act of Henry 7. to have the Poſſeſſions of the Dutchy ſeparated from the Poſſeſſions of the Crown as well in the Inheritance as in the Order and Government of the ſame Inheritance, (as it ſeemed to them it was not, and the more ſo from the Title of the ſame Act, which is, a Repeal of a Feoffment, &c. ut ſupra) yet there is not any Word in the ſame Act that requires the Dutchy to be ſeparated from the Perſon of the King, or the Perſon of the King to be ſeparated from the Poſſeſſions of the Dutchy, nor is there any Word that tends to make the King Duke of Lancaſter, or to make him Duke of Lancaſter with regard to the Poſſeſſions of the Dutchy, or to alter the Quality of the Perſon of King Henry 7. but only that the King ſhall have to him and to his Heirs the ſaid Dutchy ſeparate from the other Poſſeſſions, in which Caſe the Dutchy is at leaſt joined to the Perſon of King Henry 7. and to his Heirs, and the Perſon of the King remains as it was before, for nothing is ſaid as to the Quality of the Perſon of the King in this Act, or in the other Acts before made in the Time of H. 4. or H. 5. nor as to the Alteration of his Name, but he continues as before. And the Perſon of the King ſhall not be invalidated by the Dutchy's being given to him and to his Heirs by the ſaid Act, and his Perſon remains always of full Age as well with regard to Gifts and Grants of Lands made by him, as in the Adminiſtration of Juſtice. And to theſe laſt Reaſons the others agreed, although they did not agree to this Expoſition of the Act of Henry 7. viz. that the Dutchy remains not ſeparated in Inheritance and in Right from the Crown, and that it is not deveſted out of the Body politic of the King, in which Capacity only it was, and veſted in the Body natural of King Henry 7. But that wherein they all agreed proves that the Leaſes are not voidable by reaſon of the Nonage of King Edward 6. And therefore all the Juſtices, Serjeants, and Counſellors aſſembled on the Eve of St. Andrew (as it is ſhewn before) except Ruſwel, agreed unanimouſly, † that the ſaid Leaſes made of the Lands Parcel of the Dutchy (whether the Lands lie out of the County Palatine of Lancaſter, or within it) were not voidable for the Nonage of the ſaid King; and that the Law is all one where the Leaſe is made of Lands of the Dutchy which are not in Leaſe, to commence preſently, and where to commence after the End of another Leaſe before made, and that neither the one nor the other is voidable for the Nonage of the ſaid King. And the Proviſo contained in the Statute of 7. Edw. 6. cap. 3. hath not changed the Law, wherein it is provided, that the Act then made for Confirmation of the Letters-patent of the ſaid King Edward 6. ſhall not extend to make good any Leaſe made in Reverſion of any Lands or Tenements Parcel of the Dutchy of Lancaſter; for (it was ſaid at Spooner's) this Proviſo does nothing but only puts the Matter at large as it was before.

And the next Day, being the Feaſt of St. Andrew the Apoſtle, the Juſtices went to Catline Chief Juſtice of England, who was ſick at his Houſe, to have his Opinion in the Caſe, (for ſo they had agreed to do at their ſaid Aſſembly), and he agreed in Opinion with them, that the Leaſes of King Edward 6. were not voidable by reaſon of his Nonage. And afterwards on Monday, being the Morrow of St. Andrew the Apoſtle, all the ſaid Juſtices, Serjeants, and Counſellors, viz. Dyer, Saunders, Raſtal, Anthony Brown, Corbet, Weſton, Frevil, Carus, Puttrel, Gerard, Ruſwel, Carell, and Plowden, at a Time appointed for the ſame, went to York-place, to report their Reſolution to Sir Nicholas Bacon Knight, Keeper of the Great Seal, (to whom they were referred to report it) and to Sir Ambroſe Cave Knight, Chancellor of the ſaid Dutchy, to the Intent that the ſaid Sir Nicholas Bacon might report it over to the Queen, according as her Majeſty had given Orders. And there the Lord Dyer, in the Preſence of all the reſt, ſhewed their ſaid Reſolution, and briefly declared the Cauſe thereof, and ſaid that all the reſt there preſent, except Ruſwel, were unanimouſly of the ſame Opinion, which they all affirmed, and upon this Anſwer given they departed.

And note, in the ſaid Caſe in the Dutchy upon Demurrer between Scudamore and Lady Morgan, it was argued that the Act of 1. Edw. 6. cap. 8. for Confirmation of Letters-patent does not enforce the ſaid Leaſes, for that Act makes all Leaſes and Grants good, notwithſtanding the Cauſes and Matters mentioned in the Act, or to which the Act has relation, and the Nonage of the King is not any of them. And alſo it was then argued, that the ſaid Act of 7. Edw. 6. cap. 3. whereby it is enacted, that all Letters-patent ſealed with the Great Seal of the Dutchy of Lancaſter ſhall be good, perfect, and available in Law to all Intents and Purpoſes, the Nonage of the ſame King Edward 6. as Duke of Lancaſter (although as King he is always of full Age) to the contrary notwithſtanding, does not enforce the Leaſe of King Edward 6. for, it was ſaid, the Preamble of the Branch and the Circumſtance of the Act ſhew that it extends to Letters-patent of Inheritances only; and, it was ſaid, that for Patents of Inheritance it was put in for the Suerty of the Patentees, becauſe of the Doubtfulneſs of the Law, and the Words don't preciſely affirm that he ſhall be accounted within Age with regard to the Dutchy Land. And then the Caſe in M. 2. H. 3. Fitz. Age 149. was cited, where a Man vouched the King within Age, and prayed that the Parol might demur, and ſhewed that the King's Progenitor had given him the Land, and becauſe he did not ſhew the Charter, he was ouſted of the Warranty. So that there it did not go ſo far as to be adjudged whether the Parol ſhould demur, or not. And the ſaid Demurrer in the Dutchy was argued by ſome of them beforementioned, viz. by Plowden, Gerard, and Carus, in the hearing of ſome of the reſt abovenamed thereunto required by the Chancellor of the ſaid Dutchy in the Name of the Queen. And note, there is a Statute made in 1. H. 4. as follows, viz. Alſo our ſaid Lord the King, conſidering how that Almighty God of his Grace hath placed him in the honourable Eſtate of King, and foraſmuch as he himſelf may not for a certain Cauſe bear the Name of Duke of Lancaſter in his Stile, and alſo the ſame our Lord the King conſidering how that this honourable Name and Eſtate of Duke hath been very honourably born and demeaned in the honourable Perſon of his Father (whom God aſſoil) and of many of his honourable Anceſtors, and being willing thereupon that the ſaid Name of Duke of Lancaſter be continued in Honour as it behoveth, by the Advice and Aſſent of all the Lords ſpiritual and temporal, and of the Commons aforeſaid, hath ordained that Henry his eldeſt Son have and bear the Name of Duke of Lancaſter, and that he be named Prince of Wales, Duke of Aquitain, of Lancaſter, and Cornwal, and Earl of Cheſter. And over that the ſame Lord the King conſidering how that divers Liberties and Franchiſes have been granted before this Time as well to his ſaid Father, as to other his Anceſtors Dukes and Earls of Lancaſter, willeth and granteth, by the Advice and Aſſent aforeſaid, that the ſame Liberties and Franchiſes be and continue to his ſaid eldeſt Son and his Heirs Dukes of Lancaſter, diſſevered from the Crown of England quitly and entirely according to the Effect and Purport of the Grants aforeſaid, &c. So that the ſaid Statute in the Preamble recites, that the King for a certain Cauſe might not bear the Name of Duke of Lancaſter in his Stile; which Cauſe (though it is not there expreſſed) is, for that he was King, and the Name of King and the Dignity royal merges the Name of Duke, as it is ſaid before. Wherefore the Preamble of this Act confirms the above Opinion of the ſaid Judges, Serjeants, and Counſellors in the Point before recited.

Faſter & Trin. Terms 4 Eliz.

And afterwards in Eaſter and Trinity Terms in the fourth Year of the Reign of the ſame Queen Elizabeth, and alſo in the Term of St. Michael then next following, by virtue of a Privy-Seal directed to the ſaid Chancellor by the ſaid Queen Elizabeth, the ſaid Matter was argued again on ſeveral Days in the Dutchy Court by many Counſellors before the ſaid Chancellor, and before Saunders Chief Baron, and Anthony Brown one of the Juſtices of the Common-Bench, and Puttrel and Walſh Juſtices of Aſſize in the County of Lancaſter, Carus Serjeant at Law to the Queen, and Sackford one of the Maſters of Requeſts, and Carell Attorney of the ſaid Court of the Dutchy, and Plowden aforeſaid, who was one of the Counſel of the ſaid Court of the Dutchy. And after all the Arguments the ſaid Judges and Counſellors of the Court aſſembled themſelves at divers Times to make their Reſolution, ane at laſt they all agreed as before was agreed. And alſo they all agreed, that King Henry 7. had the Dutchy in his Body natural, as King Henry 5. had it, diſjoined from the Crown, and not as King Edw. 4. had it. And this was by Force of the Act made in the Time of the ſaid King Henry 7. and for the Reaſon before given to this Purpoſe at Spooner's.

Note

Note, at the ſaid Aſſemblies it was ſaid by the ſaid Judges and Counſellors of the Dutchy Court, * that if the Queen makes a Feoffment of Land of the Dutchy out of the County Palatine, to hold of her in capite, the Feoffee ſhall hold of the Queen in capite as of her Crown of England. And many good Caſes were put by them. And upon their Reſolution agreeing with the former Reſolution, as is ſhewn before, a Report was afterwards made thereof to the Queen.

HEretofore as appears in the Term of St. Michael in the fifth and ſixth Years of the Reign of the Lord Philip and Lady Mary late King and Queen of England, Rot. 314. it is contained thus. Hertford, to wit, Henry Berkley Knight * Lord Berkley, and Richard Knight of Weſton in the County aforeſaid Yeoman, were attached to anſwer Henry Willion of a Plea, wherefore with Force and Arms into ſeven Acres of Wood with the Appurtenances in Weſton, which Henry Cock Eſquire demiſed to him for a Term not yet paſſed, they entered, and the ſaid Henry Willion from his Farm aforeſaid ejected, and other Wrongs to him did, to the great Damage of the ſaid Henry Willion, and againſt the Peace of the Lord the King and Lady the Queen now, &c. And whereupon the ſame Henry Willion by Thomas Hanchet his Attorney complains, that whereas the aforeſaid Henry Cock was of the aforeſaid ſeven Acres of Wood with the Appurtenances ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee, and being ſo ſeized thereof, the ſame Henry the fifth Day of May in the fourth and fifth Years of the Reign of the Lord the King and Lady the Queen now, at Hoddeſdon in the ſaid County of Hertford, had delivered, granted, and to Farm let to the ſame Henry Willion the aforeſaid ſeven Acres of Wood with the Appurtenances, to have to the ſame Henry Willion unto the End and Term of ſeven Years from thence next following, and fully to be compleat. And the ſame Henry Willion of the aforeſaid ſeven Acres of Wood with the Appurtenances by virtue of the Grant and Demiſe aforeſaid was poſſeſſed, and the ſame ſeven Acres occupied, until the aforeſaid Henry Berkley and Richard Knight the ſixth Day of May in the Years aboveſaid, with Force and Arms, viz. Swords, Staves, and Knives, into the aforeſaid ſeven Acres of Wood with the Appurtenances entered, and the ſaid Henry Willion from his Farm aforeſaid ejected, and other Wrongs, &c. to the great Damage, &c. and againſt the Peace, &c. wherefore he ſays that he is damnified, and has Damage to the Value of 10*l.* and therefore he produces the Suit, &c.

the Country; and the aforeſaid Henry Willion likewiſe. And as to the reſt of the Treſpaſs and Ejectment aforeſaid above ſuppoſed to be done, the ſame Henry Berkley and Richard ſay that the aforeſaid Henry Willion his Action aforeſaid againſt them ought not to have, becauſe they ſay that long before the aforeſaid Time when the Treſpaſs and Ejectment aforeſaid is ſuppoſed to be done, one William Marqueſs Berkley was ſeized of the Manor of Weſton near Baldock in the aforeſaid County of Hertford, whereof the aforeſaid ſeven Acres of Wood with the Appurtenances are, and at the aforeſaid Time when, &c. and alſo from Time whereof the Memory of Man is not to the contrary, were Parcel, in his Demeſn as of Fee, and being ſo ſeized thereof, a certain Fine levied in the Court of Lord Henry the Seventh late King of England here, viz. at Weſtminſter on the Octave of the Purification of the bleſſed Mary, in the fifth Year of his Reign, before Thomas Brian, Roger Townſend, William Davers, and John Vaviſor Juſtices, and other faithful Subjects of the ſaid late King Henry the Seventh then there preſent, between one William Willoughby Eſquire and John Skill Complainants, and the aforeſaid Marqueſs Deforceant, of the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. by the Name of the Manor of Weſton near Baldock with the Appurtenances in the County of Hertford, amongſt other Things, &c. whereof a Plea of Covenant was ſummoned between them in the ſame Court of the ſame late King Henry the Seventh, viz. that the aforeſaid Marqueſs acknowledged the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances amongſt other Things to be the Right of the ſaid Edward, as that which the ſaid Edward and John had of the Gift of the aforeſaid Marqueſs, and the ſame releaſed and quit-claimed from himſelf and his Heirs to the aforeſaid Edward and John Skill, and to the Heirs of the ſame Edward for ever. And further, the ſame Marqueſs by the ſame Fine granted for himſelf and his Heirs, that they would warrant to the aforeſaid Edward and John, and to the Heirs of the ſame Edward, the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. amongſt other Things, againſt all Men for ever. And for the ſaid Acknowledgment, Remiſe, Quit-Claim, Warranty, Fine and Agreement, the ſame Edward and John by the ſame Fine granted to the aforeſaid Marqueſs the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. amongſt other Things, and the ſame to him rendered in the ſame Court, to have and to hold to the ſame Marqueſs, and to the Heirs of his Body begotten, to hold of the chief Lords of the Fee by the Services which to the aforeſaid Manor ſhould belong for ever. And if it ſhould happen that the ſame Marqueſs ſhould die without Heir of his Body begotten, then after the Death of the ſaid late Marqueſs, the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. amongſt other Things ſhould wholly remain to the aforeſaid late King Henry the Seventh, and to the Heirs Males of his Body lawfully begotten. And if it ſhould happen that the ſame late King ſhould die without Heirs Males of his Body begotten, then after the Death of the ſaid late King Henry the Seventh, the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. amongſt other Things ſhould wholly remain to the right Heirs of the ſaid late Marqueſs, to hold of the chief Lords of the Fee by the Services which to the aforeſaid Manor belong for ever *. By reaſon of which ſaid Fine the aforeſaid Marqueſs was of and in the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. amongſt other Things, ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee-Tail, viz. to him and to the Heirs of his Body begotten, Remainder thereof to the aforeſaid late King Henry the Seventh, and to the Heirs Males of his Body begotten, and for Default of ſuch Iſſue, Remainder thereof to the Right Heirs of the aforeſaid late Marqueſs for ever. And the aforeſaid Marqueſs of the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. amongſt other Things being ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee-Tail in Form aforeſaid, the ſame late Marqueſs of ſuch his Eſtate therein, before the aforeſaid Time when, &c. died by Proteſtation ſeized without Heir of his Body begotten, after whoſe Death the ſame late King Henry the Seventh into the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. as in his Remainder thereof, before the ſame Time when, &c. entered, and was thereof ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee-Tail, viz. to him and to the Heirs Males of his Body iſſuing, Remainder thereof, for Default of ſuch Iſſue, to the right Heirs of the aforeſaid late Marqueſs, by virtue of the Fine aforeſaid. And being ſo ſeized thereof, of ſuch his Eſtate therein he afterwards died ſeized, after whoſe Death, and before the aforeſaid Time when, &c. the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. amongſt other Things deſcended to the late King Henry the Eighth, as Son and Heir Male of the Body of the ſaid late King Henry the Seventh lawfully begotten, whereby the ſame late King Henry the Eighth into the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. amongſt other Things, before the ſame Time when, &c. entered, and was thereof ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee-Tail, viz. to him and to the Heirs Males of his Body iſſuing, and for Default of ſuch Iſſue, and for Default of Heirs Males of the Body of the aforeſaid late King Henry the Seventh lawfully begotten, Remainder thereof to the right Heirs of the aforeſaid late Marqueſs, by virtue of the Fine aforeſaid. And being ſo ſeized thereof, the ſame late King Henry the Eighth died by Proteſtation thereof ſeized, after whoſe Death, and before the aforeſaid Time when, &c. the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. amongſt other Things deſcended to Edward the Sixth late King of England, as Son and Heir Male of the Body of the ſame late King Henry the Eighth lawfully begotten, whereby the ſame late King Edward the Sixth into the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. amongſt other Things, before the aforeſaid Time when, &c. entered, and was thereof ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee-Tail, viz. to him and to the Heirs Males of his Body iſſuing, and for Default of ſuch Iſſue, and for Default of Heirs Males of the Body of the aforeſaid late King Henry the Seventh lawfully begotten, Remainder thereof to the right Heirs of the aforeſaid late Marqueſs, according to the Form of the Fine aforeſaid. ward of ſuch his Eſtate in the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. amongſt other Things, died ſeized without Heir Male of his Body iſſuing. And the aforeſaid late King Henry the ſeventh before the ſame Time when, &c. died without Heir Male of his Body lawfully begotten. By Reaſon whereof the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. amongſt other Things, remained and came, and of Right ought to remain and come, by Form of the Fine aforeſaid, to the aforeſaid Henry Berkley and to his Heirs, as Couſin and next Heir of the aforeſaid William late Marqueſs Berkley, viz. as Son and Heir of Thomas late Lord Berkley, Son and Heir of Thomas Berkley Knight late Lord Berkley, Brother and Heir of Morice Berkley Knight, Son and Heir of Morice Berkley Knight, Brother and Heir of the aforeſaid William late Marqueſs Berkley. By reaſon of which ſaid Premiſſes the ſame Henry Lord Berkley, the eleventh Day of Auguſt in the firſt Year of the Reign of the aforeſaid Lady the Queen, into the aforeſaid Manor with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. entered as in his Remainder, as it was lawful for him to do, and was thereof ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee, until the aforeſaid Henry Cock into the aforeſaid ſeven Acres of Wood with the Appurtenances before the aforeſaid Time when, &c. entered, and the ſame to the ſaid Henry Willion delivered and demiſed for the Term aforeſaid, as the aforeſaid Henry Willion by his Writ and Declaration aforeſaid above ſuppoſes, upon the Poſſeſſion of which ſaid Henry Willion thereof the aforeſaid Henry Berkley in his own proper Right, and the aforeſaid Richard as Servant of the ſaid Henry Berkley, and by his Command, the aforeſaid Time when, &c. entered, and the aforeſaid Henry Willion from his Farm aforeſaid ejected, as it was lawful for them to do, and this they are ready to verify; wherefore they pray Judgment if the aforeſaid Henry Willion his Action aforeſaid againſt them ought to have, &c.

And the aforeſaid Henry Willion ſays, that by any Thing before alledged he ought not to be precluded from having his Action aforeſaid, becauſe he ſays that well and true it is that the aforeſaid William Marqueſs Berkley was ſeized of the aforeſaid Manor of Weſton near Baldock with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. amongſt other Things, in his Demeſn as of Fee, and he being ſo ſeized thereof, the aforeſaid Fine levied in the aforeſaid Court of the late King Henry the ſeventh here, viz. at Weſtminſter on the Octave of the Purification of the bleſſed Mary in the fifth Year of his Reign, before the aforeſaid Thomas Brian, Roger Townſend, William Davers, and John Viſor then Juſtices, and other faithful Subjects of the ſaid late King Henry the ſeventh then there preſent, between the aforeſaid Edward Willoughby Eſquire and John Skill Complainants, and the aforeſaid Marqueſs Deforceant, of the aforeſaid Manor with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. by the Name of the Manor of Weſton near Baldock with the Appurtenances in the County of Hertford, amongſt other Things, &c. whereof a Plea of Covenant was ſummoned between them in the ſame Court of the ſaid late King Henry the ſeventh, viz. that the aforeſaid Marqueſs acknowledged the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. amongſt other Things, to be the Right of the ſaid Edward, as that which the ſaid Edward and John had of the Gift of the aforeſaid Marqueſs, and the ſame releaſed and quit-claimed from himſelf and his Heirs to the aforeſaid Edward and John Skill, and to the Heirs of the ſaid Edward for ever. And further, that the ſame Marqueſs by the ſame Fine granted for himſelf and his Heirs that they would warrant to the aforeſaid Edward and John, and to the Heirs of the ſame Edward, the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. amongſt other Things, againſt all Men for ever. And for the ſame Acknowledgment, Remiſe, Quit-claim, Warranty, Fine, and Agreement, the ſame Edward and John by the ſame Fine granted to the aforeſaid Marqueſs the aforeſaid Manor with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. amongſt other Things, and the ſame rendered to him in the ſame Court of the aforeſaid late King Henry the ſeventh, to have and to hold to the ſame Marqueſs, and to the Heirs of his Body lawfully begotten, to hold of the chief Lords of the Fee by the Services which to the ſaid Manor belong for ever: And if it ſhould happen that the ſame Marqueſs ſhould die without Heir of his Body begotten, then after the Death of the ſaid late Marqueſs the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. amongſt other Things, ſhould wholly remain to the aforeſaid late King Henry the ſeventh, and to the Heirs Males of his Body lawfully begotten; and if it ſhould happen that the ſame late King Henry the ſeventh ſhould die without Heir Male of his Body begotten, then after the Death of the ſame late King Henry the ſeventh, the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. amongſt other Things, ſhould wholly remain to the right Heirs of the ſaid late Marqueſs, to hold of the chief Lords of the Fee by the Services which to the aforeſaid Manor belong for ever, as by the ſame Fine appears. And that by Reaſon of the Fine aforeſaid the aforeſaid Marqueſs was of the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. amongſt other Things, ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee-tail, the Remainder thereof to the aforeſaid late King Henry the ſeventh, and to the Heirs Males of his Body lawfully begotten in Form aforeſaid belonging, as the aforeſaid Henry Berkley and Richard have above alledged. And the ſame Marqueſs being ſo ſeized thereof before the aforeſaid Time of the Treſpaſs and Ejectment aforeſaid done, of ſuch his Eſtate therein afterwards died ſeized, without Heir of his Body begotten, after whoſe Death, and before the aforeſaid Time of the Treſpaſs and Ejectment aforeſaid done, the aforeſaid late King Henry the ſeventh, then having Iſſue of his Body lawfully begotten, viz. one Arthur late Prince of Wales, into the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. amongſt other Things, as in his Remainder aforeſaid entered, and was thereof ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee, by reaſon of the Fine aforeſaid, by Form, &c. And afterwards the aforeſaid Prince Arthur died without Heir Male of his Body lawfully begotten. And the ſame late King Henry the ſeventh being ſo ſeized in Manner and Form aforeſaid of the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. the ſame late King of ſuch Eſtate in the ſame Manor with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. amongſt other Things, afterwards died ſeized, after whoſe Death the Manor aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. deſcended to the aforeſaid Lord Henry the eighth late King of England, as Son and Heir of the aforeſaid late King Henry the ſeventh, whereby the ſame late King Henry the eighth before the aforeſaid Time of the Treſpaſs and Ejectment aforeſaid done, into the aforeſaid Manor with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. entered, and was thereof ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee, by Reaſon of the Fine aforeſaid. And the ſame late King Henry the eighth being ſo ſeized thereof took to Wife one Lady Catharine Latimer. And afterwards and before the aforeſaid Time of the Treſpaſs and Ejectment aforeſaid done, by a certain Act made in a Parliament of the aforeſaid late King Henry the eighth begun at Weſtminſter the fourteenth Day of January in the thirty-fifth Year of the Reign of the ſame late King Henry the eighth, and there held and continued until the twenty ninth Day of March in the ſaid thirty-fifth Year, amongſt other Things it was ordained and enacted, that all Demiſes, Releaſes, Gifts, Grants, Obligations, Recognizances, Patents, Fees, Acquittances, and other Things from thenceforth to be made by the ſaid Lady Catherine, or to the ſame Lady Catherine, by or to the ſaid late King Henry the eighth, or by or to any other Perſon or Perſons, ſhould ſtand and be of the ſame Force and Effect in Law, as they ſhould if they were made by, to, or between any other Subjects of the ſaid late King Henry the eighth, without any Intereſt, Profit, or Benefit to come or accrue by any Means to the ſaid late King Henry the eighth, his Heirs, Executors, or Succeſſors, of, for, or in any of the Premiſſes, or by reaſon or Occaſion of the ſame, or of any Part thereof, or otherwiſe, as in the ſame Act amongſt other Things is more fully contained. And that afterwards and before the aforeſaid Time of the Treſpaſs and Ejectment aforeſaid done, the aforeſaid late King Henry the eighth by his Letters Patent ſealed under his Great Seal of England, bearing Date the 25th Day of February in the 35th Year of his Reign, gave and granted the aforeſaid Manor of Weſton with the Appurtenances, (whereof the aforeſaid ſeven Acres of Wood with the Appurtenances are, and from Time whereof the Memory of Man is not to the contrary were parcel) to the aforeſaid Lady Catherine then his Wife, and Queen of England, to have and to hold to her for Term of Life of her the ſaid Lady Catherine By Reaſon of which ſaid Gift, Grant, and Act of Parliament, the ſame Lady Queen Catherine was of the aforeſaid Manor with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. ſeized in her Demeſn as of Freehold, the Reverſion thereof belonging to the aforeſaid late King Henry the eighth, and to his Heirs. And the ſame Lady Catherine being ſo ſeized thereof, the Reverſion thereof in Form aforeſaid belonging to the aforeſaid late King Henry the eighth, and to his Heirs, the aforeſaid late King Henry the eighth, before the aforeſaid Time of the Treſpaſs and Ejectment aforeſaid done, at Weſtminſter in the County of Middleſex died, after whoſe Death, and before the aforeſaid Time when, &c. the ſame Reverſion of the aforeſaid Manor with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. deſcended to Lord Edward the ſixth late King of England, as Son and Heir of the aforeſaid late King Henry the eighth, whereby the ſame late King Edward the ſixth was of the Reverſion aforeſaid ſeized as of Fee, and the ſame late King Edward the ſixth being ſo ſeized thereof, before the aforeſaid Time of the Treſpaſs and Ejectment aforeſaid done, the ſame late King by his Letters-patent ſealed under his Great Seal of England, bearing Date at Weſtminſter the tenth Day of July in the firſt Year of the Reign of the ſaid late King Edward the ſixth, (which the ſame Henry Willion here produces in Court) gave and granted the aforeſaid Reverſion of the aforeſaid Manor of Weſton with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. to one William Herbert Knight now Earl of Pembroke, to have and to hold to the ſame Earl and to his Heirs for ever. By virtue of which ſaid Grant the ſame Earl was of the ſame Reverſion ſeized as of Fee and Right; and being ſo ſeized thereof, and the aforeſaid Lady Queen Catherine being in Form aforeſaid ſeized of the ſame Manor with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. the ſame Lady Catherine late Queen afterwards at Sudely in the County of Glouceſter died, after whoſe Death, and before the aforeſaid Time of the Treſpaſs and Ejectment aforeſaid done, the aforeſaid Earl into the aforeſaid Manor with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. entered, and was thereof ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee. And the ſame Earl being ſo ſeized thereof, before the aforeſaid Time of the Treſpaſs and Ejectment aforeſaid done, of the ſame Manor with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. enfeoffed the aforeſaid Henry Cock, to have and to hold to him and to his Heirs for ever. By virtue of which Feoffment the ſame Henry Cock into the aforeſaid Manor with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. before the aforeſaid Time of the Treſpaſs and Ejectment aforeſaid done, entered, and was thereof ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee. And the ſame Henry Cook being ſo ſeized thereof, before the aforeſaid Time of the Treſpaſs and Ejectment aforeſaid done, viz. the aforeſaid fifth Day of May in the fourth and fifth Years of the Reign of the ſaid Lord Philip and Lady Mary late King and Queen of England, at Hoddeſdon aforeſaid in the aforeſaid County of Hertford, demiſed the aforeſaid ſeven Acres of Wood with the Appurtenances to the ſame Henry Willion, to have and to hold to the ſame Henry Willion from the ſaid fifth Day of May in the fourth and fifth Years aboveſaid, unto the End and Term of ſeven Years thence next following, and fully to be compleat. By virtue of which Demiſe the ſame Henry Willion into the aforeſaid ſeven Acres of Wood with the Appurtenances, before the aforeſaid Time of the Treſpaſs and Ejectment aforeſaid done, entered, and was thereof poſſeſſed until the aforeſaid Henry Lord Berkley, and Richard, the aforeſaid ſixth Day of May in the fourth and fifth Years aboveſaid, with Force and Arms, viz. Swords, Staves, and Knives, into the aforeſaid ſeven Acres of Wood with the Appurtenances entered, and the ſaid Henry Willion from his Farm aforeſaid thereof ejected, againſt the Peace of the aforeſaid late King and Queen Philip and Mary, as he above complains againſt them; and this he is ready to verify, wherefore for that the aforeſaid Henry Berkley and Richard the Treſpaſs and Ejectment aforeſaid above confeſs, the ſame Henry Willion prays Judgment, and his Damages by Occaſion of the ſaid Treſpaſs and Ejectment to be adjudged to him, &c.

And the aforeſaid Henry Lord Berkley and Richard ſay, that the aforeſaid Plea of the aforeſaid Henry Willion in Manner and Form above in replying pleaded, and the Matter in the ſame Plea contained, are inſufficient in Law to maintain the aforeſaid Henry Willion to have his Action aforeſaid againſt the ſame Henry Berkley and Richard, and that they have no Neceſſity, nor are by the Law of the Land bound to anſwer the ſaid Replication in Manner and Form aforeſaid pleaded. And this they are ready to verify, wherefore for Want of a ſufficient Replication in this Behalf, the ſame Henry Lord Berkley and Richard pray Judgment, and that the aforeſaid Henry Willion may be precluded from having his Action aforeſaid againſt them, &c. Defendants demur.

And the aforeſaid Henry Willion, for that he has above alledged ſufficient Matter againſt the ſaid Henry Lord Berkley and Richard in Maintenance of the Action of him the aforeſaid Henry Willion againſt them, which ſaid Matter the aforeſaid Henry Berkley and Richard do not deny, nor thereunto in anywiſe anſwer, but the ſaid Averment wholly refuſe to admit, prays Judgment and his Damages by Occaſion of the Treſpaſs and Ejectment aforeſaid to be adjudged to him, &c. And becauſe the Juſtices here will adviſe of and upon the Premiſſes before they give Judgment thereon, Day is given to the Parties aforeſaid here on the Morrow of the holy Trinity, to hear their Judgment thereon, becauſe the Juſtices here thereof not yet, &c. Joinder in Demurrer.

The Caſe was recited in this Manner. It appears by the Record that Henry Willion has ſued a Writ of Ejectione firmæ againſt Henry Lord Berkley and Richard Knight, for ejecting him out of 7 Acres of Wood with the Appurtenances in Weſton. And he has declared that Henry Cock Eſquire was ſeized of the ſame 7 Acres in his Demeſn as of Fee; and being ſo ſeized, the 5th Day of May in the 4 & 5 Years of the Reign of King Philip and Queen Mary, at Hoddeſdon in the County of Hertford, he demiſed the ſame to the Plaintiff for the Term of 7 Years thence next enſuing; and that he the ſaid Henry Willion was, by virtue of the ſaid Demiſe, poſſeſſed of the ſaid 7 Acres with the Appurtenances, and them occupied until the Defendants the 6th Day of May in the Years aforeſaid entered into the ſaid ſeven Acres, and ejected the Plaintiff out of his Farm aforeſaid to his Damage of 10 l. And the Defendants plead in Bar that long before the Time of the Ejectment ſuppoſed, one William Marqueſs Berkley was ſeized of the Manor of Weſton near Baldock in the County of Hertford (whereof the 7 Acres of Wood are, and then, and at all Times before were, parcel) in his Demeſn as of Fee. And he being ſo ſeized, a Fine levied in the Court of King Henry 7. here at Weſtminſter on the Octave of the Purification of our Lady in the 5th Year of his Reign, before Thomas Brian, Roger Townſend, William Davers, and John Vaviſor Juſtices, between Edward Willoughby and John Skill Complainants, and the ſaid Marqueſs Deforceant, of the ſaid Manor with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. viz. the ſaid Marqueſs acknowledged the ſaid Manor amongſt other Things to be the Right of the ſaid Edward, as that which the ſaid Edward and John had of the Gift of the ſaid Marqueſs, and the ſame releaſed to them and to the Heirs of the ſaid Edward for ever, with Warranty againſt all Men. And the ſaid Edward and John by the ſame Fine granted and rendered to the ſaid Marqueſs the ſaid Manor whereof, &c. amongſt other Things, to have and to hold to the ſaid Marqueſs, and to the Heirs of his Body begotten; and if he ſhould die without Heir of his Body begotten, that then the ſaid Manor whereof, &c. ſhould remain to the ſaid King Henry 7. and to the Heirs Males of his Body lawfully begotten; and if the ſaid King ſhould die without Heir Male of his Body begotten, that then the ſaid Manor whereof, &c. ſhould remain to the right Heirs of the ſaid Marqueſs. By Reaſon of which Fine the ſaid Marqueſs was of the ſaid Manor whereof, &c. ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee-tail, the Remainder thereof to the ſaid King Henry 7. and to the Heirs Males of his Body begotten, and for Default of ſuch Iſſue, the Remainder to the right Heirs of the ſaid Marqueſs for ever. And the ſaid Marqueſs being ſeized of ſuch Eſtate, thereof died by Proteſtation ſeized, without Heir of his Body begotten; after whoſe Death the ſaid King Henry 7. entered into the ſaid Manor whereof, &c. as in his Remainder thereof, and was thereof ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee-tail, viz. to him and to the Heirs Males of his Body begotten, the Remainder thereof, for Default of ſuch Iſſue, to the right Heirs of the ſaid Marqueſs, by virtue of the ſaid Fine. And he being ſo ſeized of ſuch Eſtate died thereof ſeized, after whoſe Death the ſaid Manor whereof, &c. deſcended to the late King Henry 8. as Son and Heir Male of the Body of the ſaid King Henry 7. begotten, whereby the ſame King Henry 8. into the ſaid Manor whereof, &c. entered, and was thereof ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee-tail, viz. to him and to the Heirs Males of his Body begotten, and for Default of ſuch Iſſue, the Remainder to the right Heirs of the ſaid Marqueſs, by Force of the ſaid Fine. And the ſame King Henry 8. being ſo ſeized thereof, died by Proteſtation thereof ſeized, after whoſe Death the ſaid Manor whereof, &c. deſcended to the late King Edward 6. as Son and Heir Male of the Body of the ſaid King Henry 8. begotten, whereby the ſame King Edward 6. into the ſaid Manor whereof, &c. entered, and was thereof ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee-tail, the Remainder as before. And afterwards the ſaid King Edward of ſuch Eſtate of and in the ſaid Manor whereof, &c. being ſeized, died without Heir Male of his Body iſſuing. And the ſaid King Henry 7. before the ſaid Time when, &c. died without Heir Male of his Body begotten, whereby the ſaid Manor whereof, &c. remained and came, by Force of the ſaid Fine, to the aforeſaid Henry Berkley and to his Heirs, as Couſin and next Heir of the ſaid William Marqueſs Berkley, that is to ſay, as Son and Heir of Thomas late Lord Berkley, Son and Heir of Thomas Berkley Knight late Lord Berkley, Brother and Heir of Morice Berkley Knight, Son and Heir of Morice Berkley, Brother and Heir of the ſaid William late Marqueſs Berkley. By Reaſon of which Premiſſes the ſame Henry Lord Berkley the 11th Day of Auguſt in the firſt Year of the Reign of the Queen aforeſaid, into the ſaid Manor whereof, &c. entered as in his Remainder, as it was lawful for him to do, and thereof was ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee

The CASE.
The King is bound by the Statute de donis conditionalibus as well as a common Perſon. And therefore if a Remainder in tail is limited to the King, and for Default of Iſſue to the right Heirs of A. this is an Eſtate tail in the King, and he ſhall not be at Liberty to take it as a Fee ſimple conditional, as before the Statute de donis, and ſo to have Power to alien after Iſſue had, but upon Failure of Iſſue he in Remainder in Fee may well enter. Fee, until the ſaid Henry Cock into the ſaid 7 Acres of Wood, before the Time when, &c. entered, and the ſame demiſed to the ſaid Plaintiff for the ſaid Term, as the ſaid Plaintiff has declared; upon whoſe Poſſeſſion the ſaid Henry Lord Berkley in his own Right, and the ſaid Richard as his Servant and by his Command, the ſaid Time when, &c. entered, and the ſaid Plaintiff out of his ſaid Farm ejected; and ſo they demand Judgment ſi Actio. And the Plaintiff by his Replication confeſſing that the ſaid Marqueſs was ſeized of the ſaid Manor of Weſton whereof, &c. in his Demeſn as of Fee, and that he levied the Fine in manner and Form aforeſaid, and that the ſaid Marqueſs died without Heir of his Body, ſays further, that after the Death of the ſaid Marqueſs the ſaid King Henry 7. then having Iſſue of his Body begotten one Arthur late Prince of Wales, into the ſaid Manor whereof, &c. entered as in his Remainder, and was thereof ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee, by reaſon of the ſaid Fine, and afterwards the ſaid Prince Arthur died without Heir Male of his Body: And the ſaid King Henry 7. being ſeized of the Manor whereof, &c. in manner and Form aforeſaid, thereof died ſeized, whereby the ſame deſcended to King Henry 8. who entered, and was thereof ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee, by Reaſon of the ſaid Fine. And the ſaid King being ſo ſeized took to Wife Lady Catharine Latimer. And afterwards by an Act made in the Parliament of the ſaid King Henry 8. begun at Weſtminſter the 14th Day of January in the 35th Year of the Reign of the ſame King, and there held and continued unto the 29th Day of March in the ſaid 35th Year, amongſt other Things it was enacted, that all Demiſes, Releaſes, Gifts, Grants, Obligations, Recognizances, Patents, Fees, Acquittances, and other Things, from thenceforth to be made by the ſaid Lady Catherine, or to the ſaid Lady Catharine, by or to the ſaid King Henry 8. or by, to, or between any other Perſon or Perſons, ſhall ſtand and be of the ſame Force and Effect in Law, as they ſhould be if they were made by, to, or between any any other Subjects of the ſaid King Henry 8. without any Intereſt, Profit, or Benefit to come or accrue by any Means to the ſaid late King Henry 8. his Heirs, Executors, or Succeſſors, of, for, or in any of the Premiſſes, or by Reaſon or Occaſion of them, or any Part of them, or otherwiſe, as in the ſame Act is more fully contained. And that afterwards the ſaid King Henry 8. by his Letters Patent under his Great Seal of England, bearing Date the 25th Day of February in the 35th Year of his Reign, gave and granted the ſaid Manor of Weſton with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. to the ſaid Lady Catharine then his Wife, and Queen of England, to have and to hold to her for Term of her Life. By reaſon of which Gift, Grant, and Act, the ſaid Queen was ſeized of the ſaid Manor whereof, &c. in her Demeſn as of Freehold, the Reverſion thereof belonging to the ſaid King Henry 8. and to his Heirs. And ſhe being ſo ſeized, the Reverſion ut ſupra, the ſaid King Henry 8. died, and the Reverſion deſcended to King Edward 6. whereby he was ſeized thereof as of Fee. And he being ſo ſeized, by his Letters Patent bearing Date at Weſtminſter the 10th Day of July in the firſt Year of his Reign, here ſhewn forth, granted the ſaid Reverſion of the ſaid Manor whereof, &c. to Sir William Herbert Knight now Earl of Pembroke, to have and to hold to the ſaid Earl and to his Heirs. By virtue whereof the ſaid Earl was ſeized of the ſame Reverſion as of Fee and Right, and afterwards the Queen died, and the Earl entered into the ſaid Manor whereof, &c. and thereof enfeoffed the ſaid Henry Cock and his Heirs; by virtue whereof he entered and was ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee. And being ſo ſeized he made the Demiſe ut ſupra, by force whereof the ſaid Henry Willion entered and was poſſeſſed until the Defendants ejected him ut ſupra. And upon this the Defendants have demurred in Law.

Hill. & Eaſter Terms 3 Eliz.

And this Demurrer was argued in the ſaid Terms of St. Hillary and Eaſter by all the Serjeants, viz, by Harper, Southcote, Walſh, and Cholmley on the Part of the Defendants, and by Puttrel, Bendloe, and Carus on the Part of the Plaintiff; and divers Exceptions were taken by the Serjeants and Judges alſo, ſome to the Writ, and others to the Pleading. [a] One Exception taken by the Serjeants of Counſel for the Defendants was, for that this Clauſe, viz. the Goods and Chattels of the ſame Henry Willion found in the ſame 7 Acres of Wood they took and carried away, was left out of the original Writ. And this Exception was alſo maintained by Anthony Brown Juſtice, who ſaid, that in Writs a Man ought to purſue the Form and Order of the Regiſter, and we cannot now make a new Form, or a new Regiſter, and in Writs it is ſufficient to ſay that the Regiſter is ſo, and in each of the Writs in the Regiſter there is the Clauſe, the Goods and Chattels, &c. took and carried away, and this is omitted in none of the Writs in the Regiſter, ergo it is the common Courſe and uſual Form of Writs, and all Writs ought to be ſo; and tho' in rei veritate the Defendant did not take any Goods and Chattels, for perhaps the Plaintiff had none there, nevertheleſs he ought to have theſe Words in the Writ, and make a ſpecial Declaration, omitting the Goods and Chattles; as in many Caſes a Man ſhall have a general Writ, and make a ſpecial Declaration according to the Truth of his Caſe. And altho' there is a Rule in the [b] Regiſter, that in a Writ of Ejectione firmæ there cannot be (Goods and Chattles), becauſe for Goods a Man ſhall have an Exigent, and in the Writ of Ejectione firmæ Diſtreſs infinite, yet, he ſaid, this Reaſon is not [c] ſufficient to overthrow the Exception taken for the Omiſſion of the Words, becauſe in this Writ there is [d] vi et armis, and in all Writs which have theſe Words [e] Proceſs of Outlawry lies by the Common Law. [f] And F. N. B. ſays that Proceſs of Outlawry lies in this Writ, which muſt be by the Common Law, for it is given by no Statute: So that the ſaid Rule in the Regiſter is of no Weight. [g] But in Actions on the Caſe Proceſs of Outlawry did not lie until it was given by the Statute of 19. H. 7. cap. 9. [h] Alſo he ſaid, although it is expreſſed in the Regiſter that a Writ of Ejectione firmæ lies of a Pool, or of Paſture for an Ox,

Exceptions taken by the Defendants. 1.

[a] See Ante 199 (c) the ſame Exception taken by A. Brown J. but Dyer C. J. againſt it. Gilb. Law of Ejectm. 7 ſays that the Writ is good either with or without the Clauſe (Goods and Chattles). And 1 Finch 318 ſays that this Clauſe ſhall be put in the Writ where the Ejectment is ſuppoſed of a Manor, becauſe the Law intends it to be ſtocked with Chattles; otherwiſe if of other Lands.

ſays if theſe Words are omitted in the Writ it is an Error incurable, becauſe there muſt appear ſuch a Treſpaſs in the Writ as will give the King cannot be without theſe Words are inſerted.

yet it may be that there are Goods there, viz. Land or Timber in the Pool, and in the Paſture an Ox or a Horſe, and a Bell round the Ox's Neck, and Fetters round the Horſe's Feet, and other ſuch like Things, which are the Goods and Chattles of him that is ejected. So that this is not a ſufficient Cauſe to maintain the Omiſſion of the Words Goods and Chattles. And therefore it ſeemed to him and to the Serjeants of Counſel for the Defendants, that the Writ ought to abate for the Omiſſion of the ſaid Words.

But all the Serjeants of Counſel for the Plaintiff, and all the other Juſtices, viz. Weſton and the Lord Dyer held the contrary; for the Clauſes of Ejectment of the Land, and of the taking of the Goods and Chattles, are two diſtinct and ſeveral Clauſes. [a] And if the Truth be that the Defendants did not take any Goods and Chattles, it would be idle to put the Clauſe in; for the Law will not ſuffer a Man to complain of more Things than he has Cauſe. [b] For which reaſon if one Beaſt is taken, the Writ of Replevin ſhall make Mention of that only, as his certain labouring Beaſt, or his certain Ox, and it ſhall not ſay his Cattle in the plural Number, where only one Beaſt is taken, cauſa qua ſupra. [c] And in the Regiſter the Writs are for an Ejectment of a Manor, and taking of Goods, in which Caſe, the Lord Dyer ſaid, it ſhall be intended ſuch a Manor as is ſtored with a Stock; but there is no Writ in the Regiſter for an Ejectment of Land, or Meadow, or Paſture, or Wood, and taking of Goods. And if there was, yet the Regiſter is not to be purſued in ſuch preciſe Terms, where the Truth of his Caſe who ſues the Writ does not agree with the Words in all Points. And, he ſaid, there were divers Precedents in the Common Pleas, where ſuch Writs as this is here were held good; for which reaſon he and Weſton Juſtices held the Writ good enough. And the Lord Dyer ſaid that the Words, then that you cauſe the ſaid Tenements to be reſeized of the Chattles which within it were taken, and the ſaid Tenement with the Chattles to be in Peace until, &c. ought to be in every Writ of Aſſize, for it is the uſual Form, and the King's Command for the Repoſe of the Party in the mean time, and there is no Precedent to the contrary, but here in our Caſe there are ſeveral to the contrary.

Another Exception taken to the Replication by the Serjeants of Counſel for the Defendants was, that in the Replication the Plaintiff has alledged that the Marqueſs died without Heir of his Body, after whoſe Death the ſaid King Henry 7. entered into the ſaid Manor whereof, &c. and he has not alledged that there was any Office found proving that the Marqueſs died without Heir of his Body, which he ought to have done, for his Death is Matter of Fact, and without his Death King Henry 7. had no Title of Entry; and there ought to be Matter of Record to prove the Matter of Fact which gives a Title of Entry to the King. [d] As if the King's Tenant dies ſeized of his Land, which deſcends to his Heir within Age, [e] or if his Villain purchaſes Land, the King cannot enter into the Land without Office firſt finding his Title; [f] and without Office there can be no Intruſion upon the Poſſeſſion of the King, and therefore Office ought to be found. And although the Defendants themſelves in their Bar have ſaid that the Marqueſs died without Iſſue, and that King Henry 7. entered, without alledging any Office, yet this Confeſſion of the Defendants ſhall not aid the Plaintiff, for as to the Defendants, the Entry and Seizin of King Henry 7. after the Death of the Marqueſs without Iſſue is not for Neceſſity, but only as Conveyance to them, for if the Marqueſs died without Iſſue, and King Henry 7. without Iſſue Male, it is ſufficient for the Defendants, whether King Henry 7. ever had Seizin or Eſtate, or not. For if the King was never ſeized, it is the better for the Defendants; but as to the Plaintiff, the Strength of his Title depends upon the making his Leaſe good, for he derives his Leaſe from Cock, who derived his Title from the Earl of Pembroke, who derived his Title from King Edward 6. who derived his Title by Deſcent from King Henry 8. who derived his Title by Deſcent from King Henry 7. who derived his Title from the Fine, and from the dying of the Marqueſs without Iſſue, and Entry by himſelf. So that if the Plaintiff does not ſufficiently prove that the Marqueſs died without Iſſue, and that the King had an Eſtate in the Land after his Death, he does not ſufficiently prove his own Title or Intereſt; wherefore the Proof of that is the Subſtance and Support of the Plaintiff's Title. But although the Defendants have alledged in the Bar that he died without Iſſue, and that King Henry 7. entered, this Confeſſion ſhall not prejudice the Defendants, becauſe it is not the Subſtance of their Title, for the Cauſe ſhewn before, but it is the Subſtance of the Plaintiff's Title. And when it is ſhewn that the Marqueſs died without Iſſue, then it is the Subſtance of the Defendant's Title to prove that King Henry 7. died without Heir Male, and not to prove whether there was any Office or other Matter of Record to entitle King Henry 7. or not. For if he never had Seizin in Deed, it is the better for the Defendants. So that the Confeſſion of that which is not material for the Defendants ſhall not prejudice the Defendants, nor make the Plaintiff's Title better, nor can it give Title by Law to the King, if the Law would not give it without their Confeſſion, for their Confeſſion ſhall not make that to be Law which is not Law. Wherefore it was ſaid, that becauſe there is no Office alledged proving the Death of the Marqueſs, and the Eſtate and Seizin in Deed of the King, the Replication is naught.

But the whole Court argued againſt this Exception. * For when the Marqueſs died without Iſſue, the Freehold was preſently caſt upon the King. For Anthony Brown ſaid, the Freehold muſt of Neceſſity be in ſome one, in order that he who has Title or Right to it may know againſt whom he ought to demand it, for which Reaſon it ſhall not be in Suſpence, and therefore when the Eſtate was determined in the Marqueſs, the Law caſt the Poſſeſſion in Law upon the King. [g] As if the King's Tenant for Life dies, the Freehold in Law is preſently in the King; [h] and ſo if the King's Tenant dies without Heir, the Poſſeſſion in Law is preſently in the King without Office. [i] For he ſaid, an Office is not neceſſary but where the King ſhall take by it; [k] as if the King makes a Gift in Tail upon Condition, and the Condition is broken, there the ſame ought to be found by Office. [l] So ought it where the King's Villain has purchaſed Land, for the King ſhall take the Land thereby, and the Land is not in the King before Office. But here the Freehold hold is in him before Office, and then it is idle to have an Office to convey that to the King which the Law has conveyed to him before the Office found. And as to the Caſe put of the Wardſhip of Land, true it is that there ought to be an Office found to entitle the King, for there the Freehold and the Poſſeſſion in Law is caſt upon the Heir; [a] and the Guardian is at Liberty to take the Wardſhip of the Land, or to diſtrain for the Seigniory, for the Seigniory is not extinct there. [b] But it is not ſo in the Caſe of an Eſcheat, for upon the Eſcheat the Seigniory is preſently extinct, by reaſon that the Law conveys the Poſſeſſion of the Tenancy to the Seigniory: And ſo was this Diverſity taken about the firſt or ſecond Years of King Edw. 3. And as in the Caſe of an Eſcheat the Poſſeſſion of the Tenancy is caſt upon another Lord before Entry, ſo is it caſt upon the King, being the Lord, before Office. And in the ſame Manner here the Remainder is preſently caſt upon the King by the Death of the Marqueſs, and then an Office afterwards would be ſuperfluous. And for the ſame Reaſon alſo the Bar is good by the Allegation that King Edward 6. died without Heir Male, and that the Lord Berkley now Defendant entered, without ſhewing any Ouſter le main, or other Matter of Record to deveſt it out of Queen Mary; for when King Edward 6. died without Iſſue Male, the Freehold was preſently caſt upon the Lord Berkley now Defendant, and never came to Queen Mary, which is upon the Reaſon ſhewn before. And hereupon Anthony Brown ſaid, if Land is leaſed to the King for his Life, upon Condition that if the Leſſor dies his Heir ſhall enter, and the Leſſor dies, there his Heir ſhall not enter without Office finding the Death, and without Ouſter le main ſued; but if it was upon Condition that if the King, who is Leſſee, dies, the Leſſor ſhall enter, there if the King dies, the Leſſor ſhall enter without Office, or Ouſter le main ſued. For in the firſt Caſe the Condition is meerly a Condition which abbreviates the Eſtate, but in the other Caſe the Condition is joined to the [c] Limitation of the Eſtate, and the Condition and the Limitation tend to one End, and the Condition does not abridge the Limitation, as it does in the other Caſe; and therefore when the King dies, the Freehold is by the Act of the Law caſt upon the Leſſor before Entry. So in our Caſe when King Edward 6. died without Heir Male, the Freehold was caſt upon the Lord Berkley, and his Entry was lawful without Office or Ouſter le main, and the Bar reciting that he entered is good enough in this Point, quod fuit conceſſum per totam Curiam. Alſo admitting that an Office was neceſſary here, yet the Defendants by their Plea in Bar have [d] amended the Fault which they have here excepted to. For they themſelves in conveying their Title to them have ſhewn that the Marqueſs died without Iſſue, and that King Henry 7. entered, and it is Matter of Subſtance for the Defendants to ſhew the Deaths, for the Fee-ſimple which the Lord Berkley one of the Defendants claims could not be executed in him until both the Eſtates-tail precedent were ended. And therefore it is as material for him to ſhew the Death of the Marqueſs without Heir of his Body, as to ſhew that Henry 7. died without Heir Male of his Body; and by the Plea in Bar the Defendants have gone further, and have ſhewn that the Marqueſs died without Heir of his Body, and that Henry 7. entered, and died without Heir Male of his Body, ſo that they have confeſſed the Eſtate in Deed in Henry 7. and the Plaintiff by the Replication hath ſaid, well and true it is that the Marqueſs died without Heir of his Body, and that King Henry 7. entered, &c. whereby he has only affirmed that which the Defendants have affirmed, and which they are therefore eſtopped to ſay is faulty. And Anthony Brown ſaid, [e] that in Aſſize if the Defendant will ſay that he enfeoffed the Plaintiff in Fee upon Condition, and the Plaintiff broke the Condition, for the Breach whereof he re-entered, this Plea is not good, becauſe he does not ſhew the Deed of the Condition, for the Condition without the Deed ſhewn does not lie in Averment; but if the Plaintiff ſays, well and true it is that the Defendant enfeoffed him upon Condition, and that he broke the Condition, and the Defendant re-entered, and afterwards enfeoffed him, or that after the Condition broken, and before his re-Entry, the Defendant releaſed to him, now the Bar which was faulty is made good by the Affirmance of him that might have taken Advantage of it, and by his Affirmance he is now eſtopped to find fault with it. So is it in our Caſe here, wherefore this Exception was diſallowed by the Rule of the Court.

Exception 3. Another Exception taken to the Replication by the Counſel for the Defendants was, for that the Defendants in the Bar have pleaded the Fine which limits the Remainder in Tail to King Henry 7. and have alledged that after the Death of the Marqueſs King Henry 7. entered into the ſaid Manor whereof, &c. and was thereof ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee-Tail, viz. to him and to the Heirs Males of his Body begotten, the Remainder to the right Heirs of the Marqueſs, by virtue of the ſaid Fine, and the Plaintiff in the Replication ſays, well and true it is that the Marqueſs was ſeized in Fee, and levied the Fine, as in the Bar is ſhewn, and afterwards the Marqueſs died without Iſſue, and then he ſays further, that afterwards King Henry 7. having Iſſue Male, entered as in his Remainder, and was thereof ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee, by reaſon of the ſaid Fine, which does not agree with the Plea in Bar wherein it is ſaid that he was ſeized in Tail with the Remainder over, for a Fee-ſimple in Poſſeſſion and a Fee-tail in Poſſeſſion can't ſtand together in one ſame Perſon at one ſame Time, for which Reaſon this Contradiction of the Bar without a Traverſe is not receivable, but the Replication is bad by reaſon of this Variance without a Traverſe taken.

* See S. P. Accord 2 Bulſt. 149. * But the whole Court argued to the contrary. For the Plaintiff and the Defendants have agreed upon the Fine, by which they have ſhewn the Eſtate as it was, and the Defendants have taken it to be a Fee-tail in King Henry 7. and the Plaintiff has taken it to be a Fee-ſimple in him, eſpecially after Iſſue had. And whether it be a Fee-ſimple or a Fee-tail is Matter of Law, which belongs to the Court to determine; and then when one of 'em ſays it is a Fee-tail, and the other ſays it is a Fee-ſimple, this is according as they took the Law and would have it to be, and it is no more than to ſignify to the Court that they varied in their Judgment of the Law, whereupon the Court may be the better apprized of the Point of Variance upon which they are to

to adjudge. And when the Matter of Fact is agreed by the one Party and the other, a Traverſe cannot be taken to the Operation of the Law thereupon, [a] for a Traverſe ſhall never be taken but to Matter of Fact, and if the Parties are agreed upon the Matter of Fact, they ſhall not traverſe the Law thereupon, as to ſay, the Law upon this Matter is with me, without that that it is with you; but the Judges ſhall adjudge upon it without Traverſe of the Party. For, as Anthony Brown ſaid, Matters of Fact being traverſed ſhall be tried by 12 Men, and if the Plaintiff ſhould take a Traverſe here, it would be to make 12 illiterate Men try a Matter of Law whereof they have no Knowledge. And he ſaid, it is not their Office to try Matters of Law, but only to try Matters of Fact; for, he ſaid, at the Beginning of our Law it was ordained that [b] Matters of Fact ſhould be tried by 12 Men of the Country where the Matter ariſes, [c] and Matters of Law by 12 Judges of the Law, for which Purpoſe there were ſix Judges here, and ſix in the King's Bench, who upon Matters of Law uſed to aſſemble together in a certain Place, in order to diſcuſs what the Law was therein. So that if a Traverſe ſhould be here taken, it would be to make 12 ignorant Men of the Country try that whereof they are not Judges, and which does not belong to them to try; and therefore the croſſing of the Bar by the Replication is good enough without a Traverſe. For which reaſon this Exception was diſallowed by the Rule of the Court.

Another Exception taken to the Replication was, for that it only recites Part of the Act made in 35. H. 8. touching the diſtinct Capacity of the Queen. For there is in it a ſaving to every Subject their Right, which is omitted in the Replication; and it was ſaid that it is but a particular Act, whereof the Court is not bound to take notice. Exception 4.

But the whole Court was of Opinion againſt this Exception, for they ſaid that without its being pleaded the Court and all the Realm are [d] bound to take notice of it. For although it be made touching Things between the King and Queen, and touching the Capacity of the Queen, yet it concerns all the Subjects of the Realm. [e] For every Subject has an Intereſt in the King, and none of his Subjects that is within his Law is divided from the King who is his Head and Sovereign. So that his Buſineſs and Things concern the whole Realm; and foraſmuch as the whole Realm has an Intereſt in the King, and by the ſame Reaſon in the Queen, who is his Wife, the ſaid Act concerns the whole Realm, and may well be called a general Act, whereof every one is bound to take Notice. And Anthony Brown ſaid, although the Saving had not been in the Act, yet it ſhould have been implied by the Intent of the Makers, for the Intent of the Act was to make the Queen have ſuch Capacity as is expreſſed in the Act, and to this Intent only the Act enures, and not to all other Intents; [f] and whoever would conſider an Act well ought always to have particular Regard to the Intent of it, and according as the Intent appears he ought to conſtrue the Words. Wherefore this Exception was diſallowed by the Rule of the Court.

Another Exception was taken to the Replication for not ſhewing the Place of the Date of the ſaid Letters-patent of King Henry 8. made of the ſaid Manor to the Queen for Term of her Life; for the Plaintiff conveys his Leaſe from Cock, and Cock conveys his Title from the Earl of Pembroke, and the Earl from the King by Grant of the Reverſion, in which Caſe it is neceſſary for the Plaintiff to make the Queen have an Eſtate for Life, for if ſhe had not a particular Eſtate in the Manor, it could not paſs to the Earl by Words of Reverſion. And in order to make her have a particular Eſtate, it is requiſite to ſhew that the Letters-patent made to her were good and perfect, and this the Plaintiff has not done, unleſs he ſhews in what Place they were dated. For in all Matters of Record the Place of the Date ought to be ſhewn, as well as the Time of the Date. And ſo here the Plaintiff (although he is not bound to ſhew the Letters-patent made to the Queen, becauſe he does not * claim by them) ought nevertheleſs to plead them certainly, which he has not done when he has omitted the Place of the Date of them; wherefore for Want of ſhewing the Place of the Date, the Replication is ill. Exception 5.

* S. P. Ante 149 (*).

But the whole Court was of opinion againſt this Exception. [g] For although it is uſual in pleading Deeds to ſhew the Place where they were made, in order to inform the Court of what Viſne the Jury ſhall come, if they are denied, this Reaſon does not hold Place here, as the Lord Dyer ſaid. [h] For, he ſaid, no Matter of Record ſhall be tried per pais, if it be denied, and the Letters-patent are a Record in themſelves, and no Record can be tried per pais. So that foraſmuch as the Place of the Date is ſhewn in pleading only for the Certainty of the Viſne, and for no other Cauſe, therefore the Place is not neceſſary to be ſhewn here, becauſe no Jury ſhall come from any Viſne to try the Letters-patent. Alſo Anthony Brown ſaid, if neither the Place nor the [i] Day of the Date be in the Letters-patent, yet the Letters-patent are as good as the Deed of any [k] other Perſon is, which has not the Place or the Day of the Date. [l] For the Grant of the Thing is the Subſtance, and the Place or the Day of the Date is but a Circumſtance of Truth, and not Matter of Neceſſity. For if the King grants an Office to one by his Letters-patent, and afterwards grants the ſame Office to another by other Letters-patent, and neither of the Letters-patent have any Day of the Date, there if he who had the firſt Patent be diſturbed or ouſted, he ſhall have a Scire facias or other Suit, and whether his Patent is more ancient than the other ſhall be tried by a Jury of 12 Men upon Iſſue joined thereon. And the Statute of 18. H. 6. cap. 1. recites a Miſchief in antedating the King's Letters-patent, and gives Remedy for the ſame, but it does not recite any Miſchief ariſing from the Omiſſion of the Date, but ordains that of every Warrant hereafter ſent by the King or his Heirs to the Chancellor, the Day of the Delivery of the ſame to the Chancellor ſhall be entered of Record in the Chancery, and that the Chancellor ſhall cauſe Letters-patent to be made upon the ſame Warrant, bearing Date the Day of the Delivery of the Warrant into the Chancery, and not before, and if any Letters-patent from henceforth be made to the contrary, they ſhall be void, and holden for none. [m] By which Statute Letters-patent bearing another Day of Date than the

the Day of the Entry of the Warrant (where there is a Warrant) are void, and not otherwiſe; and if there is a Warrant, and the Day of the Delivery of it is entered, and the Patent has no Day of Date, it is good, and is out of the Words and Intent of the Act, and remains at common Law. And at common Law Letters-patent were good notwithſtanding they had no Day of Date, and ſo are they at this Day notwithſtanding they have no Day of Date in them, quod Dyer conceſſit.

[b] And yet, he ſaid, in the Quare Impedit brought by the King againſt the Abbeſs of Sion in 38. H. 6. the Abbeſs conveyed the Fee-ſimple of the Advowſon to her Predeceſſoreſs by Fine of a Biſhop, and in order to make a good Eſtate in the Biſhop, ſhe ſhewed that King Henry 5. was ſeized of the Manor to which the Advowſon was appendant, and by his Letters-patent leaſed it to Huſband and Wife for their Lives, and afterwards King Henry 6. by his Letters-patent bearing Date, &c. reciting the ſaid Demiſe to the Huſband and Wife, granted the ſaid Manor to the ſaid Biſhop and others, habendum una cum Advocatione to them in Fee, and the Biſhop ſurvived the others, and granted it to the Predeceſſoreſs of the Defendant ut ſupra: And the King demurred upon the Plea, and one Cauſe of the Demurrer there ſhewn is, for that the Defendant pleaded the Letters-patent made to the Huſband and Wife, (as of Neceſſity ſhe ought, for the whole Effect of the Letters-patent made to the Biſhop depended upon the firſt Letters-patent made to the Huſband and Wife, for if there was no ſuch Leaſe, conſequently there was no ſuch Reverſion, and if ſo, then the ſecond Letters-patent were void) and did not ſhew the Day, Year, or Place of the Date of them. And there it is argued, that although ſhe ſhould not be compelled to ſhew the ſaid Letters-patent made to the Huſband and Wife, becauſe they don't belong to her, that yet ſhe ought to plead them certainly, and ſhew the Day, Year, and Place of the Date, for they are of Record, and every Matter of Record ought to be pleaded certainly, whether it belongs to him that pleads it or not, and every Matter of Record ought to have the Year, Day, and Place of the Date, or elſe it is no Matter of Record, for if the Letters-patent have no Date, they are worth nothing, and the Party ſhall have Advantage thereof by Demurrer. And although Judgment was there given for the King, yet, he ſaid, he did not take the ſaid Exception to be the Cauſe thereof, but other Matters there moved, ſo that he apprehended this Point was not there adjudged. And he ſaid, tho the Place of the Date be out of the Letters-patent, yet they are good, and therefore that the Replication here ſeemed to him to be good, notwithſtanding the Omiſſion of the Place of the Date. Alſo it was ſaid, that the ſhewing of the Letters-patent made to the Queen is but Matter of Conveyance. And ſo this Exception was diſallowed by the Rule of the Court.

And Anthony Brown in ſpeaking to this Exception ſaid, [c] if a Man pleads any Grant of the King by his Letters-patent ſealed with the Great Seal, and ſhews them forth, the other Party cannot ſay, nul tiel Record, for if he ſhould have a Day to bring in the Record, he could not prove it by any other Means than by that which he has ſhewn, viz. by the Great Seal. And therefore the Party and every other ſhall be eſtopped to deny it, and it is good againſt all by Concluſion. But if a Man pleads a Recovery, Fine, or Indictment, or the like, there the other Party may ſay, nul tiel Record, and he ſhall have a Day to bring it in, for there he may bring it in under the Great Seal, which is a greater Authority than he has ſhewn, and ſo is the Diverſity, as he ſaid.

Exception 6.

Another Exception was taken to the Replication, for that in the Bar it is alledged that King Edward 6. died ſeized, and the Replication does not warrant that he did not die ſeized, (for he had granted the Reverſion to the Earl of Pembroke) and has not taken a Traverſe to the dying ſeized alledged in the Bar; ſed non allocatur Exceptio, for it is not of any Effect to be traverſed, nor very material whether he died ſeized or not, for the Eſtate which he had is ended by the Allegation of the Defendant, ſo that the Defendant does not claim by the Deſcent, but by the Remainder before, for which Cauſe the Deſcent is immaterial.

Exception 7.

Another Exception taken to the Replication was, for that it contains that the Earl of Pembroke after the Death of the Queen, entered into the ſaid Manor whereof, &c. and thereof enfeoffed the ſaid Henry Cock and his Heirs, by virtue of which he entered and was ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee, whereas it is not the Order of pleading upon a Feoffment to ſay that he entered, for the Feoffment contains Livery, and the Livery contains Seizin in Deed, which is as much as an Entry, for an Entry is to no other Purpoſe but to gain Poſſeſſion in Deed, and that is contained in the Livery before, and then the Allegation of Entry makes the Replication bad; ſed non allocatur Exceptio, for although the ſaid Reaſon is true, that the Feoffment implies Seizin, which is tantamount to an Entry, yet the Entry alledged does not make the Replication bad, for it is but Surpluſage, [d] which not being contrary to the Matter before, ſhall not vitiate the Plea.

Exception 8.

The Lord Dyer moved another Exception to the Replication, for that it contains, that King Edward 6. granted the Reverſion to Sir William Herbert Knight now Earl of Pembroke, to have and to hold to the ſaid Earl and to his Heirs; in which Caſe if he was then only a Knight, it cannot be well ſaid to have and to hold to the ſaid Earl, nor that by virtue thereof the ſaid Earl was ſeized, &c. But it ought to be, "to have and to hold to the ſaid Sir William Herbert," and, "by virtue whereof the ſaid Sir William Herbert was ſeized," ſo that it ſeemed to him not to be as well as it might be. But as he was the firſt that moved this in his Argument, and no other argued after him, therefore none of the reſt of the Juſtices ſhewed their Opinions therein.

And it was moved by ſome of the Counſel for the Plaintiff, that the Grant of King Henry 8. to the Queen for her Life was a Diſcontinuance of the Tail, and that the Lord Berkley the Defendant might not enter, and that it was a Diſcontinuance for the Life of the Queen, which Southcote, who was of Counſel for the Defendants granted: For he ſaid, if the King ſhall be taken as Tenant in Tail, then his his Grant in Fee, in Tail, or for Life made by his Letters-Patent works a Diſcontinuance, for he cannot make Livery, and therefore the Law ſays that ſome Way he ſhall be able to do as much as a common Perſon may, that is, make a Diſcontinuance. [a] And if a Copyhold is entailed, and he will ſurrender to the Uſe of another in Fee, and a Copy is made to the other accordingly, this ſhall be a Diſcontinuance, for he cannot part with the Land by Livery or any other Way, and this Way which he may uſe ſhall be of the ſame Benefit to him as Livery ſhall be to him that may make it. So in the principal Caſe it ſhall be a Diſcontinuance for Life. But his Companions held that it ſhould not be a Diſcontinuance, becauſe it only paſſed by Grant, [b] which cannot make a Diſcontinuance. [c] And alſo every Diſcontinuance is a Wrong, [d] which the King cannot do. But he, and all the other Counſel for the Defendants, and the whole Court, held, that if the King ſhall be only Tenant in Tail, ſo that the Matter in Law will ſerve the Lord Berkley the Defendant, his Entry ſhall be lawful, for if it ſhould be a Diſcontinuance, it could not be a Diſcontinuance longer than for the Life of the Queen. For the Grant of King Edward 6. to Sir William Herbert could not make a Diſcontinuance in Fee, notwithſtanding it was executed in his Lifetime, becauſe King Edward 6. was never ſeized by Force of the Tail, and ſo by the Rule of [e] Littleton it is not a Diſcontinuance. And therefore the Lord Berkley in the Remainder might enter without Office, or Scire Facias againſt the Patentee, or any ſuch Means, for the Intereſt of the King is abſolutely determined, and nothing remains in him.

[e] Littlet. § 637.

And the Lord Dyer in his Argument took Exception to the Replication, for that it confeſſes the Eſtate-tail in King Henry 7. and then ſays that he having Iſſue Prince Arthur entered and was ſeized in Fee; whereas, he ſaid, the having Iſſue did not make him to have the Fee, for the Fee either accrued to him by the Remainder or never, for admitting that it was in the King as the Plaintiff will have it, viz. as it was in others before the Statute, yet the Fee-ſimple veſted at the Beginning, tho' by Iſſue he had Power to alien, which he had not before, but the Iſſue was not the Cauſe of having the Fee, but the firſt Gift. So that, he ſaid, the Iſſue did not make ſuch a Metamorphoſis as the Replication contains, for which Reaſon he ſaid the Replication was not good in this Point. Exception 9.

Alſo he took Exception to the Bar, for that it contains that King Edward 6. died without Heir of his Body iſſuing, and that the ſaid King Henry 7. before the Time when, &c. died without Heir Male of his Body begotten, which, he ſaid, was a Contradiction in itſelf, for it could not be ſaid that Henry 7. died without Heir Male of his Body, when he has ſhewn before that he had Iſſue Henry 8. and he Edward 6. But if an Eſtate-tail is given to J. S. the Remainder to another, and J. S. hath Iſſue and dies, and the Iſſue enters and dies without Iſſue, and he in the Remainder brings a Formedon in the Remainder, [f] he may ſay that J. S. died without Heir of his Body, and the Writ and Declaration there ſhall be good, notwithſtanding the other ſhews that he had Iſſue which ſurvived him, and entered, and died without Iſſue, for when his Iſſue died without Iſſue, he upon the Matter died without Heir of his Body, and this is uſual in Writs of Formedon in Remainder, and there is no Repugnancy of his own ſhewing; but to ſhew that he had Iſſue and died, and the Iſſue entered, and died without Iſſue, and then to ſay that the Father died without Iſſue, is a Repugnancy of his own ſhewing; and here he might have uſed other Words to expreſs that there was no other Heir Male of the Body of Henry 7. in being, for he might have ſaid that Edward 6. died without Heir of his Body, there being no Heir Male of the Body of the aforeſaid King Henry 7. alive, which would have ſatisfied his whole Intent without any Repugnancy. Exception 10.

[f] See Dy. 14, pl. 75.

Another Exception he took to the Bar, for that it contains that the Lord Berkley the Defendant entered as in his Remainder, and was thereof ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee, until the ſaid Henry Cock entered into the ſaid ſeven Acres of Wood, and demiſed them to the Plaintiff for the ſaid Term, as the Plaintiff has declared, &c. Which is not well pleaded, for the Plaintiff has declared of a Leaſe in Deed made to him by Henry Cock, which the Defendants ought to confeſs and avoid, or traverſe, and here they have not done either the one or the other, for they have ſaid that the Lord Berkley was ſeized until the ſaid Henry Cock entered and made the Leaſe, and if Cock entered and did not diſſeize the Lord Berkley, he had no Eſtate to make the Leaſe, for the Defendants have ſhewn that the Lord Berkley was in by good Title until Cock entered, in which Caſe his Entry ſhall not gain him Poſſeſſion; [g] for if two are upon the Land, the Law will adjudge the Poſſeſſion in him that has the beſt Right to it. [h] So that the Entry does not imply a Diſſeizin, and without a Diſſeizin he had no Eſtate to make the Leaſe, for which Reaſon it ought to have been ſaid that he entered and diſſeized him, and afterwards made the Leaſe, and that he re-entered, and this would have been a good Confeſſion and Avoidance of the Leaſe, but as it is pleaded it is not ſo, for his Entry does not imply a Diſſeizin, nor ſhall it gain the Poſſeſſion. And ſo it is taken in one of the Years of [i] Edw. 4. Wherefore the Bar ſeemed to him not good for theſe two Cauſes, but as he firſt moved theſe two Exceptions in his Argument, and none argued after him, I could not learn the Opinions of the other Juſtices therein. Exception 11.

[i] P. 10. Ed. 4. 6. a.

As to the Matter in Law, it was ſaid by the Serjeants above mentioned of Counſel for the Defendants, that firſt the Capacities of the King are to be conſidered, and how many Capacities he has; and if he has ſeveral Capacities, then in what Capacity King Henry 7. took the Remainder; and whether or no after Iſſue had he had Power to alien, as every ſuch Donee had before the Statute de donis conditionalibus, or if he ſhall be bound and reſtrained by this Statute, as every other Donee is, and if he ſhall, then it follows from thence that when the Iſſues Males coming from King Henry 7. were extinct, the Lord Berkley now Defendant might enter. And if ſo be that King Henry 7. may be ſaid to have a Fee-ſimple, and to have Power to alien poſt prolem ſuſcitatam, King Henry 8. ſhall alſo be deemed in the ſame Caſe, and ſo ſhall King Edward 6. and then he by his

The Argument upon the Matter in Law. For the Defendants.

Letters-patent made to Sir William Herbert has lawfully given the ſaid Land in Fee-ſimple, and from thence it will follow that the Lord Berkley now Defendant might not enter, but was without Remedy. And as to this it was argued on this Side that the King has two Capacities, [a] for he has two Bodies, the one whereof is a Body natural conſiſting of natural Members as every other Man has, and in this he is ſubject to Paſſions and to Death as other Men are; the other is a Body politic, and the Members thereof are his Subjects, and he and his Subjects together compoſe the Corporation, as Southcote ſaid, and he is incorporated with them, and they with him, and he is the Head, and they are the Members, and he has the ſole Government of them; and this Body is not ſubject to Paſſions as the other is, nor to Death, for as to this Body the King never dies, [b] and his natural Death is not called in our Law (as Harper ſaid) the Death of the King, but the Demiſe of the King, not ſignifying by the Word (Demiſe) that the Body politic of the King is dead, but that there is a Separation of the two Bodies, and that the Body politic is transferred and conveyed over from the Body natural now dead or now removed from the Dignity royal to another Body natural. So that it ſignifies a Removal of the Body politic of the King of this Realm from one Body natural to another. But notwithſtanding that theſe two Bodies are at one Time conjoined together, ‖ yet the Capacity of the one does not confound that of the other, but they remain diſtinct Capacities. [c] So that the King may take in his Body natural Lands or Tenements as Heir to any of his Anceſtors; and † alſo in this Capacity he may purchaſe to him and to his Heirs, * and his Heirs ſhall hold the ſame notwithſtanding he is removed from the Eſtate Royal. [d] And alſo he may take or purchaſe Lands or Tenements in Fee in his Body politic, viz. to him and to his Heirs Kings of England, or to him and to his Succeſſors Kings of England; ſo that his double Capacity remains as it does in other Perſons that have a double Capacity. [e] As a Biſhop or Dean may take by Deſcent or Purchaſe to them and to their Heirs, or to them and to their Succeſſors, as they pleaſe. [f] And to prove that the Eſtate Royal does not confound the other Capacity, the Caſe in 45. Aſs. pl. 6. was alledged, where it appears that King Henry 3. gave a Manor to the Earl of Cornwal in Tail, ſaving the Reverſion to himſelf, and died, the Earl gave the Manor to another in Fee by Deed with Clauſe of Warranty in Exchange for another Manor, and afterwards the Earl died without Iſſue, leaving Aſſets, and the Warranty and Aſſets deſcended upon King Edward 1. being Heir to the Earl; and there it is adjudged that the King was barred by this Warranty with Aſſets, and therefore the Aſſignee of the Alienee had Reſtitution of the Manor out of the Hands of King Edward 3. who had ſeized the Manor into his Hands for the Reaſon aboveſaid. Which Caſe proves that the Capacity which the King has in his Body natural remains after he is King, for elſe the Warranty and Aſſets could not have deſcended upon him as Heir to the Earl his Anceſtor; ſo that by this Warranty and Aſſets, which deſcended upon the Body natural of the King, he was barred of the Reverſion which he demanded in his Body politic, for it was parcel of the Poſſeſſions of the Crown, for any Thing that appears to the contrary. And as his Capacity remains to take by Deſcent as Heir, ſo it remains to purchaſe therein. [g] For in 34. H. 6. (as Southcote ſaid) the Maſter of the Houſe of God in Canterbury brought a Quare Impedit againſt the Abbeſs of Sion, and counted that King Henry 4. was ſeized of the Advowſon as in groſs in his Demeſn as of Fee and Right, and made Deſcent from him to King Henry 5. and from him to King Henry 6. who granted it to the Plaintiff; and Exception was taken to the Count, becauſe he ſaid that King Henry 6. was ſeized as Heir to his Father of the Advowſon as of Fee and Right, and did not ſay in jure Coronæ, which he ought to have ſaid; ſed non allocatur, for it is held by the Arguments there, [h] that if the King purchaſes Land, he ſhall have it in the Capacity of his natural Body, and not in right of the Crown. So that his Capacity to take in his natural Body as well by Deſcent as by Purchaſe remains, as well as his Capacity to take in his Body politic, for of the politic Capacity there is no Doubt.

Further, as to the Point in what Capacity King Henry 7. took the Remainder, the Counſel for the Defendants held that he took it in the Capacity of his Body natural. For it is limited that if the Marqueſs die without Iſſue, the ſaid Manor ſhould remain to the ſaid late King Henry 7. and to the Heirs Males of his Body begotten, by which Name of Henry 7. his proper Name is ſignified, and the Capacity of his Body natural; for King he muſt of Neceſſity be called, and the calling him Henry 7. is a Demonſtration what King, that is to ſay, not King generally, but King Henry 7. which is a particular King known only, and no other, by that Name. And no other Words could have been uſed to ſignify his proper Name, and to give it to his Body natural. [i] And if Land is given to the King and to his Heirs, he takes it in his Body natural, and not in his Body politic. And this is proved by the ſaid Caſe in 34. H 6. where the Party declared that the King was ſeized as of Fee, and did not ſay in jure Coronæ, and Exception was taken to it becauſe he did not ſay in jure Coronæ, and diſallowed. [k] And it is there ſaid, that if the King is ſeized of Land parcel of the Crown, and parcel by Purchaſe, and dies leaving a Son and a Daughter by one Venter, and a Son by another Venter, and the Son enters and dies without Iſſue, the Daughter ſhall have the Lands purchaſed, and the Son the other, ergo a Purchaſe of the King does not go to the Body politic, but to the Body natural. [l] And if Lands in Gavelkind are given to the King and to his Heirs, and he dies having Iſſue two Sons, Southcote ſaid that both ſhall inherit together, and the eldeſt being King ſhall not have the whole, and ſo, it was ſaid, it is taken in a certain Book, ergo a Gift to the King and to his Heirs veſts in the Body natural of the King, and not in the Body politic, for if it had veſted in the Body politic, then the eldeſt alone ſhould have had it. So here the Remainder in Tail to King Henry 7. and to the Heirs Males of his Body ſhall veſt in his Body natural, and in that Body he ſhall enjoy it, [m] ſo that if he had been depoſed or removed from the Office of King, yet he ſhould have held this Land as Land purchaſed ed by him in his Body natural. [a] But, he ſaid, if the King had a Villain in right of his Crown who had purchaſed Land, and the King entered into it, there he ſhould have it in Right of his Crown, and ſhould hold it in his Body politic, becauſe in that Body he enjoyed the Villain. [b] And where a Man has a Thing by Reaſon of another, the Thing which comes by Reaſon of the other ſhall be had in the ſame Capacity in which the other that was the Means thereof was enjoyed. [c] And therefore, he ſaid, in 41. Ed. 3. in Aſſize it is taken that if a Biſhop, who has a Villain in right of his Church, enters into the Land purchaſed by his Villain, it ſhall be intended in right of his Church. So if the King has a Seigniory in right of his Crown, and the Tenant ceſſes or diſclaims, whereby the King recovers the Tenancy, he ſhall hold it in right of his Crown, becauſe in that Right he held the Seigniory which was the Cauſe of the Recovery. But here this Remainder in Tail to King Henry 7. is a new Thing that came only by Purchaſe, and not by Reaſon of another Thing, and therefore he ſhall be taken to hold and enjoy it in the Capacity of his Body natural.

Then as to the laſt Point, viz. if the King ſhall be reſtrained and bound by the Statute de donis conditionalibus, ſo that after Iſſue had he could not have Power to alien: The Counſel for the Defendants ſaid, that firſt the Common Law is to be conſidered, and the Miſchief that was before the Statute; ſecondly, the Purview and Intent of the Statute; and thirdly, the Eſtate and Prerogative of the King. And as to the Common Law before the Statute, there was but then [d] one Eſtate of Inheritance, and that was a Fee-ſimple, but theſe Fee-ſimple Eſtates were in two Manners, the one a Fee-ſimple abſolute, the other conditional. [e] The Fee-ſimple abſolute was when Land was given to a Man and to his Heirs; the other to his Heirs of his Body, which was alſo a Fee-ſimple, but in this laſt Eſtate there was a Condition annexed to it, that if he died without Heirs the Land ſhould revert to the Donor. Which Condition was implied in the Words as well as in the Intent, for in that the Gift is to one and to his Heirs of his Body, and no further, therein it is implied that if he has no Heirs of his Body, the Donor ſhall have the Land again. [f] And hereupon there was a Writ at the Common Law for Recovery of the Land if the Donee died without Iſſue, viz. a Formedon in Reverter, which the Statute ſays is common enough in the Chancery. [g] But a Form don in Remainder for him in the Remainder of ſuch Eſtate lay not at the Common Law; [h] for a Remainder could not be appointed over upon ſuch Eſtate before the Statute de donis was made, becauſe a Gift to one and to his Heirs of his Body was a Fee-ſimple, whereupon no Remainder can be appointed over, [i] for a Remainder cannot be limited upon a Fee-ſimple determined. [k] But if the Donee had Iſſue, then he might have aliened, and by this Alienation have barred his Iſſue for ever; for they conſtrued the Gift all one as to this Purpoſe when Land was given to one and to his Heirs of his Body, and when it was given to him and to his Heirs, if he had Heirs of his Body. So that they took this as a Condition, and when the Donee had Iſſue, then they took the Condition to be performed, and that he might then alien, becauſe he had ſuch Heirs as were limited in the Gift. [l] But if he had died without any Iſſue, or if he had had Iſſue, and that Iſſue had died without Iſſue, the Donor ſhould have had a Formedon in Reverter. For in M. 4. H. 3. Fitz. Formedon 64. as Southcote cited it, a Man brought a Formedon in Reverter for Lands given in Frankmarriage, becauſe the Iſſue of the Donee died without Heir of his Body, and it was adjudged that it lay well for the Donor or his Heir. [m] And if the Donee at the Time of the Alienation had no Iſſue, but after the Alienation had Iſſue, who died without Iſſue, ſuch Alienation ſhould not bind the Donor, but the Donor ſhould have a Formedon in Reverter. For Southcote alledged, that in [n] 30. Ed. 1. in Itinere Cornubiæ a Man brought a Formedon in Reverter, for that the Donee died without Iſſue; and the Tenant ſaid that the Donee aliened before the Statute, and had Iſſue, and the Demandant ſaid that he had not Iſſue when he aliened, and there the Court compelled the Tenant to anſwer if he had Iſſue alive when he aliened, wherefore the Tenant ſaid that he had Iſſue alive when he aliened, and the Demandant e contra. By which Caſe it appears that if the Donee had Iſſue at the Time of the Alienation, ſuch Alienation ſhould bind the Donor, but if he had no Iſſue at the Time of the Alienation, then the Alienation ſhould not bind the Donor, altho' he had Iſſue afterwards, becauſe the Condition was not performed at the Time of the Alienation, that is, he had then no Iſſue of his Body. So that they conſtrued the Gift that the Donee might alien after Iſſue had, which was contrary to the Intent of the Donor, for he intended that the Land ſhould come back again to him whether the Donee had Iſſue or not, if ſo be that all the Iſſues were dead, and that the Iſſues (whilſt there were any) ſhould have the Land, and no other. And the Expoſition which they then made of the Gift, viz. that the Donee might alien after Iſſue had, was contrary to the Will of the Donor, as the Preamble of the Statute de donis ſays, it ſeemed and yet ſeems hard, &c. Which being a great Miſchief, the King and the whole Parliament intended to remedy it, as the Statute itſelf purports, which ſays, wherefore our Lord the King perceiving how neceſſary and expedient it is to provide Remedy in the aforeſaid Caſes, hath ordained that the Will of the Giver, &c. ſhall be obſerved, &c. So that for a great Grievance they provided a full Remedy. And the Act ſays afterwards, if a Fine be levied hereafter upon theſe Lands, ipſo jure ſit nullus, whereby it is ordained that a Fine (altho' Fines were then greatly regarded) as to the [o] Right ſhall be void againſt the Iſſues or the Donor. Which three Clauſes, viz. it ſeemed hard, &c. and, wherefore the Lord the King perceiving, &c. and, that the Fine ſhall be void, &c. intimate to every Man (as Cholmley the Recorder ſaid) the great Conſideration which the Legiſlature had in the making of the Act, and that they apprehended the Grievance to be very great, and intended to make the Proviſion for it general without any Exception; and the Words of the Purview ſhew the ſame, viz. that the Will of the Giver, according to the Form in the Deed of Gift manifeſtly expreſſed, ſhall be from henceforth obſerved, &c. Which Will of the Donor to have the Land continue in the Iſſues, and to have the Land back again after the Iſſues were dead, was as great when the King was Donee as when a common Perſon was Donee. So that there is no Exception of the King either in the Words or in the Intent of the Act, but he is included in the Purview of the Act, as others are, altho' he is not named by expreſs Words. And foraſmuch as the Act is made to ſave Men's Inheritances, we ought to conſtrue it according to the Conſideration of the Common Law, and to admeaſure the Prerogatives of the King upon this Act, which is made for the Safety of the Inheritances of others, in ſuch Manner as the Common Law admeaſures them in Caſes that affect the Inheritances of others at Common Law. And altho' by the Common Law the King has many Prerogatives touching his Perſon, his Goods, his Debts and Duties, and other perſonal Things, yet the Common Law has ſo [a] admeaſured his Prerogatives that they ſhall not take away nor prejudice the Inheritance of any. [b] And therefore the Common Law ſo favours the King, that a Cuſtom which binds all others to pay Toll for Things bought in Markets or Fairs, or which binds Men to pay Through-toll, ſhall not bind the King to pay Toll in ſuch Caſes, but he is excepted by his Prerogative. [c] But yet a Cuſtom for Toll-traverſe ſhall bind the King, as Harper ſaid, who cited for it the Book of 46. Ed. 3. for Toll-traverſe is for croſſing or going over another's Soil or Freehold, and it affects the Inheritance of a Man to ſuffer any one to go over his Ground, not being a common Way, without paying any Thing for it, for which Reaſon the King's Prerogative by the Common Law cannot prevail againſt ſuch a Cuſtom as ſtands with the Right of Inheritance of another. [d] Alſo he ſaid that the King has ſuch a Prerogative that he may wave Demurrer and plead to Iſſue, or wave Iſſue and demur upon the Plea of the other Party, [e] but yet if he and the Party are at Iſſue he cannot change his Iſſue in another Term, for then he might do it in infinitum, and the Party might be diſinherited thereby, and therefore the Common Law will not ſuffer the King to have ſuch a Prerogative. So in general Statutes made for the Safety of Inheritances, or for the public Good, the Expoſitors of them have conſtrued them according to the Courſe of the Common Law, viz. that they ſhall include the King, notwithſtanding he is not named. As the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 5. made to redreſs Uſurpations of Advowſons upon Tenants for Life, or during the Minority of Infants, ordains that as often as any, having no Right, doth preſent, during the Time that ſuch Heirs are in Ward, or during the Eſtates of Tenants in Dower, by the Curteſy, or otherwiſe for Term of Life, &c. at the next Avoidance when the Heir is come to full Age, or when after the Death of the Tenants before named the Advowſon ſhall revert unto the Heir being of full Age, he ſhall have ſuch Action and Exception by Writ of Advowſon poſſeſſory, as the laſt Anceſtor of ſuch an Heir ſhould have had at the laſt Avoidance happening in his Time, being of full Age before his Death, or before the Demiſe was made for Term of Life, &c. [f] And by the better Opinion of the Court it is held in a Quare Impedit in 35. H. 6. that if the King uſurps upon Tenant by the Curteſy, or during the Nonage of an Infant, this ſhall not gain the Patronage of him in the Reverſion, or of the Infant, for the Statute was made to ſave the Inheritance of them that had Right, and for the public Good. [g] But the principal Caſe there was that the King uſurped upon an Infant Tenant for Life of an Advowſon of his own Purchaſe, and there it is not held ſo clearly that he ſhould avoid it by Reaſon of his Nonage, for he is not ſo fully within the Purview of the Act, becauſe he had not the Advowſon by Deſcent, and the Statute ſays, he ſhall have the ſame Action as his laſt Anceſtor ſhould have had. [h] And ſo it is there held that where the Statute of Merton cap. 5. ordains, that Uſuries ſhall not run againſt any being within Age, which is as much as to ſay that the Rent ſhall not be doubled during the Nonage of the Heir, if the King gives Land to another rendering Rent payable at a Feaſt annually, and for Default of Payment that he ſhall double the Rent at every Default, and afterwards the Grantee dies, his Heir within Age, there he ſhall not double his Rent to the King, for altho' the Statute is general, yet the King is bound by it, becauſe it is made for Remedy of Infants, and for the public Good. [i] Alſo the Statute of Merton cap. 10. which ordains that every Freeman which oweth Suit to the County, Trithing, Hundred, and Wapentake, or to the Court of his Lord, may freely make his Attorney to do thoſe Suits for him, includes the King in the general Words, for a Man may make his Attorney to do his Suit to the King's Court, if he be his Lord, as well as to the Court of another, becauſe the Act is made for the Eaſe and Convenience of Subjects. [k] So in Longo 5. Ed. 4. a Man indicted of Treſpaſs pleaded not guilty, and was convicted, and there he ſhewed to the Juſtices that he wanted an Addition, and that the Court ex officio ought to conſider it, altho' he had pleaded to it, and he prayed Remedy, and there it was ſaid that an Indictment is the King's Suit, and that the King is not bound by the Statute to give an Addition, but it is at the King's Election, as it was at the Common Law; but it is there held that the King is bound by the Statute, for of a Law which belongs to a common Perſon, be it the Common Law or a ſpecial Law, every Man ſhall take Advantage, which the King of common Right cannot defeat, for every Man is an Inheritor to this Common Law of Addition as well as to any other Common Law, which the King cannot defeat without Parliament, for of this Law every Man ſhall take Advantage: And to this all the Juſtices there agreed that there ought to be an Addition in the King's Actions, as in Indictments where Proceſs of Outlawry lies, as well as in Debt, Treſpaſs, Appeals, and other ſuch Originals, where Proceſs of Outlawry lies; which, it was ſaid, is a very good Caſe, and the Reaſon there given is well worthy of Obſervation. Yet the King is not generally bound by all Statutes in general Words, unleſs he is ſpecially named. [l] As the Statute which ſays, Common Pleas ſhall not follow our Court, does not bind the King; nor the Statutes which give Puniſhment for Diſtreſſes in divers Caſes, nor many other Statutes which give Puniſhment for breaking of Orders, or touching Goods and Chattles, which are intended only between Subjects, and to prevent Diſcord between them; but otherwiſe it is if it concerns the Safety

Safety of Inheritances, or the public Utility of the Realm. And as in the ſaid Statutes of Uſurpation, of Uſury, and others which concern the Reality or Inheritance, or the public good of the Realm, the Expoſitors of them have conſtrued them to include and bind the King by the general Words, without any ſpecial Mention of him, ſo have they expounded this Act de donis conditionalibus to bind the King, and eſpecially upon this Reaſon, viz. becauſe the King and the Realm have ordained that the Will of the Giver, according to the Form in the Deed of Gift manifeſtly expreſſed, ſhall from henceforth be obſerved, ſo that thereby it has made the Will of the Donor only to be reſpected and regarded, in which Words (as Walſh ſaid) the King has ſubmitted his own Will to the Will of another, and that by Act of Parliament. So that every one that can ſay, "this is the Will of "the Donor expreſſed in the Charter or Conveyance," may thereby bind the King, and take from him all Elections to have it as a Fee-ſimple conditional, as well as the Power to alien after Iſſue had, and may ſay to him, "it is not the Will of the Donor that you ſhall have a Fee-ſimple, or "that you may alien after Iſſue had." So that the King may by Juſtice bind himſelf to the Will of another, and cannot go from it; for, he ſaid, the King has in him three Things, viz. Power, Juſtice, and Mercy: Power to do, Juſtice to enforce him to do, and Mercy to reſtrain him from doing. The laſt of theſe is exerciſed in Matters that touch himſelf, but Juſtice to enforce him to do has Reſpect to Things which concern the Public, ſo that every Subject may claim from him Juſtice, and the King is forced by Juſtice to do that which he ought. And ſo the Lord Berkley might ſay to the King, "you have bound yourſelf by Authority of Parliament to the Will of "another, viz of the Donor, and by his Will you ſhall only have an Eſtate-tail, and you have "no Power to alien the Land from the Donor, or him in Remainder, if your Tail be ended; "and your Tail is now ended, and therefore I who am in Remainder ought to have it." So that he may claim from him that to which he is bound by the Act, as another Subject is, and he may object to him the Act, which reſtrains him from ſaying that he has a greater Eſtate than in Tail. And to prove that the King is bound by the Act, and that he cannot ſay ſince the Act that the Eſtate is a Fee-ſimple conditional, as it was before the Act, the Caſe of Tenant in Tail attainted for Treaſon was alledged, in which Caſe, it was ſaid, the Iſſue in Tail ſhould inherit, and the King ſhould not have the Land againſt the Iſſue by reaſon of the Attainder. And to this Effect the Caſe of the Earl of Kent was cited, who was Donee in Tail of the King, and committed Treaſon againſt the King, which Caſe is in [a] Mich. 7. H. 4. coram Rege, where the Statute de donis conditionalibus is touched to this Purpoſe. And if the Iſſue in Tail might ſay againſt the King, that his Father was not, as to the King, Tenant of a Fee-ſimple conditional, but Tenant in Tail, and therefore that he ſhould not forfeit the Land to the King for Treaſon, this proves that the King ſhall be bound by the ſaid Statute, by reaſon of the Words (the Will of the Donor ſhall be obſerved). [b] And this was always received for Law, and practiſed until the Statute of 26. H. 8. cap. 13. which enacts that every one, who ſhall be attainted of Treaſon, ſhall forfeit to the King all his Tenements or Hereditaments which he has of any Eſtate of Inheritance: by which Words viz. (of any Eſtate of Inheritance) it has been taken that Tenant in Tail ſhall forfeit entirely the Lands entailed, but until this Act was made it has always been held and practiſed otherwiſe ſince the Statute de donis conditionalibus, viz. that the Iſſues in Tail ſhould inherit the Lands againſt the King, cauſa qua ſupra. [c] So in 4. H. 6. Tenant in Fee-ſimple, who held of the King in capite, made a Gift in Tail, to hold of the chief Lord of the Fee, the Donee died, his Iſſue being within Age, and the King ſeized him as his Ward, and the Donor claimed him, and upon the Matter diſcloſed in Traverſe of an Office there was a Demurrer in Law; and there it is well debated whether the Donor or the Donee is Tenant to the King, and other Matters relating to the Point of Wardſhip; and at laſt it was awarded by the Advice of all the Juſtices of the one Bench and of the other, that the Hands of the King ſhould be ouſted, and that the Donor ſhould be reſtored to the Ward, which he ought not to have been, if the King had not been bound by the ſaid Statute de donis conditionalibus; for if the Donee, as to the King, ſhould be as he was before the ſaid Act, then he ſhould be Tenant of a Fee-ſimple conditional, in which Caſe he ſhould be immediate Tenant to the King, and then the King ſhould have had the Wardſhip of his Iſſue, but in that it was adjudged that he ſhould be in Ward to the Donor, and not to the King, therein all the Juſtices then took it that the King was bound by the Statute. [d] So Walſh cited the Caſe in 4. H. 7. and ſaid that it was found by diem clauſit extremum after the Death of the Lady Dacres, that one by Fine gave Land to another for Life, the Remainder to the Lord Dacres, and to the ſaid Lady his Wife in Tail, and the Lord Dacres died, and the Lady Dacres entered upon the Tenant for Life, and diſſeized him, after which Diſſeizin the ſaid Tenant for Life re-entered, and was ſeized at the Time of the Death of the Lady Dacres, and that ſhe did not die ſeized of any other Land: And one came into the Chancery, and ſurmiſed that the Tenant for Life had ſurrendered his Eſtate to the Lady in her Life-time, and ſo ſhe died ſeized, and prayed a new Commiſſion of melius inquirendum for the King, and had it, upon which the Commiſſioners ſat, and returned it, and it is there debated whether or no this new Commiſſion was well awarded, and it was held clearly by all the Juſtices that the Commiſſion was badly awarded: [e] And one of the principal Reaſons was, that although the Land was held of the King by Knight's Service, (as the Caſe ought to be taken), yet it was held of the Donor in Tail, and not of the King, and then to enquire for a better Title for the King, where it appears that although it had been as they ſurmiſed, yet the King has no Title, but another, viz. the Donor, it ought to be utterly void; for it is there ſaid, although the King might take the Services by the Hands of the Tenant in Tail, becauſe he is in Poſſeſſion, yet notwithſtanding this he is Tenant to the Donor. And it was for this Cauſe chiefly that all the ſaid Juſtices held that the Commiſſion was badly awarded.

By which Judgment it is implied (as Walſh ſaid) that the Juſtices there held the King to be bound by the Statute de donis conditionalibus, for if he had not been bound by it, then the Surmiſe would have been ſufficient to entitle the King, for then the Donee ſhould have been ſaid, as to the King, to have a Fee-ſimple conditional, and ſo ſhould have held immediatly of the King, and not of the Donor: But in that they adjudged that he held of the Donor, and not of the King, therein it is implied that the King was bound, and that he could not ſay that the Donee had a Fee-ſimple conditional. [a] Alſo Southcote cited the Caſe in 8. H. 4. which, he ſaid, is abridged by Fitzherbert in Title Petition, and is thus, viz. "Tenant in Tail of the Services aliens in Mortmain, and the "Time devolves to the King for Default of the other Lords, whereby the King ſeizes the Services, "and afterwards the Land eſcheats, the Iſſue in Tail ſhall have Remedy by Petition per Gaſcoign;" and this he ſhould not have if it was a Fee-ſimple conditional as to the King. So that theſe Caſes prove that the Judges in former Times have taken this Act to bind the King, and to reſtrain him from all Election to take the Eſtate as a Fee-ſimple conditional. And if they have ſo taken it in the Caſes above cited, a fortiore the King ſhall be bound in the Caſe here; for in the ſaid Caſes he was bound notwithſtanding he claimed in Right of the Crown, but here the Eſtate veſted in King Henry 7. in his Body natural, and in his ſingular Capacity, as it is ſaid before, and not in his Body politic, in which Caſe he ſhall not have his Prerogatives in ſuch Latitude as he ſhall in Things which he enjoys in his Body politic as King. But this here veſts in a more inferior Degree, and more diſtant from Prerogative, for which Reaſon it ſeemed to them that the Alienation of King Edward 6. ſhall not prejudice the Lord Berkley, but that his Entry is lawful, and that the Plaintiff ſhall be barred.

[a] P. 8. H. 4. 9. b. Per Powlet et Gaſcoign. Fitz. Petition 14. Bro. Mortmain 10.

E contra for the Plaintiff.

On the contrary it was argued by the ſaid other Serjeants of Counſel for the Plaintiff. And firſt they admitted that the King has a double Capacity, and that both remain in him at one ſame Time, and that he may take in the one or in the other, according as the Gift is made to him. And although it be ſo, yet here King Henry 7. took the Remainder in his Body politic, for it was limited to him by the Name of King Henry 7. ſo that it is not Henry 7. only, but King Henry 7. and he is named by the Name of his Body politic, as well as by the Name of his Body natural, and he has Heirs as well in the one Body as in the other, ſo that the Words are indifferently put, and he may take it in the one as well as in the other. But every Gift ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt him that gives it, and moſt largely for him to whom it is given. And if the Body politic is more large than the Body natural, then it is more beneficial for King Henry 7. to take it in that than in the other Capacity, according to the Arguments made on the other Side, for they agree that in this Body he has a greater Prerogative and greater Liberty than in the other, and if it be ſo, it is more beneficial for him to take the Land in the Body politic than in the other. And therefore upon this Account he ſhall be taken to receive it in that Body, becauſe the Law adjudges it beſt for him. But, they ſaid, it is not neceſſary to reſt upon this Point. For although the Law ſhould adjudge that King Henry 7. took it in his Body natural, and not in his Body politic, yet they ſaid that he is not void of Prerogative in regard to Things which he has in his Body natural, but he ſhall have Prerogative and Liberty here, admitting that he took the Land in his Body natural, to have a Fee-ſimple conditional, and to have Power to alien poſt prolem ſuſcitatam, as he ſhould have had if he had taken it in his Body politic. [b] For when the Body politic of King of this Realm is conjoined to the Body natural, and one Body is made of them both, the Degree of the Body natural and of the Things poſſeſſed in that Capacity is thereby altered, and the Effects thereof are changed by its Union with the other Body, and don't remain in their former Degree, but partake of the Effects of the Body politic. [c] And therefore it appears in 1. H. 7. that the ſame King Henry 7. was attainted by Parliament, and it is there agreed by all the Juſtices, that eo inſtante that he took upon him to be King, he was a Perſon able, and diſcharged of the Attainder. And the Reaſon thereof is, becauſe the Body natural and the Body politic are conſolidated into one, and the Body politic wipes away every Imperfection of the other with which it is conſolidated, and makes it to be in another Degree than it ſhould be if it were alone by itſelf. [d] So Walſh ſaid, where King Richard 3. was enfeoffed to the Uſe of others, and afterwards took upon him the royal Eſtate, the Law was taken that the Uſe was gone; and therefore an Act was made in the firſt Year of his Reign cap. 5. that the Land ſhould be in Fee in the ceſtuy que Uſe. And the Cauſe why the Uſe there was gone by the common Law, was not becauſe the Capacity of his Body natural was drowned by the Dignity royal, (for this Capacity remained after he was King, and in this Capacity he held the Land afterwards) but the Reaſon was, becauſe to the Body natural, in which he held the Land, the Body politic was aſſociated and conjoined, during which Aſſociation or Conjunction the Body natural partakes of the Nature and Effects of the Body politic: [e] And the Body politic cannot be ſeized to a Uſe, no more can the Body [f] natural during the Time they are together, for it is drawn to the Quality and Effects of the Body politic which is the greater. For Richard 3. taken abſtractedly from King did not hold the Land, but Richard 3. being King held it, who might not ſo debaſe himſelf as to have Land to the Uſe of another. So that the Body natural, by partaking of the other, is not in the ſame Degree as it ſhould be if it was disjoined from the other, and the like of the Land which he holds in the Body natural. For Bendloe ſaid, [g] as a Villain that purchaſes free-land ſhall make it to be Villain-land according to the Nature of his Perſon who holds it, [h] ſo e converſo, the Perſon of the King, which is moſt free, and has the moſt Prerogatives and Franchiſes, ſhall make the Land which he holds to enſue the Nature of his Perſon, and to be demeaned according to his Privileges. [i] And he ſaid, if the King purchaſes a Manor to which a Franchiſe is appendant, and afterwards aliens the Manor, the Franchiſe ſhall not paſs, and ſo, he

he ſaid, Thorp held in 43. Ed. 3. in a Quare Impedit: And the Reaſon is, becauſe notwithſtanding that the King purchaſes the Manor to him and to his Heirs, and that it ſhall veſt in his Body natural, yet to this Body the Body politic is annexed, which will not ſuffer the Franchiſe to be in Eſſe. Which Caſe proves that although the Body natural of the King is diſtinct in Capacity from the Body politic, yet it does not remain diſtinct from it to all other Purpoſes. [a] So if the King in his Body natural and another purchaſe Lands in Fee-ſimple jointly, they are not Jointenants, but Tenants in common, between whom Survivorſhip ſhall not hold Place: And ſo if the Purchaſe be before he is King, after he is King the Jointure is ſevered. But if the King in his Body natural was to all Purpoſes as a common Perſon is in his Body natural, then he might hold in Jointure with another, whereas no Body politic can hold in Jointure. And therefore when the two Bodies in the King are become as one, to which no Body is equal, this double Body, whereof the Body politic is the greater, cannot hold in Jointure with any ſingle one. [b] So (Bendloe ſaid) if the King has a Seigniory in his Body natural, he may diſtrain for the Arrearages thereof in all the Tenant's Lands holden of others, by reaſon of the Acceſſion of the royal Eſtate to his natural Body. So, he ſaid, if the King in his Body natural before he was King, or after, purchaſes Land in Fee-ſimple upon Condition, and the Condition is broken, the Feoffee cannot enter upon him for the Condition broken, as he might if the Eſtate royal was removed from his body natural. [c] And Puttrel put the Caſe in 10. H. 4. where the King as Heir of the Duke of Lancaſter brought a Scire facias to have Execution of Lands, and in the Writ there was the Clauſe, quod non omittas propter aliquam libertatem, and the Writ was challenged becauſe theſe Words are uſed in Writs where the King demands, as King, a Thing which belongs to the Crown; but the Writ was awarded good, notwithſtanding that the Poſſeſſions of the Dutchy were ſevered from the Crown by Parliament: So that although he there demanded the Land in his natural Body, he had Benefit of his Body politic, and thereby he maintained the Writ, which he ſhould not have done if the Body politic had been disjoined from the Body natural. Wherefore it appears by theſe Caſes, that although it ſhould be admitted that King Henry 7. took the Remainder in his natural Capacity, nevertheleſs he is not deſtitute of Prerogative in this Caſe, but by the Conjunction of the Body natural with the Body politic of King of this Realm and the Eſtate royal he is advanced, and ſhall have his Privileges, and his Election to have a Fee-ſimple conditional, or Power to alien after Iſſue had, as he ſhould have had if he had held it in his Body politic. So that if the Body politic of the King (if the King had taken the Land therein) might have had an Election to have a Fee-ſimple, or Power to alien after Iſſue had, in the ſame Manner he ſhall have here, though he takes it in the Body natural; and this is the only Point that remains to be diſcuſſed. And as to this, true it is that before the Statute de donis conditionalibus [d] all Eſtates of Inheritance were Fee-ſimple abſolute, or Fee-ſimple conditional, and the Fee-ſimple abſolute was as it is before recited, and the Fee-ſimple conditional was that which we now call an Eſtate-tail, viz. when it was limited that the Heirs who ſhould inherit the Eſtate ſhould iſſue of the Body of one or two Perſons certainly named, which Eſtates were called conditional for the Cauſe ſhewn before. [e] And becauſe theſe Eſtates were Fee-ſimple, no Remainder could be appointed over upon the Determination of them, [f] for a Remainder cannot be limited over upon a Fee-ſimple precedent. [g] And therefore a Formedon in Remainder, to claim a Remainder upon ſuch an Eſtate ended, lay not at the common Law, nor before this Statute. [h] And the Heir ſhould have had an Aſſize of Mortdanceſtor, before this Statute, againſt an Abator in all Caſes after the Death of ſuch Tenants of a Fee-ſimple conditional. [i] And there was no Formedon in Deſcender at the common Law, but in one ſpecial Caſe, in which (by Bendloe) it lay at the common Law, and there the Aſſize of Mortdanceſtor would not ſerve the Iſſue, and that was, [k] if a Man had Iſſue a Son, and his Wife died, and afterwards he took another Wife, and Land was given to him and to his ſecond Wife, and to the Heirs of their two Bodies begotten, and they had another Son, and the Wife died, and afterwards the Father died, and a Stranger abated, there, he ſaid, before the Statute the Son could not have an Aſſize of Mortdanceſtor, [l] for one Point of the Writ is, to enquire if the Demandant be next Heir to his Father, and that he is not, but the eldeſt Son is his next Heir, for which reaſon ſuch Writ would not ſerve upon his Title, and therefore before the Statute he ſhould have had a Formedon in Deſcender, which was no other than a Writ founded upon his Caſe. So that, by him, a Formedon in Deſcender lay in this ſpecial Caſe at the common Law before the Statute de donis conditionalibus; and to prove the ſame he cited the Book of 5. Ed. 2. But yet, he ſaid, this Writ was to recover a Fee-ſimple. So that all ſuch Eſtates were Fee-ſimple, that is, Fee-ſimple conditional. [m] And after Iſſue had the Donees had Power to alien, and thereby to bar as well the Iſſues, as the Donor if Iſſues had failed. And this the Statute rehearſes, and the makers of the Act intended to relieve both the one and the other in this Point. And therefore it has ordained that the Will of the Giver, according to the Form in the Deed of Gift manifeſtly expreſſed ſhall from henceforth be obſerved; ſo that the Purview is, that the Will of the Donor ſhall be obſerved, and therefore the Donee cannot alien to bind the Right of the Iſſues or of the Donor, and ſo the Statute reſtrains the Power which the Donee had by the common Law. But although the Purview is general, viz. that the Will of the Giver, &c. ſhall be obſerved, &c. without any Exception in the Words, yet there is an Exception in the Intent, which in the Expoſition of the Act is as ſtrong and full as if it had been expreſsly mentioned, and that is, that the King is excepted. [n] For it is uſual for the Legiſlature, in Acts of Reſtraint which they intend to bind the King, to name him expreſsly, and if he is not expreſsly named, it has always been taken heretofore that the Legiſlature intended only to bind the Subjects, and to make the Act extend to them, and not to the King, for he is favoured [o] in all Expoſitions of Acts. And becauſe it is not an Act without the King's Aſſent, it is to be intended that [n] That the King is not bound by Statutes of Reſtraint, unleſs he he is ſpecially named, 1 Finch 59. 2 Finch 83, 234. Crompt. J. C. 15. b.

that when the King gives his Aſſent, he does not mean to prejudice himſelf or to bar himſelf of his Liberty and Privilege, but he aſſents that it ſhall be a Law among his Subjects. And ſo inaſmuch as the Act is made by the Subjects, who, it is to be preſumed, would not reſtrain the King, and alſo by the King himſelf, who cannot be preſumed to mean to reſtrain himſelf, the Expoſitors of Acts heretofore have well collected from the Intent of them, that the King ſhould be exempted out of the general Words of Reſtraint, unleſs he is expreſsly named and reſtrained. [a] And ſo (Bendloe ſaid) in Stoner's Caſe in 12. H. 7. where the like Matter was debated, Frowick held that where the King has an Intereſt at common Law, and a Statute is made which takes away the Liberty of all Men, yet the King and his Liberty is not taken away, unleſs he be named in the Statute. And to prove that the King is not bound, unleſs he be named in the Act, the Statute of Weſtminſter 3. cap. 2. was alledged by Puttrel, which limits how the Feoffee of the whole Land ſhall hold, and how the Feoffee of Part ſhall hold, and provides that if the Tenant aliens Part of his Tenements, the Feoffee ſhall hold immediatly of the chief Lord, and ſhall be forthwith charged with the Services for ſo much as appertains or ought to appertain to the ſaid chief Lord for the ſame Parcel, according to the Quantity of the Land or Tenement ſo ſold: And ſo in this Caſe the ſame Part of the Service ſhall remain to the chief Lord, to be taken by the Hands of the Feoffee, &c. So that hereby it is enacted, that the Feoffee ſhall hold of the Lord for the ſame Parcel, and that ſuch Part of the Service ſhall remain to the Lord, to be taken by the Hands of the Feoffee: Which Clauſe is as much as to ſay, that the Lord ſhall have for Parcel, and no more; and the Clauſe is general without any Exception, [b] and yet it has been taken ever ſince this Act, that if the King's Tenant makes a Feoffment of Part of his Tenancy, the King ſhall have all the Services by the Hands of the Feoffee, or all by the Hands of the Feoffor, [c] for before the Statute the Law was, that the Lord might have all the Services in every Part of the Tenancy, and might diſtrain for them in every Part if they were not paid, and the King is not ſpecially named in the Purview of the Act, and therefore he is not reſtrained by the Act, as it has been expounded, for the Cauſe aforeſaid. [d] So, he ſaid, the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 16. ordains, that where divers Inheritances deſcend at one Time holden of ſeveral Lords by Knight's-Service, that Lord ſhall from henceforth have the Wardſhip, of whom the Child's Anceſtor was firſt enfeoffed; yet this does not reſtrain the King, but that ſince this Statute the King ſhall have the Wardſhip where the Anceſtor held of him by Poſteriority, as well as he ſhould have had by his Prerogative before the Statute, becauſe he was not named therein, and therefore he was not intended to be reſtrained by it, according to the Expoſition of the Sages of the Law. And therefore where the Statute or Treatiſe de Prerogativa Regis cap. 2. ſays, that the King ſhall have the Marriage of Heirs within Age, &c. whether the Land of ſuch Heirs have appertained to the Crown of ancient Continuance, or that it came by reaſon of Eſcheat, being in the King's Hands, &c. without any reſpect to the Priority of Feoffment, although they held of others; this was but an Affirmance of the King's Prerogative, which he had by the common Law before. So, he ſaid, the Statute of 7. Ed. 1. de Religioſis, which prohibits all religious Men from taking Lands or Tenements of any one under the Penalty of forfeiting the ſame, &c. does not bind them from taking Lands or Tenements of the King, for the King not being named is not reſtrained from giving Lands or Tenements to them any more than to any other, without any Forfeiture to enſue to his Patentees upon ſuch Account. So, he ſaid, the Statute of Marlbridge cap. 9. enacts that if any Inheritance (whereof but one Suit is due) deſcend unto many Heirs, as unto Parceners, whoſo hath the eldeſt Part of the Inheritance, ſhall do that one Suit for himſelf and his Fellows; but this does not reſtrain the King, [e] for if Land holden of him deſcends to many Coparceners, then all the Coparceners ought to do the Suit, as well after Partition as before: And ſo, he ſaid, F. N. B. holds in the Writ de exoneratione ſectæ ad Curiam, for the King not being named is not reſtrained by the Statute, but he ſhall have his Suit of all, as he ſhould have had before the Statute; but if the Land be held of another, then the eldeſt Siſter only or her Feoffee ſhall do the Suit. [f] And ſo the Statute of Magna Charta cap. 11. which ſays, Common Pleas ſhall not follow our Court, does not bind the King, but he may ſue in the King's Bench for his Debt, or in other common Pleas in which he is Plaintiff. [g] And the Caſe before cited of Addition in an Indictment was admitted to be as it is there vouched; but, it was ſaid, the Reaſon is, becauſe the Statute of 1. H. 5. cap. 5. is, that in Writs original of Actions perſonal, Appeals, and Indictments, in which Exigent ſhall be awarded, Additions be made, &c. So that an Indictment is preciſely expreſſed in the Statute, which Indictment is the King's Suit only, and therefore the King is plainly contained in the Word Indictment, but not in the other Actions, and therefore it was ſaid that in other Actions he ſhall not be bound by the Statute. And as in the Caſes above recited the Law has been taken that the King ſhall not be reſtrained by the Acts, unleſs he be expreſsly named in them, ſo has it been taken heretofore that he ſhall not be bound by this Statute de donis conditionalibus. [h] And hereupon Puttrel cited the Opinion of Juſtice Fitzherbert declared by him in his Natura Brevium, in the Writ of Formedon in Deſcender called inſimul tenuit, viz. [i] that the Land entailed ſhall be charged in the Hands of the Heir for the King's Debt due by the Anceſtor, for Inſufficiency of Land in Fee-ſimple, where Fitzherbert further ſays, "for ſome ſay that the King is not "bound by the Statute de donis conditionalibus, but that he is in like Caſe as he was before "the Statute." And the Writ of the Regiſter is there recited, whereupon ſo much may be collected that the Lands entailed ſhall be charged. [k] Alſo Carus ſaid, that if the King be ſeized of a Manor, and gives a Stranger an Acre of the Manor, to have and to hold to him and to his Heirs of his Body begotten, without expreſſing any Service, the Grantee ſhall hold of the King by Knight's-

Knight's Service in capite, [a] for in ſuch Caſe it appears in 21 Aſs. that upon the Alienation of the Donee without Licenſe, the King ſeized the Land for a Fine by Judgment, which he ought not to have done if the Donee had not held in capite. And if it ſhould have been ſo that the Reverſion was left in the King, and that the Donee was only Tenant in Tail, then of Neceſſity the Donee ſhould have held of the King as of the Reverſion, which is not in capite any more than where a Man holds of the King as of a Manor; [b] for when one holds of the King by Reaſon of another Thing, there it is not in capite. And foraſmuch as he ſhall there hold in capite, it is thereby proved that the King for his Advantage, viz. to have a Tenure in capite, may ſay that the Donee has a Fee-ſimple conditional, as he had before the Statute de donis conditionalibus, and that he is not bound by the Statute. And there is no Doubt but that for his Advantage he may alſo ſay that the Donee has only an Eſtate-tail, and that the Reverſion is in him, but in that he may claim a Tenure in capite, therein it is implied that the King ſhall ſay that the Donee has a Fee-ſimple conditional, and that he is not bound by the Statute de donis conditionalibus, but that to claim a Seigniory or ſuch other Advantage he is at Liberty as he was before the Statute. [c] So if the King's Tenant makes a Gift in Tail, and the Donee dies, his Iſſue being within Age, he ſhall be in Ward to the King, and ſo it ſeems by the Book of [d] 4. H. 6. before cited; but the Reaſon why the King had not the Ward there, but the Donor, was [e] becauſe the King had always accepted the Services of the Donor, and ſo had choſen him for his Tenant; but if he had not done ſo, it was ſaid, it ſeems by the Book that he might well enough have had the Wardſhip of the Iſſue of the Donee, becauſe he remained, as to the King, Tenant of a Fee-ſimple conditional. And yet admitting that the King (if he had not accepted the Donor for his Tenant) could not have had the Iſſue of the Donee in Ward, and alſo admitting that Tenant in Tail (until the Statute of 26. H. 8.) ſhould not forfeit his Land to the King for Treaſon, and admitting the other like Caſes put on the other Side, yet they are not like the principal Caſe here; for in thoſe Caſes the King took his Titles under the Title of a Subject, viz. of the Tenant in Tail, who was once bound by the Statute when the Tail was in him, and therefore in that Caſe there is greater Reaſon why the King, who claims by Wardſhip, or for Treaſon, or upon other ſuch Ground under his Eſtate, ſhould be bound as he was; but here there never was any Eſtate-tail in a Subject, for the Eſtate was firſt limited to the King himſelf, in which Caſe there is more Reaſon to give the King, who took the Eſtate in Remainder immediately, the Liberty which he had before the Statute, viz. to have a Fee-ſimple conditional, and ſo to make the Remainder void, than there was in the other Caſes where the King took his Eſtate by others whom the Statute once bound as Subjects, and where he had no Intereſt but under their Eſtate. So that the Reaſon of thoſe Caſes differs greatly from the Reaſon of the principal Caſe, and they are ſtronger againſt the King than the principal Caſe is. And therefore for theſe Cauſes it ſeemed to them that King Henry 7. might at his Election take the Eſtate as a Fee-ſimple conditional, in which Caſe the Remainder is void, and after Iſſue he had Power to alien, and the Alienation of King Edward 6. is an Election that he and King Henry 7. and Henry 8. would take the Eſtate as a Fee ſimple conditional; and ſo the Lord Berkley had no Title or Right of Entry, and conſequently the Plaintiff ſhall recover.

[f] And Note, Carus ſaid in his Argument that if the King's Tenant for Life is impleaded, and makes Default after Default, the King ſhall not be received by the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 3. becauſe if he ſhould be received the Demandant ſhould count againſt him de novo, for he is in the Place of Tenant; [g] and, he ſaid, a Man cannot count againſt the King, but he ought to ſue to him by Petition. And therefore altho' the Statute gives Receipt generally to him in Reverſion, yet the King was not meant therein, for it was not the Intent of the Statute to debaſe him ſo much as to make him ſtand to Defence as Tenant in the Suit, in the ſame Manner as a common Perſon is; and, he ſaid, that in [h] 25. Ed. 3. it is adjudged accordingly, viz. in a Scire Facias upon Default of Tenant for Life the King in Reverſion ſent his Writ to be received by his Attorney and his Serjeants, and the Court was there adviſed that the King was not receivable cauſâ qua ſupra.

Afterwards in Trinity Term 4 Elizabeth, the Juſtices argued upon the Matter in Law as follows. Weſton Juſtice: It ſeems to me that the Plaintiff ſhall recover. Firſt of all it is to be conſidered how the Eſtate which we call an Eſtate tail was before the Statute de donis conditionalibus, and how it is ſince; and ſecondly, how the Remainder veſted in King Henry 7. and laſtly, if he is reſtrained and bound by the Statute. [i] And by the Common Law before the Statute de donis conditionalibus there were two Eſtates of Inheritance, the one a Fee-ſimple abſolute, as where a Man had Lands to him and to his Heirs generally, and the other a Fee-ſimple conditional, as where a Man had Lands given to him and to his Heirs of his Body, which Eſtate to him and to his Heirs of his Body was greater than an Eſtate for Life, for the Word (Heirs) makes it greater than for Life; ſo that if he had alien'd before Iſſue the Donor ſhould not have entered for a Forfeiture, as the Leſſor [k] ſhall do upon the Feoffment of Tenant for Life; nor ſhould he have had a Writ of Error upon an erroneous Recovery againſt ſuch Donee, as a Man ſhall have [l] upon an erroneous Recovery againſt his Tenant for Life; nor ſhould he have had a Writ of ad terminum qui præteriit, if he had died without Iſſue, for he had a Fee-ſimple, tho' this Fee-ſimple was upon Condition, as the Statute terms it, viz. that if the Donee died without ſuch Iſſues as were limited, then the Land ſhould revert, whether the Donor had expreſſed the ſame by Words in the Deed of Gift, or not, for if he had not expreſly mentioned it, yet ſo much was implied in the Gift, and the Law ſupplied the Words if they were omitted in the Deed of Gift; and if the

Words were expreſſed in the Deed of Gift, yet it was not a Condition in Deed, but only a Condition in Law, becauſe the expreſs Mention of it would have been meerly Surpluſage; for there is no Condition in Deed but what may be broken during the Eſtate given, whereas this Condition could not, and therefore it was a Condition in Law. And Conditions in Law are of two Sorts, the one determines the Eſtate, [t] as a Leaſe to an Abbot during the Time that he ſhall be Abbot, or a Leaſe to one during the Time that he ſhall be Serjeant at Law, or during the Time that he ſhall live ſingle, for in theſe Caſes if he is removed from being Abbot or Serjeant at Law, or if he takes a Wife, the Eſtate is ended. The other Condition in Law does not determine the Eſtate, as the Law adds a Condition to the Eſtate of Tenant for Life, that he ſhall not do Waſt, nor make a Feoffment, and to the Tenant in Fee Simple that he ſhall not ceſſe or diſclaim, but if they break the Condition the Eſtate is not determined until Suit or Entry is made. But in the other Caſes the Eſtate is determined preſently, and the Poſſeſſion is caſt upon the Leſſor. And in ſuch Degree was the Condition in Law in our Caſe before the Statute; for if the Donee had died without Iſſue the Condition was broken, and the Eſtate determined, and the Freehold caſt upon the Donor. But altho' for Default of Iſſues of the Donee the Land ſhould revert to the Donor, [u] nevertheleſs if the Donee had Iſſue he had Power to alien, and thereby the Iſſue was barred of the Land, and the Donor of the Reverſion if Iſſue failed, as the Statute ſhews, which Things are now redreſſed by the Act. And the Act is reſtrictive in three Points; the firſt is, where before the Statute the Donee had Power to alien after Iſſue had, (as it is ſaid above) and thereby to bar the Iſſues, and the Donor of his Formedon in Reverter, now this Liberty of the Donee is reſtrained, ſo that upon ſuch Alienation the Iſſue ſhall have a Formedon in Deſcender, and the Donor a Formedon in Reverter if the Iſſues fail, and by ſuch Suit the Alienation ſhall be defeated, and the Land taken from the Alienee. The ſecond is, [x] if the Gift had been to Huſband and Wife and to the Heirs of their Bodies begotten, and the Wife had ſurvived, there her ſecond Huſband, if he had Iſſue by her, ſhould have been Tenant by the Curteſy, which is now [y] reſtrained. The third is, [z] where the Eſtate of the Donee before the Statute was a Fee-ſimple, now by the Operation of the Act and by the Intent of the Makers of it the Eſtate is abridged, and made an Eſtate-tail, and the Fee-ſimple is in the Donor, and a Reverſion made of it, and the Fee-ſimple may now be given over in Remainder, ſo that the Eſtate is divided, and whereas the Donee had the whole Eſtate before, now by the Effects of the Statute he has but Part of it, ſo that there are great Reſtrictions made by the Statute. And thus was the Eſtate before, and thus is it ſince the Statute, as I apprehend.

Then as to the ſecond Matter, the King has two Capacities, and he comes to ſome Things meerly as King, as [a] Treaſure-trove, [b] Lands eſcheated for Treaſon, and the like; and to ſome other Things he comes not as King, as if Lands deſcend to him from any of his Anceſtors. But here the Remainder was entailed to King Henry 7. ſo that there is both the Name of Baptiſm, and the Name of his Body politic, viz. King, [c] and he may take in his Body politic as King to him and to his Heirs, or as King to him and to his Succeſſors; for he may have Heirs in his Body politic, and he may have Succeſſors in his Body politic. And therefore a Gift to him his Heirs and Succeſſors is good to the Body politic in both the Limitations, for if the Heirs fail it ſhall go to the Succeſſors; and his Heirs, as Heirs to the King, may take in their Bodies politic. For there are Diſtinctions of Bodies politic, that is to ſay, between thoſe which are made by the King's Letters-patent, and thoſe which exiſt at Common Law. For thoſe which are made by the King's Letters-patent, as Dean and Chapter, and Mayor, and ſuch like, cannot purchaſe in Succeſſion by the Name of Heirs, but only by the Name of Succeſſors. But the Body politic of the King is a Body politic by the Common Law, which may take in the politic Capacity, by the Name of King, to him and to his Heirs, or by the Name of King, to him and to his Succeſſors; and notwithſtanding this be ſo, [d] yet his Capacity to take in the Body natural is not confounded by the Body politic, bnt remains ſtill. And here the Remainder was entailed to King Henry 7. by the Name of King Henry 7. and to the Heirs Males of his Body begotten, and by this Limitation it veſted in his Body natural, becauſe this Body is diſtinguiſhed in the Limitation, for no other Heir but ſuch as is begotten by the Body natural ſhall inherit the Land by this Limitation. But notwithſtanding it be ſo that he took the Eſtate in the Capacity and Perſon of the Body natural, yet it is to be conſidered that to this Body the Body politic of King is annexed, and both of them are together in him; [e] for a Man cannot by any Means make Livery to the King of Land which he limits to the Body natural of the King, [f] and a Gift to the King cannot be to a Uſe, by 7. Ed. 4. becauſe he has the Body politic of King in him; and none can diſtrain for, nor have Execution of, a Seigniory or Rent in the Land of the King whichhe took in the Capacity of his Body natural, nor can the King part with ſuch Land but by Letters-patent, and if he grants ſuch Land in Fee, the Grantee ſhall hold of him in capite by Knight's Service. Ergo the Body natural and the Body politic are not diſtinct, but united, and as one Body, and the Land which he takes in the Capacity of his Body natural he has not meerly as a common Perſon, but as a natural Man and as a King alſo, and as to ſuch Land he ſhall have the Prerogatives of King, becauſe the royal Eſtate is conjoined to the Perſon who holds the ſame.

Then as to the third Point, it ſeems to me that the Eſtate ſhall be adjudged a Fee-ſimple conditional in the King, and that the Remainder ſhall be void, and that the King ſhall not be bound by the Statute de donis conditionalibus. For inaſmuch as all Juſtice, Tranquillity, and Repoſe is derived from the King, as the Fountain thereof, the Law ſhews him ſpecial Favour in all his Buſineſs ſineſs and Things, as being the Cauſe and Origin thereof. [a] And the Law of this Land is divided into three Parts, viz. Common Law, Cuſtoms, and Statutes, in each of which the King has his Prerogatives and Exemptions. For in the Common Law, [b] the Grant of every common Perſon is taken moſt ſtrongly againſt himſelf, and moſt favourably towards the Grantee; [c] but the King's Grant is taken moſt ſtrongly againſt the Grantee, and moſt favourably for the King, altho' the Thing which he grants came to the King by Purchaſe or Deſcent. And this is proved by the Treatiſe de Prerogativa Regis cap. 15. which is only the Common Law in this Point, viz. [d] that by the King's Grant of a Manor, an Advowſon appendant ſhall not paſs without ſpecial Words. [e] So the King may grant a Choſe in Action, but another cannot. So if Part of a Thing entire comes to the King, the Common Law gives him the whole, [f] as if an Obligation is made to two, and one of them is outlawed, the King ſhall have the whole Duty; ſo he ſhall have an entire Ox or Horſe which the Perſon outlawed held in common. [g] So if one grants to the King the next Avoidance of an Advowſon, altho' a Stranger preſents when it next becomes void, and his Clerk is in by ſix Months, and afterwards dies, yet the King ſhall preſent when he pleaſes, quia nullum tempus occurrit Regi, and therefore he may take the Preſentment when he thinks proper. [h] So if one grants to the King all Preſentments which ſhall happen within 20 Years, if ten Preſentments happen within this Time, and a Stranger preſents to them all, and his Clerk is in, and dies, the King after the 20 Years ſhall have all the Preſentments, for the Latches of not preſenting ſhall not hurt the King, but he may take it when he will. [i] And if a Right of Entry deſcends to the King, the dying ſeized of the Diſſeizor ſhall not take away the King's Entry, for Latches ſhall not prejudice him. [k] So if his Villain aliens his Land, the King may enter when he pleaſes, cauſâ qua ſupra. [l] And the King's Declaration in a Quare Impedit ſhall not be double by alledging two Preſentments, [m] or twelve Matters in Bar, and the other ſhall anſwer thereto, and the King may take Iſſue upon it when he pleaſes. [n] So if the King's Title is traverſed by the Party, the King may maintain his Title againſt the Traverſe of the other, or may traverſe the Affirmative of the other. [o] So the King may amend his Declaration the ſame Term that it is put in. [p] So by 28. H. 6. the King may wave Demurrer and traverſe the Plea of the other. [q] So the King in his Writs ſhall have a Non omittas notwithſtanding any Liberty, for none ſhall ſerve his Proceſs but his own Officers. [r] So if the King grants Land in Fee with Warranty againſt all Men, the Patentee ſhall not have in Value upon Recovery without expreſs Words to have in Value. [s] So by 2. H. 7. if the King makes a Leaſe for Years reſerving Rent with Re-entry for Default of Payment, if the Rent be in Arrear he ſhall enter without any Demand, altho' the King held the Land in his Body natural. [t] So by 35. H. 6. the King may make a Leaſe rendering Rent to a Stranger, and this Reſervation is good, and the Stranger ſhall diſtrain for it, or have an Action of Debt after the Leaſe determined. [u] So by 13. Ed. 4. the King may diſtrain in all the other Lands of the Grantor for the Arrears of a Rent-charge granted to him. [w] So if Title appears for the King upon Pleading between other Parties, the Court ex officio ſhall adjudge for the King, altho' he is not Party to the Iſſue. All which Caſes ſhew that in the Common Law the King has Pre-eminence and Prerogative above all other Perſons, and that he is not ſo ſtrictly bound by the Law as others are. And as the Common Law cannot bind him, ſo cannot private Cuſtoms. [x] And therefore in 35. H. 6. there is a Cuſtom in London, that if one pledge Goods, he to whom they are pledged ſhall retain them whoſeſoever they are, until the Money for which they were pledged be paid him, yet this does not bind the King where his Goods are pledged by a Stranger. [y] So a Sale of his Goods by a Stranger in Market-overt ſhall not alter the Property nor bind him. [z] And where a Man has Wreck of the Sea, if the King's Goods are wrecked he ſhall not gain Property thereby againſt the King. [*] So he who by Preſcription has Goods waived, or Eſtrays, ſhall not gain Property in the Goods of the King, if they are waived or eſtrayed. [†] So in 21. Ed. 3. one had a Hundred of the King in Fee-Farm, by Reaſon whereof he ought to levy the Debts of the King, and all Things leviable, and he diſtrained by a Bailiff for the King's Debt, and an Abbot made Reſcous, and he brought an Action of Treſpaſs againſt the Abbot, who ſaid that he was Lord of the Manor of B. and therein had a common Park, within which Manor there was a Cuſtom that when any Diſtreſs was taken within the Precinct of the ſaid Manor, the Bailiff who took the Diſtreſs ſhould carry it to the ſaid Park of the Abbot, and he ſhewed that the Bailiff of the Plaintiff took the Diſtreſs within the Manor, and that he would not ſuffer the Bailiff of the Plaintiff to drive the Diſtreſs out of the Manor, and it was adjudged that this Cuſtom ſhould not bind the Plaintiff, becauſe the Diſtreſs was for the King's Debt: So that the Cuſtom did not affect the King. Which Caſes ſhew that no Cuſtom can reſtrain the Liberty of the King; and ſo cannot any Statutes which don't make Mention of the King in expreſs Terms. [§] But yet the King, tho' not named in Statutes, ſhall take Advantage of them as another ſhall do; as he ſhall take Advantage of the Statute of Waſt, and of the Statute of 9. R. 2. cap. 3. of Error and Attaint for him in Reverſion upon Recovery againſt their Tenant for Life, notwithſtanding he is not named in them. So if the King as Heir to his Mother brings a Sur cui in vita, the Plea ſhall not be delayed for the Nonage of the Heir of the Huſband, but the King ſhall take Advantage of the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 40. notwithſtanding he is not named. And on the other Hand if he is not named in a Statute he ſhall not be reſtrained by it. As the Statute of Magna Charta cap. 10. provides that none ſhall be diſtrained to do more Service for a Knight's-Fee, or for any Freehold, than is therefore due, upon which the ‖ Ne injuſte vexes is founded to avoid Incroachment, † yet if the King incroaches more Rent or Service, the Party ſhall not have any Remedy by this Statute againſt the King either by Petition or otherwiſe, becauſe the King is not named, and therefore he ſhall not be deprived of the Advantage of Incroachment which the Common Law permitted. So the Statute of Magna Charta cap. 11. ordains that Common Pleas ſhall not follow our Court, but ſhall be holden in ſome certain Place, [a] yet in 31. Ed. 1. the King brought a Quare Impedit in the King's Bench, and it was there objected that the ſaid Court ſhould not have Power to hold Plea thereof contrary to the Statute, but it was awarded to be maintenable, for the King is not preciſely named in the Act, and therefore he ſhall not be reſtrained. So in a Quare Impedit Plenarty is no Plea by the Statute of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 5 ſo that the Quare Impedit be purchaſed within ſix Months, and if it is not, then by the Intent of the Statute it is a good Plea, [b] but yet if the King is Plaintiff in the Quare Impedit, Plenarty is no Plea againſt him, altho' he does not purſue the Writ within ten Months, but he is at Liberty to purſue it when he will, by 47. Ed 3. for the King is not named. [c] So the Statute of 32. H. 8. cap. 2. of Preſcription or Limitation does not reſtrain the King, becauſe he is not mentioned in the Act. From which Caſes it appears that the Common Law, Cuſtoms, and Statutes, which don't make expreſs Mention of the King, exempt the King from all Reſtraint, and leave him at Liberty. So does this Statute de donis conditionalibus, which is reſtrictive in three Points, as it is ſhewn before, that is to ſay, it reſtrains the Donee or his Iſſues from aliening ſo as to bar the Iſſues or the Donor, and it reſtrains the ſecond Huſband from being Tenant by the Curteſy, and it diminiſhes the Eſtate of the Donee, in all which three Points the Common Law was otherwiſe. And theſe Reſtraints are made by general Words, viz. that the Will of the Giver, according to the Form in the Deed of Gift manifeſtly expreſſed, ſhall from henceforth be obſerved, &c. and that the ſecond Huſband ſhall not be Tenant by the Curteſy, without any Mention of the King, which is not ſufficient to reſtrain the King, as I apprehend. And, Sir, here the Remainder is appointed to King Henry 7. and to the Heirs Males of his Body, and ſuch Eſtate is not mentioned in the Act, but yet as to the Subject it is taken * by Equity to be within the Purview of the Act: [d] But as to the King, nothing ſhall ever be taken by Equity againſt him in the Conſtruction of a Statute. Alſo the Act ſays, that the Will of the Giver, &c, ſhall be obſerved, &c. ſo that they to whom the Land was ſo given upon Condition ſhall not have Power to alien, &c. ſo that the Words only reſtrain the Alienation of them to whom the Lands were given, and not of their Iſſues. And here the Lands were given to King Henry 7. and the Alienation was made by King Edward 6. which is out of the Words, and ſhall not be taken by Equity againſt the King, for which Reaſons he is at Liberty as he was before the Statute. And, Sir, if the King ſhould be reſtrained, he would be in a worſe Condition than any other, for every one elſe may ſuffer a common Recovery, and ſo make the moſt of the Land, and bar their Iſſues, but no Recovery can be had againſt the King, for no [e] Præcipe lies againſt him, wherefore if it ſhould not be a Fee-ſimple in him, he would be in a much worſe Degree than another. For which Cauſes it ſeems to me that the King is not reſtrained by the Act, but that he might claim a Fee-ſimple, which will make the Remainder void, and might bar every one by Alienation, and ſo the Plaintiff ſhall recover.

Anthony Brown Juſtice, I am of Opinion to the contrary. And firſt, where the Remainder is limited to King Henry 7. by the Name of King Henry 7. it ſeems to me to be well limited to him by ſuch Name. [f] For the King naturally, properly, and fully cannot purchaſe by any other Name than by the Name of King, for the Name of King has drowned his Surname, and in the Name of King his Surname and proper Name alſo are included. And this Name of King cannot be omitted in his Purchaſes, or in his Patents or Writs, for it is his Name, and by it he is known and commonly called. And ſo in this Statute it is ſaid, The Lord the King perceiving, &c. hath ordained, &c. ſignifying by the Name of the Lord the King, King Edward 1. So we ſay nullum tempus occurrit Regi, and a Man ſhall forfeit to the Lord the King, and the Lord the King ſent his Writ in theſe Words, without expreſſing his Name of Baptiſm. So that the Name of the Lord the King contains the King in certain, viz. the King which then is, or the King ſpoken of. And altho' it is uſual at this Day to ſay King Henry 8. or King Edward 3. or King Edward 4. this is but for Diſtinction's Sake, to know what King we mean, for ſeveral of them had one ſame Name, as Henry or Edward, and the Addition of Number, as firſt, ſecond, or third, ſhews which of them we mean that have reigned heretofore, and it is to no other Purpoſe. For the Word (King) is a Name of Subſtance by itſelf without the Name of Baptiſm, and this politic Name of King includes the King's natural Name, as the Name of Duke of Norfolk, or Earl of Arundel include their natural Names. And if Land is given to Edward 6. or Henry 8. omitting the Word King, they ſhall take nothing. But e contra if a Patent is made by King Henry 8. by the Words, the King hath granted, omitting Henry, or by the preſent Queen by the Words, the Queen hath granted, omitting Elizabeth, the Gift is good. And ſo a Gift to the King or Queen, omitting their Name of Baptiſm, is good, for the natural Name is included in the politic Name of King or Queen. But, Sir, the Majeſty and Name of the King, when they are conjoined with the natural Perſon, alter the Quality and Degree of the natural Perſon, in the Eye of the Law, ſo that if he was within Age before, he ſhall then be adjudged of full Age to all Purpoſes; [g] and if his Body natural was attainted before, (as Henry 7. was) eo inſtante that the Dignity Royal comes to it, the Diſability is gone, for the greater removes the Imperfection of the leſſer, and the Body politic has the Pre-eminence over the Body natural. So that if Land is given to the King by the Name of Baptiſm, and by the Name of King alſo, as to Henry the

the King, and to his Heirs, this ſhall go in Succeſſion as the Crown ſhall go. [a] And if a Man that is King by Deſcent on the Part of his Mother purchaſes Lands to him and to his Heirs, and in the Purchaſe he is called by the Name of Baptiſm and by the Name of King alſo, if he dies without Iſſue, the Heir on the Part of his Mother, who has the Dignity royal, ſhall have the Land; for the Name of King being greater than the Name of Baptiſm, which ſignifies only the natural Body, ſhall have the greater Pre eminence in the Purchaſe, and ſhall draw the Land with it. [b] So if Land is given to Edward King of England, and to his Heirs, if he dies without Iſſue, his Brother of the half-Blood being King ſhall have it, cauſa qua ſupra. And, Sir, altho' ſuch is the Nature of the King's Perſon, yet it ſeems to me that the Eſtate here limited to King Henry 7. veſted in his Body natural, and that in that Capacity he took it. For although it was limited to him by the name of King Henry 7. ſo that there is as well the politic Name of King as his Name of Baptiſm, yet the Body natural may be ſignified by this Name of King, as it has been ſaid, for it includes the Body natural, and the Donor is at Liberty to give the Land to the one Body or to the other. And here he has given it to him and to his Heirs Males of his Body, which is a Limitation to the natural Body that may beget Iſſues, for the Body politic cannot beget Iſſues. And by this Limitation none ſhall have the Land after the Death of Henry 7. but thoſe who were begotten of his Body. And if it had ſo happened that after the Death of Henry 7. another had been King who was not Iſſue of the Body of Henry 7. it would not have been reaſonable that he ſhould have had the Land, for the Donor did not appoint it to him, but directed his Gift to thoſe who ſhould iſſue of the Body of Henry 7. for which Reaſon it cannot veſt in the Body politic, and go in Succeſſion to him that ſhall be King, whoſoever he is, for ſuch is not the Limitation of the Donor. And if the Donor intended to give it to the Body natural, he could not have uſed more proper Words, for they are ſuch as he ought to have uſed to a Stranger if he had given it to a Stranger in his Body natural. And therefore it is limited meerly to the Body natural, and in that Body it veſted, becauſe to that Body the Donor was pleaſed to give it.

[b] Co. Litt. 15.b.

Further, it ſeems to me that before the Statute de donis conditionalibus the King might take a Fee-ſimple conditional. For as the Donor might limit the Body of the King, to which he would give it, and in which the King ſhould take it, ſo might he limit the Eſtate that he would give, and alſo limit how the King ſhould take it, for he might give it for Life, or for Years, and ſo the King ſhould take it, and not otherwiſe. So he might give to the King and to his Heirs upon Condition in Deed, and ſo the King ſhould take it, and not otherwiſe. So before the Statute when there were two Fee-ſimples, viz. one conditional, (that is, upon Condition in Law) and the other abſolute, if a Gift had been made, the Donor might have given either the one or the other, and according as he limited the Gift, ſo and in no other Manner the King ſhould have taken it, ſo that if before the Statute the Gift had been to the King and to his Heirs, he ſhould have taken a Fee-ſimple abſolute, and if it had been to the King and to the Heirs of his Body, he ſhould have taken a Fee-ſimple conditional, and if he had died without Heir of his Body, it ſhould have reverted to the Donor, for if he had not Title but by the Donor, he ought to take it as the Donor gave it to him, and the Donor limited ſuch Eſtate to him and to no other, and the Gift being the Cauſe of his having the Land, it ſhall rule the Manner in which he ſhall have it. And therefore as it ſhould have reverted before the Statute if the Gift had been to a Stranger, and the Stranger had died without Iſſue, ſo ſhould it have reverted before the Statute if the Gift had been to the King, and he had died without Iſſue, for the Donor made the ſame Limitation of the Eſtate of the one as of the other, and therefore he ſhould have had as large Benefit againſt the one as againſt the other. And therefore the Freehold ſhould have been caſt upon him where the King Donee died without Iſſue, and he ſhould have entered without Office, as well as he ſhould have done if any other had been Donee. And if the King before the Statute had given Land to one and to his Heirs of his Body, there the King ſhould not have had the Reverſion any more than a common Perſon, and ſuch Donee might have aliened after Iſſue had, as well as he might have done if a common Perſon had been Donor. For the Perſon of the King is not to be reſpected in Gifts of Land, but the Quality of the Eſtate is to be conſidered; and the Perſon of the King ſhall not rule the Eſtate in the Land, but the Eſtate in the Land ſhall rule the Perſon of the King. So that before the Statute if Land had been given to the King and to the Heirs of his Body, he ſhould have had a Fee-ſimple conditional, and no other Eſtate. And ſo it was before the Statute. Then as to the Statute, it was intended to redreſs a Miſchief and a Grievance at the common Law. [c] And at the common Law there was no Eſtate of Inheritance but what was Fee-ſimple. But theſe Eſtates in Fee-ſimple were of two Sorts, the one abſolute, and the other conditional, as hath been ſaid. And the Fee-ſimple conditional was, where Land was given to a Man to the Heirs of his Body begotten, and herein the Abuſe was after Iſſue had rather than before Iſſue had. For before Iſſue had, if he had aliened, this ſhould not have bound the Iſſues had afterwards, nor the Donor if there had been no Iſſue, for until Iſſue had the Donee had no Power to alien, though he had after Iſſue. For when the Gift was to one and to the Heirs of his Body, they took it that he could not lawfully alien until he had ſuch Heirs, and that if he did alien, the Donor (although he could not enter preſently) after the Death of the Donee, if he had no Iſſue, might have a Formedon in Reverter. For the Gift being to one and to the Heirs of his Body, they adjudged it not to be a [d] full Fee-ſimple until he had Heirs of his Body, for when it was incertain whether he ſhould have an Heir of his Body or not, they did not take him to have a full Inheritance. [e] And therefore the Law was taken in ſuch Caſe, that if the Gift was to Huſband and Wife and to the Heirs o ftheir two Bodies begotten, and the Huſband had died before Iſſue had, and the Wife had taken a ſecond Huſband, and had Iſſue, there the ſecond Huſ-

† The Law was ſo in this Point beyond Diſpute.

Huſband ſhould not be Tenant by the Curteſy, nor ſhould their Iſſue † inherit, and if the Wife had died, the ſecond Wife of the Huſband ſhould not be endowed; for until ſuch Heir as the Donor had appointed was begotten, they took it that the Inheritance was not conſummate in him. And if there had been two Brothers, and the one was diſſeized, and a Deſcent caſt, and the Heir who was in by Deſcent before the Statute de donis conditionalibus had given the Land to the Brother that was diſſeized, and to the Heirs of his Body begotten, and he had died without Iſſue, the other Brother ſhould not have been remitted, becauſe the Land did not deſcend to him; [a] for although the Right of the Land deſcended to him, yet if the Poſſeſſion alſo did not deſcend to him, he ſhould not be remitted. [b] And this is the Reaſon of the Caſe in 19. H. 6. where a Woman Tenant in general Tail had Iſſue a Daughter, and by a ſecond Huſband had Iſſue another Daughter, and ſhe and the ſecond Huſband diſcontinued in Fee, and took back an Eſtate to them and to the Heirs of their two Bodies, and died, and the Land deſcended to the youngeſt Daughter, and it was there adjudged that the eldeſt was not remitted, for although ſhe had the Right deſcended, yet ſhe had not any Poſſeſſion deſcended, and therefore ſhe ſhould not be remitted. But in the ſaid firſt Caſe, if the Heir in by Deſcent had given the Land to the Brother and to his Heirs, and afterwards the Brother had died, there the other Brother ſhould have been remitted, becauſe the Land ſhall deſcend to him. [c] But after Iſſue had ſuch Donee at the common Law had Power to alien, and thereby to bar the Iſſues and the Donor, for by having Iſſue the Condition was performed, and his Inheritance was made more full, * ſo that the ſecond Huſband ſhould have been Tenant by the Curteſy, and the Iſſue of the Wife and of the ſecond Huſband ſhould have inherited, if the Iſſues of the Wife and of her firſt Huſband had died. [d] And in 7. Ed. 3. in a Formedon in Deſcender brought upon the Seizin of the third Iſſue of the Donee, it appears that the Donee himſelf before the Statute was attainted of Felony, having Iſſue, and there it appears that the Land ſhould eſcheat to the chief Lord of whom it was held, for after Iſſue had it was taken as a full Fee-ſimple. [e] And in 8. Ed. 3. in a Formedon in Deſcender brought by the Iſſue in Tail, a Releaſe of the Donee made to the Grandfather of the Tenant before the Statute de donis conditionalibus was pleaded in Bar, and held a good Bar: And herewith agrees the Book in 5 & 6. Ed. 3. So that after Iſſue had it was taken that the Donee had Power to alien, and by the ſame Reaſon to do other Acts to entitle others to the Land, as the Lord by Eſcheat, or the ſecond Huſband and his Iſſue, and the like. And becauſe ſuch Donee might bar his Iſſues by his Alienation, and foraſmuch as it was a frequent Caſe, and many had done ſo, the Statute did not remedy the Alienations of Donees made before the Statute, but there is a Clauſe in the Statute ſignifying that they left it as it was before, viz. and it is to wit, that this Statute ſhall hold Place touching Alienations of Land contrary to the Form of the Gift hereafter to be made, and ſhall not extend to Gifts made before; which Words, to Gifts made before, are intended Gifts, or Feoffments, or Alienations of Tenants in Tail made to others before the Statute, and after Iſſue had, and not Gifts made by the Donors before the Statute. For if one before the Statute gave Lands to a Man and to the Heirs of his Body, and after the Statute the Donee makes a Feoffment of it, the Iſſue ſhall have a Formedon of this Alienation well enough, for the Statute remedies all Alienations made ſince the Statute, as well where the Gift of the Donor was before the Statute, as where it was after it. So that the Words, to Gifts made before, are not to be intended of Gifts made in Tail by the Donors before the Statute, but of Gifts made to others before the Statute by the Donees in Tail after Iſſue had, for ſuch Gifts were not avoidable by any, and therefore they are excepted by this Clauſe, as the ſaid Caſe in 8. Ed. 3. proves. [f] So in 44. Ed. 3. the Caſe is that Tenant in Tail made a Leaſe for Life, and afterwards releaſed to the Tenant for Life before the Statute de donis conditionalibus, and after the Statute, viz. in 44. Ed. 3. the Iſſue brought a Formedon, and it was adjudged that it did not lie, becauſe the Statute excepts ſuch Alienations, for neither before the Act nor by the Act are they voidable by any, if they were made by him who had the Tail only, and were made fully according to the Power which the common Law gave him, but if they were not, then a Formedon in Deſcender lies ſince the Statute. [g] For in 4. Ed. 2. the Caſe is thus, viz. a Woman Tenant in Tail took Huſband, and had Iſſue, and after Iſſue had, and before the Statute the Huſband and Wife aliened in Fee to a Stranger, and died, the Iſſue ſhall have a Formedon in Deſcender of this Land after the Statute, notwithſtanding the Alienation; but if the Alienation had been by Fine, then the Iſſue had been barred by the Alienation; ſo is the Book. And, Sir, the Reaſon of the Caſe is, becauſe the Alienation was not lawful, for it was a Diſcontinuance to the Wife being covert at the Time of the Alienation, and when ſhe died, the Right deſcended to the Iſſue, [h] and he could not have a Sur cui in vita, unleſs he claimed a Fee-ſimple, [i] and the Words (to Gifts made before) are to be intended Gifts lawfully and in due Manner made by the Donees before the Statute, and becauſe this Alienation without Fine was not done ſo, it is not excepted by the Statute, and therefore the Iſſue ſhall have a Formedon, and not a Sur cui in vita; but if the Alienation was by Fine, in which Caſe the Wife is examined, then it had been duly made, and had bound all. From whence it appears that after Iſſue had the Donee before the Statute had full Power to alien, but not before Iſſue had. [k] And if Land had been given to the King and to the Heirs of his Body, before the Statute he could not have aliened in Fee before Iſſue had, for ſuch Alienation would have been a Wrong in another Perſon, and ſo ſhould it have been in the King, if it were adjudged an Alienation in Fee, and therefore he could not do it, [l] for the King cannot do any Wrong, nor will his Prerogative be any Warrant to him to do an Injury to another. And the Eſtate which the King had would not lawfully ſuffer ſuch an Alienation, for his Eſtate was not large nor full enough to permit it, and his Prerogative could not alter his Eſtate, nor make it greater than the Donor gave it to him. [m] Not but that the Perſon of the King ſhall ſometimes change the Courſe of Things, and that not in reſpect of the Nature of the Eſtate, but of the Quality of the Perſon. [n] As if a common Perſon purchaſes Land, and has two Daughters, and no Son, the Land ſhall deſcend deſcend to both the Daughters; [a] but if the King purchaſes Land, and has Iſſue two Daughters, and dies, having no Son, this Land ſhall deſcend only to the eldeſt Daughter, and that is by reaſon of the Quality of the King's Perſon, as it is ſaid before. But if Land deſcends to the King and to another, the King ſhall take only a Moiety, for if he ſhould take the whole, he would do a Wrong to the other, which his Prerogative will not ſuffer him to do. [b] So if Land in Gavelkind deſcends to the King and to his Brother, each of them ſhall take but a Moiety; [c] but there if the King has two Sons, and dies, the King's Moiety ſhall not deſcend to his two Sons, but the eldeſt only ſhall have it by Prerogative, for there the Quality of the Perſon alters the Deſcent, but not the Eſtate, for the Eſtate is as it was before, whether it be Fee-ſimple or Fee-tail, ſo that the Eſtate ſhall be in the King as in another. And therefore the Eſtate before Iſſue had was, before the Statute, the ſame in the King as it was in a Stranger. And before Iſſue the Donee had not Power to alien, ſo that in this Point there was no Miſchief, but the Miſchief lay in the other Point, viz. after Iſſue had, for after Iſſue he had before the Statute ſuch a Fee-ſimple as he might indefeaſibly have given to another, [d] and ſuch as would have made the ſecond Huſband to be Tenant by the Curteſy, and the Iſſue of him and of the Wife to inherit, and the ſecond Wife to be endowed, and ſuch as he might forfeit [e] by Eſcheat, and ſuch as by divers other Acts done by the Donee might be conveyed from the Iſſues and from the Donor, all which was contrary to the Will and Intent of the Donor, for his Intent was, that if the Donee had Iſſues, the Iſſues ſhould have it and none other, and that if Iſſues failed, the Land ſhould revert. And yet the common Law permitted him to do contrary to this Will of the Donor, viz. to alien, and to do other Acts, whereby to bar the Iſſues and the Donor, but notwithſtanding the common Law did ſuffer it, nevertheleſs it was not well done, but a Wrong. And ſome Things the common Law does permit to be done, which are tortious and wrong. [f] As before the Statute which gave an Action of Waſt, the common Law ſuffered Tenant for Years or for Life to make Waſt and Deſtruction of Houſes and Woods, yet the doing thereof was diſcommendable and wrong. [g] And if there are two Jointenants, and the one takes all the Profits of the Land, the common Law permits it, and leaves the other without Remedy, yet this is a Wrong. And if the King kills a Man, there is no Remedy in the Law, and yet it is not well done. Wherefore ſometimes it is not right but wrong to do that which the common Law ſuffers to be done, or for which the common Law has not provided a Remedy. So was the Alienation of the Donee after Iſſue had, before the Statute de donis conditionalibus, a great Wrong, although the common Law permitted it to be done, which one may perceive from the Letter of the Statute itſelf, which ſays, in all the Caſes aforeſaid, after Iſſue begotten, &c. heretofore ſuch Feoffees had Power to alien the Land ſo given, and to diſherit their Iſſue of the Land, contrary to the Minds of the Givers, and contrary to the Form expreſſed in the Gift. [h] And if the Alienation was to the Diſheriſon of the Iſſues, ergo, it was tortious, for to diſinherit one is not lawful; [i] and if it was contrary to the Minds of the Givers, then it was ill done, [k] for men ought to obſerve the Intent of others in a lawful Thing, and it is not right to break it; and if it was contrary to the Form expreſſed in the Gift, it was not well done, for he that has a Thing given him in a certain Form, and accepts of it in that Form, and afterwards breaks the Form, does not right. So that the Letter of the Act recites that the Alienation was a Tort and a Wrong, and the Intent of the Donor was thereby violated, and his Right taken away. For notwithſtanding that the Donee had Iſſue, yet the Donor had a Right to have the Land again, if the Iſſue failed; and ſo if there were four Deſcents and the laſt Iſſue died without Iſſue, the Donor ſhould have had it again before the Statute, for the Fee-ſimple after Iſſue had was not abſolute to this Purpoſe, ergo the Donor had a Right after Iſſue, to take away which by the Alienation was a great Wrong. So that ſuch Alienation after Iſſue had, being to the Diſinheritance of the Iſſues and of the Donor, and in Violation of the Will and Intent of the Donor, and as ſuch tortious and injurious, was a very great Miſchief, for the full Redreſs whereof this Statute was made. And the Words which make Proviſion for the ſame are theſe, that the Will of the Giver, according to the Form in the Deed of Gift manifeſtly expreſſed, from henceforth ſhall be obſerved, which Words alone redreſs the whole Grievance, and the other Words following, viz. ſo that they to whom the Land was ſo given, ſhall not have Power to alien, &c. as alſo the other Words, viz. neither ſhall the ſecond Huſband of any ſuch Woman from henceforth have any Thing in the Land ſo given, &c. by the Law of England, nor ſhall the Iſſue of the ſecond Huſband and Wife ſucceed in the Inheritance, &c. are but [l] conſequential to the ſaid Words of the Purview, and are only explanatory, and not of Subſtance, but of Abundance, which might well enough have been omitted. For if the Will of the Donor ſhall be obſerved, from thence it follows that the Alienation of the Donee ſhall not bar the Iſſues, and that the ſecond Huſband ſhall not be Tenant by the Curteſy, and that the Iſſues of him and of the Wife ſhall not inherit, for ſuch is the Will of the Donor, for in that the Gift is to the Donees, and to their Heirs of their two Bodies begotten, therein it is contained that no other but ſuch Iſſue ſhall have the Land by the Will of the Donor. So that the Purview lies only in the ſaid Words, that the Will of the Donor, &c. ſhall from henceforth be obſerved, which Words contain the Things following, and more. But, Sir, although the Act provides that the Will of the Donor ſhall be obſerved, yet there is no Word in the Act that divides the Eſtate, and makes the Fee-ſimple to remain in the Donor, and the Donee to have a leſſer Eſtate than he had before the Act. For although the Land ſhould revert to the Donor before the Act, this is no Proof that he had a Reverſion, for an abſolute Fee-ſimple ſhall eſcheat to the Lord at this Day, and yet the Lord has no Reverſion. So the Reverter of the Land to the Donor upon Condition in Law does not prove that the Donor had a Reverſion, for indeed he had no Reverſion, but the Donee had the Fee-ſimple, and conſequently the whole Eſtate. But the Caſe is, that the wiſe Sages of the Law, who had the Conſtruction of the Statute immediately after it was made, did, upon the Reaſon of the Statute, divide the Eſtate in order to fulfil and execute the Will of the Donor. For when the

the Statute ordained that the Will of the Donor ſhould be obſerved, from thence it followed conſequentially that the Donee was reſtrained from aliening lawfully the Fee-ſimple, and from doing other Acts which Tenant in Fee-ſimple might do; and when he was thereby reſtrained from doing lawfully thoſe Acts which attend a Fee-ſimple Eſtate, and from meddling with the Fee-ſimple, from thence they took it to be the Intent both of the Legiſlature and of the Donor, that he ſhould not have [a] a Fee-ſimple, for it would have been an idle Intent to have adjudged the Fee-ſimple in him, when he could not lawfully do any thing with it. And therefore upon this Reaſon they took it that the Fee-ſimple was left in the Donor, and yet that the Eſtate of the Donee was an Eſtate of Inheritance, becauſe the Heirs of his Body ſhould inherit it; but this Inheritance could not be a Fee-ſimple, for then there would be two [b] Fee-ſimples of the ſame Land, but they took it to be a baſer Eſtate of Inheritance, and gave it the Name of an Eſtate-tail, which is an Eſtate of Inheritance certainly limited. So that upon good Reaſon, in order to perform the Will of the Donor and of the Legiſlature alſo, they took it by the Purview that the Eſtate was [c] divided, and that the Donee had an Eſtate-tail, and the Donor the Fee-ſimple, which he might grant over to another, or give to another by Way of Remainder, and that he could not do before the Statute, for then the Donee had a Fee-ſimple, and one Fee-ſimple cannot depend upon another. For in 3. Ed. 3. a Man levied a Fine ſur conuſance de droit come ceo que il ad de ſon done, and he could not make a Remainder over upon ſuch Fine, becauſe the Gift ſhall be taken [d] as a Fee-ſimple. But now that the Eſtate is divided, the Donor may grant the Fee-ſimple over by Way of Remainder. So that the Reaſon of the Purview of the Act inſtructed the Expoſitors of it to divide the Eſtate, and continual Uſe ever ſince has confirmed the Expoſition. Wherefore the Eſtate is divided by the Intent of the Act without preciſe Words as fully and perfectly as if the Act had expreſsly divided it, [e] for that which is done by the Intent of any Act, without preciſe Words, is equivalent to that which is done by preciſe Words. So that now the Eſtate is reſtrained, and abridged, and altered by the Act, and therefore when the King took the Eſtate, he took it reſtrained and abridged, and he could not take it otherwiſe; for the Prerogatives of the King are in reſpect of his Perſon, and have relation to his Perſon, and his Perſon ſhall by Prerogative be exempt from Reſtraint in many Caſes, but here the Reſtraint is not in the Perſon, but it is in the Eſtate which the King took, for the Eſtate which the Donee had at the common Law was a Fee-ſimple, which is now reſtrained and abridged, and the Miſchief at the common Law was not in the Perſon of the Donee, but in the Eſtate of the Donee, and therefore the Statute was not made in Reſtraint of the Perſon of the Donee, but in Reſtraint of the Eſtate of the Donee; and ſo the Eſtate was the Cauſe of the Act, and is reſtrained by the Act, which the King cannot enlarge by his Prerogative without another Act of Parliament, but in taking the Eſtate he is reſtrained along with the Eſtate. And as to what has been ſaid, that the King and his Eſtate ſhall be left at large, and that he ſhall have Power to give the Fee, as another Perſon might before the Act, Sir, the Matter of the Act ſhews the contrary, for the Act ſhews that ſuch Alienation was to the Diſinheritance of the Iſſues, and that which is to the Diſinheritance of any is a Wrong. Alſo the Act ſays that it was contrary to the Will of the Donor, and that which a Man does contrary to the Will of his Donor is not well done. Alſo it ſays that it was contrary to the Form expreſſed in the Gift, which alſo is not well done: So that by the Judgment of the Act, ſuch Alienation was a Tort and a Wrong. And he that will maintain that the King is in a Degree to make ſuch Alienation, muſt at the ſame time maintain that the King may do Wrong, and that the Law ſuffers him to do Wrong, which none can maintain; [f] and it is a difficult Argument to prove that a Statute, which reſtrains Men generally from doing Wrong, leaves the King at Liberty to do Wrong. And as to what has been ſaid, that the King ſhall not be reſtrained by the Act, unleſs he is ſpecially named in the Act, Sir, if I ſhould be inclined to admit the Law to be ſo, yet here he is named, [g] for the Act ſays, wherefore the Lord the King perceiving how neceſſary and uſeful it is to provide a Remedy in the Caſes aforeſaid, hath ordained that the Will of the Giver, &c. ſhall from henceforth be obſerved: So that the King is named, and effectually named, as one that perceived the Miſchief, and ſaw that it was neceſſary and profitable to provide a Remedy, and therefore he ordained a Remedy; and when he ordained a Remedy for the Miſchief, it is not to be preſumed that he intended to be at Liberty to do the Miſchief. Wherefore the King is named in the Act, and ſo named that every one may gather from thence that he was content to be bound, and that he is bound as another is. And great Inconvenience would follow if he was not, for by the Intent of the Act the Eſtate is divided, as it is ſhewn before. And the Fee is in him in the Remainder, viz. to the right Heirs of the Marqueſs, as it is limited by the Fine. And if the King ſhould have a Fee-ſimple conditional, then there would be two Fee-ſimples of one ſame Land, for the Law will not deveſt the Fee out of him in the Remainder, for that would be a Wrong to him, which the Law will never do, and two Fees there cannot be by any Means, for which reaſon there ſhall be no Fee in the King, nor in his Patentee. And as to that which was laſt ſaid, viz. [h] that the Eſtate limited to King Henry 7. was to him and to the Heirs Males of his Body, and ſuch Eſtate is not mentioned in the Act, and therefore ſhall not be taken by Equity againſt the King, Sir, [i] Littleton in his Book has ſhewn us a Learning touching this Point, viz. that an Eſtate-tail to one and to the Heirs Males of his Body is taken by Equity of the ſaid Statute, as divers other Eſtates-tail are, which are not expreſſed in the ſaid Statute. For every thing which is the Intent of the Donor is as fully within the Statute, as if the Thing itſelf had been preciſely expreſſed. For when the Statute ordains that the Will of the Donor ſhall be obſerved, it makes his Will to be a Law, as well againſt the King as againſt another. And foraſmuch as it was his Will to limit the Eſtate in the Manner it is here limited, it ſhall be good, and ſhall enure accordingly. And, Sir, if the King would ſay that the Eſtate was not divided at common Law, and that as to him it ſhall be at this Day as it was at the common Law, whereby he would have a Fee-ſimple, and the

the Remainder would be void, by this, I ſay, he deſtroys his own Eſtate, for the Eſtate-tail precedes his Remainder, and if it ſhould be a Fee-ſimple conditional, then the Remainder of the King would be void, [a] for a Remainder cannot be limited upon a Fee-ſimple precedent. And if the King would ſay that his Remainder is a Fee-ſimple, he cannot ſay otherwiſe but that the Eſtate precedent is alſo a Fee-ſimple, for both the Eſtates were made by one ſame Fine at one ſame Time, and both the Eſtates are by the Donor limited to be in Tail. And the King cannot ſay that the one is in Tail and the other in Fee, for thereby he affirms and diſaffirms at the ſame Time, that is, he affirms that in the firſt Eſtate the Statute divided the Eſtate and made it in Tail, and then in his own Eſtate he diſaffirms it, viz. that the Statute did not divide the Eſtate, but that it remains a Fee ſimple conditional; and by this Means he would be within the Purview and out of the Purview in one ſame Matter and at one ſame Time, which he cannot be, but he ſhall be eſtopped to ſay ſo, nam qui ſentit commodum, ſentire debet et onus. And alſo by ſuch Affirmative he would in Part of the Eſtate deſtroy the Fine by which he himſelf claims, that is, he would deſtroy the Remainder to the right Heirs of the Marqueſs, and make the Fine void for the ſame, for if he himſelf has a Fee-ſimple the Remainder to the right Heirs of the Marqueſs is void; but it does not ſtand with his Eſtate to impeach the Fine which conſtitutes his Eſtate, nor will his Prerogative extend to deſtroy the Remainder in Fee to the right Heirs of the Marqueſs, for thereby he would take away an Eſtate from another, and do Wrong to another. [b] And therefore I deny the Caſes put of a next Avoidance granted to the King, or of the Grant of all Preſentments which ſhall happen within 20 Years: For after the next Avoidance, or the 20 Years paſſed, the King ſhall not preſent, for the Grantor did but grant that which ſhould happen within ſuch a Time, and after that Time the Law ſays that the Grantor ought to have the Advowſon, and the Preſentments which fall from it, and if the King will ſuffer a Stranger to have thoſe Preſentments which belong to him, he ſhall not have the Preſentments which belong to the Grantor after the Time elapſed, for thereby he would do a Wrong to the Grantor, and injure the Eſtate of the Grantor; for whereas the Grantor only granted the Advowſon for 20 Years, perhaps he might not have any Profit of it for 40 or 50 Years, if the King was at Liberty to preſent when he pleaſed, which is very unreaſonable, and the King's Prerogative ſhall not injure the Grantor ſo much. So that for the Reaſon before given it ſeems to me that the Eſtate of the King ſhall be only a Fee-tail, and that he is bound by the Statute as well as another. [c] And as a Proof that it has been ſo taken before, the Caſe of 4. H. 6. has been well cited, where the Tenant, who held of the King in capite by Knight's Service, made a Gift in Tail, and the Donee died, his Iſſue within Age, and it was there adjudged that the King ſhould not have the Ward, but the Donor ſhould have it, for the Eſtate is divided, and the Reverſion is in the Donor, and the Donee held of him, and he ſhall not be ſaid, as to the King, to have a Fee-ſimple conditional, and ſo to hold of the King, but he ſhall be adjudged Tenant in Tail, and the Donor ſhall be adjudged Tenant to the King. And as to what has been ſaid, [d] that the Reaſon upon which the Book was ſo ruled is, becauſe the King accepted the Services of the Donor, and ſo took him for his Tenant, and therefore he was eſtopped to take the other for his Tenant, Sir, altho' this is there debated, I don't take this to be the Cauſe of the Judgment, (and ſuch Cauſe would be a very weak one, [e] for the King ſhall not be eſtopped by ſuch Acceptance) but it appears in the Argument there fo. 22. that Martin put a Queſtion, whether if the King ſhould have the Wardſhip of the Heir of the Donee, it ſhould be by Reaſon of his ancient Seigniory, or by Reaſon of a new Seigniory upon the Gift, and it is there anſwered that it ſhould be by Reaſon of his ancient Seigniory; to which he ſaid that it could not be, for this Seigniory was by Reaſon of a Tenancy in Fee-ſimple, and as long as the Fee-ſimple continues in the ancient Tenant the Seigniory cannot be upon any other Perſon, or upon any other Eſtate, but upon him; ſo that upon the Gift the Tenancy was not changed, nor conſequently the Seigniory, in which Caſe, notwithſtanding the Gift, the Donor continues Tenant, and no other, of whom he ſhall have the Ward: And upon this Reaſon of Martin I take the Judgment of the Book to proceed, and not upon the other Point. And this Caſe being ſo adjudged proves that the Eſtate is divided as to the King, and that the Donee does not remain as to him Tenant in Fee-ſimple, and that the King ſhall be bound by the Act in this Point, as well as another Perſon. And ſo it is proved by the ſaid Caſe of Mortmain before alledged. [f] So in 22 Ed. 4. Tenant in Tail with Remainder over to another in Fee forfeited the Land for Treaſon, as it ſeems, and died without Iſſue, and he in Remainder was received to ſue to the King by Petition; but if the Tenant in Tail ſhould be adjudged, as to the King, Tenant in Fee-ſimple, then the Remainder ſhould have been void as to the King, and he in Remainder diſabled to ſue, but he was not, which proves that the Judges then took it that as to the King he was but Tenant in Tail, and ſo the King was bound by the Act. [g] Another like Caſe I know by Experience, which is, that Land which belonged to William Brown my Father was ſeized into the King's Hands in the Exchequer for the King's Debt, and it was adjudged that it ſhould be diſcharged, becauſe the Land was entailed, and my Father had it by Deſcent as Iſſue in Tail of him who was the King's Debtor; and afterwards the ſame Matter came again in Queſtion in the Court of Surveyors, and I ſuggeſted the ſame Matter in Diſcharge of the Land, and thereby the Land was there alſo diſcharged. Which proves that the King was bound by the Statute de donis conditionalibus, for if the King might have ſaid that the Land, as to him, was a Fee-ſimple conditional, then the Land ſhould not have been

been discharged. Wherefore for these Reasons it seems to me that the King shall be only Tenant in Tail, and so the Remainder is good, and the Plaintiff upon the Matter in Law shall be barred.

Dyer C. J. Dyer Chief Justice. As to the Matter in Law, I am of the same Opinion. And as to the Name of the King, by which he may purchase, Sir, if in the Purchase he be named only King, omitting his Christian Name, he may well enough take thereby, for King is the highest Name of Honour in this Realm, which for the Greatness of it drowns all other Names of Honour or Dignity which the Person that is King may have within this Realm, and because there is not, nor ought to be more than one that bears the Name of King in this Realm, the Name of King contains Certainty enough to signify who it is that has this Name, and therefore a Purchase by this Name only contains Certainty enough, and is good enough. But I have never seen this Name only used in Purchases, or Grants, or Letters-patent, but the Practice is to add the Name of Baptism also, as to say, Henry King, or Edward King, for else it would be doubtful what King was meant, for there have been many Kings that have had the same Name of Baptism; and therefore for the Sake of Distinction and Certainty the Christian Name of the King is used to be inserted. But if it be omitted it shall be good enough, and it may be tried what King it was.

Further, the King has two Bodies, viz. a Body natural and a Body politic, and he has Capacity both in the one and in the other. And the Name (King) contains them both, and Heirs implies both Heirs and Successors, [a] for it is but of late Time that Successors have been added in the King's Grants. And he that gives to the King may give to him in the one Body or in the other, as the Donor pleases to limit it; but here the Gift itself distinguishes in what Capacity the King shall take it, for the Remainder is to him and to his Heirs Males of his Body begotten, and such Heirs must come from the natural Body, for the Body politic cannot beget Issues. So that the Limitation of the Inheritance here to the Heirs Males of his Body distinguishes the Body in which the Donor had a Mind that the King should take it. [b] For if King Henry 7. after the Remainder limited to him, had been removed from the Royal Estate, and another had been made King, neither the succeeding King nor his Heirs should have had the Land, because the Donor limited it to Henry 7. and to the Heirs Males of his Body, and if the Heirs of the other Body should inherit it, it would be contrary to the Limitation and Will of the Donor, for there is not any such Inheritance limited by the Gift; wherefore the Gift here has Respect to the natural Body of King Henry 7. and to the Heirs Males which this natural Body shall beget, and so the Capacity and Body in which he should take it is distinguished and limited in the Gift. [c] As if a Man gives Land to a Bishop and to his Heirs, thereby he distinguishes in what Capacity he has a Mind to place the Inheritance, and in what Capacity the Bishop shall take it, and as the Donor pleases to limit it, so it shall enure; for if he had given the Land here to King Henry 7. and to the Heirs of his Body and of the Body of Elizabeth his Wife begotten, such Heirs and none other should take it. And Land may be entailed to the King as well as to another, for King Henry 4. entailed the Dutchy to him and to his Heirs of his Body begotten, and the Crown was entailed to King Henry 8. and to the Heirs of his Body, so that the King may take an Entail as well as another. And the Remainder here vested in the Body natural of King Henry 7. [d] So that if he had resigned the Crown to King Henry 8. yet he should have held the Land to him and to his Heirs of his Body, as Land distinct from, and no Part of the Crown.

Further, as to the Common Law before the Statute, if Land had been given to a Man and to his Heirs of his Body begotten, this was not taken to be a [e] full and perfect Inheritance, until the Donee had Issue of his Body. For Britton in his Book in the Title of conditional Purchase cap. 36. says, that before Issue he had but a Freehold, and the Inheritance accrued by the Issue, and if he had Issue, and the Issue died, the Land should descend to the [f] collateral Heir. And of this Opinion Bracton seems to be, for he says, if Land be given to a Man and to his Heirs si hæredes de corpore suo habuerit, and he has Issue, and dies, the Land shall descend remotioribus hæredibus; for, as it seems, they took it that by such Gift he had only the Inheritance upon Condition, and when he had Issue he had satisfied the Condition, and then he had Power to alien, and then it should descend to the collateral Heirs, as other Land. [g] But (as I take it) it was a Fee-simple presently before Issue, but the having of Issue made it more full and perfect than it was before; [h] For after Issue he had Power to alien, and thereby to bar the Issues and the Donor, [i] and it should escheat for Felony, as it is taken by 7 & 8. Ed. 3. and by other Means he might disinherit the Issue and the Donor, which was contrary to the Will of the Donor, and was a hard Case, as the Statute says, and very injurious and unreasonable. And thus the Makers of the Act looked upon this Permission of the Common Law, or this common Error, whereby they took it that the having Power to alien was a full Injury, and a Thing against Reason, and the Words after, viz. that it is necessary and useful to provide a Remedy in the Cases aforesaid, have in them a Kind of Vehemence purporting great Necessity of a Reformation. For that which is necessary and useful to be reformed requires to be reformed in all, and not in Part only, and the rest to be left unreformed, and therefore for the full and perfect Reformation of this Abuse, viz. as well in the King as in others, the Act has ordained, that the Will of the Giver, according to the Form in the Deed of Gift manifestly expressed, shall from henceforth be observed. So that the Observance of the Will of the Donor is become the Reformation of all that was amiss before, and the Will of the Donor is the Effect of the Statute. And from thence it follows, that the Alienation of the Donee shall not bind bind the Iſſues nor the Donor; [a] nor ſhall the ſecond Huſband be Tenant by the Curteſy, nor ſhall the Iſſue of him and of the Wife inherit. [b] So that it was ſuperfluous to expreſs this in the Act, for theſe Clauſes are but conſequential to the firſt Purview, and are included in the firſt Purview, and only ſerve to explain the ſame, for the firſt Purview, viz. the Will of the Donor, includes theſe Clauſes and many others. [c] For the ſecond Wife ſhall not be endowed, [d] nor can the Donee charge the Land with a Rent-charge or other Incumbrance, [e] nor ſhall he forfeit the Land for Felony, nor can he do other Acts to the diſinheriting of the Iſſues; and all this is included in the firſt Purview, viz. that the Will of the Donor ſhall be obſerved, for theſe Acts are contrary to his Will, and every Thing that is contrary to his Will is reformed by this Act, as every Thing that is his Will is made a Law by this Act. [f] And therefore an Entail to the Heirs Males of the Body of the Donee is within the Purview of the Act, as it is taken in 18. Ed. 3. and in Carbonnel's Caſe in 33. Ed. 3. [g] So an Entail to the Heirs Females of the Body of the Donee, and all other Entails, are within the Purview of the Statute, becauſe they are within the Will of the Donor; for as Fleta (who wrote a long Time ſince) ſays in his third Book, modus legem dat donationi; ſo that the Manner of the Gift which the Donor limits makes a Law to the Gift. [h] And the three Eſtates limited in the Preamble of the Act, that is to ſay, Eſpecial Tail, Frank marriage, and General Tail, are but put there for Examples, and not as containing all the Entails intended in the Statute, for the Donor might make other Entails by his Limitation, for his Will is a Law as to the Eſtates-tail. [i] And where an Eſtate to one and to the Heirs of his Body was a Fee ſimple before the Statute, now ſince the Statute it is taken in 12. Ed. 4. that he has but a Fee-tail, and this is included in the Statute, altho' it is not expreſſed, as the Book ſays. And herein the Book ſays true, [k] for when the Statute reſtrained the Donee from aliening the Fee-ſimple, or from doing other Acts which he that has a Fee-ſimple may do, it was preſently taken that the Fee was not in him, for it would be idle to adjudge it in him, when he could not do any Thing with it, and therefore it was taken, by Collection and Implication of the Act, that the Fee-ſimple continued in the Donor. So that he has one Inheritance, viz. a Fee-ſimple, and the Donee has another Inheritance of an inferior Degree, viz. a Fee-tail. And the Name of the Eſtate was taken from the Certainty of the Limitation of the Inheritance, as Littleton ſays, [l] for he ſays, Taliare idem eſt quod in certitudinem ponere, and becauſe in the Gift it is expreſſed of what Body the Heirs which ſhall inherit ſhall iſſue, for this Reaſon he took it that it was called a Tail, or rather it might have the Name of the French Word (tailer) which is to cut, for to dock Wood is to cut Wood, and becauſe the Eſtate is docked, or cut off, (for before it was a Fee-ſimple, and now the Fee is cut off from it, and the Eſtate thereby is docked, cut off, or made leſs) it may well be called an Eſtate-tail, viz. an Eſtate docked, cut off, or abridged; and immediately upon the making of the Act it had this Name given it. And it was alſo taken that the Reverſion in Fee was left in the Donor, for in the ſame Seſſion of Parliament, and in the Act which is the fourth Chapter after, viz. in the Chapter which gives the quod ei deforceat, it is recited, that if one had loſt his Land by Default, he had no other Writ to recover the Land again but a Writ of Right, which did not ſerve for them who had not a Fee-ſimple, as Tenants for Term of Life, in Free-marriage, or in Fee-tail, in which Caſes a Reverſion is reſerved, there it is provided that ſuch ſhall have a quod ei deforceat. So that it is there called a Fee-tail, and that in ſuch Caſe a Reverſion is reſerved. Wherefore they of the ſame Parliament immediately took it that the Eſtate was divided, and that the Donor had the Fee-ſimple, and the Donee a Fee-tail, and this Conſtruction was gathered from the Will of the Donor. For it is to be preſumed that he who would not have the Donee to do any Act that Tenant in Fee-ſimple might do, did not chuſe that he ſhould have a Fee-ſimple Eſtate. So that by the Implication of the Act, the Eſtate which was a Fee-ſimple conditional is divided, and the Fee continues always in the Donor, and the Donee has an Eſtate-tail. And therefore the Eſtate of the Donee is altered, [m] for before the Statute the Iſſue ſhould have had an Aſſize of Mortdanceſtor, but now he ſhall not; [n] and before it ſhould have eſcheated for Felony after Iſſue had, [o] but now it ſhall not; [p] and before the Donee ſhould forfeit it for Treaſon, [q] and now as appears in 7. H. 4. he ſhall not; [r] and before the Donee might charge the Land, and the Iſſue ſhould have held it charged, [s] but now he cannot, for it is not the ſame Eſtate that it was before, nor in the ſame Degree. Then ſeeing the Eſtate of the Donee is changed, and is ſuch as is ſhewn before, and no other, the King ought to take it ſo, and in ſuch Manner as it is, and not otherwiſe, for the King cannot have any other Eſtate than that which the Donor has given him, and the Donor has given him ſuch an Eſtate as does not contain the Fee, and therefore the King cannot have the Fee, for if the Donor had given him an Eſtate upon Condition, he ſhould not have had it without Condition. And ſo if the Donor gives it to the King and to his Heirs of his Body, he ſhall not have it to his Heirs generally, for that is contrary to the Eſtate, for the Donor has a Right to the Fee. And this is proved by the Words of the Formedon in Reverter, which are, which to the Donor ought to revert by the Form of the Gift aforeſaid, which Word ought implies the Right of the Fee. And as to what is ſaid, that the King ſhall not be bound by the Act, and that there ſhall not be any Reſtraint in the Eſtate which he takes, unleſs the ſame be preciſely expreſſed in the Act, Sir, in ſome Caſes I admit that the King ſhall not be reſtrained by general Words, without expreſs Reſtraint in the Act, and that is according to the Matter of the Act; but in this Act he ſhall be bound, [t] for it is made for the Furtherance of Reſtitution, that is to ſay, where it was a great Abuſe that the Donee had the Power of aliening after Iſſue had, (which being a common Error was was taken for the Common Law) this Statute was made to reform the Abuſe, and to reſtore the Common Law in this Point to its right and juſt Courſe, which it did by reſtoring to the Donor the Obſervance of his Intent. So that the Deſign of the Act is to give Reſtitution, [a] and in Reſtitutions the King has no Favour, nor has his Prerogative any Exemption, but the Party reſtored is favoured. [b] And therefore if the King reſtores the Heir by Livery to his Manors, the Advowſons ſhall paſs to him without any Mention of them. [c] So if he makes Reſtitution of the Temporalties to a Biſhop, Knight's Fees and Advowſons ſhall paſs without being mentioned. So alſo ſhall it be in caſe of a Reſtitution upon Petition of another to have that to which the King has no Right; for where a Thing which the King ought not to hold is reſtored to the right Owner who ought to have it, the Words ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt the King, and his Prerogative ſhall not hold Place, nor ſhall he be favoured more than another Perſon. So here the Act was made to reſtore the Common Law in this Point, wherein it was miſuſed, and to reſtore to the Donor that which was due to him, viz. to have his Will obſerved, where it had been violated by the Donees. So that there is a Reſtitution here made to the Donor, viz. of the Obſervance of his Will, which before was broken, in which Caſe, by the Reaſon of the Common Law in like Caſes that happen at the Common Law, the King is not exempted. For he who will maintain it to be reaſonable that the King being Donee ſhall be exempted, and that the Makers of the Act did not intend to bind him, undertakes to prove that the Makers of the Act thought it reaſonable to ſuffer the King to violate the good Intent of him that gave him the Land, and to break his Will, and to exceed the Meaſure limited to him, and ſo to do an Injury. And this cannot be taken to be the Intent of the Makers of the Act, but they meant to reform the Abuſe in all, viz. as well in the King as in others. Wherefore, as it ſeems to me, the King ſhall be included in the Act, and his Eſtate ſhall not be a Fee-ſimple conditional, but a Fee-tail, upon which the Remainder here may well depend. And ſo it muſt have ſeemed to the Juſtices before recited in the Record who took the Fine, viz. Brian, Townſend, Davers, and Vaviſor, who were Men of great Learning; and ſo alſo the Counſellors of the King and of the Marqueſs muſt have been of Opinion. For if the Eſtate of the King ſhould be a Fee-ſimple conditional, it was idle and in vain to limit the Remainder over in Fee, and the ſaid Juſtices would not have taken ſuch a Fine containing Eſtates which could not ſtand together, but they took it that the Eſtate of the King was but an Eſtate-tail, and that the Remainder might depend upon it well enough, and in this Light alſo it appears to me. Wherefore the Lord Berkley now Defendant may enter and avoid the Leaſe, and ſo the Plaintiff ſhall be barred. And afterwards on the Quinzime of St. Martin in the fifth Year of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, the Juſtices, at the Prayer of the Lord Berkley, who had often prayed his Judgment after their Arguments, gave Judgment for him againſt the Plaintiff. For the Lord Dyer and Anthony Brown ſaid, that with Regard to the Matter of Law they continued of the ſame Opinion that they were of at the Time when they argued; and therefore they commanded the Judgment to be entered, which was entered as follows.

And now here at this Day came as well the aforeſaid Henry Willion, as the aforeſaid Henry Berkley and Richard Knight by their Attornies aforeſaid, whereupon the Premiſſes being ſeen and by the Court here more fully underſtood, it ſeems to the Juſtices here that the Replication of the aforeſaid Henry Willion above pleaded is inſufficient in Law to maintain the aforeſaid Henry Willion to have his Action aforeſaid againſt the aforeſaid Henry Berkley and Richard Knight. And the aforeſaid Cyriack by Hugh Charnock his Attorney comes and defends the Force and Injury when, &c. And as to the coming with Force and Arms, he ſays that he is not guilty thereof, and of this he puts himſelf upon the Country, and the aforeſaid Margaret likewiſe. And as to the reſt of the Treſpaſs aforeſaid above ſuppoſed to be done, the ſame Cyriack ſays that the aforeſaid Margaret her Action aforeſaid againſt him ought not to have, becauſe he ſays that the Cloſe aforeſaid, and alſo the Places in which the Treſpaſs aforeſaid is ſuppoſed to be done, are, and at the aforeſaid Time of the Treſpaſs aforeſaid above ſuppoſed to be done were, ſixteen Acres of Land with the Appurtenances called Bentcloſe in Graveney aforeſaid. Which ſaid ſixteen Acres of Land with the Appurtenances are, and at the aforeſaid Time of the Treſpaſs were, the Soil and Freehold of him the ſaid Cyriack, whereby the ſame Cyriack, the ſame Time when, &c. the Cloſe aforeſaid, as the proper Cloſe and Soil and Freehold of him the ſaid Cyriack, in the ſame ſixteen Acres of Land, as in the proper Soil and Freehold of him the ſaid Cyriack, broke, and the Graſs aforeſaid, as the proper Graſs of him the ſaid Cyriack there then growing, with the Cattle aforeſaid eat up, trod down, and conſumed, as it was lawful for him to do; and this he is ready to verify, Wherefore he prays Judgment if the aforeſaid Margaret her Action aforeſaid againſt him ought to have, &c.

And the aforeſaid Margaret ſays, that by any thing before alledged ſhe ought not to be precluded from having her Action aforeſaid, becauſe ſhe ſays that the Cloſe aforeſaid, and alſo the Place in which the Treſpaſs aforeſaid, whereof ſhe above complains, was done, is, and at the aforeſaid Time of the ſaid Treſpaſs above ſuppoſed to be done, was, 200 Acres of Marſh with the Appurtenances lying in Graveney aforeſaid called Graveney Marſh, otherwiſe Cliff Marſh, that is to ſay, to the Lands of the late James Hales Knight deceaſed, and to the Lands of the College of St. John in Oxford towards the Eaſt, and to the Lands of the Lady the Queen towards the North, and to the Lands of the Manor of Graveney towards the Weſt, and to the Lands of one Robert Colwell towards the South and Eaſt, other than the aforeſaid ſixteen Acres of Land with the Appurtenances in Graveney aforeſaid called Bentcloſe in the Bar of the aforeſaid Cyriack ſpecified. And this ſhe is ready to verify, wherefore for that the aforeſaid Cyriack to the Treſpaſs aforeſaid in the aforeſaid 200 Acres of Marſh called Graveney Marſh, otherwiſe Cliff Marſh, of new Aſſignment done, does not anſwer, the ſame Margaret prays Judgment, and her Damages by Occaſion of that Treſpaſs to be adjudged to her, &c.

Queen in the aforeſaid County of the City aforeſaid, upon the View of the Body of the aforeſaid James Hales there lying dead upon the Ground, by the Oath of twelve, &c. it was preſented that the aforeſaid James, not having God before his Eyes, but ſeduced by the Art of the Devil, the ſame fourth Day of Auguſt in the aboveſaid firſt and ſecond Years, at the aforeſaid City of Canterbury in the Pariſh of the bleſſed Mary of Bradne, and in the Ward of Redingate in the ſame City, and in the County of the ſaid City, went out of the Manſion-houſe of him the ſaid James Hales, ſituate and being in the Pariſh and Ward aforeſaid, and in the aforeſaid County of the City aforeſaid, and paſſing through Ways and Streets in the ſame City unto the aforeſaid River or common Water-courſe in the aforeſaid Pariſh of St. Mildred the Virgin, and in the Ward of Worgate in the ſame City, and in the County of the City aforeſaid, voluntarily entered into the ſaid River, and himſelf therein then felonioufly and voluntarily drowned, againſt the Peace of the ſaid late King and Queen, as by the ſame Inquiſition before the aforeſaid Coroner remaining of Record more fully appears. By reaſon of which ſaid Felony of himſelf, and by Force of the aforeſaid Inquiſition before the aforeſaid Coroner taken, the aforeſaid James Hales forfeited to the aforeſaid late King and Queen as well the aforeſaid former Indenture to the aforeſaid John and James, as is aforeſaid, made, and all the Intereſt and Term therein contained, as the aforeſaid Indenture to the aforeſaid James and Margaret, as is aboveſaid, made, and all the Intereſt and Term of Years therein contained. And afterwards the aforeſaid late King and Queen, by their certain Commiſſion ſealed with their Seal of their Exchequer, and iſſuing out of their Court of Exchequer aforeſaid, bearing Date at Weſtminſter the twenty-ſixth Day of October in the aboveſaid firſt and ſecond Years, aſſigned Martin Bowes Knight, William Roper, Chriſtopher Roper, Roger Appleton, Eſquires, and John Bear Gentleman, four, three, or two of them, to enquire by the Oath of good and lawful Men of the aforeſaid County of Kent, as well within Liberties as without, by whom the Truth of the Matter might be better known, amongſt other Things, what and what Kind of Goods, Chattles, as well real as perſonal, or Demiſes whatever, of what Nature, Sort, or Kind ſoever they be, the aforeſaid James ſolely or jointly with any other Perſon or Perſons had in the aforeſaid County of Kent, as well within Liberties as without, at the Time when the ſame James killed and murdered himſelf, and alſo to whoſe Hands and Poſſeſſion the ſame Goods and Chattles and Demiſes aforeſaid after the Death of the ſame James came, or in whoſe Hands they then remained, and of what Value they were. And further the aforeſaid late King and Queen Philip and Mary by the ſame Commiſſion commanded the aforeſaid Martin Bowes, William Roper, Chriſtopher Roper, Roger Appleton, and John Bear, four, three, or two of them, that they ſhould not omit by reaſon of any Liberty of the aforeſaid County of Kent, but into the ſame ſhould enter, and at a certain Day or Days, and Place or Places which they ſhould appoint for that Purpoſe, they or four, three, or two of them ſhould perſonally go and enquire diligently, touching all and ſingular the Premiſſes, and Circumſtances thereof: So that the Inquiſition thereupon before them, four, three, or two of them taken they might have before the Barons of the Exchequer aforeſaid at Weſtminſter on the Morrow of All Souls then next coming, under the Seals of them five, four, three, or two of them, and under the Seals of thoſe by whom it was made, and the Commiſſion aforeſaid. Alſo the aforeſaid late King and Queen Philip and Mary commanded the aforeſaid Martin, William, Chriſtopher, Roger, and John Bear, four, three, or two of them, by the aforeſaid Commiſſion, that all and ſingular the ſame Goods and Chattles and Demiſes, in whoſeſoever Hands or Poſſeſſion they ſhould then be, they ſhould take into the Hands of the ſaid late King and Queen Philip and Mary, and them ſafely keep, ſo that they might anſwer to the ſame late King and Queen for the Goods, Chattles, and Demiſes aforeſaid, and that they five, or four, three, or two of them ſhould make appear to the Barons of the Exchequer aforeſaid, at the Day and Place aforeſaid, what and what Kind of Goods, Chattles and Demiſes they had taken into the Hands of the ſaid late King and Queen Philip and Mary, by reaſon of the Premiſſes, and where, together with the Day of taking the ſame into the Hands of the aforeſaid late King and Queen Philip and Mary. Alſo the aforeſaid late King and Queen Philip and Mary by the aforeſaid Commiſſion commanded the then Sheriff of the aforeſaid County of Kent, that at the Day or Days, and Place or Places, which the aforeſaid Martin, William, Chriſtopher, Roger, and John, or four, three, or two of them, on behalf of the ſame late King and Queen ſhould make known to him, he ſhould cauſe to come before them five, or four, three, or two of them, ſuch and ſo many good and lawful Men of his Bailiwick by whom the Truth of the Matter, touching the Premiſſes, might be better known and enquired, as by the ſame Commiſſion amongſt other Things more fully appears. By virtue of which ſaid Commiſſion the aforeſaid Martin Bowes, William Roper, Chriſtopher Roper, Roger Appleton, and John Bear afterwards, viz. the twenty-ſeventh Day of October in the firſt and ſecond Years aboveſaid, made their Precept in Writing ſealed with their Seals to one Robert Southwel Knight then Sheriff of the aforeſaid County of Kent, commanding the ſame then Sheriff on behalf of the aforeſaid late King and Queen, that he ſhould cauſe to come before them five, or four, three, or two of them, at Deptford in the aforeſaid County of Kent, the thirtieth Day of October then next following, twelve good and lawful Men of the aforeſaid County of Kent, to enquire of and upon all and ſingular the Premiſſes and Circumſtances thereof. At which ſaid thirtieth Day of October, before the aforeſaid William Roper, Chriſtopher Roper, and Roger Appleton at Deptford aforeſaid the aforeſaid Sheriff returned the Precept aforeſaid to him in Form and aforeſaid directed, together with a Panel of all the Jurors to the ſame Precept annexed, in all Things ſerved and executed, whereof certain of them ſo empannelled, and by the aforeſaid Sheriff returned, viz. Thomas Hunt Gentleman, Thomas Hinde, Richard Clerk, Thomas Ward, William Clerk, John Batt, William Audley, John Brodhouſe, Alexander Patenſon, John Simonds, Thomas Ward, and Henry Buckley, twelve, &c. then and there came, and were ſworn before the ſame Commiſſioners, to enquire of and upon the Premiſſes. Which ſaid Jurors being ing ſo charged, then and there ſaid upon their Oath, that the aforeſaid Thomas Archbiſhop of Canterbury aforeſaid, the eighth Day of March in the aboveſaid twenty-ſixth Year of the Reign of the aforeſaid late King Henry the Eighth, by the aforeſaid former Indenture above alledged, and then and there ſhewn to them in Evidence, granted, delivered, and to Farm-let to the aforeſaid John Hales and James Hales the aforeſaid Site and other the Premiſſes aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. (except before excepted, as is aforeſaid), and that the aforeſaid Thomas then Prior of the late Priory of Chriſt's-Church in Canterbury, and the then Chapter of the ſame Church, by their Writing ſealed with their common Seal, bearing Date in their Chapter-houſe the aforeſaid third Day of April in the aboveſaid twenty-ſixth Year of the Reign of the aforeſaid late King Henry the Eighth, and to the Jurors aforeſaid then and there likewiſe ſhewn in Evidence, the aforeſaid Demiſe to the aforeſaid John and James Hales (as is aforeſaid) made, ratified, approved, and confirmed. By virtue of which ſaid Grant, Demiſe, Ratification, and Confirmation, the aforeſaid John Hales and James Hales were of the aforeſaid Site and other the Premiſſes with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. (except as before excepted) poſſeſſed. And the ſaid John Hales and James Hales being ſo thereof poſſeſſed, the ſame John Hales afterwards died, and the aforeſaid James Hales ſurvived him, and held himſelf in the aforeſaid Site and other the Premiſſes with the Appurtences whereof, &c. and was thereof ſole poſſeſſed by Right of Survivorſhip, &c. And the ſaid James Hales being ſo thereof ſole poſſeſſed, the aforeſaid Thomas then Archbiſhop of Canterbury, by the aforeſaid other Indenture ſealed with his Seal, bearing Date the aforeſaid twenty-ſecond Day of April in the aboveſaid fifth Year of the Reign of the aforeſaid late King Edward the Sixth, and to the ſame Jurors then and there likewiſe ſhewn in Evidence, ratified and confirmed to the aforeſaid James Hales the aforeſaid Demiſe to the aforeſaid John Hales and James Hales, as is aforeſaid, made; and by the ſame other Indenture demiſed, granted, and to Farm-let to the aforeſaid James Hales and the aforeſaid Margaret then his Wife, the aforeſaid Site and other the Premiſſes aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. by the aforeſaid former Indenture demiſed (except as before excepted) in Manner and Form as is above alledged. And further the Jurors aforeſaid ſaid upon their Oath, that the whole Right, Title, Intereſt, and Term of Years which the ſame James Hales then had ſolely, by reaſon of the aforeſaid former Indenture, of and in the Premiſſes with the Appurtenances, as is aforeſaid, demiſed, as alſo the aforeſaid other Indenture to the aforeſaid James and Margaret made, and the Demiſe and Intereſt aforeſaid which the ſame James and the aforeſaid Margaret together or jointly had in the aforeſaid Site and other the Premiſſes aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. (except as before excepted) the aforeſaid fourth Day of Auguſt in the firſt and ſecond Years aboveſaid, to the aforeſaid late King and Queen came and ought to come, belong, and appertain by reaſon of the Felony aforeſaid. Alſo the ſame Jurors ſaid, that the aforeſaid James Hales at the Time of his Death was poſſeſſed of ſeven Oxen, one Heifer, one Cow, five Geldings, and one thouſand Sheep and Lambs. And that the aforeſaid two ſeveral Indentures, viz. the aforeſaid former Indenture made to the aforeſaid John Hales and James Hales, and the aforeſaid other Indenture made to the aforeſaid James Hales and Margaret, at the Time of the Inquiſition aforeſaid taken, were in the Hands of one John Webb Gentleman; and that the Oxen, Heifer, Cow, Sheep, and Lambs, at the ſame Time of taking the ſaid Inquiſition were under the Care and Management of the ſaid Cyriack, by the Command of the honourable William Marqueſs of Wincheſter, Treaſurer of England. And that the aforeſaid ſeveral Demiſes, and the aforeſaid Oxen, Geldings, Heifer, Cow, Sheep, and Lambs were then worth 80*l.* in the whole to be ſold, beſides the aforeſaid annual Rent reſerved upon the ſame Demiſes: Which ſaid ſeveral Demiſes, and the aforeſaid Oxen, Geldings, Heifer, Cow, Sheep and Lambs the aforeſaid William Roper, Chriſtopher Roper, and Roger Appleton the laſt Day of October in the firſt and ſecond Years aboveſaid, by virtue of the Commiſſion aforeſaid at Deptford aforeſaid, took into the Hands of the ſaid late King and Queen, according to the Form and Effect of the ſaid Commiſſion. Which ſaid Inquiſition before the aforeſaid Commiſſioners in Form aforeſaid taken, together with the Commiſſion aforeſaid, the aforeſaid William Roper, Chriſtopher Roper, and Roger Appleton, on the aforeſaid Morrow of All Souls, before the Barons aforeſaid in the Exchequer aforeſaid, certified under their Seals, and the Seals of the aforeſaid twelve Jurors by whom the ſame Inquiſition was taken. And the ſame Cyriack further ſays, that by reaſon of the Premiſſes as well the Right, Title, Intereſt, Poſſeſſion, and Term of Years, which the aforeſaid James Hales at the aforeſaid Time of his Death had ſolely of and in the aforeſaid Site and other the Premiſſes with their Appurtenances above in Form aforeſaid demiſed, by virtue of the aforeſaid former Indenture, as the aforeſaid Right, Title, and Intereſt of and in the aforeſaid Site and other the Premiſſes with the Appurtenances, and of and in the aforeſaid other Indenture made to the ſame James and Margaret, which the ſame James and the aforeſaid Margaret together or jointly had in the ſame Premiſſes, by reaſon of the Felony aforeſaid by the aforeſaid James Hales in Form aforeſaid perpetrated and committed, were totally forfeited and loſt to the aforeſaid late King and Queen, and the whole Right and Intereſt of the aforeſaid Margaret of and in the ſame Premiſſes were ended and extinct; by Means whereof all and ſingular the Premiſſes juſtly came and belonged to the Hands and Poſſeſſion of the ſame late King and Queen. By reaſon of which ſaid Premiſſes the aforeſaid late King and Queen were as well of the aforeſaid Site of the Manor aforeſaid and other the Premiſſes with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. in Form aforeſaid above demiſed to the aforeſaid John Hales and James Hales, as of the aforeſaid ſeveral Indentures, poſſeſſed. And the ſame late King and Queen being ſo thereof poſſeſſed, afterwards, viz. the twenty-firſt Day of November in the firſt and ſecond Years aboveſaid, at Weſtminſter in the County of Middleſex, by their Letters-patent ſealed with their great Seal of England (which the ſame Cyriack here produces in Court, the Date whereof is the ſame Day and Year) by the Advice of their well beloved Couſin and Counſellor William Marqueſs of Wincheſter, Treaſurer of England, as well well for the Sum of 80 l. of lawful Money of England at the Receipt of their Exchequer at Weſtminſter to the Uſe of the ſame late King and Queen then paid by the ſaid Cyriack and the aforeſaid John Webb, by the Names of their beloved and faithful Subjects Cyriack Petit Eſquire, and John Webb Gentleman, as for divers other Cauſes and Conſiderations the ſaid late King and Queen then ſpecially moving, gave, granted, and aſſigned to the ſame Cyriack, and to the aforeſaid John Webb, amongſt other Things, as well the aforeſaid Indenture made to the aforeſaid John Hales and James Hales, as is aforeſaid, and the aforeſaid Indenture in Form aforeſaid made to the ſaid James Hales and Margaret then his Wife, as the whole Right, Eſtate, Title, Term and Terms of Years, and Intereſt of them the ſaid late King and Queen, which the ſame late King and Queen then had or ought to have the aforeſaid fourth Day of Auguſt, or at any Time after had or ought to have, by Reaſon of the Premiſſes or any of them, of and in the ſame ſeveral Indentures, and of and in the aforeſaid Site of the Manor aforeſaid, and all and ſingular other the Premiſſes with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. (except as before excepted) to have, hold, and enjoy the aforeſaid two ſeveral Indentures, and all the aforeſaid Right, Title, Eſtate, Term and Terms of Years, and Intereſt aforeſaid, amongſt other Things, to the ſame Cyriack and the aforeſaid John Webb, their Executors and Aſſigns, from the aforeſaid fourth Day of Auguſt in the firſt and ſecond Years aboveſaid, during all the Reſidue of the Term, and during the Reſidue of the ſeveral Terms of Years in the ſame ſeveral Indentures and in both of them expreſſed and ſpecified, as fully, freely, and entirely, and in as ample Manner and Form, as all and ſingular the ſaid Premiſſes to the Hands of the ſaid late King and Queen by Reaſon or Force of the Felony aforeſaid, or by any other Right, Title, or Means came or ought to come, and as the ſame then were or ought to be in the Hands of the ſaid late King and Queen, as by the ſame Letters patent amongſt other Things more fully appears. By Reaſon of which ſaid Letters-patent the ſame Cyriack and the aforeſaid John Webb were poſſeſſed as well of the aforeſaid ſeveral Indentures, as of the aforeſaid Site and other the Premiſſes aforeſaid with the Appurtenances whereof, &c. (except as before excepted). And the ſaid Cyriack and John Webb being ſo thereof poſſeſſed, the aforeſaid John Webb afterwards and before the aforeſaid Time when &c. viz. the firſt Day of January in the third and fourth Years of the Reign of the aforeſaid late King and Queen Philip and Mary, at London in the Pariſh of St. Ellen within Biſhopſgate in the Ward of Biſhopſgate, died, and the ſame Cyriack ſurvived him, and held himſelf in the aforeſaid 200 Acres of Marſh with the Appurtenances newly aſſigned, amongſt other Things, and was and yet is thereof ſole poſſeſſed by Right of Survivorſhip, &c. by Reaſon of the Premiſſes; and the aforeſaid Margaret claiming the aforeſaid 200 Acres of Marſh with the Appurtenances newly aſſigned after the Death of the aforeſaid James by Right of Survivorſhip, &c. by Colour of the aforeſaid other Indenture to the aforeſaid James and the ſame Margaret in Form aforeſaid made (where nothing of the ſame 200 Acres of Marſh newly aſſigned by reaſon of the Felony aforeſaid by the ſaid James in Form aforeſaid committed, and of the aforeſaid Forfeiture thereon, ever paſſed by the ſaid Indenture into the Poſſeſſion of the aforeſaid Margaret after the Death of the aforeſaid James) into the aforeſaid 200 Acres of Marſh newly aſſigned with the Appurtenances before the aforeſaid Time when, &c. upon the Poſſeſſion of the ſaid Cyriack entered, upon the Poſſeſſion of which ſaid Margaret thereof the ſame Cyriack afterwards, viz. the ſame Time when, &c. into the aforeſaid 200 Acres of Marſh newly aſſigned with the Appurtenances re-entered, and the Cloſe aforeſaid in the ſame broke, and the Graſs aforeſaid there then growing with the Cattle aforeſaid eat up, trod down, and conſumed, as it was lawful for him to do; with this that the ſame Cyriack will aver that the aforeſaid 200 Acres of Marſh newly aſſigned with the Appurtenances are not parcel of the Tenements aforeſaid in the aforeſaid former Indenture, or in the aforeſaid other Indenture excepted: And this he is ready to verify, wherefore he prays Judgment if the aforeſaid Margaret her Action aforeſaid againſt him ought to have, &c.

Colour.

And the aforeſaid Margaret ſays that the aforeſaid Plea of the aforeſaid Cyriack above pleaded in Bar of the new Aſſignment aforeſaid is inſufficient in Law to preclude her the ſaid Margaret from having her Action aforeſaid againſt the ſame Cyriack, and that ſhe has no Neceſſity, nor is by the Law of the Land bound to anſwer that Plea in Manner and Form aforeſaid pleaded. And this ſhe is ready to verify, wherefore for Want of a ſufficient Anſwer in this Behalf, the ſame Margaret prays Judgment, and her Damages by Occaſion of the Treſpaſs aforeſaid to be adjudged to her &c.

Plaintiff demurs.

And the aforeſaid Cyriack, for that he has above alledged ſufficient Matter in Law to preclude the aforeſaid Margaret from having her Action aforeſaid againſt him, which he is ready to verify, which ſaid Matter the aforeſaid Margaret does not deny, nor thereunto in any wiſe anſwer, but the ſaid Averment wholly refuſes to admit, as before prays Judgment, and that the aforeſaid Margaret may be precluded from having her Action aforeſaid againſt him, &c. And becauſe the the Juſtices here will adviſe of and upon the Premiſſes before they give Judgment thereon, Day is given to the Parties aforeſaid here until the Octave of St. Michael to hear their Judgment thereon, becauſe the ſame Juſtices here thereof not yet, &c.

THE CASE.

Husband and Wife being Jointenants of a Term for Years, the Husband becomes felo de ſe, and the Wife is in by Survivor, yet upon Office found the King ſhall have the whole Term. S. C. S. It appears by the above Record that Lady Margaret Hales has brought a Writ of Treſpaſs againſt Cyriack Petit for a Treſpaſs done the 21ſt Day of November in the 2d Year of the Reign of the preſent Queen, at Graveney in the County of Kent, and upon new Aſſignment aſſigns the Treſpaſs certainly, viz. in 200 Acres of Marſh called Graveney Marſh. The Defendant pleads in Bar that Thomas Archbiſhop of Canterbury was ſeized of the ſaid Marſh in his Demeſn as of Fee, in Right of his Archbiſhopric. And being ſo ſeized, he the 8th Day of March Anno 26. H. 8. leaſed the ſame by Indenture to John Hales, and to Sir James Hales late Huſband of the Plaintiff for the Term of 20 Years next enſuing the Feaſt of St. Michael the Archangel which ſhould be in the Year of our Lord 1540, which was confirmed by the Prior of Chriſt's-Church in Canterbury, and by the Chapter of the ſame Church; and they entered after the ſaid Feaſt of St. Michael, and John Hales died, and Sir James had the whole Leaſe by Survivorſhip. And he being ſo poſſeſſed, the ſaid Archbiſhop the 22d Day of April Anno 5. Edw. 6. by his Indenture reciting the ſaid Leaſe, ratified and confirmed it; and further by the ſame Indenture leaſed the ſame Marſh to the ſaid Sir James and to the ſaid Margaret then his Wife, to have and to hold to them from the Feaſt of St. Michael which ſhould be in the Year of our Lord 1560, unto the End of 12 Years thence next enſuing. And they by virtue thereof being poſſeſſed, and the ſaid Sir James being alſo poſſeſſed of the Premiſſes by Force of the firſt Indenture, the ſaid Sir James Hales the 4th Day of Auguſt Anno 1 & 2 Philip and Mary, feloniouſly and voluntarily drowned himſelf in a River in the Pariſh of St. Mildred in the County of the City of Canterbury. And he ſhews alſo that the ſame Day all this Matter was found accordingly before the Coroner upon the View of the Body there lying dead. And afterwards by virtue of a Commiſſion out of the Exchequer directed to Sir Martin Bowes Knight and others, to enquire what Goods, Chattles, and Leaſes the ſaid Sir James had ſolely or jointly with others in the County of Kent at the ſame Time that he killed and murdered himſelf, the 30th Day of October in the ſaid 1 & 2 Years of Philip and Mary an Inqueſt found the ſaid Leaſes and Intereſts, and alſo found that the ſaid Title, Intereſt, and Term of Years which the ſaid Sir James had ſolely by the firſt Leaſe, and alſo the Leaſe and Intereſt which the ſaid Sir James and Margaret had by the ſecond Leaſe, the ſaid 4th Day of Auguſt came and ought to come to the ſaid late King and Queen by Reaſon of the Felony aforeſaid; and the ſaid Office was accordingly returned into the Exchequer, by Force whereof both the Leaſes and Intereſts were forfeited to the ſaid King and Queen, and came to their Hands, and they the 21ſt Day of November in the ſaid 1 & 2 Years of Philip and Mary by their Letters-patent granted their Eſtates in them to the Defendant, and to one John Webb, who afterwards died; and the ſaid Plaintiff claiming the ſaid Marſh as Survivor to her ſaid Huſband entered upon the Poſſeſſion of the Defendant, and the Defendant at the ſame Time of the Treſpaſs ſuppoſed to be done re-entered into the ſaid Marſh, and did the Treſpaſs, &c. And upon this the Plaintiff has demurred.

Mich. Term 4 & 5. Eliz. — For the Plaintiff.

And Southcote and Puttrel Serjeants argued on the Part of the Plaintiff. And they ſaid that the Bar was not good, and that it does not diſcloſe ſufficient Matter to deveſt the Term out of the Plaintiff, and to put it in the King and Queen. For firſt, the Bar conveys the Term of 12 Years to the Plaintiff and to her Huſband jointly, and it has ſhewn the Death of the Huſband, which gives the Wife Title to have the whole Term as Survivor, and the Cauſe that ſeems to interrupt this Title (if there be any) is, for that the Huſband drowned himſelf, and ſo was a felo de ſe. But this Cauſe ſhall not take away her Title of Survivorſhip, for in this Manner of Felony two Things are to be conſidered. Firſt, the Cauſe of the Death; ſecondly, the Death enſuing the Cauſe, and theſe two make the Felony, and without both of them firſt done the Felony is not conſummate. And the Cauſe of the Death is the Act done in the Party's Lifetime, which makes the Death to follow. And the Act which brought on the Death here was the throwing himſelf voluntarily into the Water, for this was the Cauſe of his Death. And if a Man kills himſelf by a Wound which he gives himſelf with a Knife, or if he hangs himſelf, as the Wound or the Hanging, which is the Act done in the Party's Lifetime, is the Cauſe of his Death, ſo is the throwing himſelf into the Water here. And this Act which he has done to himſelf is to be conſidered in the ſame Light as if he had done it to another, and if he had given another a mortal Wound whereof he afterwards died, there altho' the Wound was the Cauſe of the Death, yet it ſhould not have Relation, as to the Forfeiture of his Goods, to the Time of the Wound given, for if he had given his Goods to another after the Wound, and before the Death, the Gift ſhould have been good. [a] And in 11. H. 4. one that had given a mortal Wound to another was arreſted by two Conſtables, and afterwards they voluntarily let him eſcape, and after that the Party wounded died, and there by the better Opinion this is not Felony in the Conſtables, for the Death has not Relation to the Cauſe of it, nor was he that gave the Wound a Felon before the Party wounded died. So here the Death has not Relation to the Cauſe of it, but for the Forfeiture it has Relation to the Death itſelf, and when the Death comes, then he ſhall be adjudged a Felon. And foraſmuch as he cannot be attainted of his own Death, becauſe he is dead before there is any Time to attaint him, the finding of his Death by the Coroner, or other Perſon authoriſed, is by Neceſſity of Law equivalent to an Attainder in Fact coming after his Death, as to his Goods. And therefore the King ſhall have all his Goods which ſhould have come to his Executors, or which he might have deviſed to another, if he had been a Perſon able, and had not done ſuch Act, and becauſe the King ſhall have them, the Party cannot [b] make his Executors, nor a Teſtament, where he is a felo de ſe. But the King ſhall have no more than the felo de ſe has in his own Right, or which ſhould have come to his Executors if he had not been a felo de ſe. For his Forfeiture ſhall only have Relation to the Time of the Death, and the Death precedes the Forfeiture, for until the Death is fully conſummate he is not a felo de ſe, for if he had killed another, he ſhould not have been a Felon until the other had been dead. And for the ſame Reaſon he cannot be a felo de ſe until the Death of himſelf be fully had and conſummate. For the Death precedes the Felony both in the one Caſe and in the other, and the Death precedes the Forfeiture. But nevertheleſs the Forfeiture comes at the ſame Inſtant that he dies, yet in Things of an Inſtant there is a Priority of Time in Conſideration of Law, and the one ſhall be ſaid to precede the other, altho' both ſhall be ſaid to happen at one Inſtant, [c] for every Inſtant contains the End of one Time, and the Commencement of another. And accordingly here the Death and the Forfeiture ſhall come together, and at one ſame Time, and yet there is a Priority, that is, the End of his Life makes the

the Commencement of the Forfeiture, tho' at the ſame Time the Forfeiture is ſo near to the Death that there is no mean Time between them, yet notwithſtanding that, in Conſideration of Law the one precedes the other, but by no Means has the Forfeiture Relation to any Time in his Life. Then here, if the Forfeiture has not Relation to any Time in the Life of Sir James Hales, but to the Time of his Death, (and to that only it has Relation) from thence it follows that every one who makes Title to his Goods or Chattles, which Title is accrued ſince his Death, whether he be Legatee, Executor, Adminiſtrator, or Ordinary, or other Perſon whatſoever, he comes too late to make it, for the Title of the King and Queen ſhall be adjudged in Law paramount it, which is the Reaſon that he cannot make Executors or a Teſtament of them, nor ſhall the Ordinary have them; and alſo from thence it follows that every one who can make Title to the Goods or Chattles which belonged to him, or were in his Poſſeſſion, which Title is elder than his Death, ſhall avoid the Title of the King and Queen. Then here, when Sir James Hales and his Wife were Jointenants of the Leaſe for 12 Years, there was no † Moities between them, but each of them took the whole. So that the Wife took the whole, and her Title to it was before the Death of her Huſband, viz. in his Life time, for ſhe claims by the firſt [a] Leſſor, and not by her Huſband. [b] And if the Huſband charges the Land, after his Death ſhe ſhall avoid it, as it is taken in 7. H. 6. for ſhe is remitted to the Term, and is upon Title paramount the Charge. [c] As if a Man aliens Trees growing in his Land which he has in Tail, [d] or in his Land which he has in Right of his Wife, and dies before they are cut down, the Alienee ſhall not cut them down, as Southcote ſaid, for the Iſſue in Tail is in upon Title paramount the Alienation, viz. by the Donor, and ſo is the Wife. [e] So, he ſaid, by 14. H. 4. the Lord ſhall take the Ward, who is an Apprentice, out of the Poſſeſſion of his Maſter, becauſe his Title to his Body accrues in reſpect of the Seigniory, which is more ancient than the Apprenticeſhip. In like Manner here the Plaintiff's Title to the Leaſe is by the firſt Leſſor, and ſhe claims no more than that which ſhe had in the Life of her Huſband; ſo that her Title is paramount the Death of her Huſband, and the Title of the King and Queen is paravail his Death, and therefore too late. But perhaps it may be objected, that as the whole Term without Moities was in the Wife in the Life of her Huſband, ſo was the whole Term without Moieties in the Huſband during his Life, and until the Death was conſummate, and then when after his Death the Title of the Wife to have the whole by Survivorſhip came, and the Title of the King and Queen to have the whole which the Huſband had, came alſo at the ſame Time, then the Title of the King, which comes all at one Time with the Title of another at an Inſtant, ſhall be preferred; Sir, as to this, it appears in 49. Ed. 3. [f] that the King's Tenant in London, who held of him in Burgage, deviſed the Land to his Wife for Life, and died without Heir; there it ſeems by the Book that the Deviſe is good, and yet the Deviſe did not take Effect but after the Death of the Deviſor, and then the Title by Eſcheat came to the King, ſo that the Title of the Wife by Demiſe, and of the King by Eſcheat came together at the ſame Inſtant, and yet the Wife was preferred, which is in reſpect that the Deviſe was made in the Life of the Tenant, altho' it took Effect after his Death; wherefore ſeeing that ſome Part of the Title of the Wife commenced in the Life of the Deviſor, it ſhall be adjudged eigne to the Title of the King; and this Caſe was put by Puttrel. A fortiore, he ſaid, is it in our Caſe, for the Title of the Wife now Plaintiff was altogether in the Life of the Huſband, and therefore ſhall be more eigne than the Title of the King and Queen. [g] And in 7 & 8. Ed. 4. an Obligation was made to two, and one of them became a felo de ſe, and by the better Opinion the Survivor ſhall ſue the Obligation, and not the King. The ſame Reaſon is there in our Caſe why the Wife ſhall have the Term, and Survivorſhip holds Place as much in this as in the other Caſe. Wherefore it ſeemed to them that the Term of 12 Years never came to King Philip and Queen Mary, and that their Grant of it to the Defendant and Webb was void. And as to the finding of the Jurors that the Term of 12 Years came and ought to come to the King and Queen by Reaſon of the ſaid Felony, to this Southcote ſaid [h] that their ſaying does not bind the Party, if the Law be otherwiſe, quod Curia conceſſit, for they are not Judges to adjudge Matter of Law, but Jurors to find the Matter of Fact. Wherefore it ſeemed to the ſaid Southcote and Puttrel that the Plaintiff ſhould recover.

On the contrary it was argued by Walſh, Cholmley, Bendloe, and Carus Serjeants, that the Forfeiture of the Goods and Chattles real and perſonal ſhall have Relation to the [i] Act done in the Party's Lifetime, which was the Cauſe of his Death; and upon this the Parts of the Act are to be conſidered. [k] And Walſh ſaid that the Act conſiſts of three Parts. The firſt is the Imagination, which is a Reflection or Meditation of the Mind, whether or no it is convenient for him to deſtroy himſelf, and what Way it can be done. The ſecond is the Reſolution, which is a Determination of the Mind to deſtroy himſelf, and to do it in this or that particular Way. The third is the Perfection, which is the Execution of what the Mind has reſolved to do. And this Perfection conſiſts of two Parts, viz. the Beginning and the End. The Beginning is the doing of the Act which cauſes the Death, and the End is the Death, which is only a Sequel to the Act. And of all the Parts the doing of the Act is the greateſt in the Judgment of our Law, and it is in Effect the whole, and the only Part that the Law looks upon to be material. For the Imagination of the Mind to do Wrong, without an Act done, is not puniſhable in our Law, neither is the Reſolution to do that Wrong, which he does not, puniſhable, but the doing of the Act is the only Point which the Law regards; for until the Act is done, it cannot be an Offence to the World, and when the Act is done it is puniſhable. Then here the Act done by Sir James Hales, which is evil and the Cauſe of his Death, is the throwing himſelf into the Water, and the Death is but a Sequel thereof, and this evil Act ought ſome Way to be puniſhed. And if the Forfeiture ſhall not have Relation to the doing of the Act, then the Act ſhall not be puniſhed at all, for inaſmuch as the Perſon who did the Act is dead, his Perſon cannot be puniſhed, and therefore there is no

Way elſe to puniſh him but by the Forfeiture of thoſe Things which were his own at the Time of the Act done, and the Act was done in his Lifetime, and therefore the Forfeiture ſhall have Relation to his Lifetime, viz. to that Time of his Life in which he did the Act that took away his Life. And Bendloe ſaid, if the Forfeiture ſhall only have Relation to the Death, and the Death be taken to precede the Forfeiture, then he ſhall forfeit nothing; for when he is dead the Goods are not his own, for a dead Man can have no Property, and ſuch Forfeiture would be a Prejudice to others who ought to have the Goods then, and not to the Party himſelf; for which Reaſon it is inconſiſtent to ſay that his Act ſhall forfeit the Goods which are not his own, but it is more fit to ſay that his evil Act ſhall forfeit the Things which are his own, and that cannot be unleſs the Forfeiture ſhall have Relation to that Time of his Life when the Offence was committed, and when the Goods were his own. [a] And in every Act, as Walſh ſaid, the Law has Reſpect to the Beginning; [b] and therefore, he ſaid, in 22. Ed. 3. a Lunatic wounded himſelf mortally with a Knife, and afterwards he became of ſound Mind, and had the Rights of Holy Church, and after died of the ſaid Wound, and his Chattles were not forfeited; for the Law has Reſpect to the Beginning, and when he gave himſelf the Wound he was out of his Senſes, in which Caſe the killing of another ſhould not be adjudged Felony in him, nor ſhould he die for it, and by the ſame Reaſon he ſhall not be a Felon for killing himſelf, and yet when he died he was of ſound Mind, but the Law does not ſo much reſpect the Condition he was in when he died, as the Condition he was in when he did the Act which was the Cauſe of his Death. [c] So he cited the Caſe in 33. Aſs. pl. 7. where a Servant, a Year after he was out of his Service, killed his Maſter upon Malice which he had conceived againſt him when he was his Servant, and this Offence was adjudged Treaſon, and he had Judgment accordingly; and yet he was not his Servant when he killed him, but the Law has Regard to the Beginning and the Cauſe of killing him. So here the throwing himſelf into the Water is the Beginning and the Cauſe of the Death, which ought to be puniſhed for an Example to others, and foraſmuch as his Body cannot be puniſhed, the Puniſhment ought to be by his Goods, for the Puniſhment of this Felony varies from the Puniſhment of other Felonies. For Felonies done to others may be puniſhed in the Life of the Offenders by Indictment, Arraignment, Judgment, and Execution, in which Caſe the Offenders ſhall forfeit their Goods, Chattles, and Lands, and ſhall be put to Death beſides; but in this Offence, altho' for Example to others it deſerves as great Puniſhment as any other Felony does, yet the Offender himſelf has prevented a great Part of the Puniſhment, viz. the Death, and the Forfeiture of his Land. [d] For the Law has ſo great Regard to the Inheritance, that it ſhall not eſcheat without an Attainder in Fact, which cannot be here any more than Execution by Death, becauſe the Party has killed himſelf before, ſo that he cannot be brought to Arraignment, by Reaſon of his own Act, and therefore no Judgment can be given againſt him. So that there is no other Means to make him forfeit that which he ought to forfeit, viz. his Goods and Chattles, but by Inquiry and finding of it by the Oath of 12 Men before the Coroner, or other Perſon aſſigned, which Inquiry and Finding ought in all Reaſon to be equivalent, as to the Things that ſhall be forfeited, to a Judgment given upon Arraignment, if the Party had killed another Perſon, in which Caſe the Judgment is given in his Life time, and by the like Reaſon this Inquiry and Finding ſhall be equivalent to a Judgment given in his Lifetime, inaſmuch as his own Act is the Cauſe why Judgment could not be given againſt him in his Life time. And ſo in other Caſes when Judgment by Law cannot be given, the Law ſupplies it by other Means. [e] And hereupon Bendloe put the Caſe, that if the Defendant in an Appeal wages Battle, and the Appellor kills him, the Appellee ſhall forfeit his Goods and Chattles, and his Lands ſhall eſcheat, for Judgment cannot be given againſt him becauſe he is killed, and therefore the Law ſays that this killing is equivalent to a Judgment and Execution. [f] And upon this Walſh and Carus alſo cited the Caſe in 3. Ed. 3. Itinere North. where it appears that one who had taken Sanctuary in a Church was out in the Night, and the Town purſued him, and the Felon defended himſelf with Clubs and Stones, and would not render himſelf to the King's Peace, and one ſtruck off his Head, and the Goods of the Perſon killed were forfeited, for he could not be arraigned, becauſe he was killed by his own Fault, for which Reaſon upon the Truth of the Matter found his Goods were forfeited, and the King had Year, Day, and Waſt. Wherefore when the Party, againſt whom Judgment ought to be given, is the Cauſe why Judgment cannot be given againſt him, an Inquiry of 12 Men ſhall be equivalent to it. So here this Inquiry before the Coroner ſuper viſum corporis, and the Inquiry of the Certainty of the Leaſe before the Commiſſioners, is equivalent, as to the Forfeiture of the Goods, to a Judgment given againſt him in his Lifetime, and to an Inquiry then had. And if the Forfeiture here has Relation to the Act which was the Cauſe of the Death, viz. to the throwing himſelf into the Water, then all the Goods and Chattles as well real as perſonal, which belonged to Sir James Hales at that Time, are forfeited. [g] As if my Horſe (as Carus ſaid) ſtrikes a Man, and afterwards I ſell my Horſe, and after that the Man dies, the Horſe ſhall be forfeited. [h] So, he ſaid, if a Villain voluntarily gives himſelf a Wound, and afterwards the Lord of the Villain ſeizes his Goods, and after that the Villain dies, and the Coroner finds the Matter as it is, the King ſhall have the Goods out of the Poſſeſſion of the Lord, becauſe the Forfeiture has Relation to the Wound given. And as it is of perſonal Things which were the Party's own, ſo, he ſaid, it ſhall be here with Regard to this Leaſe; for as an actual Gift [i] of this Leaſe made by Sir James Hales to another in his Life time ſhould have taken away the Right of the Wife now Plaintiff, ſo a Forfeiture made by Sir James in his Life time ſhould have taken it away, as if he had been outlawed or attainted in his Life time, for this is a Gift in Law of the Term. And as an Outlawry or Attainder in his Life time ſhould have taken away the Right of the Wife to the Term, ſo the Title to the Term which is given to the King by the Act done by Sir James in his Life time, and by the Inquiry

Inquiry afterwards, which has Relation to the Act, ſhall take away the Right of the Wife, and ſhe ſhall not be remitted in the mean time to deſtroy that Title. For if Title is once given to the King, nullum tempus occurrit Regi, ſo that if the King has once a Title, it remains for ever. [a] And upon this Walſh put the Caſe in 50 Aſſ. where Huſband and Wife had a joint Eſtate for thirty Years in certain Land, and the Huſband died, and the Wife held herſelf in, and it was found by Office that the Huſband had received certain Money of Sir Hugh Spencer who was attainted, whereby the Money belonged to the King, and the ſaid Leaſe was found ut ſupra, out of which Office a Scire facias iſſued againſt the ſaid Wife; and it was adjudged that the King ſhould have the Term in Execution, for if this had been found in the Huſband's Liſetime, the King ſhould have had Execution of the Term in the Life of the Huſband, and now this Title found by Office ſhall have Relation to the Life of the Huſband, and as he ſhould have had the Term in Execution in the Huſband's Life, ſo ſhall he have it now, quia nullum tempus occurrit Regi. So is it in the Caſe here. For which Reaſons it ſeemed to them that the Forfeiture has Relation to the Act done in the Life of the Huſband, viz. the throwing himſelf into the Water, and that this ſhall take away the Term from the Wife now Plaintiff, and conſequently that ſhe ſhall be barred.

And afterwards this ſame Term the Juſtices argued, viz. Weſton, Anthony Brown, and the Lord Dyer. But I only heard the Lord Dyer, and therefore what I ſay concerning the other two, I deliver only upon credible Report. And all the Juſtices argued that the Forfeiture of the Goods and Chattles real and perſonal ſhall have Relation to the Act done by Sir James Hales in his Lifetime, which was the Cauſe of his Death, viz. [b] the throwing himſelf into the Water. And upon this the Lord Dyer ſaid that five Things are to be conſidered in this Caſe. Firſt, the Quality of the Offence of Sir James Hales; ſecondly, to whom the Offence is committed; thirdly, what he ſhall forfeit; fourthly, from what Time the Forfeiture ſhall commence; and fifthly, if the Term here ſhall be taken from the Wife. And as to the Quality of the Offence which Sir James has here committed, he ſaid, it is in a Degree of Murder, and not of Homicide or Manſlaughter, for Homicide is the killing a Man felonioufly without Malice prepenſe, [c] but Murder is the killing a Man with Malice perpenſe. And here the killing of himſelf was prepenſed and reſolved in his Mind before the Act was done. And alſo it agrees in another Point with the ancient Definition of Murder, viz. [d] that murdrum eſt occulta hominum occiſio, nullo præſente, nullo ſciente; ſo that always he who determines to kill himſelf, determines by the Inſtigation of the Devil to do it ſecretly, nullo præſente, nullo ſciente, leſt he ſhould elſe be prevented from doing it. Wherefore the Quality of the Offence is Murder.

1 Point. The Quality of the Offence of a felo de ſe.

[c] S. P. C. 18. b.

[d] Bract. 134. b. Britt. cap. 6. S. P. C. 12. e. 17. e.

As to the ſecond Point, it is an Offence againſt Nature, againſt God, and againſt the King. Againſt Nature, becauſe it is contrary to the Rules of Self-preſervation, which is the Principle of Nature, for every thing living does by Inſtinct of Nature defend itſelf from Deſtruction, and and then to deſtroy one's ſelf is contrary to Nature, and a Thing moſt horrible. Againſt God, in that it is a Breach of his Commandment, thou ſhalt not kill; and to kill himſelf, by which Act he kills in Preſumption his own Soul, is a greater Offence than to kill another. Againſt the King, in that hereby he has loſt a Subject, and (as Brown termed it) he being the Head has loſt one of his myſtical Members. Alſo he has offended the King, in giving ſuch an Example to his Subjects, and it belongs to the King, who has the Government of the People, to take Care that no evil Example be given them, and an evil Example is an Offence againſt him.

2 Point. Againſt whom the Offence is committed.

As to the third Point, what he ſhall forfeit. It was agreed by all the Juſtices, that he ſhall forfeit all his [e] Goods, Debts, and Chattles, real and perſonal, by reaſon of the Offence aforeſaid. For Brown ſaid, the Reaſon why the King ſhall have the Goods and Chattles of a felo de ſe, and that he cannot make [f] his Executors of them, is not becauſe he is out of [g] holy Church, ſo that for that Reaſon the Biſhop will not meddle with them, and therefore the King ſhall have them as Goods with which no other will meddle, [h] but the King ſhall have them as forfeited to him for the ſaid Offence, viz. for the Loſs of his Subject, and for the Breach of his Peace, and for the evil Example given to his People, and not in reſpect that holy Church will not meddle with them, for he is adjudged none of the Members of holy Church. And if this ſhould be the Reaſon, then, (he ſaid) put the Caſe [i] that a Man voluntarily gives himſelf a mortal Wound, and afterwards he repents, and is reconciled to holy Church, and has the Rights of holy Church, and after that dies, now the ſaid Reaſon that he is out of holy Church will not hold Place, but yet notwithſtanding holy Church ſuppoſes him capable of making his Executors, will any one ſay that the King ſhall not have all his Goods? Certainly he ſhall, and the Biſhop ſhall not have them, nor can the Party make his Executors, or have Adminiſtrators, for he cannot have Executors or Adminiſtrators where he has nothing to leave, and all the Goods that he had are the King's, and forfeited to him for the Cauſe aforeſaid. But all the Juſtices agreed [k] that he ſhall not forfeit his Land, [l] nor the Wife her Dower, [m] nor ſhall the Blood be corrupted, for the Eſcheat of the Land, the Loſs of the Wife's Dower, and the Corruption of the Blood cannot be without an Attainder in Deed. And therefore Weſton ſaid, that in an Appeal if the Appellee wages Battle, and the Appellor kills him, the Appellee ſhall forfeit all his Goods and Chattles, but his

Lands ſhall not eſcheat, for the Inheritance is ſo greatly favoured that it ſhall not be forfeited without an expreſs Attainder by Judgment; but if the Appellor overcomes the Appellee, then his Land ſhall be forfeited, for when he is overcome and not killed, * Judgment ſhall afterwards be given againſt him that he ſhall be hanged, and therefore in that Caſe his Land ſhall eſcheat, but not in the other Caſe, becauſe no Judgment is given; but Brown denied this Opinion, for he ſaid, † when the Appellee is killed, this is the Trial and End of the Matter in this Point, and foraſmuch as the Matter is ended by a Trial conſonant to Law, this is ſufficient to convict him of the Fact imputed to him, and to attaint him, in which Caſe his Land ſhall eſcheat. [a] For in 8. Ed. 3. a Woman brought a Writ of Dower, and the Tenant ſaid that her Huſband went into Scotland, and there adhered to the King's Enemies, and came into this Realm with the King's Enemies, and afterwards died in Scotland, and it ſeems a good Bar by [b] Averment, for other Law could not be had againſt him. [c] For if a Man is ſlain in the Field in War againſt the King, this is an Attainder in Law without any thing further, by the ancient Law of the Land, for he himſelf is the Cauſe why the Courſe of Law could not proceed againſt him. But Dyer denied the Law to be with Brown in the Caſe of an Appeal, for he ſaid there are but three [d] Writs of Eſcheat concerning Attainders for Felony, one is, pro qua ſuſpenſus eſt, another, pro qua abjuravit regnum, the third, pro qua utlagatus eſt, and this Caſe is none of them. [e] And if there be no Writ in the Regiſter in ſuch Caſe, it is a good Cauſe to ſay that the Land ſhall not eſcheat therein. But in our principal Caſe they agreed ut ſupra, that his Goods, Debts, and Chattles real and perſonal ſhall be forfeited for killing himſelf, but that the Land ſhall not eſcheat, nor is Wife forfeit her Dower, nor the Blood be corrupted between him and his Heirs.

4 Point. To what Time the Forfeiture ſhall have Relation.

As to the fourth Point, viz. to what Time the Forfeiture ſhall have Relation; they ſaid that the Forfeiture here ſhall have Relation to the Time of the original Offence committed which was the Cauſe of the Death, and that was the [f] throwing himſelf into the Water, which was done in his Lifetime, and this Act was Felony. And the Indictment ſays, and may ſay, that he feloniouſly threw himſelf into the Water; for that which cauſed the Death may be ſaid to be feloniouſly done. And therefore if one ſtrikes another, ſo that afterwards he dies of it, the Indictment ought to ſay that he ſtruck him feloniouſly. So that the Felony is attributed to the Act, which Act is always done by a living Man, and in his Lifetime, as Brown ſaid; for, he ſaid, Sir James Hales was dead, and how came he to his Death? It may be anſwered, by drowning; and who drowned him? Sir James Hales; and when did he drown him? In his Lifetime. So that Sir James Hales being alive cauſed Sir James Hales to die; and the Act of the living Man was the Death of the dead Man. And then for this Offence it is reaſonable to puniſh the living Man who committed the Offence, and not the dead Man. But how can he be ſaid to be puniſhed alive when the Puniſhment comes after his Death? Sir, this can be done no other Way but by deveſting out of him, from the Time of the Act done in his Life which was the Cauſe of his Death, the Title and Property of thoſe Things which he had in his Lifetime. As if a Man gives himſelf a mortal Wound, the Property of his Goods, Debts, and Chattles continues in him ſtill, but that is only conditionally, for if he dies within the Year, the whole is veſted in the King by the very Act done in his Lifetime; ſo that the Act reſtrains him from meddling with them afterwards, which is as great a Puniſhment to him for the Offence whilſt he is alive, as it reaſonably can be before the Death is conſummate. Wherefore in that the Law ordains that after his Death the Goods and Chattles, which were his own at the Time of the Act done which cauſed the Death, ſhall not be his own, but ſhall belong to the King, therein it puniſhes him whilſt he lives, by depriving him of the Power of diſpoſing of the Property of his Goods as long as he lives after the Act done, if the Death enſues within a Year after. So that by this Relation of the Forfeiture which has a Retroſpect to the Act done, the Law inflicts a Puniſhment upon the living Man for the Act done in his Lifetime, which was the Cauſe of his Death afterwards. And this is more reaſonable than it is for the Forfeiture to have relation only to the Time of his Death, for to give the Property of the Goods to the King, and to take them from thoſe who ought to have them at his Death, is no Puniſhment to the Party, for he is dead before. But it is moſt reaſonable to refer the Forfeiture to his Lifetime, that is, to ſuch Time of his Life wherein the Act, which cauſed the Death, was done, and to adjudge him a Felon from thenceforth, eſpecially when it is conſidered that by the Act he has prevented and eſcaped the actual Judgment which the Law would have given againſt him. For by the Act, viz. by the throwing himſelf into the Water, he has done two Things, firſt, he has killed one of the King's Subjects; ſecondly, he has thereby avoided the Arraignment and the Judgment of the Law which ſhould have been given againſt him, and ſo he has fled from the Law, and has eſcaped its Judgment. [g] And if a Man commits Felony, and afterwards flies for it, by the Act of flying he ſhall forfeit his Goods, becauſe by that Act he does all he can to eſcape the Sentence of the Law, as Weſton ſaid. [h] So, he ſaid, if a Man arraigned for Felony had challenged peremptorily above the Number of 35. by the common Law he ſhould forfeit his Goods and Chattles, becauſe thereby he refuſed the Trial of the Law. [i] So, he ſaid, if he that is found guilty of Felony takes his Clergy, he ſhall forfeit his Goods, for when he betakes himſelf to his Clergy, therein he refuſes the Judgment of the Law. [k] So, he ſaid, if one arraigned for Felony ſtands mute of Malice, and will not anſwer, he ſhall forfeit forfeit his Goods, and the Reaſon is, becauſe he refuſes to be tried by the Law. Then if in theſe Caſes, he ſaid, thoſe that fly from the Law, or that by their Acts refuſe to be tried by the Law, ſhall forfeit their Goods and Chattles, for the ſame Reaſon in our Caſe he ſhall forfeit his Goods and Chattles, for here he has committed a Felony in killing himſelf, whereby he has exempted himſelf from the Trial of the Law, for by his Death he has prevented his being arraigned and tried by Law, and ſo he has fled from the Law, and by Cunning has eſcaped the Sentence and Judgment of the Law, which is more odious in the Eye of the Law than if he had fled indeed, or had challenged above the Number of 35. or had betaken himſelf to his Clergy before Judgment, or had kept himſelf mute and ſilent. And therefore if they ſhall forfeit their Goods by ſuch Evaſions or Refuſals of the Law, by the ſame Reaſon, and a fortiore he ſhall forfeit his Goods and Chattles here by this his Evaſion and Refuſal of the Law. But from what Time ſhall they forfeit their Goods? Sir, from the Time when the Act of ſuch Evaſion in the ſaid Caſes appears of Record, viz. * from the Time of the Flight found, as Brown ſaid, and not before, and from the Time of the Challenge of above 35. or of taking his Clergy, or of ſtanding mute, for theſe are the Acts of Refuſal of the Law, and the Time of them appears of Record. So here, the throwing himſelf into the Water was the Act that made the Felony, and by which he exempted himſelf from and evaded the actual Trial and Sentence of the Law, and from that Time the Goods and Chattles ſhall be forfeited, and to that Time, being in his Life, the Forfeiture ſhall have relation. And although the Act, by which he has avoided the Trial and Judgment of the Law, does not appear of Record in his Lifetime, as it does in the other Caſes above, the Reaſon thereof is, becauſe there is no Poſſibility of its being found in his Lifetime, for until the Death there is no Cauſe of Forfeiture. And he himſelf is the Cauſe why he cannot be arraigned for the Offence, and why the Offence cannot be otherwiſe inquired in his Lifetime. And in ſuch Caſes where Puniſhment for Offences cannot be had in the Life of him that deſerves it, an Inquiry of the Forfeiture, if it be found afterwards, ſhall ſerve, and ſhall be of the ſame Force as if done in his Lifetime. [a] And hereupon Brown ſaid, if a Subject joins the King's Enemies in Battle againſt the King within the Realm, and is killed in the Field, by the ancient Law of the Realm he ſhall forfeit his Goods, Chattles, [b] and Lands, and his Blood ſhall be corrupted without other Judgment, for he himſelf is the Cauſe why he could not be tried by the Law in his Lifetime. But whether this ſhall be found by Inquiſition, or ſhall be tried per pais, is Matter of Conſideration. [c] And, as Brown ſaid, it ſhall be tried per pais upon Iſſue joined; and ſo, he ſaid, it is taken in 3. Ed. 3. and in 9. Ed. 3. And Dyer ſaid that there is ſuch a Caſe in [d] 8. Ed. 3. in a Writ of Dower, but it is not there adjudged. And ſo in the Caſe before put where the Appellee is killed. And ſo here the finding of this after his Death is all that can be done, and ſhall ſerve ſufficiently. Wherefore all the Juſtices agreed, that the Forfeiture of the Goods and Chattles real and perſonal of Sir James Hales ſhall have relation to the Act done in his Lifetime which was the Cauſe of his Death, viz. [e] the throwing himſelf into the Water.

And alſo they all agreed in the Argument of this Caſe, [f] that if one gives another a mortal Wound, and he dies of this Wound, and he that killed him is attainted by Verdict, the Eſcheat of his Land ſhall have relation to the Time of the Wound given; [g] but if meſne between the Wound given and the Death he is ſuffered voluntarily to eſcape, ſuch Permiſſion to eſcape ſhall not be Felony. For although as to the Forfeiture it has relation to the Time of the Wound given, againſt the Party himſelf, yet it ſhall not be ſo againſt a Stranger, for if the Eſcape ſhould be Felony, he that eſcaped muſt of Neceſſity be a Felon at the Time of the Eſcape.

As to the fifth Point, the Juſtices held that if the Forfeiture has relation to the felonious Act done in the Party's Lifetime, then although the Wife now Plaintiff ſhould, before the Office found, be adjudged in the Term by Right of Survivorſhip, and ſhould be remitted to the Term as to others, yet after the Office found the Term ſhall be adjudged in the King and Queen, becauſe the Office has relation prior to her Title of Survivorſhip, viz. to his Lifetime, and to the doing of the Act by which a Title in Law to the Term is given to the King, which is equivalent to a Grant in Deed made by the ſame Perſon in his Lifetime to the King. For a Title may be as firmly attached in the King by the Act of Law as by the expreſs Grant of the Party. [h] And hereupon Brown ſaid, if there are two Jointenants of a Leaſe for Years, and one of them grants to J. S. that if he pays him 10 l. before Michaelmas, then he ſhall have his Term, and the Jointenant who ſo grants dies before Michaelmas, and afterwards J S. pays the Money to his Executors, yet he ſhall not have the Term, for there the Condition precedes the Grant, as [i] 14. H. 8. is, and until the Money is paid the Jointure continues, and it is only a bare Communication, and then the Survivor ſhall have the whole, and ſhall avoid the Condition or Communication: [k] But if he had granted or leaſed it from Michaelmas next following during the Term, and had died before the ſaid Feaſt, there he to whom it was demiſed ſhould have had it againſt the Survivor, for in this Caſe the Title in the Eſtate is granted in Deed in his Lifetime. So here by this Act Sir James has granted to the King and Queen a Title to the Eſtate, and the Office found has relation to the Time of the Act, and executes the Title, and ſo ſurmounts the Title of Survivorſhip. And inaſmuch as a Title is once given to the King and Queen by this Act, the Survivorſhip ſhall never diſplace it. [l] As in the ſaid Caſe of 50. Aſſ. where the Leaſe which the Wife had as Survivor was liable to the Debt of the Huſband, as the Lord Dyer ſaid. So, he ſaid, if the King's Villain and his Wife take jointly a Leaſe for 40 Years, and the Villain dies, and the Wife has the Leaſe as Survivor, the King upon Office finding this Matter ſhall have the

the Leaſe, and ſhall ouſt the Wife; for, he ſaid, if the King had entered in the Life of the Villain, this had taken away the Intereſt of the Wife, and his delaying to enter ſhall not deſtroy his Title once veſted, quia nullum tempus occurrit Regi. Wherefore all the Juſtices agreed that the Intereſt of the Wife now Plaintiff is taken away by the Relation of the Forfeiture. And Weſton ſaid that although the Forfeiture ſhould only have relation to the Death, at which Time the Title of the Wife accrued, yet in this [m] Concourſe of Titles the King's Title by Prerogative ſhall be preferred. [n] As if one is a Villain by Birth, and Land deſcends to him, and his Lord enters, and afterwards he is found an Ideot, and the Deſcent is alſo found, the King ſhall have the Land; for the Title of the Lord to the Body of the Villain commenced by the Birth of the Villain, and at that Time, by relation of the Office, the King's Title to his Body commenced in reſpect of Ideocy, in which Caſe the King ſhall have the Land, notwithſtandiug his Latches to ſuffer the Lord of the Villain to enter firſt, for Latches of Entry ſhall never hurt the King. [o] So, he ſaid, if a Woman takes Huſband, and has Iſſue, and Land deſcends to the Wife, and the Huſband enters, ſo that he is intitled to be Tenant by the Curteſy, and afterwards the Wife is found an Ideot, and her Eſtate in the Land is alſo found, the King ſhall have the Land, and if the Wife dies the Huſband ſhall never have the Land by Curteſy; for by the firſt Poſſeſſion of the Wife the Huſband was intitled to be Tenant by the Curteſy, and when the Office is found, the Title of the King ſhall have relation to the firſt Poſſeſſion of the Wife alſo. So that both the Titles commence at one ſame Time, but the King's ſhall have the Pre-eminence; and foraſmuch as the Title of the King in this Caſe is to the Freehold of the Land, in that he ſhall have the Cuſtody of it during the Life of the Wife, this ſhall utterly take away the Title of the Huſband, which was veſted in him before the Office found, and therefore after the Death of the Wife he ſhall not be Tenant by the Curteſy, but the Iſſue ſhall have the Land out of the King's Hands, if it be not held of the King, and if it be, the King ſhall have it by the Wardſhip of him during his Nonage. So that in Things of an Inſtant the King ſhall be preferred. But he and the reſt of the Juſtices agreed that the Forfeiture ſhall have relation to the Lifetime of the ſaid Sir James Hales, and ſo this laſt Point is out of Doubt. Wherefore upon the Matter in Law all the Juſtices agreed that the Title of the Wife to the Leaſe is taken away.

But Quære of this Caſe, for the King's Title to the Cuſtody of the Inheritance cannot continue longer than for the Life of the Ideot, and therefore there does not ſeem to be any Colour of Reaſon why the Huſband ſhould not be Tenant by the Curteſy, ſeeing that his Title, though initiate by the Seizin of the Wife, is not conſummate nor begins to any Effect until her Death, at which time the King's Title is at an End. So that upon the Matter the Huſband has no perfect Title at the Time when the King's Title commences, and therefore it cannot be ſtrictly ſaid that there is a Concourſe of Titles in this Caſe, and the Huſband's Title ſtands in no more Oppoſition to the King's Prerogative than the Title of the Iſſue does, neither of which look for the Land as long as the King can have any Intereſt in it.

Exceptions to the Bar.

But note, Brown at the End of his Argument ſaid, that the Bar was inſufficient for three Cauſes. Firſt, for that it is not found that the Archbiſhop is alive. For the Leaſe for 12 Years is not pleaded to be confirmed, and therefore it is not good longer than for his Life, for which reaſon his Life ought to be averred. Secondly, for that although the Office finds both the Leaſes, yet it does not find preciſely that the ſaid Sir James was poſſeſſed of them at the Time of drowning himſelf, for which reaſon the Office is not ſufficient therein to entitle the King and Queen. Thirdly, that the Day of the Treſpaſs is aſſigned the 21ſt Day of November in the ſecond Year of the Reign of the preſent Queen, which Day is in anno Domini 1559. and the new Leaſe made to the Plaintiff and her Huſband did not commence until Michaelmas 1560. which is the Michaelmas after the Treſpaſs aſſigned, ſo that the Plaintiff has aſſigned the Treſpaſs before the Commencement of the new Leaſe, and yet the Defendant has not given her any Colour, for the new Leaſe which was not then commenced is no Colour to her, and therefore they had no Cauſe to argue the Matter in Law which they had argued. For which three Cauſes the Plaintiff ought to recover for the Inſufficiency of the Bar.

p Co. Litt. 45. b. Watſ. Compl. Incumb. 489. 3 Bac. Abr. 392.

To which it was anſwered by the Lord Dyer, that for any thing ſhewn in the Record it might be that the Biſhop was alive. And if he was not, a Leaſe made by him who has the [p] Fee ſimple is not determined by his Death, as a Leaſe of Tenant [q] for Life is, but it is only voidable, and until it be avoided it is good, for which reaſon it ſhall be intended to continue until the Avoidance be ſhewn. As to the ſecond Point, it is pleaded in Fact that Sir James was poſſeſſed of both the Eſtates at the Time of drowning himſelf. And if the Plea and the Office, which finds both the Leaſes, be put together, it will appear manifeſtly to the Court that he was poſſeſſed of them at the Time of drowning himſelf. As to the third Point, he ſaid that if the Plaintiff's Leaſe was not commenced at the Time of the Treſpaſs ſuppoſed, from thence it follows that ſhe had no Title, and was not able to puniſh this or any other Treſpaſs. And tho' Colour is not given by the Defendant, yet if it appears to the Court [r] that the Plaintiff has no Title, it would be hard that ſhe ſhould have Judgment. And at laſt, notwithſtanding the ſaid three Exceptions, Judgment was given the ſame Term, as follows.

And thereupon the Premiſſes being ſeen, and by the Juſtices here fully underſtood, it ſeems to the ſame Juſtices here that the aforeſaid Plea of the aforeſaid Cyriack above in Bar pleaded is ſufficient in Law to preclude the aforeſaid Margaret from having her Action aforeſaid againſt the aforeſaid Cyriack, as the aforeſaid Cyriack has above alledged. Judgment.

A brief

A brief Report of a Judgment upon Demurrer, and of the Arguments therein, given by the Juſtices of the King's Bench, in Michaelmas Term in the fourth and fifth Years of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, upon a Writ of Error brought by George Fiſh Brother and Heir of Edward Fiſh againſt Edward Broket. And the Record appears among the Rolls in Eaſter Term 4 & 5 Philip and Mary. Rot. 168.

IT appears by the ſaid Record, that George Fiſh Brother and Heir of Edward Fiſh brought a Writ of Error in the King's Bench returnable in Eaſter Term 4 & 5 Philip and Mary, upon a Fine levied on the Octave of St. Michael 2 & 3 Philip and Mary between the ſaid Edward Broket Complainant, and the ſaid Edward Fiſh Deforceant, of the Tenements in Welwin Codicote and Parva Ayot in the County of Hertford upon an Acknowledgment of Right, as that which the ſaid Edward Broket had of the Gift of the ſaid Edward Fiſh: Upon which Fine Proclamations were made, viz. four in the ſame Term, and four in every other of the three Terms then next following, and the 13th Proclamation was contained to be made on the ſeventh Day of June in the Term of the Holy Trinity 2 & 3 Philip and Mary. And after the Removal of the Record, and the Proclamations certified, the Writ was diſcontinued, and the Plaintiff ſued another Writ of Error of the ſame Record, quod coram vobis reſidet, in Eaſter Term 3 Elizabeth, and upon this the Plaintiff aſſigned ſome Errors, which were not of any Effect, nor doubtful, but the moſt effectual Error which he aſſigned was as follows. Alſo in the Record and Proceſs aforeſaid, it is further erred, in this, to wit, that the aforeſaid Term of the Holy Trinity in the aboveſaid ſecond and third Years of the Reign of the aforeſaid late King and Queen Philip and Mary, (in which Term the aforeſaid thirteenth Proclamation was made) begun on Friday the fifth Day of June in the ſame ſecond and third Years, and that the ſeventh Day of the ſame Month of June (on which Day the thirteenth Proclamation in the Record aforeſaid ſpecified was made) was the Lord's Day, and that the Lord's Day by the common Law of this Realm of England was not then, nor ever was, a Law Day, nor a Day lawful for Fines to be proclaimed, or Pleas in the Bench aforeſaid to be levied, proclaimed, done, or holden, and this he is ready to verify; wherefore for the ſaid Error, and others which be in the Record aforeſaid, the ſame George prays that the Fine aforeſaid, with the Proclamations aforeſaid not made according to the Form of the Statute in ſuch Caſe lately made and provided, may be reverſed, and holden for none. And upon this he prayed a Scire facias againſt the ſaid Edward Broket, and had it, and thereupon the ſaid Edward Broket came and ſaid in nullo eſt erratum.

Eaſter Term 4 & 5 P. & M. If any of the Proclamations upon a Fine according to the Statute of 4 H. 7. be made on a Sunday, it makes all the Proclamations erroneous, but it does not make the Fine void, which remains a Diſcontinuance, as a Fine at Common Law. S. C. Dy. 181. b. Like Caſe Ibid. 216. pl. 54. S. P. Palm. 259. 1 Finch 6. 2 Finch 7. Wing. Max. reg. 5. pl. 3. 3 Danv. Abr. 63. pl. 7.

And this Matter was argued in the ſaid Term of St. Michael by Loveleſs on the Behalf of Fiſh, and by Jefferies on the Behalf of Broket. And the Point argued was, whether the whole Fine ſhould be reverſed for the Error in the 13th Proclamation. For it was granted by all, [a] that all the Proclamations were thereby erroneous and reverſible, becauſe the Juſtices do not nor ought to ſit on a Sunday, but that Day is, for the Solemnity of it, exempt from ſuch Buſineſs by the common Law, to the Intent that all Men may apply themſelves to Prayer, and to honour God on that Day. And foraſmuch as it appears to the Court that this 13th Proclamation, contained in the Record to be made on a Sunday, could not be made, nor was made on that Day, becauſe the Court did not ſit, or if it was then made it was void; from thence it follows, that the Proclamations were not made according to the Effect of the Statute of 4 H. 7. cap. 24. which ordains that the Fine ſhall be ſolemnly proclaimed in the ſame Court the ſame Term in which it is engroſſed, and three Terms next following the ſame Engroſſment, at four ſeveral Days in each Term, and that the Proclamations being ſo had and made, the Fine ſhall be final, and ſhall conclude as well Privies as Strangers to it. And then if four Proclamations are not made in each of the four Terms, the Fine ſhall not conclude Privies or Strangers by the Act, but it reſts as it was at the common Law; and becauſe the 13th Proclamation is here wanting, or was ill made, whichever it be, there are only three Proclamations made that Term according to the Statute, and in all but 15. which are of no more Effect than if none at all had been made; and ſo it was held and admitted by all. But as to the Point in Queſtion, Loveleſs argued that this Defect in the 13th Proclamation made the whole Fine erroneous. For before this Statute a Man might levy a Fine without theſe Proclamations; and ſo he may ſince this Statute, for in the End of it it ſays, every Perſon ſhall be at Liberty to levy a Fine according to the Form ordained by this Act, or according to the Manner and Form aforetime uſed. And then when the Party has Election to levy a Fine according to the common Law, or according to the Act, if he intends to levy it according to the Act, and he meddles with the Act, and does not purſue it in all Points, but meddles with Part of it, and omits other Part requiſite, thereby the whole ſhall be erroneous. And therefore here, when there is an Order and Form of a Fine at common Law, and the Act has added Proclamations to it, now theſe Proclamations are become Part of the Fine, and they and the Fine are one entire Thing, and one ſame Record, and not ſeveral, and then if Part of that which is entire is faulty, the whole is faulty. And he put ſeveral Caſes to enforce this. And ſo it ſeemed to him that by the Conjunction of the Proclamations to the Fine, they and the Fine together are by the Operation of the Act, one entire Thing, and that by reaſon of the Defect in the 13th Proclamation, not only the Proclamations, but alſo the whole Fine is erroneous.

On the contrary Jefferies and all the Juſtices argued, that the Act does not ordain a new Form of the Fine, but the ancient Form of Fines continues, ſo that the Fine remains as it was before the Act in Form and Subſtance. And when the Statute gives to the Party, if he pleaſes, Proclamations upon the Fine, this is another Thing ordained for another Purpoſe, viz. to give notice to Strangers; ſo that it is quite a different Matter, and the Fine and Proclamations are not become one entire Thing, or one ſame Record. For the Fine is by itſelf one Matter of Record perfect perfect and full before the Proclamations made, and it binds the Parties and the Right of the Land between them before the Proclamations, and the Proclamations which are made afterwards are another Matter of Record, which have another Entry in the Record after the Fine. Wherefore although the Proclamations are grounded upon the Fine, and are purſuant to it, yet they are ſeveral from the Fine, and they and the Fine are ſeveral Matters of Record, for which reaſon Error in them is not Error in the Fine. As in Treſpaſs, if the Plaintiff has Judgment to recover, and afterwards has a Capias ad ſatisfaciendum, and outlaws the Defendant upon it, if there is Error in the Outlawry, and a Writ of Error is brought upon it, this ſhall not reverſe the firſt Judgment; for although the Capias ad ſatisfaciendum is founded upon the firſt Judgment, yet the Judgment of Outlawry thereupon, and the firſt Judgment to recover the Damages, are ſeveral and ſeveral Matters of Record. [a] But Error in the firſt Judgment ſhall reverſe both, though not e contra, cauſa qua ſupra. So in an Action of Account, if a Man be adjudged to account, and afterwards Proceſs goes out againſt him to account, if there be Error therein, this ſhall not reverſe the firſt Judgment, for they are ſeveral Matters of Record, and the one comes after the other. [b] So here the Fine was good before the Proclamations, and the Proclamations which are another Thing, being ill and erroneouſly made, ſhall not deſtroy the Force of the Fine which was good before the Proclamations. And many other good Caſes were put upon this Head. And afterwards the Juſtices gave Judgment that the Proclamations ſhould be reverſed, and that the Fine ſhould ſtand in Force. Which Judgment here follows, viz.

The Judgment.

Whereupon all and ſingular the Premiſſes being ſeen, and by the Court of the Lady the Queen here more fully underſtood, and mature deliberation being thereupon had, for that it evidently enough appears to the Court of the Lady the Queen here, upon diligent Search therein by the ſame Court made, that the aforeſaid ſeventh Day of June, on which the aforeſaid 13th Proclamation is ſuppoſed in Form aforeſaid to be made, was the Lord's Day, and not a Law Day, by Reaſon whereof all the Proclamations aforeſaid upon the Fine aforeſaid in Form aforeſaid proclaimed and made are erroneous, void, and of no Effect in Law, it is conſidered by the ſame Court that all the Proclamations of the Fine aforeſaid in Form aforeſaid made for the Error aforeſaid be reverſed, annulled, and wholly for none had, and that the aforeſaid George Fiſh be reſtored to all that he has loſt by reaſon of the Proclamations aforeſaid, &c. And further by the ſame Court of the Lady the Queen here it is conſidered, that the Fine aforeſaid be adjudged and affirmed ſufficiently good and valid in Law, according to the Form of the ſaid Fine, as a Fine levied without Proclamations, the ſaid Cauſes or Matters above aſſigned for Errors in any wiſe notwithſtanding.

Nota bene by the Reporter.

If any of the Proclamations upon a Fine be entered to be made upon a Sunday, they may be avoided by Plea as well as by Writ of Error. S. P. 3 Danv. Abr. 2. pl. 6. Vin. Abr. tit. Error A. pl. 9. Weſt. Symb. pt. 2. fo. 71. b.

In this Caſe it ſeemed to many that the ſaid George Fiſh did not need to have brought a Writ of Error to reverſe the Proclamations, for that any one might avoid them by Plea well enough, without any Reverſal by Error. For the Statute makes the Fine to be final, and to conclude as well Privies as Strangers to it, if it be proclaimed at four ſeveral Days in the four ſeveral Terms. And if this be not done, there is no Proviſion or Order in the Statute, but the Proviſion of the Statute is only where all this is done, wherefore it follows from hence that every one againſt whom it is objected ſhall ſay that the Proclamations were not made according to the Statute. And ſo it was adjudged accordingly, as it is hereafter ſhewn, in the like Caſe [c] between the ſame Parties: For theſe ſame Tenements were entailed by Thomas Fiſh to the ſaid Edward Fiſh and to George Fiſh, and after the Death of the ſaid Edward Fiſh, who died without Iſſue, viz. the 12th Day of May in the 4 & 5 Philip and Mary, the ſaid George Fiſh, as Heir to the ſaid Tail, purchaſed a Formedon in Deſcender againſt the ſaid Edward Broket for the ſaid Tenements, which Writ was returnable and returned on the Morrow of the Holy Trinity then next enſuing, and afterwards the ſaid Edward Broket appeared, and pleaded in Bar another Fine with Proclamations levied by the ſaid Edward Fiſh to the ſaid Edward Broket of the ſame Tenements on the Morrow of the Holy Trinity in the 2 & 3. Philip and Mary; and the Proclamations in the firſt three Terms, viz. in the Terms of the Holy Trinity, (in which it was levied) and of St. Michael, and of St. Hillary, were well and duly made, but he pleaded the laſt four Proclamations to be made, as follows, viz. the thirteenth Proclamation was made the 22d Day of June in the Term of Eaſter in the third and fourth Years of the aforeſaid late King and Queen, the fourteenth Proclamation was made the 25th Day of June in the ſame Term, the fifteenth Proclamation the 28th Day of June in the ſame Term, the ſixteenth Proclamation the 31ſt Day of June in the ſame Term. Againſt which George Fiſh replied and ſaid, that the Term of Eaſter in the third and fourth Years aboveſaid, in which the aforeſaid thirteenth, fourteenth, fifteenth, and ſixteenth Proclamations of the Fine aforeſaid are ſuppoſed to be made, begun the fifth Day of May, and ended the laſt Day of the ſame Month of May, and this he is ready to verify, &c. Whereupon Edward Broket demurred in Judgment. And upon this Demurrer it was adjudged that George ſhould recover. And the Record thereof is among the Records of

Roll So that George Fiſh by Plea, without Writ of Error, avoided the Proclamations unduly made, and ſo it ſeemed to many that he might have done here, and that he was not driven to his Writ of Error. And it ſeems that as the Avoidance there was, becauſe the Proclamations were not made, ſo is it in the firſt Caſe here; for although the Record ſays that the 13th Proclamation was made on the ſeventh Day of June, which was Sunday, yet the Point of the Error therein ſeems to be in the non Feaſance, rather than in the miſ-Feaſance of the Proclamation, for that which is ſaid by the Record to be made upon a Sunday cannot be ſaid to be made then, inaſmuch as the Court did not ſit, and it cannot be done but in Court. And ſo the Juſtices took it. So that that which is reported to be made the ſeventh Day of June ſhall be taken for a Falſity, and that it was not really made, and ſo like to the other Caſe. But although Fiſh might have avoided it by Plea, nevertheleſs it was taken that a Writ of Error would lie well enough. But Fiſh's Deſign in bringing the Writ of Error was to reverſe and annul the whole Fine, and to avoid the Diſcontinuance, and to be reſtored to the Land, and not only to avoid the Proclamations; but that he could not do, as it is ſhewn before.

IT was found by Office in the County of Somerſet the laſt Day of April 4 & 5. Philip and Mary, after the Death of Mary Counteſs of Arundel late Wife of Robert Earl of Suſſex, by Force of a Writ of diem clauſit extremum, after the Death of the ſaid Counteſs, directed to the Eſcheator of the ſaid County of Somerſet, that King Henry 8. by his Letters-patent dated in the 33d Year of his Reign, gave to the ſaid Robert Earl of Suſſex, and to the ſaid Mary then his Wife, the Reverſion of the Site of the Abbey of Cleve, which was leaſed for Years, and alſo the Manor of Cleve, and divers Tenements, to have to them and to the Heirs Males of the Body of the ſaid Robert on the Body of the ſaid Counteſs begotten, the Remainder over to the Heirs Males of the Body of the ſaid Robert begotten, by force of which they entered, and were ſeized accordingly; and that the ſaid Robert died, and afterwards the ſaid Counteſs the 20th Day of October laſt paſt before the taking of the Office died, after whoſe Death the ſaid Reverſion, and the ſaid Manor and other the Premiſſes deſcended to the ſaid Sir John Ratcliff Knight, as Son and Heir Male of the Body of the ſaid Robert Earl of Suſſex begotten on the Body of the ſaid Mary, which Sir John Ratcliff Knight was of the Age of 18 Years the 30th Day of December laſt paſt before the finding of the ſaid Office; and that the Premiſſes were held of the ſaid King and Queen in capite by the ſixth Part of a Knight's-Fee, and this Office was returned into the Chancery, and certified into the Court of Wards. And when the ſaid Sir John Ratcliff came of full Age, he prayed his Livery. And the Court of Wards required of him, for the Queen, the Value of his Marriage, and demanded of him what he could ſay in diſcharge of it. And he, by his Counſel, ſaid that before the Title of Wardſhip accrued, viz. in the Time of King Edward 6. he was made a Knight, and is found a Knight by the ſaid Office, by which Degree he was enabled to do Knight's-Service. And Wardſhip is due to the Lord in reſpect of the Imbecillity of the Perſon to do Knight's-Service; [a] for when the Lord gives Land to his Tenant to do Knight's-Service as often as there is Occaſion, and the Tenant dies, his Iſſue being within Age, and ſo unable to perform Knight's-Service, it is reaſonable that the Lord ſhould have the Wardſhip of the Land, that with the Profits thereof he may find one to do the Service, [b] and the Wardſhip of the Body, that he may train him up, and inſtruct him how to do ſuch Service when he is able. But when he is made a Knight by the King, who is the chief Captain of all Chivalry, or by ſome other great Captain aſſigned by the King for that Purpoſe, he is thereby allowed and admitted [a] able to perform Knight's-Service, and then his Body ought not to be in Ward, becauſe his Imbecillity ceaſes, et ceſſante cauſa, ceſſabit effectus. And to enforce this Argument they cited the Statute of Magna Charta cap. 3. which ſpeaking of Knight's-Service has theſe Words in it, viz. and after ſuch an Heir has been in Ward, when he comes to full Age, that is, to the Age of one and twenty Years, he ſhall have his Inheritance without Relief, and without Fine; ſo that if ſuch an Heir being within Age be made a Knight, yet nevertheleſs his Land ſhall remain in the Cuſtody of his Lord unto the Term aforeſaid. From which Act it appears, that by the [b] common Law if the Ward was made a Knight, during his Nonage, he ſhould thereby be out of Ward both for Body and Land, and for the detaining of the Land to the Lord's Advantage the Act was made. And if the Degree of a Knight ſhould make him who was in Ward to be out of Ward, by the like Reaſon [c] if he is made a Knight in the Life of his Anceſtor, his Perſon ſhall never be in Ward, and if it ſhall never be in Ward, then no Marriage nor Value for the ſame ſhall be due to the Guardian. For which Reaſons he prayed to be diſcharged of the Value of his Marriage, and to have his Livery. And hereupon Deliberation was taken, for the Caſe had come in Queſtion many Times before, as in the Caſe of the Viſcount Mountague and others, but they had all [d] compounded with the King or Queen for the Time being, as it was ſaid. But Sir John Ratcliff would not compound, but required Law and Juſtice. For which Reaſon the Court took great Deliberation, and the rather, becauſe the Rule of it would be a Precedent to others who were in like Caſe; and it depended three Years before they came to a full Reſolution, and at laſt this Eaſter Term in the ſixth Year of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, they adjudged that he ought not to be in Ward for his Body, and that the Value of the Marriage was not due to the Queen. And upon this they made their Decree as follows, viz. Eaſter Term in the ſixth Year of the Lady Queen Elizabeth, in the Book of Decrees of the Court of Wards and Liveries.

The Decree. Where the Maſter and Counſel of the Queen's Majeſty's Court of Wards and Liveries have heretofore ſtaied Sir John Ratcliff Knight and Heir of the Body of the Right Honourable Robert late Earl of Suſſex, and of the Lady Mary his Wife deceaſed, to proſecute his Livery forth of the Queen's Majeſty's Hands, although he were of full Age the 29th Day of December in the third Year of the Reign of our ſovereign Lady the Queen's Majeſty that now is, until her Highneſs were anſwered of the Value of Marriage which ſhe claimed to have of the ſaid Sir John Ratcliff, of which Value of Marriage the ſaid Sir John Ratcliff and his Counſel learned have pretended to be acquitted and diſcharged, for that the ſaid Sir John Ratcliff was made a Knight by the late King Edward the Sixth, before his Lands and Tenements deſcended unto him; and thereupon the ſaid Maſter and Counſel, after long Deliberation thereupon had, and full Reſolution thereupon made by the Opinions of Sir James Dyer Knight Chief Juſtice of the Common Bench, and of Sir Edward Saunders Knight Chief Baron of the Exchequer, Aſſiſtants unto the ſaid Court, have determined, decreed, and ordered, that the ſaid Sir John Ratcliff is and ought to be clearly acquitted againſt our ſaid ſovereign Lady the Queen for and concerning the Value of his Marriage, by Reaſon he was made a Knight, as is aforeſaid, and thereby out of Ward touching his Body, and that the ſaid Sir John Ratcliff ſhall proceed with his ſaid Livery, without yielding, making, or paying at any Time any Fine or Sum of Money for his ſaid Marriage, or for the Wardſhip of his Body. A brief

A brief Report of a Caſe argued and adjudged by the Juſtices of the Common Bench in Eaſter Term in the ſixth Year of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, upon a Demurrer in Replevin brought by William Say Plaintiff againſt John Smith and Thomas Fuller Defendants. And the Record is entered among the Records of Michaelmas Term 3 & 4 Elizabeth. Rot. 1530. and is as follows, Mich. Term 3 & 4 Eliz. Rot 1530. Midd. Declaration. Same Precedent Raſt. Entr. 561. b. pl. 1.

John Smith Gentleman and Thomas Fuller were ſummoned to anſwer William Say Gentleman of a Plea, wherefore they took the Cattle of the ſaid William, and them unjuſtly detained againſt Gages and Pledges, &c. And whereupon the ſame William by Thomas Carpenter his Attorney ſays that the aforeſaid John and Thomas the 19th Day of November in the third Year of the Reign of the Lady the Queen now, at Ikenham in a certain † Place called Marl-Crofts, took the Cattle, viz. nine Cows of the ſaid William, and them unjuſtly detained againſt Gages and Pledges until, &c. Wherefore he ſays that he is damnified and has Damage to the Value of 20 l. and therefore he brings the Suit, &c.

And the aforeſaid John Smith and Thomas Fuller by Robert Chatterton their Attorney come and defend the Force and Injury * when, &c. and as Bailiffs of Edmund Smith well acknowledge the taking of the Cattle aforeſaid in the aforeſaid Place where, &c. and juſtly, &c. becauſe they ſay that the ſame Place called Marl-Crofts, in which the taking of the Cattle aforeſaid is ſuppoſed to be done, is, and at the aforeſaid Time of the taking of the Cattle aforeſaid ſuppoſed to be done was, 20 Acres of Land with the Appurtenances in Ikenham aforeſaid, which are, and at the aforeſaid Time when, &c. were, the § Freehold of the aforeſaid Edmund: And becauſe the Cattle aforeſaid were at the aforeſaid Time when, &c. in the aforeſaid Place where, &c. the Graſs in the ſame then growing eating up, and doing Damage there, the ſame John and Thomas, as Bailiffs of the aforeſaid Edmund Smith well acknowledge the taking of the Cattle aforeſaid in the aforeſaid Place where, &c. and juſtly, &c. Damage there ſo doing, &c.

And the aforeſaid William Say ſays, that the aforeſaid John Smith and Thomas Fuller, as Bailiffs of the aforeſaid Edmund Smith, for the Reaſon before alledged ought not to acknowledge as juſt the taking of the Cattle aforeſaid in the aforeſaid Place where, &c. becauſe he ſays that long before the aforeſaid Time of the taking the Cattle aforeſaid, one William Norton Gentleman was ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee of and in the aforeſaid 20 Acres of Land in which, &c. and them held of Robert Shoreditch Gentleman, as of his Manor of Ikenham in the County aforeſaid, by Fealty only for all Services and Dues to be claimed in the ſame. And being ſo ſeized thereof, before the aforeſaid Time of the taking the Cattle aforeſaid, viz. the 20th Day of January in the fourth Year of the Reign of Lord Henry the eighth late King of England the Father of the Lady the Queen now, at Riſlip in the aforeſaid County of Middleſex, the aforeſaid William Norton by a certain Indenture made between the ſaid William Norton of the one Part, and one John Kirton of the ſame Town and County Tilemaker of the other Part, (one Part whereof, ſealed with the Seal of the ſame William Norton, the ſame William Say here produces in Court, the Date whereof is the ſame 20th Day of January in the Year aboveſaid) granted, demiſed, and to Farm let the aforeſaid 20 Acres of Land in which, &c. amongſt other Things to the aforeſaid John Kirton, by the Name of one Cottage, and one Croft called the Tyle-Houſe-Croft to the ſame adjoining, with a ſmall Meadow to the ſame appertaining, and one Meadow called Aldermead, four Crofts called Marl-Crofts, one Grove called Prowdes Grove, certain Parcels of Meadow containing by Eſtimation eleven Acres, twenty and five Acres lying in Wittingrowfield, Middlefield, and Roxburnfield, and with the Hedgerows of the Woods, Timber, and Under-woods growing or being upon the aforeſaid Lands, or within any Parcel thereof in the Pariſhes of Riſlip and Ikenham aforeſaid, to have and to hold the aforeſaid Cottage and other the Premiſſes aforeſaid with their Appurtenances whereof, &c. to the aforeſaid John Kirton his Heirs and Aſſigns from the Feaſt of St. Michael the Archangel then laſt paſt next before the Date of the Indenture aforeſaid, unto the End and Term of ten Years from thence next and immediately following, fully to be compleat. And the aforeſaid John granted by the ſame Indenture to pay at the End of the ſaid Term of ten Years, to the aforeſaid William Norton and one Joan then his Wife, their Heirs and Aſſigns, ten thouſand Tiles, or the Value thereof in Money, by the Name of a Groſſome. And further then and there it was agreed and granted between the aforeſaid William Norton and John Kirton by the aforeſaid Indenture, that if the aforeſaid John Kirton, his Heirs or Aſſigns, ſhould pay or cauſe to be paid to the aforeſaid William or Joan, their Heirs or Aſſigns, the ſaid ten thouſand Tiles, or the Value thereof in Money, at the End and Term of every ten Years from thence next following, that then the aforeſaid William Norton granted and promiſed for himſelf, his Heirs and Aſſigns, by the aforeſaid Indenture, that the aforeſaid John Kirton, his Heirs or Aſſigns, ſhould have a perpetual Demiſe, Farm, and Grant of the Premiſſes, and of every Parcel thereof with the Appurtenances, from ten Years to ten Years continually and enſuing out of the Memory of Man, paying therefore yearly the Rent of 4 l. 16 s. 8 d. and the aforeſaid Tiles in Manner and Form above ſpecified, as in the ſame Indenture amongſt other Things more fully appears. By virtue of which Demiſe the aforeſaid John Kirton was of the aforeſaid 20 Acres of Land with the Appurtenances in which, &c. among other Things poſſeſſed, during all the aforeſaid Term of ten Years to him before granted. And the ſame William Say in Fact ſays, that the aforeſaid Term of ten Years ended and expired long before the aforeſaid Time when, viz. on the Feaſt of St. Michael the Archangel in the 14th Year of the Reign of the aforeſaid late King

Henry the eighth, and that the aforeſaid John Kirton, at the End of the ſame Term, viz. on the Morrow of St. Michael the Archangel at Riſlip aforeſaid, paid to the aforeſaid William Norton and Joan ten thouſand Tiles by the Name of a Groſſome; whereby the aforeſaid John Kirton, by virtue of the Demiſe aforeſaid, was of the aforeſaid 20 Acres of Land with the Appurtenances in which, &c. among other Things poſſeſſed for another Term of other ten Years from thence next and immediately following. And the ſame William Say in Fact ſays, that the aforeſaid other Term of ten Years ended and expired before the aforeſaid Time when, &c. viz. on the Feaſt of St. Michael the Archangel in the 24th Year of the Reign of the aforeſaid late King Henry the eighth, and that the aforeſaid John Kirton, at the End of the ſame Term, viz. on the Morrow of the ſame Feaſt of St. Michael the Archangel at Riſlip aforeſaid, paid to the aforeſaid William Norton and Joan ten thouſand Tiles by the Name of a Groſſome; whereby the aforeſaid John Kirton, by virtue of the Demiſe aforeſaid, was of the aforeſaid 20 Acres of Land with the Appurtenances in which, &c. among other Things poſſeſſed for another Term of ten Years from thence next and immediately following. And the ſame William Say in Fact ſays, that the aforeſaid other Term of other ten Years ended and expired on the Feaſt of St. Michael the Archangel in the 34th Year of the Reign of the aforeſaid late King the Henry the eighth, before which ſaid Feaſt, and before the aforeſaid Time of the taking the Cattle aforeſaid, viz. the 12th Day of Auguſt, in the 33d Year of the Reign of the aforeſaid late King, the aforeſaid William Norton, being in Form aforeſaid ſeized of the Reverſion of the aforeſaid 20 Acres of Land with the Appurtenances, at Riſlip aforeſaid, made his laſt Will and Teſtament in Writing, and by the ſame among other Things willed and deviſed the aforeſaid 20 Acres of Land with the Appurtenances in which, &c. among other Things to the aforeſaid Edmund Smith, to have to him and to his Heirs for ever. And afterwards the aforeſaid William Norton there died, and the aforeſaid Joan ſurvived him. After the Death of which ſaid William Norton, the aforeſaid Edmund Smith was of the Reverſion of the aforeſaid 20 Acres of Land with the Appurtenances in which, &c. ſeized in his Demeſn as of Fee and Right, by virtue of the Deviſe aforeſaid; and the ſaid Edmund Smith being ſo ſeized thereof, the aforeſaid John Kirton at the End of the ſaid Term, viz. on the Morrow of the ſame Feaſt of St. Michael the Archangel in the 34th Year aboveſaid, at Riſlip aforeſaid, paid to the aforeſaid Joan Norton then Widow ten thouſand Tiles by the Name of a Groſſome; whereby the aforeſaid John Kirton, by virtue of the Demiſe aforeſaid, was of the aforeſaid 20 Acres of Land with the Appurtenances in which, &c. among other Things poſſeſſed for another Term of ten Years from thence next and immediately following. And the ſame William Say in Fact ſays, that the aforeſaid other Term of other ten Years ended and expired before the aforeſaid Time when, &c. viz. on the Feaſt of St. Michael the Archangel in the ſixth Year of the Reign of Lord Edward late King of England the ſixth from the Conqueſt, and that the aforeſaid John Kirton, at the End of the ſaid Term, viz. on the Morrow of the ſame Feaſt of St. Michael in the ſixth Year aboveſaid, at Riſlip aforeſaid, paid to the aforeſaid Joan Norton Widow ten thouſand Tiles by the Name of a Groſſome, whereby the aforeſaid John Kirton, by virtue of the Demiſe aforeſaid, was of the aforeſaid 20 Acres of Land with the Appurtenances in which, &c. among other Things poſſeſſed for another Term of other ten Years from thence next and immediately following. And the ſame John Kirton being ſo poſſeſſed thereof, before the aforeſaid Time of the taking the Cattle aforeſaid, viz. the 12th Day of Auguſt in the Year of our Lord 1558. at Riſlip aforeſaid, made his laſt Will and Teſtament in Writing, and by the ſame among other Things willed and deviſed his whole Eſtate, Term, and Intereſt, which he then had to come of and in the aforeſaid 20 Acres of Land with the Appurtenances in which, &c. among other Things to one John Kirton his Son, and appointed and ordained the ſame John Kirton Executor of his ſame Teſtament. And afterwards the aforeſaid John Kirton the Father there died; after whoſe Death the aforeſaid John Kirton the Son, as Executor of the Teſtament aforeſaid, before the aforeſaid Time of the taking the Cattle aforeſaid, into the aforeſaid 20 Acres of Land with the Appurtenances entered, and was thereof poſſeſſed by virtue of the Demiſe and Deviſe aforeſaid. And the ſaid John Kirton the Son being ſo poſſeſſed thereof, the aforeſaid Joan Norton died, and afterwards and before the aforeſaid Time of the taking the Cattle aforeſaid, viz. the 29th Day of Auguſt in the ſecond Year of the Reign of the Lady the Queen now, the aforeſaid John Kirton the Son being ſo poſſeſſed thereof, at Riſlip aforeſaid, granted all his Eſtate, Intereſt, and Term of Years, which he the ſame John Kirton the Son, &c. then had to come of and in the aforeſaid 20 Acres of Land with the Appurtenances in which, &c. among other Things to the aforeſaid William Say; by virtue of which ſaid Grant the ſame William Say, before the aforeſaid Time of the taking the Cattle aforeſaid, into the aforeſaid 20 Acres of Land with the Appurtenances in which, &c. entered, and was thereof poſſeſſed for the reſt of the ſame other Term of ten Years then to come, by virtue of the Demiſe and Grant aforeſaid. And the ſame William being ſo poſſeſſed thereof, put his Cattle aforeſaid into the aforeſaid Place where, &c. to eat up the Graſs then growing: Which ſaid Cattle were in the aforeſaid Place where, &c. the Graſs there then growing eating up, until the aforeſaid John Smith and Thomas Fuller the aforeſaid 19th Day of November in the aforeſaid third Year of the Reign of the Lady the Queen now, at Ikenham aforeſaid in the aforeſaid Place called Marl-Croſts, took the aforeſaid Cattle of the ſaid William Say, and them unjuſtly detained againſt Gages and Pledges until, &c. as he above complains againſt them. And this he is ready to verify, wherefore for that the aforeſaid John Smith and Thomas Fuller above acknowledge the taking of the Cattle aforeſaid in the aforeſaid Place called Marl-Croſts where,

&c. the ſame William Say prays Judgment and his Damages by Occaſion of the taking and unjuſt Detention of the Cattle aforeſaid to be adjudged to him, &c.

And the aforeſaid John Smith and Thomas Fuller not acknowledging any Thing by the aforeſaid William Say above pleaded to be true, for Plea ſay that the aforeſaid Plea of the aforeſaid William Say above pleaded in Bar of the Cognizance aforeſaid is inſufficient in Law to preclude the ſaid John Smith and Thomas Fuller from having their Cognizance aforeſaid; and that they have no Neceſſity, nor are by the Law of the Land bound to anſwer the ſaid Plea in Manner and Form aforeſaid pleaded. And this they are ready to verify, wherefore for Want of a ſufficient Plea in this Behalf the ſame John Smith and Thomas Fuller as before pray Judgment, and a Return of the Cattle aforeſaid together with Damages, &c. to be adjudged to them, &c. Defendants demur.

And the aforeſaid William Say, for that he has above alledged ſufficient Matter in Law to preclude the aforeſaid John Smith and Thomas Fuller from having their Cognizance aforeſaid, which he is ready to verify, which ſaid Matter the aforeſaid John Smith and Thomas Fuller do not deny, nor thereunto in anywiſe anſwer, but the ſaid Averment wholly refuſe to admit, as before prays Judgment and his Damages by Occaſion of the taking and unjuſt Detention of the ſaid Cattle to be adjudged to him, &c. And becauſe the Juſtices here, &c. will adviſe themſelves of and upon the Premiſſes before they give Judgment thereon, Day is given to the Parties aforeſaid here until the Octave of St. Hillary to hear their Judgment thereon, becauſe the ſame Juſtices here thereof not yet, &c. Joinder in Demurrer.

It appears by the Record that William Say has ſued a Replevin againſt John Smith and Thomas Fuller, and declares that the Defendants the 19th Day of November in the 3d Year of the Reign of the preſent Queen at Ikenham, in a Place called Marl-Crofts, took his Cattle, viz. nine Cows. The Defendants ſay that the Place contains 20 Acres of Land, which are the Freehold of Edmund Smith, and they as Bailiffs to him acknowledge the taking for Damage-feaſant. The Plaintiff ſays, that before the taking William Norton was ſeized of the ſaid 20 Acres in his Demeſn as of Fee, and held them of one Robert Shoreditch as of his Manor of Ikenham by Fealty only. And he being ſo ſeized, the 20th Day of January in the 4th Year of King Henry 8. by an Indenture ſhewn forth leaſed the ſaid 20 Acres among other Things to one John Kirton for ten Years from the Feaſt of St. Michael then laſt paſt, fully to be compleat. And the ſaid John Kirton granted by the ſame Indenture to pay at the End of the ſaid Term of ten Years to the ſaid William Norton and to Joan his Wife their Heirs and Aſſigns ten thouſand Tiles, or the Value thereof in Money, in the Name of a Groſſome. And further it was agreed and granted between the ſaid William Norton and the ſaid John Kirton by the ſaid Indenture, that if the ſaid John Kirton, his Heirs or Aſſigns, ſhould pay to the ſaid William and Joan, or their Aſſigns, the ſaid ten thouſand Tiles, or the Value of them in Money, at the End and Term of every ten Years from thence next following, then the ſaid William Norton granted and promiſed for himſelf, his Heirs and Aſſigns, by the ſaid Indenture, that the ſaid John Kirton, his Heirs or Aſſigns ſhould have a perpetual Demiſe, Farm, and Grant of the Premiſſes from ten Years to ten Years continually and enſuing out of the Memory of Man, paying therefore yearly the Rent of 4 l. 16 s. 8 d. and the aforeſaid Tiles in Manner and Form above ſpecified; by Force of which the ſaid John Kirton was poſſeſſed of the ſaid 20 Acres. And he ſhews further, that at the End of the ſaid ten Years, viz. on the Morrow of St Michael in the 14th Year of King Henry 8. the ſame John Kirton paid to the ſaid William Norton and his Wife ten thouſand Tiles in the Name of a Groſſome, whereby the ſame John Kirton by virtue of the ſaid Leaſe was poſſeſſed of the ſaid 20 Acres for other ten Years thence enſuing, and he pleads alſo the like Payment at the End of thoſe ten Years, viz. on the Morrow of St. Michael in the 24th Year of King Henry 8. and he pleads the like Payment at the End of ten Years next following, viz. in the 34th Year of King Henry 8. made to the ſaid Wife, and he ſhews that the Huſband deviſed the Reverſion to the ſaid Edmund Smith in Fee, and died in the 33d Year of King Henry 8. and he pleads the like Payment made by the ſaid John Kirton to the ſaid Wife at the End of ten Years then next following, viz. on the Morrow of St. Mithael in the 6th Year of King Edward 6. whereby he was poſſeſſed for another Term of other ten Years then next enſuing. And he being ſo poſſeſſed, deviſed his Term to one John Kirton his Son and Executor, and died, which John Kirton the Son the 29th Day of Auguſt in the 2d Year of the preſent Queen granted his Term to the Plaintiff; by Virtue whereof the ſaid Plaintiff entered, and was poſſeſſed, and put in the ſaid Cattle, which were there until the Defendants took them. And upon this the Defendants have demurred in Judgment.

The CASE. Eaſter Term 6 Eliz. Leaſe for 10 Years by Indenture, wherein the Leſſor grants that if the Leſſee pay at the End and Term of every 10 Years 10,000 Tiles, that then he ſhall have a perpetual Demiſe of the Land from ten Years to ten Years continually following, and out of the Memory of Man, this is a good Leaſe for no more than 10 Years, for beyond that no other Term has any certain Commencement, continuance, or End. S. C. 3 Bac. Abr. 430, 431.

And it was argued by the Juſtices the 10th Day of May in Eaſter Term 6 Elizabeth. And I heard the Arguments of all the Juſtices except Walſh, the latter End of whoſe Argument I only heard. But they all argued to one Effect, and agreed that the Title of the Plaintiff was not good, and that the Defendants ſhould have a Return. And one Point was touched by Anthony Brown Juſtice beſides the Matter in Law, and that was, at what Time the ten thouſand Tiles ſhould be paid: For the Agreement was that they ſhould be paid at the End of every ten Years, and the Payment is alledged to be made on the Morrow after the Term ended, viz. on the Morrow of St. Michael. And it ſeemed to him to be well pleaded; for, he ſaid, the Payment ought to be at the End of every ten Years, and the firſt Leaſe was made for ten Years from the Feaſt of St. Michael the Archangel then laſt paſt, ſo that the Day of St. Michael was not parcel of the Leaſe, but the Leaſe commenced after the Day of St. Michael, viz. on the Morrow after it, from whence it follows, that the laſt Day of the ten Years was the Day of St. Michael. And when the Payment ought to be at the End of the ten Years, it cannot be upon the Day of St. Michael, for whilst the Day of St. Michael continues, the End of the Term is not come. So that on that Day it cannot be paid by the expreſs Words, then on the Morrow of St. Michael the Term of ten Years is ended, and not before, and inaſmuch as the End of it then firſt came, that was the Time to pay the Tiles. And therefore if he pay them that Day in convenient Time it is ſufficient, for the Law allows convenient Time for the doing of every Act; and here there muſt be Carriage of them, which requires Time to load and unload them. And if a Man gage Deliverance here, he ſhall be allowed Time to bring them in, if the Things require it. [a] So if a Man has a Leaſe in this County of Lands for the Life of J. S. who dies in the County of York, the Leſſee ſhall have convenient Time to avoid, having Regard to the Diſtance of the Place for his Notice, for there he cannot ſo haſtily avoid, as he might have done if J. S. had died in this County, for he could not have ſuch early Notice of his Death. So that reaſonable Time ought to be allowed in all Acts. And therefore here he might pay the Tiles on the Morrow of St. Michael, as it is pleaded, quod Dyer Chief Juſtice conceſſit.

Then as to the principal Matter, [b] every Contract ſufficient to make a Leaſe for Years ought to have Certainty in three Limitations, viz. in the Commencement of the Term, in the Continuance of it, and in the End of it: So that all theſe ought to be known at the Commencement of the Leaſe, and Words in a Leaſe, which don't make this appear, are but babble, as Brown ſaid. And theſe three are in Effect but one Matter, ſhewing the Certainty of the Time for which the Leſſee ſhall have the Land, and if any of theſe fail, it is not a good Leaſe, for then there wants Certainty. And here in the principal Caſe there is none of theſe three Certainties for any Term beyond the firſt ten Years, for when the firſt ten Years are paſſed, there is a Condition here appointed, which ſhall be performed before any new Term ſhall commence, and before the Condition is performed there ſhall be no Leaſe, for ſuch is the Limitation of the Leſſor. And Brown ſaid, Words make the Plea, as Littleton ſays; and as the Leſſor hath limited them, ſo they ought to be performed. And he ſaid, there is a Diverſity between a Leaſe conditional, and a Condition to have a Leaſe, for a Leaſe conditional is good until the Condition is broken, and there the Leaſe goes before, and the Condition comes after; but in a Condition to have a Leaſe the Condition goes before, and the Leaſe comes after, and the Leaſe ſhall never be adjudged to be a Leaſe until the Condition is firſt performed. [c] As if I grant to you that if you will do ſuch a Thing, you ſhall have a Leaſe in ſuch particular Land of mine, there, he ſaid, the Condition precedes the Leaſe, as the Needle precedes the Thread, and as the Needle draws the Thread after it, ſo does the Condition the Leaſe. So if I ſay, if you will marry my Daughter before Chriſtmas, you ſhall have 100 l. there if you will claim this, you ought to ſurmiſe that you have married my Daughter before Chriſtmas. [d] So, he ſaid, in 7. Ed. 3. a Man made a Leaſe for 8 Years, rendering Rent 100 s. yearly, and if the Leſſee would hold the Land over the Term to him and to his Heirs for ever, that then he ſhould pay yearly 20 l. and the Leſſor brought an Action of Debt within the 8 Years for the 100 s. and it was adjudged maintainable, becauſe the Leſſee had but a Term in the Land, for there was a Condition preceding the Fee-ſimple, viz. if he would hold the Land over. So that the Act ſignifying his Election ought firſt to be ſhewn, before the Fee ſhall be ſhewn to be in him. And ſo the Lord Dyer ſaid that in the Caſe put by [e] Littleton, if a Man makes a Leaſe for five Years, upon Condition that if the Leſſee does ſuch an Act within the two firſt Years, he ſhall have the Fee, there he ſhall not have the Fee until the Act is done; and he ſaid that the Opinion of Littleton to the contrary was not Law. So here the firſt Term of ten Years is good without Queſtion, but the Term afterwards for other ten Years is limited to commence after the Performance of a Condition, ſo that until the Condition is performed the Term cannot commence. And then if the Condition ought firſt to be performed, it is firſt to be conſidered whether or no it is poſſible to be performed, and if it is now performed. And Brown ſaid that it is not poſſible to be performed, becauſe the Words of it are, that he ſhall have the Leaſe if he pay the Tiles or the Value of them in Money at the End of every ten Years from thence next following. So that every ten Years which ſhall next follow ought to precede the Payment, and the Payment the Leaſe. And if the next ten Years be paſſed, he cannot pay the Tiles or the Value of them, for the Payment ought to be at the End of every ten Years. And other ten Years follow the firſt ten Years, and other ten Years follow the ſecond ten Years, and other ten Years follow the third ten Years, and ſo ten Years follow ten Years until all ten Years are paſſed, which is not until the End of the World is come, and by the Words all ten Years ought to precede the Payment, for the Words are, at the End of every ten Years. So that until all ten Years are paſſed, the End of every ten Years next following the Date of the ſaid Indenture is not paſſed; and all ten Years are not paſſed until the End of the World. Wherefore the End of the World ought to come before the Payment, and the Payment ought to come before the Leaſe, and ſo the Leaſe ſhall never commence. And Dyer ſaid, it appears by the Words of the Indenture recited, that the ſaid John Kirton granted to pay ten thouſand Tiles at the End of the firſt ten Years. And the new Agreement is, that if the ſaid John Kirton, his Heirs or Aſſigns, ſhould pay to the ſaid William and Joan, and to their Aſſigns, the ſaid ten thouſand Tiles, or the Value of them in Money at the End, &c. that then, &c. So that it ſhall be taken, that at the End of every ten Years the ſame Tiles which were firſt paid ought always to be paid. [f] And upon this he put the Caſe of an Annuity in 15. H. 7. where W. Prior of F. granted to the Plaintiff an annual Rent of 10 l. until he was advanced to a Benefice of of holy Church by the aforeſaid W. and W. died; and there it ſeems that the Succeſſor of W. could not tender a Benefice to the Grantee, becauſe the Words of the Grant were, until he was advanced by the aforeſaid W. ſo that the Word (aforeſaid) is material. So here, the Word (ſaid) in the Clauſe of the ſaid ten thouſand Tiles is material. But he ſaid, if the Clauſe (the ſaid ten thouſand Tiles) ſhould be taken for the like ten thouſand Tiles, (as in Quintin's Caſe in 26 Aſſ. [a] the ſame Rent is taken for the like Rent, where a Rent reſerved upon a Leaſe for Life was granted to another, and afterwards the Heir of the Grantor confirmed the Eſtate of the Grantee, and that if the ſaid Rent was in Arrear, he and his Heirs might diſtrain for it in the Land out of which it iſſued, and after the Death of the Tenant for Life it was adjudged that he might diſtrain, for the Grant that he might diſtrain for the ſame Rent ſhall be taken for ſuch or the like Rent in Quantity;) yet he ſaid, he was of Opinion with Brown, that the Condition precedes the Leaſe, and that the Leaſe ſhall never commence, becauſe every ten Years ought to precede the Payment, and the Payment the Leaſe, and that cannot be here for the Reaſon ſhewn by him: For which Cauſe it ſeemed to them that the Leaſe could never commence.

Then as to the Certainty of the Time of the Continuance of the Leaſe, although it ſhould be here admitted that there is a Certainty of the Commencement of it, yet there is no certain Space of Time expreſſed by which the Length of the Term may be known, for it is appointed that upon the Payment the Leſſee ſhall have a perpetual Demiſe from ten Years to ten Years, which is as much as a Demiſe for 20 Years, and which Words would have made a good Leaſe for 20 Years, if he had ſtopped there, but he has coupled them with other Words which make the whole incertain, viz. that the Demiſe ſhall be perpetual, and from ten Years to ten Years continually and out of the Memory of Man, which Words, perpetual, continually, and out of Memory, don't contain any certain Term, but Time without a Term; for terminus, if it be referred to Time, is the End of it, as Weſton ſaid, and it may be referred to Place (as the Lord Dyer ſaid), as terminus loci, and then it is taken as a Precinct or Limit of a Place, as a Boundary is between Lands of divers men, ſo that it has the ſame Meaning with (Certainly), whether it be referred to Time or Place, and terminus loci may be called Certainty in Place, and terminus temporis Certainty in Time. Wherefore ſuch a Limitation of Years as hath Certainty in it may well be called a Term, and a Leaſe containing ſuch Time ſhall be good. [b] As a Leaſe for ten Years, and ſo from ten Years to ten Years during 100 Years, ſhall be a good Leaſe for 100 Years, and ſuch Limitation is as good as an expreſs Leaſe for 100 Years is. [c] So Weſton ſaid, a Leaſe during the Nonage of J. S. who is of the Age of 15 Years, is a good Leaſe for 6 Years, if J. S. ſhall live ſo long, for the Reference to a certain Time is equivalent to an expreſs Nomination of the Time contained in the Reference. [d] So he ſaid, if I make a Leaſe for ſo long as J. S. who is impriſoned for hunting, ſhall be in Priſon for the ſame by the Order of Law, this is as much as if I had made a Leaſe for two Years, for ſo long he ſhall be impriſoned by the Statute. [e] So, he ſaid, if I make a Leaſe for Years rendering 5 l. yearly, and afterwards I grant the Rent and Reverſion to another until he has received of the Rent 20 l. this is all one as if I had granted the Reverſion for four Years, for he ſhall receive 20 l. in four Years; ſo that the Reference contains a Certainty of the Time of its Continuance. So if a Leaſe has a certain Appointment of the Number of Years, although the Commencement or the End of it is certainly appointed upon an incertain Time, yet ſuch Leaſe ſhall be good. [f] As a Leaſe for Years after the Leſſee ſhall have done ſuch an Act is good: [g] So a Leaſe for 20 Years, if the Coverture between J. S. and his Wife ſhall continue ſo long, is good, and yet in the one Caſe it is incertain when the Leſſee will do the Act to make the Leaſe commence, and in the other Caſe it is incertain when the Coverture will be diſſolved; [h] but a Leaſe certainly limited may commence or determine upon an Incertainty well enough. [i] So Weſton ſaid, if I make a Leaſe to one for ſo many Years as J. S. ſhall name, and afterwards J. S. in my [k] Lifetime names a certain Number of Years, it ſhall be a good Leaſe for ſo many Years as he names, for it is my Demiſe, and I am content that he ſhould name the Years, which by my own Reference to his Nomination is as much as if I myſelf had named them: [l] But if the Leaſe be for ſo many Years as my Executors ſhall name, and afterwards I die, and my Executors name the Years, there (he ſaid) the Leaſe is not good for the Years named, becauſe they cannot name the Years during my Life, ſo that in my Life it is no Leaſe, and after my Death it cannot be my Leaſe, becauſe the Years were not named in my Lifetime. But if a Leaſe is made until J. S. who has Execution of a Statute-merchant is ſatisfied the Duty for which he has ſued Execution, there (he ſaid) this is not a good Leaſe, nor ſhall he be ſaid Termor for Years, for it is not certain how long the Years ſhall endure, viz. for 6 Years, or for 12 or 20 Years; ſo that the Time of the End of the Leaſe is utterly incertain, and therefore it cannot be called a Term of Years, for terminus contains Certainty. [m] So Brown ſaid, if one makes a Leaſe for three Years, and ſo from three Years to three Years during the Life of J. S. this ſhall be a good Leaſe for no more than ſix Years, for during ſix Years there is Certainty, for it was certain for the firſt three Years, and when he ſays, and ſo from three Years to three Years, this is as much as if he had ſaid, from theſe firſt three Years during other three Years, which contains Certainty, but when he goes further and ſays, during the Life of J. S. this does not contain any Certainty, for it is incertain how many more Years J. S. may live. So that at the Commencement of the Leaſe the End of the Number of Years intended is not known, which is contrary to the Nature of a Leaſe for Years, and therefore it ſhall only be good for ſix Years in all, quod Dyer conceſſit. And Brown ſaid that ſo it has been adjudged. [a] And Dyer ſaid that in his Knowledge it has been adjudged here in this Court, that where a Parſon makes a Leaſe of his Parſonage for five Years, and ſo from five Years to five Years during his Life, (as it is their common Cuſtom to make Leaſes) it is only a Leaſe for ten Years in all, and no longer, although the Leſſor continues Parſon longer, and the Reaſon is becauſe there is no Certainty of Years beyond the ten Years. So here in the principal Caſe, when he has made a Leaſe for ten Years, which is good without Doubt, and has further agreed and granted that if the Leſſee does ſuch an Act, then he ſhall have a perpetual Demiſe, Farm, and Grant of the Premiſſes from ten Years to ten Years continually following out of the Memory of Man, although the Commencement of it ſhould be granted to be good (as it is not), yet he cannot have more than ten Years beyond the firſt ten Years; for the Words perpetual, continually, and out of Memory of Man have no certain End or Determination. [b] And every Leaſe for Years ought to have a certain End or Determination. And Brown ſaid that where the Demiſe and Grant is to hold from ten Years to ten Years out of Memory, if the Words, out of Memory, be referred to the Time to come, it does not ſignify any Certainty of Continuance, for he ſaid that a thouſand Years to come are not more out of Memory than a Day to come, for that which is not come is not within Memory, but Memory is referred to the Time paſſed. So that if it be referred to the Time to come, it cannot be known whether ten, or an hundred, or a thouſand Years be intended thereby, for the one of theſe is not more out of Memory than another. And Dyer ſaid, if the Words, out of Memory, ſhould be thus taken, viz. that he ſhall occupy for ſo many ten Years as ſhall be out of Memory of the firſt Demiſe or the firſt Commencement, and ſo out of Memory be taken backwards, then this is merely contrary to the Affirmation that he has a Leaſe; for none can affirm that he has a Leaſe, unleſs he affirms that there was one who made the Leaſe, and that the Leaſe had ſuch a Commencement, and if he affirms that ſuch an one made the Leaſe, and that the Leaſe had ſuch a Commencement, thereby he affirms that the making of the Leaſe and the Commencement of it is not out of Memory, inaſmuch as he has knowledge of it. For out of Memory and out of Knowledge is all one, and both the Phraſes purport an Ignorance of the Time; and when the Party takes Knowledge of the Time, it does not ſtand in his Mouth to ſay that he is ignorant of the ſame Time, for Ignorance and Knowledge are contrary, and to affirm Contrarieties is not ſufferable in our Law. Wherefore inaſmuch as he affirms him to be Tenant for Years, and therein affirms that he has Knowledge of the Time of making the Leaſe, from thence it follows conſequentially that he cannot ſay that he has had and occupied the Land by the Leaſe out of Memory or out of Knowledge from the Time of making the Leaſe, for to affirm that he has Knowledge of the Time of making the Leaſe, and to affirm that he has occupied the Land by Force of the Leaſe for ſo long Time ſince the making of the Leaſe that there is no Knowledge of the making of it, contains in itſelf an expreſs Contrariety, which the Law will not admit. And he ſaid, if the Leſſee ſhould by force of the Leaſe occupy the Land out of Time of Memory, then the Leſſor could never have the Writ of Ad terminum qui præteriit, for he cannot have that Writ unleſs he expreſſes the making of the Leaſe, and the End of it, and if the Leſſee ſhould hold out of Memory, then the making of the Leaſe muſt be out of Memory, and ſo cannot be affirmed, nor can the Leſſor have Remedy by the Writ. And he ſaid that in ſome Books Deeds have been pleaded which bore Date 200 Years before, and this has not been taken out of Memory, becauſe the Certainty of the Time is known, but out of Memory contains no Knowledge of the Beginning. Wherefore it ſeemed to the Juſtices, that after the firſt ten Years paſſed no other Term had any Commencement or End, becauſe it had no Certainty of Commencement, Continuance, or End, and therefore that the Plaintiff's Title was not good. And afterwards Judgment was given the ſame Eaſter Term 6 Elizabeth, as follows.

The reſt of the Record. At which Day here came as well the aforeſaid William as the aforeſaid John and Thomas by their Attornies aforeſaid. And thereupon the Plea aforeſaid being ſeen and underſtood by the Juſtices here, it ſeems to the ſame Juſtices here that the aforeſaid Plea of the aforeſaid William Say above in Bar of the Cognizance aforeſaid pleaded is inſufficient in Law to preclude the aforeſaid John and Thomas from having their Cognizance aforeſaid, as the aforeſaid John and Thomas have above alledged. Therefore it is conſidered that the aforeſaid William Say take nothing by his Writ aforeſaid, but be in Mercy for his falſe Claim, and that the aforeſaid John and Thomas go thereof without Day, and have a Return of the Cattle aforeſaid, to be detained irrepleviſable for ever, &c.

Rot. 1338. and was read as follows

Robert Fox late of Middleton in the County aforeſaid Huſbandman was ſummoned to anſwer Alvared Grayſbrook Gentleman, Executor of the Teſtament of Thomas Kene Gentleman otherwiſe called Thomas Kene of Sutton in Coldfield in the County of Warwick Gentleman, otherwiſe called Alvared Grayſbrook my Son-in Law, which Alvared I conſtitute and make my true and lawful Executor of this my laſt Will and Teſtament, of a Plea that he render to him Goods and Chattles to the Value of 100 s. which he unjuſtly detains from him, &c. And whereupon the ſame Alvared by Thomas Newman his Attorney ſays, that whereas the aforeſaid Thomas Kene in his Lifetime the 27th Day of December in the ſecond Year of the Reign of the Lady the Queen now, at Sutton in Coldfield, was poſſeſſed of Goods and Chattles, viz. of one Cart bound with Iron, ſeven Yokes harniſhed with Iron, two Yokes with iron Rings, called Copyokes with Rings, ſix iron Tews, three Cock-cleaves with Pins, two Culters, two Plow-ſhares, three Nagers, two Muck-forks, two Muck-hooks, one double-grained Fork, called a Pike-fork, one Wainrope, one Mattock, one Brierſithe, two Carts called Tumbrels, two Spades, one Hopper, four Rings called Ox-bows, two iron Rings called Sithe-rings, four Carts, one great Harrow called an Ox-harrow, and two Harrows, called Small-harrows, to the Value, &c. as of his own proper Goods and Chattles. And being ſo thereof poſſeſſed, the ſame Day and Year at Sutton in Coldfield aforeſaid died, after whoſe Death, viz. the firſt Day of February in the ſecond Year aboveſaid, the ſaid Goods and Chattles to the Hands and Poſſeſſion of the aforeſaid Robert Fox at Middleton came, and in the Cuſtody and Poſſeſſion of the ſaid Robert yet are; whereby an Action has accrued to the ſame Alvared to demand and have of the aforeſaid Robert the Goods and Chattles aforeſaid, nevertheleſs the ſame Robert, although often requeſted, the Goods and Chattles aforeſaid to the ſame Alvared has not yet delivered, but the ſame to deliver to him has hitherto refuſed, and yet refuſes, and unjuſtly detains, wherefore he ſays that he is damnified and has Damage to the Value of 10 l. and therefore he produces the Suit, &c. And he produces * here in Court the Letters teſtamentary of the aforeſaid Thomas Kene, whereby it ſufficiently appears to the Court here that the ſaid Alvared is Executor of the Teſtament aforeſaid, and thereof hath the Adminiſtration, &c.

* See 2 Saund. 402 Slow v. Wilmot, ruled by Hale C. J. that the ſhewing of Letters-teſtamentary or of Adminiſtration is but Matter of Form, and not of Subſtance, and no Advantage can be taken of the Want thereof on a general Demurrer. 1 Vent. 222. And the aforeſaid Robert Fox by Edward Colbarn his Attorney comes and defends the Force and Injury when, &c. by proteſting that the aforeſaid Thomas Kene did not make any Teſtament, by proteſting alſo that he did not conſtitute the aforeſaid Alvared Executor of his Teſtament, as in his Declaration aforeſaid is above ſuppoſed, for Plea ſays, that the aforeſaid Alvared his Action aforeſaid againſt him ought not to have, becauſe he ſays that well and true it is that the aforeſaid Thomas Kene in his Lifetime the aforeſaid 27th Day of December in the ſecond Year aboveſaid at Sutton in Coldfield aforeſaid was poſſeſſed of the Goods and Chattles aforeſaid, as of his own proper Goods and Chattles, and being ſo poſſeſſed thereof, the ſame Day and Year at Sutton in Coldfield aforeſaid died. And the ſame Robert Fox ſays, that after the Death of the aforeſaid Thomas Kene, the Adminiſtration of all the Goods and Chattles which were the ſame Thomas Kene's at the Time of his Death was by John Diot Commiſſary of the reverend Father in Chriſt Thomas Bentham Biſhop of Coventry and Litchfield, at Litchfield in the County of the City of Litchfield, the 15th Day of January in the ſecond Year aboveſaid, committed to one Thomas Kene Son of the aforeſaid Thomas Kene the Teſtator, &c. By virtue of which ſaid Adminiſtration the ſame Thomas Kene the Son was poſſeſſed of the Goods and Chattles aforeſaid; and being ſo thereof poſſeſſed, afterwards and before the Day of proving the Teſtament of the aforeſaid Thomas Kene the Teſtator by the aforeſaid Alvared, viz. the 27th Day of January in the ſecond Year aboveſaid, the aforeſaid Thomas Kene the Son, at Sutton in Coldfield aforeſaid, ſold the Goods and Chattles aforeſaid in the Declaration aforeſaid ſpecified to the ſame Robert Fox for a certain Sum of Money between them then agreed on, and to the aforeſaid Thomas Kene the Son by the ſaid Robert Fox in Hand then paid; by reaſon of which ſaid Sale the ſame Robert Fox the ſame Goods and Chattles into his Hands took, and was and yet is of the ſame Goods and Chattles poſſeſſed. And this he is ready to verify, wherefore he prays Judgment if the aforeſaid Alvared his Action aforeſaid againſt him ought to have, &c.

Bar.

And the aforeſaid Alvared ſays, that the Plea aforeſaid by the aforeſaid Robert Fox above in Bar pleaded is inſufficient in Law to preclude him the ſaid Alvared from having his Action aforeſaid againſt the ſame Robert, and that he has no Neceſſity, nor is by the Law of the Land bound to anſwer the ſaid Plea in Manner and Form aforeſaid pleaded. And this he is ready to verify, wherefore for Want of a ſufficient Anſwer in this Behalf, the ſame Alvared prays Judgment, and Delivery of the Goods and Chattles aforeſaid together with his Damages by Occaſion of the detaining the ſaid Goods and Chattles to be adjudged to him, &c.

Plaintiff demurs.

And the aforeſaid Robert Fox, for that he has above alledged ſufficient Matter in Law to preclude the aforeſaid Alvared from having his Action aforeſaid againſt him, which he is ready to verify, which ſaid Matter the ſame Alvared does not deny nor thereunto in any wiſe anſwer, but the ſaid Averment wholly refuſes to admit, prays Judgment, and that the aforeſaid Alvared may

The CASE. Easter Term 7 Eliz.

A. makes his Will and appoints an Executor, and dies, the Ordinary without taking notice of the Will commits Administration to J. S. before the Executor has proved the Will, the Administrator sells the Goods of the deceased, and the Executor afterwards proves the Will, and brings Detinue for the Goods against the Vendee, and adjudged that he should recover, for the Probate supersedes the Administration ab initio, and the Sale made under it; but otherwise if it be averred that the Sale was made to discharge the funeral Expences or Debts, which the Administrator or Executor was compellible to pay, for there such Sale shall be indefeasible for ever. S. P. Theol. Dig. lib. 1. cap. 18. § 31. 1 Rol. Abr. 919. pl. 2. in fine. 2 Lev. 182. 183. admitted Per Saunders, arguendo. 1 Freem. 445. 1 Show. 410. 2 Bac. Abr. 411. Godolph. Orph. Leg. 141, § 1. Wentw. Off. of Exec. 49. Law of Testam. &c. 377.

The Case was recited in this Manner. It appears by the Record that Alvared Grayfbrook Executor of the Testament of Thomas Kene has sued an Action of Detinue against Robert Fox of Middleton in the County of Warwick, for one Cart bound with Iron, and seven Yokes, and divers other Goods and Chattles; and has counted that the Testator, the 27th Day of December in the 2d Year of the Reign of the present Queen, was possessed at Sutton in Coldfield of the said Goods, as of his own proper Goods; and being so possessed, the same Day and Year died at Sutton in Coldfield aforesaid in the County of Warwick, after whose Death, viz. the first Day of February in the said 2d Year, the Goods and Chattles came to the Hands of the said Robert Fox at Middleton aforesaid, and in his Hands now are, whereby an Action has accrued to the Plaintiff. The Defendant makes Defence, and by protesting that the said Thomas Kene did not make any Testament, and also by protesting that he did not constitute the Plaintiff his Executor, for Plea says that the said Alvared ought not to have his Action against him, because he says that true it is that the said Thomas Kene the said 27th Day of December in the said 2d Year was possessed of the said Goods, and thereof died possessed the same Day and Year, as the Plaintiff hath declared. But he says that after the Death of the said Thomas Kene the Administration of all his Goods and Chattles was by John Dive Commissary to Thomas Bentham Bishop of Coventry and Litchfield, at Litchfield in the County of the City of Litchfield, the 15th Day of January in the said 2d Year of the Reign of the present Queen, committed to one Thomas Kene Son to the said Thomas Kene the Testator. By force of which Administration the said Thomas Kene the Son was possessed of the said Goods and Chattles; and being so possessed, afterwards and before the Day of the Probate of the said Testament of the said Thomas Kene the Testator by the said Alvared, viz. the 27th Day of January in the 2d Year aforesaid, the said Thomas Kene the Son at Sutton in Coldfield aforesaid sold the Goods and Chattles specified in the Count to him the said Robert Fox, for a certain Sum of Money between them agreed on, and by him paid to the said Thomas Kene the Son, by force of which Sale the said Robert Fox took the same Goods and Chattles into his Hands, and was and yet is possessed of them. And this he is ready to verify, and demands Judgment si Actio. And upon this Plea the Plaintiff has demurred in Law.

Exceptions taken to the Bar. 1.

Protestation ought to be taken after the Defence and Plea to the Action. S. P. Heath's Max. 26.

And this Matter was debated by the Serjeants, and now this said Easter Term it was argued by Walsh, Weston, and the Lord Dyer Justices, but Anthony Brown was sick, for which reason he did not argue. And the Justices who argued spoke first to the Exceptions taken by the Serjeants. And as to the first of them, they all held that the Protestations taken by the Defendant were not taken nor placed in Order, for first he ought to say that the Plaintiff his Action aforesaid against him ought not to have, &c. and then take his Protestations afterwards, but to take the Protestations before the Action is not the usual Form of Pleading, but contrary to the common Practice.

Protestation must not be superfluous. S. P. Heath's Max. 26.

Also they held that the second Protestation was superfluous, it being included in the first; for the first Protestation is, that the said Thomas Kene did not make any Testament, and the second is, that he did not constitute the Plaintiff his Executor, and if he made no Testament (as he says in the first Protestation) ergo he did not make him his Executor; * for without a Testament a Man cannot be an Executor. Wherefore the second Protestation being included in the first is superfluous.
